

The New Testament of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ
: Authorized translation, including the marginal readings and parallel texts, with a commentary and critical notes Volume 1 - Primary Source Edition

Adam Clarke

The New Testament of our Lord and Saviour
Jesus Christ : Authorized translation, including the marginal readings and parallel texts, with a commentary and critical notes Volume 1 - Primary Source Edition

Adam Clarke

Nabu Public Domain Reprints:

You are holding a reproduction of an original work published before 1923 that is in the public domain in the United States of America, and possibly other countries. You may freely copy and distribute this work as no entity (individual or corporate) has a copyright on the body of the work. This book may contain prior copyright references, and library stamps (as most of these works were scanned from library copies). These have been scanned and retained as part of the historical artifact.

This book may have occasional imperfections such as missing or blurred pages, poor pictures, errant marks, etc. that were either part of the original artifact, or were introduced by the scanning process. We believe this work is culturally important, and despite the imperfections, have elected to bring it back into print as part of our continuing commitment to the preservation of printed works worldwide. We appreciate your understanding of the imperfections in the preservation process, and hope you enjoy this valuable book.

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2020 with funding from Kahle/Austin Foundation

https://archive.org/details/isbn_9781289615376

Now, my dear Mr. Tegg, I will not best him a second second Edition for the multitude of errandakans & corrections from the authors own & 'ast hand will give him a complete new copy Right
I am my dear & yours affly
A. Larne

THE
NEW TESTAMENT

OF OUR

LORD AND SAVIOUR JESUS CHRIST.

THE TEXT

CAREFULLY PRINTED FROM THE MOST CORRECT COPIES OF THE PRESENT

AUTHORIZED TRANSLATION,

INCLUDING THE

MARGINAL READINGS AND PARALLEL TEXTS:

WITH

A COMMENTARY AND CRITICAL NOTES;

DESIGNED AS A HELP TO A BETTER UNDERSTANDING OF THE SACRED WRITINGS.

✓
BY ADAM CLARKE, LL.D., F.S.A., &c.

A NEW EDITION, WITH THE AUTHOR'S FINAL CORRECTIONS.

FOR WHATSOEVER THINGS WERE WRITTEN AFORETIME WERE WRITTEN FOR OUR LEARNING; THAT WE, THROUGH PATIENCE AND COMFORT OF THE SCRIPTURES, MIGHT HAVE HOPE.—Rom. xv. 4.

VOLUME I.—MATTHEW TO THE ACTS.

LIBRARY OF PRINCETON

OCT 03 2007

NEW-YORK:

PUBLISHED BY G. LANE & C. B. TIPPETT,
FOR THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, AT THE CONFERENCE OFFICE, 200 MULBERRY-STREET

THEOLOGICAL SEMINAR

JOSEPH LONGKING, PRINTER

1846.

NEW TESTAMENT

FOR THE STUDENT OF THE CHRISTIAN FAITH

THE TEXT

THE NEW TESTAMENT IN THE KING JAMES VERSION

THE NEW TESTAMENT IN THE KING JAMES VERSION

THE NEW TESTAMENT IN THE KING JAMES VERSION

THE NEW TESTAMENT IN THE KING JAMES VERSION

LIBRARY OF PRINCETON

OCT 0 3 2007

NEW YORK

THE NEW TESTAMENT IN THE KING JAMES VERSION

THE NEW TESTAMENT IN THE KING JAMES VERSION

THE NEW TESTAMENT IN THE KING JAMES VERSION

THE

A COLLECTION OF VARIOUS READINGS

FOR THE NEW TESTAMENT;

MADE FROM ANCIENT GREEK MANUSCRIPTS.

SOME years ago a well-written MS. fell into my hands, containing a collection of various readings, taken from several ancient MSS. of the Greek Testament. It appears to have been made with great care and accuracy; and judging it worthy to be appended to the notes on the New Testament, I have caused it to be printed, so as to be easily bound up with the last volume of this Work.

Of this collection I know not the author, (it was once in the possession of Dr. Thomas Mangey, but is not in his handwriting,) nor do I know what manuscripts they are that are thus collated, as no description of them appears in any part of these sheets. The collector was greatly attached to the Latin version, as in almost every case he prefers those readings which agree with the VULGATE.

When it was made, or where, is as difficult to be determined. The water-mark of some of the sheets is the arms of the Seven United Provinces: a large shield, surmounted with a crown; in the centre a lion rampant, holding in his left paw a sceptre, and in the right a bundle of arrows: on the side of the throne or bench on which he stands is the word VRHEYT, and round the shield, PRO PATRIA FJUSQUE LIBERTATE. In other sheets, a female figure with a helmet on her head, and a sceptre in her hand, before a lion rampant, with a drawn sword in one paw, and a bundle of arrows in the other. Both figures seem inclosed in a palisado, and just before the sceptre are the words PRO PATRIA. On other sheets, probably the right folio, there is a small circle or shield including a crown, and the letters G. R.

The book of the Acts and the Epistle to the Romans are expressly declared to be from the collation of eight ancient manuscripts, and the Apocalypse from four ancient manuscripts: but there are two other MSS. quoted in several of the books; so that it appears on the whole that eight Greek MSS. were collated in every verse, and two others occasionally.

A copy of the printed text (probably that of 1624, by the Elzevirs) appears to have been used by this unknown collector, with which the MSS. mentioned above were collated. Many of the readings preferred in this are preferred by Griesbach, and received into the text. On the whole, I thought this collection too valuable to be confined to a private MS., and thus to be in danger of being lost to the world.

The collection might have been made either in England or Holland, about one hundred years ago, in the reign of George I.

Some part of the beginning appears to have been lost, as these collations commence with Matt. xxiv. 2.

MATTHÆI.

The figure or figures under the head MSS. denote the number of Manuscripts in which the approved reading was found by the unknown collator.

CAP. XXIV.

| Ver. MSS. | |
|-----------|--|
| 2. | 3. βλέπετε ταυτα παντα, cum Vulg. |
| 6. | 1. αλλ' ουκ ενθως το τέλος. |
| 14. | 2. και κληνησεται το ευαγγελιον. |
| 18. | 1. μη επιστρεψατω αραι, cum Vulg. |
| 25. | 1. προειρηκα ιμιν παντα. |
| 32. | 8. εκφυρ. |
| 36. | 4. ει μη ο Πατηρ μονος, cum Vulg. |
| 45. | 1. επι της οικειας αυτων. |
| 49. | legatur in Text. cum MSS. 7 (εσθιη δε και πινη,) cum Vulg. |

CAP. XXV.

| | |
|-----|--|
| 13. | 3. non habent verba illa (εν η ο υιος του ανθρωπου ερχεται,) cum Vulg. |
| 16. | 1. και εκερδησεν αλλα, cum Vulg. |
| 29. | 8. και ο εχει, αρθησεται. |
| 31. | 1. και παντες οι αγγελοι, cum Vulg. |

CAP. XXVI.

| | |
|-----|---|
| 3. | 2. non legunt, και οι γραμματεις, cum Vulg. |
| 26. | 5. και ευχαριστησας εκλασε. |

Ver. MSS.

| | |
|-----|---|
| 26. | 2. τοις μαθηταις αυτου, cum Vulg. |
| 28. | 1. τουτο εστι το αιμα μου. |
| 39. | 6. και προσελθων μικρον. |
| 48. | ponatur in Text. ut legunt MSS. 10 (ο δε παραδιδους.) |
| 50. | 4. εφ' ο παρει, cum Vulg. |
| 52. | 1. εν μαχαιρα απολουνται, cum Vulg. |
| 59. | 1. non legit, και οι πρεσβυτεροι, cum Vulg. |

CAP. XXVII.

| | |
|-----|---|
| 6. | 4. κορβωναν, ut Vulg. |
| 29. | 1. περιεθηκαν επι της κεφαλης αυτου. |
| 35. | in Textu apponatur obelus ad verba illa, ινα πληρωθη το ρηθεν, &c., usque ad finem versûs; cum in MSS. 10 non legantur. |
| 59. | 2. εν σινδονι, cum Vulg. |
| 64. | 3. non addunt, νυκτος, cum Vulg. |

CAP. XXVIII.

| | |
|----|--|
| 2. | 3. απο της θυρας του μνημειου. |
| 8. | 3. non legunt verba illa (ως δε επορευοντο απαρηγμαι τοις μαθηταις αυτου,) cum Vulg. |

MARCI.

CAP. I.

Ver. MSS

1. 1. καθως γεγραπται εν τῷ προφητῇ, cum Vulg.
5. 1. και οἱ Ἱεροσολυμιται παντες, και εβαπτίζοντο ὑπ' αὐτου εν τῷ, cum Vulg.
13. 1. και ην εν τη ερημῳ, cum Vulg.
16. 1. και παραγων παρα την θαλασσαν, cum Vulg.
24. 1. λεγων, τι ἡμιν και σοι, cum Vulg.
27. 8. συζητειν προς ἑαυτους, cum Vulg.; et scribendum in Tex. (προς αὐτους.)
36. 3. και κατεδιωξεν, cum Vulg.
38. 4. ελθονθα, cum Vulg.
45. ponatur in Textu; ut legunt MSS. 10 (αλλ' εξω εν ερημοις) cum Vulg.

CAP. II.

2. 2. και συνηχθησαν πολλοι, cum Vulg.
8. 1. οτι οὕτως διαλογίζονται, cum Vulg.
18. 1. και οἱ φαρισαιοι νηστευοντες, cum Vulg.
21. 1. ουδεις επι βλημα, cum Vulg.
21. 3. το πληρωμα απ' αὐτου, cum Vulg.

CAP. III.

4. 1. σωσαι η απολεσαι, cum Vulg.
5. 1. non legit (ὅτις ὡς ἡ αλλη) cum Vulg.
6. 1. πως αὐτον απολεσωσι, cum Vulg.
18. 1. τον Καναναιον.
29. 1. αιωνιον ἁμαρτηματος, cum Vulg.
31. 1. και ερχονται οἱ ἀδελφοι, cum Vulg.
32. 1. και λεγουσιν αὐτῷ, ιδου, cum Vulg.
32. 2. non habet (και αἱ ἀδελφαι σου) cum Vulg.
33. 4. ἡ μητηρ μου και οἱ ἀδελφοι μου, cum Vulg.

CAP. IV.

4. expungatur e Textu vox illa (ουρανου) quæ deest in MSS. 10 impressi cum Vulg. legunt (τα πετεινα του ουρανου.)
8. ponatur in Tex. ut legunt MSS. 10 (ἐν τριακοντα, και ἐν ξ. και ἐν β.)
8. impressi cum Vulg. legunt (ἐν λ. και ἐν ξ. και ἐν β.)
18. 1. και αλλοι εισιν οἱ εις τας ακανθας, cum Vulg.
19. 1. non legit (τουτου) cum Vulg.
24. 2. αντιμετρηθησεται, cum Vulg.
24. 1. non habet (τοις ακουουσιν) cum Vulg.
31. legatur in Tex. (ὡς κοκκον) ut MSS. 7. cum Vulg.
32. 2. παντα τα πετεινα.
36. 2. πλοια ην, cum Vulg.
40. 1. τι δειλοι εστε; ουπω εχετε πιστιν, cum Vulg.

CAP. V.

1. 1. των Γερασσηνων.
3. 1. αλυσουσιν ουκ επι ουδεις.
13. 1. εις την θαλασσαν ὡς διαχιλιοι, cum Vulg.
13. ponatur in Tex. ut MSS. 6. legunt ησαν δε ὡς διαχιλιοι.
14. 1. οἱ δε βασκοντες αὐτους, cum Vulg.
15. 1. καθημερον, ἱματισμενον, cum Vulg.
18. 1. αὐτον ὁ ιαθεις.
22. 1. non habet ιδου cum Vulg.
25. 3. και γυνη ουσα, cum Vulg.
28. 1. τον ἱματιον, cum Vulg.
36. 1. ὁ δε ἰησους παρακουσας.
38. 1. και ερχονται, cum Vulg.

CAP. VI.

2. 1. Και οἱ πολλοι.
2. 2. οτι κρι Δυναμεις ταιανται.
11. 1. desunt verba illa (αμην λεγω ὑμιν, ανεκτοτερον εσται Σαδομοις η Γομορροις εν ἡμερα κρισεως, η τη πολει εκεινη, (Vulgata etiam hoc loco ea non legit, sed videntur irrepsisse in Tex. Gr. ex 10 Matth.
14. 1. Ἰωαννης ὁ Βαπτιστης.

Ver. MSS.

15. ponatur in Tex. ut 7 MSS. legunt (αλλοι δε ελεγον, οτι Ηλίας,) cum Vulg.
16. 1. Ἰωαννην, αὐτος ηγεθη, cum Vulg.
18. 1. τῷ Ηρωδῇ, ουκ εξεστι σοι, cum Vulg.
20. 2. και ακουων αὐτον.
23. 8. ὁ εαν με αιτησης.
29. ponatur in Tex. ut MSS. 10 legunt (εν μνημειῳ.)
30. 1. παντα ὅσα εκπαιθσαν, cum Vulg.
33. 2. και ἐπεγνωσαν πολλοι, cum Vulg.
33. 1. non legit (και ηλθον προς αὐτον) cum Vulg.
36. 1. αγορασωσιν ἑαυτοις, τι φαγωσιν.
37. 1. και δωσωμεν αὐτοις, cum Vulg.
48. 1. και ιδων αὐτους, cum Vulg.
51. 1. non legit (και εδαιμαζον) cum Vulg.

CAP. VII.

5. 1. και επερωτωσιν αὐτον, cum Vulg.
5. 1. αλλα κοινας χεραι, cum Vulg.
14. 1. και προσκαλεσαμενος παλιν τον οχλον, cum Vulg.
17. 1. οἱ μαθηται αὐτου την παραβολην, cum Vulg.
24. ponatur in Textu, ut legunt MSS. 10 (και ελθων εις οικιαν.)
25. 1. αλλ' ευθυς ακουσασα γυνη, cum Vulg.
25. ponatur in Textu, sicut MSS. 10 legunt (το θυγατριον αὐτης πνευμα.)
26. 3. Συροφαινικισσα.
31. 1. εκ των ὀριων Τυρον ηλθε δια Σιδωνος προς, ut Vulg.
32. 1. κωφον και μογιλαλον, cum Vulg.
33. 6. και α απολαβμενος.

CAP. VIII.

1. 1. παλιν πολλον οχλον αὐτος, cum Vulg. (MS. 1 οχλον ελθοντας.)
3. scribendum in Tex. ut legunt MSS. 7 (μακροθεν ἤκουσι.)
7. 2. και ταυτα ἐν-ι-ησας ειπε, cum Vulg.
12. 1. και αναστειναξας τῷ πνευματι λεγει, cum Vulg.
13. 4. εις το πλουιν.
17. 2. πως οὐπω συνιετε;
22. 1. και ερχονται εις Βηθ. cum Vulg.
23. 2. τας χειρας αὐτου, cum Vulg.
25. 1. αὐτον, και δις ἡλθεν.
25. 1. και ενεβλεπε τηλαινως ἅπαντα, cum Vulg.
34. 1. ει τις θελει οπίσω μου, cum Vulg.
35. 2. του ευαγγελιου, σωσει αὐτην, cum Vulg.
36. legatur in Tex. ut legunt MSS. 10 (ωφελησει ανθρωπον.)

CAP. IX.

6. ponendum in Tex. ut legunt MSS. 10 (εκφοβαι.)
12. 4. καθως γεγραπται.
22. ponatur in Tex. ut legunt MSS. 10 (και εις ἑδρα, ἱνα) cum Vulg.
23. 2. αὐτῷ, ει δυνασαι.
28. 3. Δια τι ἡμεις, cum Vulg.
38. 2. επι τῷ σωματι σου, cum Vulg.
38. 1. non legit (ὅτι ακολουθει ἡμιν.)
40. 4. καθ' ἡμων ὑπερ ἡμων.
42. 3. ἕνα των μικρων τούτων των, cum Vulg.

CAP. X.

1. 1. της Ιουδαιας περαν του Ιορδανου (MS. 1 και περαν.)
6. ponatur in Tex. ut legunt MSS. 10 (ὁ Θεος ἐνεκεν τουτου) cum Vulg.
17. 7. προσδραμων εις.
21. 1. non legit (προς τον σταυρον) cum Vulg.
25. 2. της βαφιδας διελθειν, cum Vulg.
32. 8. προαγων αὐτους.
38. 1. η το Βαπτισμα, cum Vulg.
43. 1. ουκ οὕτως δε εστι, cum Vulg.
44. 1. εν ἡμιν ειναι πρωτος, cum Vulg.
46. 2. ὁ υἱος Τιμαιου. MSS. 6 legunt Βαρτιμαιο
50. 1. αναπηδησας ηλθε, cum Vulg.
52. ponatur in Tex. ut legunt MSS. 8 (και ηκολουθει τῷ Ἰησου,) cum Vulg.

CAP. XI.

Ver. MSS.

2. 3. εφ' ὃν οὐπω οὐδεὶς, cum Vulg.
2. 1. λυσατε αὐτον καὶ φερετε.
6. 1. ενετειλατο αυτοις ὁ Ἰησους.
10. 1. ευλογημενη ἡ Βασιλεια του πατρος ἡμων Δαβιδ.
11. 8. καὶ εἰς τὸ ἱερον.
11. 1. καὶ περιβλεψάμενος παντας.
23. 1. non legit ὁ εαν εἶπῃ, cum Vulg.

CAP. XII.

4. 2. κρκεινον κεφαλαιουσαν, cum Vulg.
12. 1. την παραβοίην ταυτην εἶπεν, cum Vulg.
27. legendum in Textu, ut MSS. 10 habent (οὐκ ἐστὶν ὁ Θεὸς νεκρων,) cum Vulg.
29. 1. Κυριος ὁ Θεὸς ἡμῶν.
31. 2. ἡ δευτερα ὁμοία αὐτῇ, cum Vulg.

CAP. XIII.

2. 3. οὐ μὴ ἀφεθῇ ὧδε.
8. 1. καὶ εἰσονται λιμοὶ ἀρχαὶ ὠδινῶν ταυτα, cum Vulg.
11. 2. τε λαλησητε· ἀλλ' ὁ εαν, cum Vulg.
14. 1. non legit (το βρύεν ἰτο Δανιηλ του προφήτου) et videntur huc irrepsisse ex cap. Matt. 24.
32. ponendum in Textu ut legunt MSS. 7 (ἐκείνης, ἡ ὥρας) cum Vulg.
37. 2. ὁ δὲ ἔμιν, cum Vulg.

CAP. XIV.

2. 1. ελεγον γαρ.
2. 1. θυρυδος γεννηται, cum Vulg.
5. 3. τουτο το μυρον πρᾶθῃναι, cum Vulg.

Ver. MSS.

12. 2. ἐτοιμασωμεν σοι φαγειν το, cum Vulg.
19. 2. non legunt (καὶ ἄλλος, μητι ἐγώ) cum Vulg.
22. 1. λαβετε· τουτο ἐστι, cum Vulg.
27. 7. non habent (ἐμὸι ἐν τῇ νυκτι ταυτη.)
29. scribendum in Textu, ut legunt MSS. 9 (προ αὗς ὑμας.)
29. 9. non legunt, ἐν σοι.
31. 1. ὁ δὲ ἐκ περιουσιαν ἐλαλει, εαν με.
34. legendum in Textu, ut MSS. 10 (καὶ Γρηγορειτε Καὶ προελθων,) cum Vulg.
45. 8. χαιρε βαβυλων.
51. 1. non legit (οὐκ ἐκινισκαὶ) cum Vulg.
61. 1. του Θεου του ἐκκλητου, cum Vulg.
64. 1. τας βλασφημίας.
70. 1. non habetur καὶ ἡ λαλῖσα ὁμοιωζει, cum Vulg.
72. 2. καὶ εὐθὺς ἐκ δευτερον, cum Vulg.

CAP. XV.

3. tollendum e Text. quod deest in MSS. 9 (αὐτος δὲ ἀνδρῶν ἀπεκρινάτο,) cum Vulg.
8. 1. καὶ ἀναβας ὁ οὐχίης, cum Vulg.
11. 1. ἀνεκείσαν τον οὐχίον.
18. expungendum e Text. quod 8 MSS. non habent (καὶ γένειν,) cum Vulg.

CAP. XVI.

5. 2. καὶ ἐλθονσαι.
8. 2. εἶχε γαρ αὐτας, cum Vulg.
16. scribendum in Textu, ut legunt MSS. 10 (ὁ πιατευσας καὶ βαπτισθεῖς,) cum Vulg.

LUCÆ.

CAP. I.

Ver. MSS.

17. scribatur in Textu, ut legunt MSS. 10 (Ἡλίοι.)
18. 4. ἀγγελον πως εἶπαι τουτο.
35. scribatur in Textu ut legunt MSS. 10 (καὶ το γεννωμενον ἁγιον.)
35. impressi cum Vulg. legunt, καὶ το γεννωμενον ἐκ σου ἁγιον.
36. 1. καὶ αὐτῇ συνεϊλή, cum Vulg.
39. 1. εἰς τὴν πόλιν.
49. 1. μετ' ἡμᾶς ὁ Δυνατος, cum Vulg.
50. 3. εἰς γενεαν καὶ γενεαν. MS. 1 εἰς γενεας καὶ γενεας.
51. 3. Διανοίας.
64. tollenda e Textu vox illa, quam MSS. 10 non habent (διηρθρωθη,) cum Vulg.
66. 1. καὶ γαρ χεὶρ Κυριον, cum Vulg.
75. 2. πασαις ταῖς ἡμεραις ἡμων, cum Vulg.

CAP. II.

8. scribendum in Textu, ut MSS. 10 legunt (καὶ φυλασσοντες φυλάκας.)
12. 2. καὶ κειμενον ἐν φατῇ, cum Vulg.
15. 1. καὶ οἱ ποιμενες ἐλαλουν προς, cum Vulg.
20. ponatur in Textu, ut legunt MSS. 10 (καὶ ὑπεστρεψαν.)
21. 3. του περιτεμειν το παιδιον, cum Vulg.
22. scribatur in Text. ut legunt MSS. 10 (του καθ' ἁριμον αὐτων.)
22. impressi cum Vulg. legunt (τον καθ' ἁριμον αὐτης.)
40. 1. non addit (πνευματι) cum Vulg.
43. 1. καὶ οὐκ ἐγνωσαν οἱ γονεῖς αὐτον, cum Vulg.
45. 1. καὶ μὴ εἰρόντες ὑπεστρεψαν εἰς Ἱερουσαλημ, ἀναζητουντες αὐτον, cum Vulg.

CAP. III.

2. scribatur in Textu, ut est in MSS. 10 ἐπ' ἀρχιερεως.
2. impressi cum Vulg. ἐπὶ ἀρχιερεων.
4. 1. deest vox (λεγοντος) cum Vulg.
18. 1. τῷ λαῷ

Ver. MSS.

22. 1. non addit (λεγουσιν) cum Vulg.

CAP. IV.

1. 1. ἐν τῇ ἐρημῳ.
4. 1. non est (ἐν τῇ) cum Vulg.
7. 1. εαν πῶσαι προσκινῇ γῆς.
8. 1. non addit (ἐν τῇ ἐρημῳ μου, Σατονα) cum Vulg.
9. ponatur in Text. ut legunt MSS. 10 (εἰ υἱὸς εἰ του Θεου.)
34. 1. οἶδα ὅτι σὺ εἶ ὁ υἱὸς του Θεου.
42. legendum in Textu, ut est in MSS. 7 (ἐπεζητουν αὐτον,) cum Vulg.
43. 1. καὶ ἑτεραῖς πόλεσιν.

CAP. V.

2. 1. ἐπλυνον τα δικτυα, cum Vulg.
6. 1. addit το δικτυον ὡτων (ὥστε μὴ δεγασθαι ἀναγαγειν αὐτο.)
15. 3. non legunt (ὑπ' αὐτου,) cum Vulg.
19. 6. πως εἰσενεγκωσιν αὐτον.
19. 6. ἐμπροσθὶν παντων.
33. 2. καὶ των Φαρισαιων, cum Vulg.
36. 1. ἀπο ἱματιων καινου σχισας ἐπὶ θάλλει.

CAP. VI.

1. 1. non addit δευτεροπρωτῳ.
1. 1. αὐτον σταχνας.
2. 1. ὁ οὐκ ἐξεστιν ἐν ταῖς σαββάσιν, cum Vulg.
4. 1. καὶ ἐδωκε τοῖς μετ' αὐτον, cum Vulg.
6. scribendum in Text. ut legunt MSS. 7 (καὶ ἐν ἑτέρῳ σαββάτῳ,) cum Vulg.
7. ponendum in Text. ut est in MSS. 10 (θεραπευσει, ἵνα,) cum Vulg.
9. 1. σωσαι, ἢ ἀπολεσαι, cum Vulg.
10. 1. παντας αὐτους ἐν ὁρῇ εἶπεν αὐτῷ.
10. 6. ὁ δὲ ἐποίησεν, καὶ ἀποκατεσταθῇ ἡ.
10. 1. non addit (ὑγιης ὡς ἡ ἀλλῇ) cum Vulg.
16. 1. ὅς ἐγενετο προδοτης, cum Vulg.
18. 1. ἀκαθαρτων ἐνθεραπευοντο, cum Vulg.
23. 1. οἱ πατερες ἡμων.
26. 2. ἵσας παντες οἱ ἀνθρώποι.

Ver. MSS.

35. legendum in Textu, ut est in MSS. 10 (και εσεσθε υιοι υψιστου.)
39. 1. ειπε δε και περα, 10ην, cum Vulg.

CAP. VII.

4. 3. ὡ παρεξη τουτο, cum Vulg.
11. scribendum in Textu, ut MSS. 6 (και εγενετο εν τω εξης,) cum Vulg.
11. 1. non est ἱκανοι, cum Vulg.
12. 2. και αυτη ην χηρα, cum Vulg.
28. 2. non legunt vocem (προφητης.)
31. expungenda sunt e Tex. verba illa (ειπε δε ο Κυριος) desunt enim in MSS. 10.
31. 1. impressi, et Vulgata Lat. legunt (ειπε δε ο Κυριος τιτι οτι)
35. 1. και επιμηθη η αυρια.
37. 2. και ιδου γινη ητης ην εν τη πολει ὑμωτωλος, cum Vulg.
42. 2. τις ον αυτων πλ-ιον αγαπησει αυτον;

CAP. VIII.

3. 4. και Σωσαννα.
3. 8. διηκοουν αυτοις
4. 1. οχλον ποι-ησαν, cum Vulg.
9. 1. non est (, ,) cum Vulg.
20. 1. non habet vocem (λεγοντων) cum Vulg.
24. 9. επιστατα, επιστοτα, απολυμεθα.
26. 1. των Γερασμων, cum Vulg.
31. 2. και παρεκαλουν αυτων, cum Vulg.
34. ponatur in Textu, ut est in MSS. 9 (οι, βοσκων-τες το γενημενον, εν τω, και απη, ,) cum Vulg.
37. 1. το πληθος της ποι-ως και τμηλων.
48. 1. ο δε ειπε αυτω (ω, απη, &c., cum Vulg.
51. legatur in Textu, ut habent MSS. 9, cum Vulg. (ελθων δε εις την.)
51. 1. εισελθειν σε αυτωις, cum Vulg.
54. 1. αυτος δε κρατησας της χειρος αυτης, cum Vulg.

CAP. IX.

3. 1. μητε βαλδ-, cum Vulg.
12. 1. απολυσον τους οχλους, cum Vulg.
17. 1. και εμνη το πε-ισ-τον υτοις.
23. 9. και αμνω των σταιρον ειση, και ακολ.
31. 9. ελθων την δοξαν αυτου.
47. 2. ενως τον διω-η-ση, τη, καιδ.
48. 1. οιτος εστι μη-ας, cum Vulg.
49. ponatur in Textu, ut habent MSS. 10 (εχθαλ-λοντα διωκοι.)
50. 3. καθ' υμων, επι-η-ων εστι, cum Vulg.
52. 1. εν πολιν Σαμαρειτων, cum Vulg.
54. 1. non legit (εξ και Ηλιω ε-οισαν) cum Vulg.
55. 1. non addit (υμεις) cum Vulg.
59. 3. και επιμιση αυτους, και επαρουσησαν.
57. 1. δεσπ (Κ-η) cum Vulg.
61. 1. αποταξασα-ταις τοις εις τον.

CAP. X.

1. 1. εβδμηκο. τα δυο, cum Vulg.
11. 1. addit (εκ τη ποι-ης υμων εις τους ποδας.)
12. 5. λεγω υμιν, cum Vulg.
15. 1. εως εβδον καταδρα, cum Vulg.
17. 1. οί-βδμηκοτα ενο, cum Vulg.
19. 1. ιδου, δι-δωκε υμιν, cum Vulg.
21. 1. τη Ηιερρατι τη Α-ω ο Ιησους, cum Vulg.
22. 8. addunt (και σπασα-ς προς τας μαθητας ειπε-Παντα μοι)
23. 1. non legit (κατ' ιδου) cum Vulg.
25. 1. περαζων αυτον, cum Vulg.
28. 1. τι το ποιει, και ουκ. MS. 1, και σωση.
30. 3. οι και εβδονταν ω-α, cum Vulg.
35. 1. και επι τη- αυτον εκ βαλων ιδωκ. δυο δηναρια τω-ανδαλ-α, και ει-π-ε, επιμωλ. cum Vulg.
39. 1. παρα τοις- τοις του Κυριου, cum Vulg.
41. 1. ειπεν αυτη Κυ-ροι, cum Vulg.

CAP. XI.

2. 1. Πατερ, ἀμασθητω το ονημα σου, ελθτω η βοσι- vi

Ver. MSS.

- λεια σου. τον αρτον ημων τον επιουσιον, cum Vulg.
4. 1. και γαρ και αυτοι αφιμεν, cum Vulg.
4. 1. non addit (αλλα ρυσαι ημας απο του πονηρου) cum Vulg.
5. 2. και ερει αυτω, Φιλε, cum Vulg.
6. 8. φιλος παρεγενετο.
11. ponendum in Tex. ut est in MSS. 10 μη λιθον επιδωσει αυτω.)
11. corrigendum in Tex. Regiæ, ut legatur (η και ιχθυον) ut MSS. 10, et Vulg.
15. 2. τω αρχοντι.
25. 1. ευρισκει σχολαζοντα, σεσαρωμενον.
29. 1. η γενα αυτη γενα πονηρα εστι, cum Vulg.
32. corrigendum in Tex. Regiæ, et legendum (οτι μετνησαν) ut Vulg., et MSS. 10.
34. 2. εστιν ο οφθαλμος σου, cum Vulg.
34. 6. και ο-η το σωμα σου.
34. 3. και το σωμα σου σκοτερον εσται, cum Vulg.
42. 2. ταυτα δε εδει, cum Vulg.
44. legatur in Tex. ut est in MSS. 9 (και οι ανθρω-ποι περιπατουντες.)
50. 1. το εκκεχιμενον απο κοταβ. cum Vulg.
51. 1. του δυσαστηριου και του ναου, cum Vulg.
59. 2. δεινως εχειν. MSS. 7, δεινως ενεχειν, cum Vulg.
53. 2. και αποστομειν αυτον, cum Vulg.

CAP. XII.

8. ponendum in Tex. ut legunt MSS. 10 (ομολογησει εν αυτω.)
11. 1. εισφερωσιν υμας.
14. 1. κατεστησε κριτην.
21. και μη εις θεον πλουτων (MSS. 3 addunt, ταυτα λ-ων εοικεν. ο εχιν ωτα ακνειν ακουετω.)
30. 1. χρησιτε τουτων υπαντων.
46. 2. μετα των υποκριτων θησει.
48. 2. περισσοτερα απαιτησουσιν αυτον.

CAP. XIII.

4. 2. δοκειτε, οτι αυτοι οφειλεται, cum Vulg.
15. 4. υποκριτα, εκαστος ημων.
24. 1. στενης θυρας.
25. 1. Κυριε, αναιξον ημιν, cum Vulg.
32. 1. και τη τμητη ημερα, cum Vulg.
31. ponatur in Tex. ut habent MSS. 6 (ον τοροπν ορνις την αυτης,) cum Vulg.
34. 1. και ουκ ηθρ-ησε, cum Vulg.
35. 5. non legunt ημος.

CAP. XIV.

5. 8. υιος η βαυς.
9. 1. ερει, σε δος τουτω τοπον.
15. 1. φαγεται αρτον, cum Vulg.
21. 1. ο δου-α-η, φιλε, cum Vulg.
24. 4. addunt (του δι-ι-του. πολλοι γαρ εισι κλητοι, ολι-γοι δε εκκλητοι.)
28. 4. εξ υμων θελων, cum Vulg.
35. 1. αλλ' εξω βαλλουνσιν, cum Vulg.

CAP. XV.

17. 1. λιμω ωδε απολλυμαι, cum Vulg.
19. 3. ουκετι εμι αξιος, cum Vulg.
22. 1. ταχυν εξεμνη, και, cum Vulg.
29. 3. τω πατρι αυτου, cum Vulg.

CAP. XVI.

4. 9. όταν μετασταθω. MSS. 1, όταν μετατεθω, cum Vulg.
6. 1. εκατον καδονς, cum Vulg.
15. scribendum in Tex. ut legunt MSS. 7 (ενωπιον του Θεου.)
15. 3. του Θεου εστιν, cum Vulg.
18. 1. και ο απολ-λιμνην, cum Vulg.
25. 1. οτι απελο ζες το αγαθα σου, cum Vulg.
26. 1. μηδε εκ-α-εν προς ημας, cum Vulg.

CAP. XVII.

Ver. MSS.

4. 9. επιστρέψω λαόν.
7. 1. ὅς ἐλθόντι ἐκ τοῦ ἀγροῦ, cum Vulg.
7. 2. ἐρεῖ αὐτῷ εὐθεως, cum Vulg.
12. 1. οἱ ἀνεστήσαν πορνείαν.
16. 1. εὐχαριστοῦν τῷ Θεῷ
22. scribendum in Textu ut legunt MSS. 10 (εἰπε δε πρὸς τοὺς μαθητάς,) cum Vulg. (Sic et im-pressi.)
28. 1. ὡς καὶ ὡς ἐπὶ τοῖς ἐν ταῖς, cum Vulg.
33. 2. ἔτι πάλιν ἡσυχάζει.
36. 9. dicunt verba illa: ὅσα εἰσὶν ἐν τῷ ἀγρῷ, ὁ εἰς παντὶ τῷ ἔτι, καὶ ὁ ἕτερος ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ.
37. 2. ὁπου ἐπὶ

CAP. XVIII.

1. 6. τὸν ἑαυτοῦ ἀντιπάλιν.
4. 3. καὶ τὸν ἑαυτοῦ ἀντιπάλιν, cum Vulg.
7. 1. τὴν ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ ἀντιπάλιν.
7. 1. καὶ αὐτὸν ἀντιπάλιν.
8. ponendum in Textu ut legunt MSS. 10 (ὅτι εἰπε ὅτι,) cum Vulg.
9. 1. καὶ ἐπὶ τῷ ἀντιπάλιν.
11. corrigendus error in Textu, Regiæ et legend. (ἡ ἐν τῷ ἀντιπάλιν)
14. 1. αὐτὸν ἀντιπάλιν, cum Vulg.
15. 1. ἐπὶ τῷ ἀντιπάλιν, cum Vulg.
22. 1. καὶ ὁ ἀντιπάλιν, cum Vulg.
25. 1. ἡμεῖς οὐκ ἐπὶ τῷ ἀντιπάλιν, cum Vulg.

CAP. XIX.

2. 1. οἱ ἀντιπάλιν, cum Vulg.
4. ponendum in Textu ut legunt MSS. 9 (καὶ πρὸς ἑαυτοῦ,) cum Vulg.
4. corrigendus error in Textu, Regiæ et legendum, ὅτι δι' ἑαυτοῦ.
15. ponendum in Textu ut legunt MSS. 9 (καὶ εἰπε ὡς ἐπὶ τῷ ἀντιπάλιν,) cum Vulg.
23. ponendum in Textu ut legunt MSS. 9 (τὸ ἀντι-πάλιν μὲν ἐπὶ τῷ ἀντιπάλιν,) cum Vulg.
31. 3. οἱ δὲ εἰπον, ὅτι ὁ Κριός, cum Vulg.
46. 2. γινώσκεται, ὅτι ὁ Κριός, cum Vulg.

CAP. XX.

19. 4. καὶ ἐπὶ τῷ ἀντιπάλιν, ἐγνώσαν γὰρ, cum Vulg.
20. 4. ἀντιπάλιν.
24. 3. δὲ καὶ οἱ δὲ εἰπον, καὶ εἰπον, τῷ ἀντιπάλιν, &c.
28. 1. ἀντιπάλιν, cum Vulg.
33. 3. τινος αὐτῶν εἶναι γινώσκεται, cum Vulg.
35. 8. οὐκ ἐγνώσκονται.
46. 1. καὶ τῶν θύλων.

CAP. I.

Ver. MSS.

16. 1. ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ πληρωματος.
23. 1. πάντα ἐν Βηθσαιδῇ.
41. scribendum in Textu ut legunt MSS. 10, μεθερμηνιουμὶς Χριστός.
42. 1. αὐτὸς πρῶτον τῶν, cum Vulg.

CAP. II.

12. 1. μετὰ ταῦτα κατ' ἑξῆς.
17. 1. κατεργάσθη με, cum Vulg.
22. ponendum in Textu ut legunt MSS. 10 (τοῦτο ἐλεγε καὶ ἐπιστρέψαι,) cum Vulg.
24. 3. γινώσκων πάντα.

CAP. III.

25. 9. μετὰ Ἰουδαίων.

CAP. IV.

1. 9. ἐγὼ ὁ Κριός, ὅτι.
3. 9. καὶ ἀπὸ τῶν ἐν τῇ Γαλιλαίᾳ
27. 1. καὶ εἰς τὴν Γαλιλαίαν, ὅτι, cum Vulg.

Ver. MSS.

CAP. XXI.

4. 3. post ἐλθόντων addunt ταῦτα λαόν ἐλθόντι, ὁ ἐγὼ ὅτι ἐλθόντων, ἀκούτω. Καὶ τινῶν.
19. 1. κτηνῶν καὶ ὄρνιθων, cum Vulg.
26. 1. ἀπὸ τῶν ἀντιπάλιν.
26. legendum in Textu ut legunt MSS. 10 (ὅτι
ἐπὶ τῷ ἀντιπάλιν,) cum Vulg.
30. 1. ὅτι ἐγγὺς τῷ ἀντιπάλιν, cum Vulg.

CAP. XXII.

6. 1. αὐτοὶ ἀπ' ἀλλήλων, cum Vulg.
16. 1. ὡς μὴ φύγει αὐτοὶ, cum Vulg.
18. 2. οἱ μὴ πρὸς αὐτοὺς ἐπὶ τῷ ἀντιπάλιν.
30. 6. ἐπὶ τῷ ἀντιπάλιν, cum Vulg.
36. 2. καὶ ἡμεῖς οὐκ ἐπὶ τῷ ἀντιπάλιν, cum Vulg.
42. 5. πάντες οὐκ ἐπὶ τῷ ἀντιπάλιν, cum Vulg.
47. 3. πρὸς τῷ ἀντιπάλιν, cum Vulg.
52. 7. ἐπὶ τῷ ἀντιπάλιν, cum Vulg.
55. 1. καὶ τῷ ἀντιπάλιν, cum Vulg.
57. 4. ὁ ἀντιπάλιν, cum Vulg.
61. 2. ἐπὶ τῷ ἀντιπάλιν, cum Vulg.
66. 6. καὶ τῷ ἀντιπάλιν, cum Vulg.
68. 1. ἐπὶ τῷ ἀντιπάλιν, cum Vulg.
69. 1. ἀπὸ τῷ ἀντιπάλιν, cum Vulg.

CAP. XXIII.

2. 5. τὸ εἶδος ἡμεῖς, cum Vulg.
2. 1. καὶ λαόν, cum Vulg.
8. 1. ἐπὶ τῷ ἀντιπάλιν, cum Vulg.
8. corrigendum in Textu, et legendum ut
MSS. 10, καὶ πρὸς τῷ ἀντιπάλιν.
14. 3. ὡς διαστρεβλῶνται τοὶ ἀντιπάλιν.
20. 1. πρὸς τῷ ἀντιπάλιν, cum Vulg.
23. 1. deest vox τῷ ἀντιπάλιν, cum Vulg.
27. 1. ἐκπύοντες, cum Vulg.
35. 2. ἐκπύοντες καὶ αὐτοὶ καὶ, cum Vulg.
44. 1. καὶ τῷ ἀντιπάλιν, cum Vulg.
46. 2. πρὸς τῷ ἀντιπάλιν, cum Vulg.

CAP. XXIV.

1. 1. non est (καὶ τινος ἐν αὐτοῖς) cum Vulg.
4. 1. ἐν ἐκπύοντες, cum Vulg.
11. 1. λαόν, cum Vulg.
28. 1. πρὸς τῷ ἀντιπάλιν, cum Vulg.
29. 1. καὶ τῷ ἀντιπάλιν, cum Vulg.
36. scribendum in Textu ut legunt MSS. 9 (λαόν τῶν, αὐτὸς ὁ Ἰησους,) cum Vulg.
49. 1. ἐν τῇ πολέϊ, ὡς τῷ ἀντιπάλιν, cum Vulg.

JOANNIS.

CAP. I.

Ver. MSS.

16. 1. ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ πληρωματος.
23. 1. πάντα ἐν Βηθσαιδῇ.
41. scribendum in Textu ut legunt MSS. 10, μεθερμηνιουμὶς Χριστός.
42. 1. αὐτὸς πρῶτον τῶν, cum Vulg.

CAP. II.

12. 1. μετὰ ταῦτα κατ' ἑξῆς.
17. 1. κατεργάσθη με, cum Vulg.
22. ponendum in Textu ut legunt MSS. 10 (τοῦτο ἐλεγε καὶ ἐπιστρέψαι,) cum Vulg.
24. 3. γινώσκων πάντα.

CAP. III.

25. 9. μετὰ Ἰουδαίων.

CAP. IV.

1. 9. ἐγὼ ὁ Κριός, ὅτι.
3. 9. καὶ ἀπὸ τῶν ἐν τῇ Γαλιλαίᾳ
27. 1. καὶ εἰς τὴν Γαλιλαίαν, ὅτι, cum Vulg.

Ver. MSS.

35. scribendum in Textu ut legunt MSS. 8 (λαόν τετραμνητός,) cum Vulg.
41. ponendum in Textu ut MSS. 10 legunt (ἐπιστρέψαι σαν δια τὸν λαόν αὐτῶν.)
41. impressi et Vulgata Lat. legunt (ἐπιστρέψαι αὐτῶν δια.)
42. 1. non addit, ὁ Χριστός, cum Vulg.
47. corrigendus error in Regiæ, ut legatur (καὶ ἡσυχταὶ αὐτῶν τῶν ἐν τῷ ἀντιπάλιν) cum MSS. 10, et Vulg.
2. 1. Ἐβραῖοι Βηθσαιδα, cum Vulg.
4. 1. ἀγγελὸς γὰρ Κυρίου, cum Vulg.
5. 1. ἐν τῇ ἀσθενείᾳ, cum Vulg.
30. 1. non addit, πατὴρ, cum Vulg.

CAP. VI.

10. 2. ἀνεπέστησαν ἐπὶ ἀνθρώποι, ἀνδρες.
11. 1. ἐλαβεῖν οἱ τινος ἄρτους ὁ Ἰησους, καὶ εὐχαριστή-σας διένεικε τοῖς ἀνακειμένοις, cum Vulg.
14. 1. ἡ ἐποίησε σημεῖα.

Ver. MSS.

15. 4. βασιλεα, ανεχωρησεν.
22. 1. ειδον, οτι πλοιαριον, cum Vulg.
22. 1. non legit verba illa (εκκεινο, εις ο ενεβησαν οι μαθηται αυτου,) cum Vulg.
28. scribendum in Tex. ut legunt MSS. 9 τι ποιωμεν) cum Vulg.
45. 4. πας ο ακουσας παρα του Πατρος, cum Vulg.
51. 1. σαρξ μου εστιν υπερ της του κοσμου ζωης, cum Vulg.
52. 1. την σαρκα αυτου φαγειν, cum Vulg.
55. 1. αληθης εστι βρωσις, και το αιμα μου αληθης εστι ποσις.
58. 2. ο τρωγων μου τουτον τον αρτον.
63. 1. α εγω λελαληκα υμιν, cum Vulg.
69. 1. οτι συ ει ο υγιος του Θεου.

CAP. VII.

22. scribendum in Tex. ut legunt MSS. 10, εκ του Μωσεως εστιν.
26. 6. οτι ουτος εστιν αληθως ο Χριστος.
31. 7. σημεια τωντων ποιησει.
39. 1. ην Πνευμα Ἅγιον δεδωμεν, cum Vulg.
40. 2. ακουσαι τες του λογον τουτου, cum Vulg.

CAP. VIII.

Duo Codd. pretermittunt undecim integros versus viii capitis, videlicet ab illis verbis, Ιησους δε επαρενθη, usque ad illa, απο του νυν μηκετι ομαρτυνε.

2. 1. ορθρου δε παλιν. Ζαθεος ηλθεν ο Ιησους εις το ιερου, και πας ο οχλος ηρχ.
3. 3. αζουσι δε οι Φαρισαιοι γυναικα.
4. 3. λεγονσιν αυτον πιναζοντες, διδασκαλε. αυτη η γυνη ειρηται. π' αντιφωρω μοιχουομενη.
5. 4. εν δε τω νομω Μωσης εντελειατο ημιν τας τοιαυτας διδασκειν, cum Vulg.
6. 3. ινα σχωσι κατηγο, cum Vulg.
6. 2. κατεγραψεν εις την γην.
6. 5. desunt verba illa (μη προσποιημενος) cum Vulg.
7. 2. επερωτωντες.
7. 1. αις θινας ειπεν αυτοις.
9. 4. non legunt verba illa (και ετο της συνευδησεως ελεγχουμενοι,) cum Vulg.
9. 2. non legunt (εως των εσχιστων) cum Vulg.
10. 4. non addunt, και μηδεν θεασαμενος πληρη της γυναικος, cum Vulg.
10. 5. ειπεν αυτη, γιναι, που εισιν οι κατηγο ησαι σου, cum Vulg.
11. 2. ειπε δε ο Ιησους, ουδε εγω σε κρινω. ποιουν, και μηκετι ομαρτυν.
14. 4. η που υπαγω.
21. 1. και ζητησετι με, και ουχ εμνηστε με, και εν τη ημ.
23. 1. και ελθτε αι τοις υμιν, cum Vulg.
26. 3. ταυτα λαλω εις τον κοσμον, cum Vulg.
42. scribendum in Textu, ut legunt MSS. 7 (ειπεν οι υμιν αυτοις ο Ιησους) cum Vulg.
53. scribendum in Textu, ut MSS. 7 (τινα σεαυτον ποιεις) cum Vulg.
57. 1. τεσσαρακοντα ετη.
59. 1. omittit illa postrema verba (διελθων δια μυσον αυτων, και παρηγεν ουτως) cum Vulg.

CAP. IX.

9. 1. αλλοι δε ουχι, αλλ' ομοιος αυτω εστιν, cum Vulg.
11. 1. ο ανθρωπος εγγυμνως, cum Vulg.
16. 1. και σχισματα ην εν υμιν τοις.
26. 1. ειπον ουν αυτω, τι ποιησεις, cum Vulg.
28. ponendum in Textu ut legunt MSS. 10, (ελοιδωρησαν αυτον.)
28. in impressis et Vulg. Lat. legitur, ελοιδωρησαν ουν αυτον.

CAP. X.

8. 4. παντες υσοι ηλθον προ εμου, κλεπται.
14. 1. και γνωσκω τα εμα, και γνωσκουσι με τα εμ, cum Vulg.
34. 1. οτι εγω ειπα, θις εστι, cum Vulg.

Ver. MSS.

38. 1. κγω εν τω Πατρι, cum Vulg.
39. 1. εκ των χειρων αυτων, cum Vulg.

CAP. XI.

19. ponendum in Textu ut legunt MSS. 10, (προς τας περι Μαρθαν και.)
31. 2. δοξαντες, οτι υπαγει.
41. 1. non legit (ου ην τιθνηκως κειμενος) cum Vulg.
45. scribendum in Textu ut legunt MSS. 9, (και θεασαμενοι α εποησεν,) cum Vulg.

CAP. XII.

5. 1. διακασιν.
6. 1. εχων τα βαλλόμενα εβασ. cum Vulg.
7. 1. ινα εις την ημιραι του ενταφιασμου μου τηρηση αυτο, cum Vulg.
19. 1. οτι ουκ ωφελει σνδιν, cum Vulg.
31. ponendum in Textu, ut legunt MSS. 10, νυν κρισις εστι του κοσμου τουτου.
31. impressi et Vulg. Lat. legunt, του κοσμου, nee addunt τουτου.
35. 1. το θως εν υμιν εστι, cum Vulg.
47. 1. των ρηματων, και μη φυλαξη, cum Vulg.

CAP. XIII.

2. 1. εις την καρδιαν, ινα παραδω αυτον Ιουδας Σιμωνος Ισκαριωτης, cum Vulg.
24. 1. Σμων Πετρος, και λεγει αυτω. ειπε, τις εστιν περι ου λεγει.
25. 5. εκκεινος ουτως επι το στηθος.
31. 1. οτε ουν εξηλθε, cum Vulg.

CAP. XIV.

2. 1. οτι περιουομαι, cum Vulg.
12. 3. προς τον Πατερα πορευομαι, cum Vulg.
17. 2. οτι εν υμιν μενει, και εν υμιν εστι.
22. 1. Κυριε, τι γινεται, cum Vulg.
28. 1. εγραψτε αν, οτι πορευομαι προς τον Πατερα: οτι ο Πατηρ μου, &c., cum Vulg.

CAP. XV.

6. 2. και στυγαουσιν αυτο, cum Vulg.
8. 3. και η ηρθε εμοι μαθηται, cum Vulg.
11. 1. η εμ εν υμιν η, cum Vulg.
13. 1. η εμα την την ιαχην.
14. 1. ο εγω εντελθωμαι υμιν.
15. 1. οσα ηκουσα τω, cum Vulg.
20. 1. τω λογω υμιν, ο εγω, cum Vulg.

CAP. XVI.

3. legendum in Textu, ut legunt MSS. 10, (και ταυτα ποιησουσιν, οτι ουκ,) cum Vulg.
3. impre i cum Vulg. Lat. legunt, ποιησουσιν υμιν, οτι.
9. 1. οτι ουκ επιστευσαν εις εμε, cum Vulg.
10. 1. προς τον Πατερα υπαγω, cum Vulg.
23. 1. αν τι αιτησητε των Πατερων, δωσει υμιν.
25. 1. υμιν. ερχεται ωρα, cum Vulg.

CAP. XVII.

1. 1. ινα ο υιος σου δαξαση σε, cum Vulg.
11. 2. εν τω οικω σου, ω δεδωκας μοι.
11. 3. καθος και ημιν, cum Vulg.
17. 1. εν τη αληθεια ο λογος, cum Vulg.

CAP. XVIII.

2. 4. συνηχθη και ο Ιησους.
6. 2. αυτοις, εγω ειμι, cum Vulg.
11. 8. της μοχουσαι εις την θ.
14. 1. ανθρω που απυθανειν υπερ τον λαου, cum Vulg.
15. 1. και υλλος μαθητης.
18. 1. ην δε και ο Πέτρος μετ' αυτων εστως και, cum Vulg.
20. scribendum in Tex. ut legunt MSS. 10, εν συναγωγη και εν τω Ιερω.
25. 2. ταυτα εκεινος, και ειπεν, cum Vulg.
29. 2. ο Πέτρος ηρω εν τω εξω, και, cum Vulg.
40. 1. εκραι ασουσι ταυτες.

CAP. XIX.

| Ver. MSS. | |
|-----------|--|
| 3. | 2. και ηρχοντο προς αυτον, και ελεγον, χαιρε δ, cum Vulg. |
| 11. | 1. εξουσιαν κατ' εμου, ει. |
| 11. | 1. δ παραδους με σοι, cum Vulg. |
| 13. | 2. τουτων των λογων. |
| 15. | 1. οι δε εκρανγαζον λεγοντες, αρον. |
| 27. | legendum in Tex. ut legunt MSS. 8, (ελαβεν δ μαθητης αυτην εις τα ιδια,) cum Vulg. |
| 28. | 4. ιδων δ Ιησους. |
| 29. | 1. μεστον. σπαγγον οιν μεστον του οξους υσσωπω περιθιυτες, cum Vulg. |
| 31. | 4. εκεινον του σα ³ ιατου. |
| 35. | 1. ινα και υμεις πιστευητε, cum Vulg. |

Ver. MSS.

| | |
|-----|-----------------------------------|
| 36. | 5. ου συντριβησεται αυτον. |
| 38. | 2. μετα δε ταυτα ηρωτ., cum Vulg. |
| 39. | 1. ελιγμα σμυρνης. |

CAP. XX.

| | |
|-----|-------------------------------------|
| 14. | 2. ταυτα ειπονσα εστραφη, cum Vulg. |
|-----|-------------------------------------|

CAP. XXI.

| | |
|-----|--|
| 1. | 1. τοις μαθηταις αυτον επι της. |
| 3. | 1. εις το πλοιον, και ιι εκεινη, cum Vulg. |
| 6. | 1. ελκυσαι ισχυον, cum Vulg. |
| 13. | 1. και ερχεται δ Ιησους, cum Vulg. |
| 15. | 1. Σιμων Ιωαννου, cum Vulg. |
| 25. | 1. α εποησεν δ Ιησους, cum Vulg. |

ACTA APOSTOLORUM.

Ex Collectione Codicum Manuscriptorum viii. antiquorum.

CAP. I.

| Ver. MSS. | |
|-----------|--|
| 10. | 1. εν εσθησει λευκαις, cum Vulg. |
| 12. | 1. υπεστρεψαν οι αποστολοι εις ιερους. |
| 14. | 1. τη προσειγγη συν ηιταιζει και Μαριαμ, cum Vulg. |
| 15. | 2. εν μεσω των αδελφων ειπεν, cum Vulg. |
| 16. | 1. την γρασην, ηι προειπε, cum Vulg. |
| 17. | 1. ην εν ημιν, cum Vulg. |
| 20. | 2. η επαιλεις αυτων, cum Vulg. |
| 23. | 1. Ιωσην του καλουμενου. |
| 25. | 1. τον τοπον της διακονι, cum Vulg. |
| 26. | 1. κληρους αυταις, cum Vulg. |

CAP. II.

| | |
|-----|--|
| 7. | 1. εξισταντο δε παντες και εθ. cum Vulg. |
| 10. | 8. της Λι θυς. |
| 17. | 5. ενυπνια ενυπνιασθησονται, cum Vulg. |
| 23. | 1. εκδυτον δια χειρων, cum Vulg. |
| 30. | 1. ποη addit (το κατα σαρκα αναστησειν τον Χρισ- τον) cum Vulg. |
| 31. | 1. οτι ουτε ε; κατελειφθη εις υδον, cum Vulg. |
| 33. | 1. ο υμεις και ιλεπετε και ακουετε. |
| 38. | 2. Πετρος δε προς αυτους, cum Vulg. |
| 41. | 1. οι μεν ουν αποδεξαμενοι, cum Vulg. |
| 42. | 1. και τη καινωι: τη κλασει. |
| 44. | 1. παντες δ. οι πιστεισαι τις επι το αυτο ειχον. |
| 47. | 1. καθ' ημεραν επι το αυτο, cum Vulg. |

CAP. III.

| | |
|-----|--|
| 1. | 1. Πετρος δε και Ιωαννης ανεβαινον, cum Vulg. |
| 2. | 1. προς την πύην του ιερου, cum Vulg. |
| 3. | 2. ελεημοσυνην λαζειν, cum Vulg. |
| 7. | 1. χειρος ηγειρεν αυτον, cum Vulg. |
| 11. | 1. κρατουντας δε αυτον τον Πετρον και τον Ιωαννην, cum Vulg. |
| 13. | scribendum in Tex. ut legunt MSS. 7, (ον υμεις μεν παρεδωκατε,) cum Vulg. |
| 13. | 1. και ηρνησασθε κατα προσωπον, cum Vulg. |
| 18. | 1. των προφητων παθειν τον Χριστον αυτον, cum Vulg. |
| 21. | 1. δια στοματος των αγιων, των απ' αιωνος αυτου προφητων, Μωσης μεν ειπεν, οτι προφ. cum Vulg. |
| 26. | 1. ευλογουντα υμας και αγιαζοντα. |

CAP. IV.

| | |
|-----|---|
| 2. | 3. την αναστασιν την εκ νεκρων, cum Vulg. |
| 3. | 1. και εθεντο αυτους εις τηρησιν, cum Vulg. |
| 5. | 7. εν Ιερουσαλημ. |
| 11. | 2. ο εξουθενωθεις. |
| 12. | ponendum in Tex. ut legunt MSS. 7, (εν αλλη ουδενι,) cum Vulg.; mox scribendum pariter in Tex., ut MSS 6 (ουδε γαρ ονομα) cum Vulg. |
| 17. | 3. μηδενι ανθρωπων, cum Vulg. |

Ver. MSS.

| | |
|-----|--|
| 25. | 2. τον παιδος σου εν Πνευματι 'Αγιω ειπων. |
| 27. | 3. επ' αληθειας εν τη πολει ταυτη επι του, cum Vulg. |
| 30. | 8. εκτεινειν σε εις ιασιν. |

CAP. V.

| | |
|-----|---|
| 1. | 5. συν Σαπφειρα. |
| 15. | 2. ωστε και εις τας πλατειας. |
| 15. | 1. επι κλινاريων και, cum Vulg. |
| 16. | 1. πολεων Ιερουσαλημ, cum Vulg. |
| 23. | legendum in Tex. ut MSS. 7 (εν παση ασφαλεια.) |
| 24. | 1. ταις λογους τουτοις ο τε στρατη, υς του ιερου, cum Vulg. |
| 25. | legatur in Tex. ut habent MSS. 7, (αυτοις οτι ιδον,) cum Vulg. |
| 28. | 1. λεγων παραγγελιε ποηγγ. cum Vulg. |
| 34. | 1. βραχτι τι τοις ανθρωποις ποιησαι, cum Vulg. |
| 36. | 4. εαυτοι ψ, cum Vulg. |
| 36. | 1. ω προσεκολληθη. |
| 37. | 1. λαον οπισω, cum Vulg. |
| 39. | 5. ου δυησεν τε καταίνυσαι αυτους. MS. 1, αυτο, cum Vulg. |
| 42. | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 8 legunt, (ουκ επαυοντο διδασκαυτες, και ευαγγελιζομενοι του Χριστου Ιησου,) cum Vulg. |

CAP. VI.

| | |
|-----|--|
| 1. | 1. εν δε ταις ημεραις ενταυταις, cum Vulg. |
| 7. | 1. πολυς τε οχλος τι Ιουδαϊων. |
| 8. | 2. πληρης χαριτος και δυναμις, cum Vulg. |
| 8. | 1. addit, εν τω λαω διε του ονοματος του Κυριου Ιησου Χριστου. |
| 13. | 1. ου πανεται ρηματα λαλων κατα τον τοπον, cum Vulg. |

CAP. VII.

| | |
|-----|---|
| 11. | 1. εφ' ολην την Αιγυπτον και Χανααν, cum Vulg. |
| 12. | 1. οντα σιτια εν αιγ. |
| 17. | 1. ης ωμολογησεν ο Θεος, cum Vulg. |
| 18. | 2. ετερος επ' Αιγυπτον υς, cum Vulg. |
| 21. | 1. εκθευτος δε αυτον ανελετο αυτον, cum Vulg. |
| 26. | 1. αδελφοι εστε. ινα τι, cum Vulg. |
| 30. | 1. αγγελος εν φλογι πυρος β. cum Vulg. |
| 34. | 1. και τους στεναγμους. |
| 35. | 1. συν χειρι αγγελου, cum Vulg. |
| 37. | 2. υμων ως εμε. αυτον ακουσαθ. ουτος, cum Vulg. |
| 44. | 7. του μαρτυριου ην τοις πατρασιν υμων. |
| 49. | 1. της καταπαυσεως μου εστιν, cum Vulg. |
| 51. | 1. και απεριτμητοι καρδιαις και, cum Vulg. |
| 58. | 1. και εκβαλοντες αυτον εξω, cum Vulg. |

CAP. VIII.

| | |
|-----|---|
| 1. | 6. παντες δε διεσπαρ. MSS. 2, και παντες, cum Vulg. |
| 10. | 1. του Θεου η καλουμενη μεγαλη, cum Vulg. |

Ver. MSS.

13. 1. θεωρων τα σημεια, και δυναμεις μεγαλας γιγνομενας.
25. 1. ὑπεστρεψαν εις Ιερουσαλημ, πολλας τε κω. των Σαμ. ευηγγελιζοντο, cum Vulg.
28. legendum in Textu ut habent MSS. 8, (και ανεγνωσκε τον προφητην Ησ.,) cum Vulg.
37. scribatur in Tex. cum appositione obeli, ut est in Regio Codice. Versum hunc integrum MSS. 8 non legunt, idcirco obelus in Tex. appositus est.

CAP. IX.

5. 1. ὁ δε, εγω εμμ Ιησους, cum Vulg.
5, 6. verba, quibus in Regio Codice obelus affixus est, cum obelo pariter notantur.
5, 6. in MSS. 8 desunt verba illa, quibus in Regio Codice prefixus est obelus; propterea in hoc ctiam Textu obelum apponi monuimus.
11. 1. αναστα, πορει θητι επι την β. cum Vulg.
12. 2. αυτω χιμυς, cum Vulg.
18. 1. αν' ηλειε τα και ανστας ε β. cum Vulg.
19. 1. εγειρετα δε με των εν Διμας, cum Vulg.
20. 2. εκηρισσ' τι Ιησους, cum Vulg.
22. ponendum in Tex. ut legunt MSS. 8 (και σιν. χυνε τους Ιουδαιους.)
26. 1. παραγεινηντος δε εις Ιερουσαλημ, πειραζε κολλασθαι, cum Vulg.
29. legendum in Tex. ut MSS. 5, (ε'π'τηνυμενος και εκπηρενημενος εν Ιερουσαλημ,) cum Vulg.
31. 1. η μεν ουν εκκλησια, et deinceps omnia singulari numero, ut Vulg.
35. 6. τον Ασσυριαν. MS. 1, τον Σαρωνα.
38. 1. μη σκληρης διελθειν εως ημων, cum Vulg.

CAP. X.

2. 1. ποιων ελεημοσυνας, cum Vulg.
3. 2. ὁσει περι ὤρων ενατην.
5. 5. Σιμωνα, ὃς επικ.
6. 7. παρα βυλυσαν. ὃς δε σπηλθεν. MS. 1, παρα θαλασσαν ὃς λαίησει ῥήματα προς σε, εν οὖς σωθηση συ και πως ὁ οικος σου.
7. 2. ὁ λαλῶν αυτω, cum Vulg.
11. 1. και κατα λαιναν σκηνις, ὃς οθ. μετ. τεσσαρεσιν αρ. χαις καθιμινον επι της γης.
12. 1. ποτα τα τιμιματα και εγειρετα της γης και πετεινα, &c., cum Vulg.
16. 1. και ενθης ενεληθη το σκηνις, cum Vulg.
17. 1. ιδου οι ανδρες μι, cum Vulg.
17. scribendum in Tex. ut legunt MSS. 8, (δι μω. τησαντες την οικιαν,) cum Vulg.
19. 7. ιδου ανδρες ζητοσι σε.
21. legendum in Tex. ut MSS. 6, (προς τους ανδρας ειπυν ιδου εγω εμμ,) cum Vulg.
22. corrigendum in Textu mendum Regiæ (ε'πα δλου τον εθνους των) ut MSS. 8, et Vulg.
23. 1. τη δε ετανημιον ωστας εξηλθε, cum Vulg.
23. 3. τη δε επανριαν εισηλθεν.
25. 4. εγειρετα τον εγειρετα τον πττ, cum Vulg.
30. 1. ημην την εννατην ὡραν προσευχομενος, cum Vulg.
32. 1. desunt verba illa, (ὡς πα. κ. ρουεις λαίησαι σοι,) cum Vulg.
45. 1. πιστοι οι συνηλθον, cum Vulg.
48. 2. εν τω ονοματι Ιησου Χρι. MSS. 2, εν τω ονοματι του Κυριου.

CAP. XI.

7. 1. δε και φωνης, cum Vulg.
13. 4. σπηγγειλε δε, cum Vulg.
13. legendum in Textu, ut MSS. 5, (εις λοππην και μεταπεμφθαι,) cum Vulg.
17. legendum in Tex. ut MSS. 5, (ου τις ημην,) cum Vulg.
21. legendum ut MSS. 8. in Tex. (μετ' αυτων πολυς τε αριθμος,) cum Vulg.
22. legendum in Tex. ut MSS. 8, (δε γ'ον εως Αντιοχειας,) cum Vulg.
23. 1. προσμνησεν εν τω Κυριω, cum Vulg.
26. 3. ηγαγει εις Αντιοχειαν, cum Vulg.

CAP. XII.

Ver. MSS.

5. 1. εκτενως γινόμενη, cum Vulg.
12. legendum in Tex. ut MSS. 8, (συνηθροισμενη και προσευχομενοι,) cum Vulg.
25. 2. ὑπεστρεψαν εις Ιερουσαλημ πληρωσαντες.
25. 2. ὑπεστρεψεν εις Αντιοχειαν.
25. 1. ὑπεστρ. απο Ιερουσαλημ, πληρ. cum Vulg.

CAP. XIII.

1. 1. ησαν δε εν Αντιοχεια, cum Vulg.
6. 2. δε ὄλην την νησαν, cum Vulg.
6. 3. εὔραν ἀνδρσ τινα μεγαν ψευδοπροφ.
10. 2. ου πανη διαστρενω, cum Vulg.
15. 1. ει τις εστι λογος εν ἡμιν, cum Vulg.
17. 7. ὁ θεος του λαου τουτου εξελεξατο.
17. 1. ὁ θεος του λαου του Ισραηλ εξ. cum Vulg.
17. legendum in Tex. ut MSS. 8, (ὑψωσεν εν τη παροικια εν γη Λιζυπτω,) cum Vulg.
19. 7. κατεκληραννησαν αυταις.
23. legendum in Tex. ut MSS. 6, (ηγαγε τω Ισραηλ,) cum Vulg.
23. 5. σωτηριαν, Ιησουν.
26. 6. εξαπεσταλη.
33. 1. τοις τεκνις ἡμων, αναστητας, cum Vulg.
34. legendum in Tex. ut MSS. 8, (ὑποστρεφειν εις διαρθραν,) cum Vulg.
41. ponendum in Tex. ut MSS. 5 (και θανμασατε, και αφανισθητε.)
41. 3. και θανμασατε, και επιβλεψατε, και αφανισθητε.
42. 2. εξιοντων δε αυτων εις το μεταξυ σα' λαιον, ηξιουν τα εθνη.
42. 1. παρεκαλουν λαλθηναι οι τοις τα ῥήματα ταυτα.
45. 2. λι. ημενοις βλασημηταις, cum Vulg.
51. 2. τωι παδων επ' οι τωι, cum Vulg.
52. 2. οι τε μοθηται επληρονντο, cum Vulg.

CAP. XIV.

2. 3. οι δε απειθσαντες, cum Vulg.
8. 1. μητρος αυτου. ὃς οι διποτε, cum Vulg.
10. legendum in Tex. ut MSS. 6, (τη φωνη αναστη. θι επι τοις παδας σου,) cum Vulg.
10. 2. τη φωνη, σοι λεγω εν τω ονοματι του Κυριου Ιησου Χριστου αναστ.
13. 1. ὁ τε λερενς του Διος, cum Vulg.
17. 3. addunt, αυτοις, αλ'α πορευεσθαι ἰκαστον εις τα ἰδια.
18. 4. non legunt, (διατιμ λεντων δε αυτων, και διδασ. καντων,) cum Vulg.
25. 1. τον ὄσον τι Κυριω, και β, cum Vulg.
28. 1. διτιμιζον δε χρονον, cum Vulg.

CAP. XV.

2. 7. και ζητησεως πικ ολιγης.
6. 2. σπηγγειλοσεν τε οδ αποστολοι, cum Vulg.
14. 2. ληνι τω ονοματι ούτου, cum Vulg.
16. 1. και τα κατεστραμμενα, cum Vulg.
17. 2. ὁ ποιων ταυτα, cum Vulg.
17. 1. ὁ ποιων ταυτα γνωστα απ' αιωνος. διο εγω, &c.
18. ponendum in Tex. ut MSS. 7, (γνωστα απ' αιωνος εστι τω θεω παντα τα εργα αυτου,) cum Vulg.
18. 1. ὁ εστι γνωστα απ' αιωνος αυτω.
23. 1. δια χειρος αυτων οδ αποστολοι, cum Vulg.
23. 1. και οι πρεσβυτεροι αδελφαι τοις, cum Vulg.
24. legendum in Tex. ut habent MSS. 7 (ὅτι τινες εξ ημων εξελθοντες,) cum Vulg.
24. 1. ὅτι τινες εξελθοντες.
24. 1. non legit (λ'οντες περιτεμεσθαι, και τηρειν τον νομον) cum Vulg.
29. expungenda o Tex. verba hæc, quæ in nullis MSS. leguntur, (και ὅσα μη θελετε ξαντους γινεσθαι, ἑτεροις μη ταιιτ,) cum Vulg.
29. scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 7, (ευπραξετε,) cum Vulg.
30. 2. κατηλθον εις Αντιοχ, cum Vulg.
33. 1. προς τους αποστειλντας αυτους, cum Vulg.
36. 3. τωις αδ. λ'οντες κατα πασαν, cum Vulg.
37. 2. τωις ε' και ομμενον Μαρκον, cum Vulg.

| Ver. | MSS. |
|------|---|
| 9. | 2. και ανασταντες τινες του γραμματεων του μεραν των Φαρισαιων. |
| 9. | 1. non legit (μη θεομαχουμεν cum Vulg. |
| 11. | 1. θαρσει, nec addit, Παυλε, cum Vulg. |
| 15. | 2. ὡπως καταγαγῃ αυτον; cum Vulg. |
| 17. | legendum in Textu, ut MSS. 8 (τον νεανιαν τουτου) cum Vulg. |
| 22. | corrigenum in Regia mendum, et legendum, (χιλιαρχος απελυσε τον νεανιαν,) cum Vulg. |
| 23. | 1. στρατιωτας ενοπλους διακοσιους, cum Vulg. |
| 27. | 2. εξειλομην μαθων, cum Vulg. |
| 28. | 2. βουλυμενος τε επιγνωαι, cum Vulg. |
| 30. | 2. εις τον ανδρα εσεσθαι εξ αυτων, εξ. |
| 31. | 2. αναγνους δε και επερωτησας, cum Vulg. |

CAP. XXIV.

| | |
|-----|---|
| 1. | 3. μετα πρεσβυτερων τινων και ρητορος, cum Vulg. |
| 3. | 2. και διορθωματα γινόμενων, cum Vulg. |
| 5. | 2. στασεις πασι, cum Vulg. |
| 7. | 3. μετα πολλης βιας εκ των χειρων ἡμων απηγαγε, κελεντας τους κατηγορους αυτον ερχεσθαι επι σου, πυρ' αυ. |
| 10. | 6. κριτην δικαιον τω εθνει. |
| 13. | 2. δονανται σοι περι αν., cum Vulg. |
| 15. | 3. εσεσθαι δικαιων τε και αδικων, cum Vulg. |
| 16. | 4. εν τωτῳ και αυτος ασκω, cum Vulg. |
| 16. | 2. συνειδησιν εχειν, cum Vulg. |
| 16. | ponendum in Textu ut legitur in MSS. 8, (και τους ανθρωπους δια παντος,) cum Vulg. |
| 19. | 3. τινες δε απο της Ασι., cum Vulg. |
| 19. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 5, (ους εδει επι του,) cum Vulg. |
| 22. | 2. ανεβαλετο δε αυτοις ὁ Φηλιξ, ακριβ., cum Vulg. |
| 23. | 2. τηρεσθαι αυτον, cum Vulg. |
| 23. | 2. ὑπηρετειν αυτω, η προσ. |
| 26. | 2. non legunt, (ὡπως λυση αυτον,) cum Vulg. |

CAP. XXV.

| | |
|-----|--|
| 2. | legendum in Text. ut MSS. 6, (οι αρχιερεις και οι πρωτοι των,) cum Vulg. |
| 2. | 2. ὁ, τε αρχιεργς και οι πρωτοι. |
| 5. | 2. εν τῳ ανδρι ατοπιη, cum Vulg. |
| 5. | 2. εν τῳ ανδρι τουτου, κατηγορειτῳσαν. |
| 6. | 2. ἡμερας ου πλειονς οκτω η δεκα, cum Vulg. |
| 6. | 5. ἡμερας πλειονς η δεκα. |
| 7. | 2. περιεστῳσαν αυτον οι απο., cum Vulg. |
| 7. | legendum in Text. Gr. ut MSS. 6 (αιτιαματα.) |
| 7. | 1. αιτιαματα καταδικοι, α ανκ, cum Vulg. |
| 8. | 1. του Παυλου απαλυνουμενου, ὅτι, cum Vulg. |
| 8. | legendum in Textu ut MSS. 7, (αυτε εις Καισαρα ἡμαρτοι,) cum Vulg. |
| 8. | 1. ουτε εις Καισαρα ἡμαρτον. |
| 15. | 2. κατ' αυτον καταδικη, cum Vulg. |
| 16. | 1. ανθρωπον, πριν η ὁ. |
| 17. | 2. συνελθοντων ονν ενθαδε, cum Vulg. |

Ver. MSS.

| | |
|-----|--|
| 18. | 2. ὑπευδουν εγω πονηρων. MS. 1, πονηραν, cum Vulg. |
| 20. | 1. εις την περι των ζητησιν. |
| 22. | 1. ακουσαι αυριον, φησιν, ακουση, &c., cum Vulg. |
| 25. | 2. εγω δε κατελαβονην, cum Vulg. |
| 25. | 2. αυτον δε τουτου, cum Vulg. |
| 25. | 2. πεμπειν. περι ου, cum Vulg. |

CAP. XXVI.

| | |
|-----|---|
| 3. | 1. και ζητηματων επισταμενος. |
| 3. | 5. δεομαι, μακροθυμως, cum Vulg. |
| 7. | 2. εγκαλονμαι ὑπο Ιουδαιων, Βασιλεν, cum Vulg. |
| 9. | 4. πατερας ἡμων επαγγελιας, cum Vulg. |
| 12. | 1. εν οἷς περινομενον, cum Vulg. |
| 14. | 3. παντων τε καταπ., cum Vulg. |
| 14. | 1. λαλουνσαν μοι τη Ἑβραϊδι διαλ., cum Vulg. |
| 15. | 3. ὁ δε Κυριος ειπεν. Εγω ειμι, cum Vulg. |
| 20. | 5. απαγγελω μετανυσιν. |
| 21. | 1. συλλαβουμενοι με οντα εν τῳ ιερῳ. |
| 22. | scribendum in Text. ut legunt MSS. 7, (μαρτυρομενος μικρῳ τε, &c.,) cum Vulg. |
| 25. | 2. ὁ δε Παυλος, Ου μαινομαι, φησι, cum Vulg. |
| 29. | 1. ὁ δε Παυλος, Ευχαιμην αν, cum Vulg. |
| 29. | 1. και εν ολιγῳ, και εν μεγαλῳ, cum Vulg. |
| 30. | 1. και ανεστη ὁ βασιλευς και ὁ, cum Vulg. |

CAP. XXVII.

| | |
|-----|---|
| 2. | 5. Ατραμνηνη. |
| 2. | 3. μελλουσι πλειν. |
| 3. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 7, (τη τε ἑτερα,) cum Vulg. |
| 5. | 5. κατηλθομεν εις Μυρα. |
| 12. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (βουλην αναθηναι εκειθεν,) cum Vulg. |
| 21. | 2. πολλης τε αιτιας, cum Vulg. |
| 27. | 1. οι νανται προσαν χειν τινα. |
| 34. | scribendum in Textu, ut MSS. 8 (μεταλαβειν τροφης.) |
| 34. | 1. απο της κεφαλῃς απηλειται, cum Vulg. |
| 39. | 2. εις ὃν εβουλευοντο, ει διναντο, cum Vulg. |
| 43. | scribendum in Text. ut MSS. 8 (αυτους του βουληματος.) |

CAP. XXVIII.

| | |
|-----|---|
| 1. | 1. τοτε επιγνωμεν, ὅτι, cum Vulg. |
| 3. | 1. φησαντων τι πληθος, cum Vulg. |
| 3. | 4. καθηψατο της χυμς αυτου. |
| 8. | 1. και επιθεις τας χιτρας, cum Vulg. |
| 16. | 1. ὅτε δε ηλθον εις Ρωμην, επιτραπη τῳ Παυλῳ μεντιν λαυ' αυτον, &c, cum Vulg. |
| 17. | 2. συκαλ τασθαι αυτοι τας οντας. |
| 23. | 2. πιυνων τι αιτιες περι του Ιηταν, cum Vulg. |
| 28. | 1. ταυτο το σωτηριον του Θεου, cum Vulg. |
| 29. | scribendum in Text. ut legunt MSS. 7 (εν εαντοις συζητησιν.) |

EPIST. AD ROMANOS,

Ex Collatione Codicum Manuscriptorum viii. antiquorum.

CAP. I.

| Ver. | MSS. |
|------|---|
| 4. | 1. τον προορισθεντος, cum Vulg. |
| 13. | scribendum in Textu ut legunt MSS. 8, (σχωκαι εν ἡμιν,) cum Vulg. |
| 16. | 1. το ευαγγελιον δυναμς γαρ, cum Vulg. |
| 16. | 1. Ιουδαιῳ τε και Ἑλληνι. |
| 21. | 1. δια παρεδωκεν αυτους, cum Vulg. |
| 32. | 2. του Θεου επιγνωσκοντες. |
| 32. | 1. ου μονον αυτα ποιουντες, αλλα και συνευδοκουντες τοις. |

CAP. II.

| | |
|----|--|
| 2. | 1. οιδαμεν γαρ. ὅτι το, cum Vulg. |
| 5. | 1. και αποκαλεσθης δικαιοκρισιας του Θεου, cum Vulg. |

Ver. MSS.

| | |
|-----|---|
| 7. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8 (και αβθαροσαν ζητουσι.) |
| 17. | 2. ει δε συ Ιουδαιος, cum Vulg. |
| 17. | corrigenum in Regia mendum, et scribendum ut MSS. 8, και λανχσσαι ιν Θεῳ. |

CAP. III.

| | |
|-----|-------------------------------------|
| 2. | 2. πρωτον μεν ὅτι επιστ., cum Vulg. |
| 10. | 3. ὅτι ονκ εστι δικειν, cum Vulg. |
| 28. | 1. λογιζομεθα γαρ, cum Vulg. |

CAP. IV.

| | |
|-----|--|
| 16. | 1. το εαντοι σωμα ννηκρωμενον, cum Vulg. |
|-----|--|

CAP. V.

Ver. MSS.

2. 1. εσχηκαμεν εις την χαριν ταυτην.
6. 1. ειγε Χριστος ουτων ημων.
11. 4. αλλα και καυχουμεθα εν τω, cum Vulg.

CAP. VI.

12. 2. εις το υπακουειν ταις επιθυμιαις αυτου, cum Vulg.
17. legendum in Textu ut MSS. 7, (υπηκουσατε δε εκ καρδιας,) cum Vulg.

CAP. VII.

4. 1. εις το γενεσθαι υμας ετερω τω εκ, cum Vulg.
7. 6. ερονμεν; ο υμος αμαρτια, cum Vulg.
9. scribendum in Text. ut MSS. 8, (η αμαρτια ανεζησεν,) cum Vulg.
20. 4. ει δε ο ου θελω, τουτο ποιω, cum Vulg.
22. 1. τω νομω του νοου κατα.
25. 1. χαρις τω Θεω δια Ιησον Χριστον.
25. 1. χαρις δε τω Θεω.

CAP. VIII.

6. scribendum in Text. ut MSS. 8 (το γαρ φρονημα της.)
11. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 7, (δια το ενοικουν αυτου Πνευμα εν υμιν,) cum Vulg.
11. 1. δια του ενοικουντος αυτου Πνευματος εν υμιν.
23. 1. και αυτοι εν ταυτοις αναστανηνται.
23. 1. στερησμεν, cum Vulg.
26. 1. τη ασ' ημων, cum Vulg.
28. 1. συνερ, η ο Θεος εις αγαθον.
31. 1. Χριστος Ιησους ο αποθανων, cum Vulg.
34. 1. μα' τον δε, η σθεις.
34. 1. ος εστιν εν ο' η' των Θεου, cum Vulg.

CAP. IX.

4. 1. και η διασηκη, cum Vulg.
23. 1. ινα γνωσιζη τον πλουτον, cum Vulg.
23. scribendum in Text. ut MSS. 8, (και καθως προειρηκεν Ησαϊας,) cum Vulg.
32. 1. αλλ' ως εξ εργαων' πρισκεοφαν γαρ, cum Vulg.

CAP. X.

1. 1. υπερ αυτων εις σωτηριαν, cum Vulg.
3. 1. και την ιδιαν ζητουντες στησαι, cum Vulg.
5. 1. ζησεται εν αυτη, cum Vulg.
8. 1. αλλα τι λεγει η Γραφη; Εγγυς σου, cum Vulg.
11. scribendum in Text. ut MSS. 8, (η Γραφη. Πας ο πιστευων,) cum Vulg.
17. 1. δια βηματος Χριστου, cum Vulg.

CAP. XI.

Ver. MSS.

2. 1. κατα του Ιαραηλ. Κυριε, τους, cum Vulg.
3. 1. τα θυσιασθηρια σου κατεσκ., cum Vulg.
6. 1. ει δε εξ εργαων ουκετι χαρις· επει το εργον ουκετι εστι χαρις.

CAP. XII.

20. 1. αλλ' εαν πεινα ο εχθρ., cum Vulg.

CAP. XIII.

1. 1. αι δε ουσαι υπο του Θεου τεταγ., cum Vulg.
3. 1. φοβος τω αγαθω εγω, αλλα τω κακω.
9. scribendum in Text. ut MSS. 7, (το. γαρ. Ου μοιχευσεις, ου φονευσεις, ου κλεψεις, ου ψευδομαρτυρησεις, ουκ επιημησεις,) cum Vulg.
10. scribendum in Text. ut MSS. 7 (κακον ουκ εργαζεται.)
10. 1. κακον ου κατεργαζεται.
11. scribendum in Text. ut MSS. 8, (νυν γαρ εγγυτερον,) cum Vulg.

CAP. XIV.

6. 1. non legit (και ο μη φρονων την ημεραν Κυριω ου φρονει,) cum Vulg.
11. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (παν γουν, και πασα γλωσσα, &c.) cum Vulg.
13. 1. τω αδελφω εις σκανδαλον.
14. 5. εν Κυριω Ιησου, cum Vulg.
15. 1. ει γαρ δι' τ βρωμα, cum Vulg.
19. 1. ο γαρ εν τω τω δουλευει, cum Vulg.

CAP. XV.

4. 1. οσα γαρ εγραφη, παντα εις την ημετεραν διδασκαλιαν εζημιωθη.
8. 1. λεγω γαρ, cum Vulg.
14. 2. και αλλη. ους νοιθετειν, cum Vulg.
17. scribendum in Text. ut MSS. 8 (τα προς τον Θεον.)
18. 1. ον γαρ τοδμω τι λαλειν, cum Vulg.
18. legendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (εθνων, λογω και εργω,) cum Vulg.
19. 1. πνευματος. ωστε με.
20. 1. ούτω δε φιλοτιμουμαι.
24. 1. non legit (ελευσονται προς υμας,) cum Vulg.
29. 1. ευλογιας Χριστου ελευσονται.
31. 1. και η δωροφορια μου η εν Ιερουσαλημ, cum Vulg.

CAP. XVI.

3. 4. Πρισκαν και, cum Vulg.
15. scribendum in Text. ut MSS. 8 (Νηρεα και την.)
16. 2. αι εκκλησιαι πασαι του Χριστου, cum Vulg.

EPIST. I. AD CORINTHIOS.

CAP. I.

Ver. MSS.

9. ponendum in Textu ut legunt MSS. 8, (του Υλου αυτου Ιησου Χριστου του Κυριου ημων,) cum Vulg.
18. legendum in Textu ut MSS. 8 (ο λογος γαρ ο του σταυρου.)
22. 2. σημεια αιτουσι, cum Vulg.

CAP. II.

2. 2. υμιν το μυστηριον του Θεου.
4. 4. ουκ εν πειθοι.
9. 1. οσα ητοιμασεν ο Θεος.
11. 2. και τα του Θεου ουδεις εγνωκ.
13. 1. ουκ εν διδασκτικοις. ε' μακ, αλλ' εν διδασκτικοις.
13. 2. αλλ' εν διδασκτικοις πνευματος, πνευματικοις, cum Vulg.
13. 1. πνευματικως πνευματικα.

CAP. III.

3. 1. και ερις, ουχι σαρκικοι εστε; cum Vulg.
4. 1. ουχι ανθρωποι εστε; cum Vulg.

Ver. MSS.

5. 1. τι ουν εστιν Απολλω; τι δε εστι Παυλος; Δια κοινοι, δι' ων.
13. 2. το πυρ αυτο δοκιμασει.

CAP. IV.

6. 1. υπερ η γεγραπται
17. 2. τας εν Χριστω Ιησου, cum Vulg.

CAP. V.

1. 1. ουδε εν τοις εθνεσιν, ωστε, cum Vulg.
2. 2. ινα αρθη εκ.
3. 1. εγω μεν ως απων.
7. 1. εκκαθαρατε την παλαιαν ζυμ., cum Vulg.
10. 1. ου παντων τοις πορνοις, cum Vulg.
11. ponendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (η πορνος, πλεονεκτης, η ειδωλολατρης, η λοιδορος, η μεθυσος, η αρπαξ,) cum Vulg.
12. 1. τι γαρ μοι τους εξω κρι., cum Vulg.
13. legendum in Text. ut MSS. 8, (ο Θεος κρινει) cum Vulg.
13. 2. εξαρατε τον ποιητρον, cum Vulg.

CAP. VI.

- Ver. MSS.
2. 2. η ουκ οιδετε, οτι, cum Vulg., iidem MSS., κοινουσι.
5. 1. ἡμων λεγω.
8. 2. και τουτο αδελφους, cum Vulg.
14. 1. και ἡμας εξηγειρε δια.
20. 1. non legit, (και εν τω πνευματι ἡμων, ατινα εστι του Θεου,) cum Vulg.

CAP. VII.

3. 1. την οφειλην αποδιδωτω, cum Vulg.
5. 1. επι το αυτο ητε, ἡα.
14. 1. ἡ γυνη ἡ απιστος εν τω αδελφω.
17. 1. ἑκαστω ὡς εμερισεν ὁ Θεος.
33. 1. τη γυναικι, και μεμερισται, cum Vulg.
35. 5. προς το ευσχημον και ευπροσεδρον.
37. 2. εν τη καρδια αὐτου, μη, cum Vulg.
38. 1. ὡστε και ὁ γαμιζων την παρθενον ἑαυτον, καλως ποιησει· και ὁ αη γαμιζων, κρεισσον ποιησει.
39. 1. δεδεται εφ' ὅσον.
40. 2. δοκω γαρ κγω.

CAP. VIII.

4. 1. και οτι ουδεις Θεος ει μη εις, cum Vulg.
7. 1. τη συνηθεια του ειδωλων. MS. 1, τινες γαρ τη συνηθει.

CAP. IX.

8. legendum in Tex. ut MSS. 8 (παντα λαλω);
10. legendum in Tex. ut MSS. 8, (οφειλει ὁ ἀροτριων,) cum Vulg.
10. 1. και ὁ αλων επ' ελ τιδι του μετερι·, cum Vulg.
13. 1. τα εκ του Ιερου εσθιωσιν, cum Vulg.
18. 1. το ινα γιλιον, εις το μη καταχ., cum Vulg.
21. 2. τοις ὑπο ιοκον ὡς ὑπο ιοκον, μη ων αυτος ὑπο νομον, ἡα τους, cum Vulg.
23. 2. παντα δε ποιω δια το, cum Vulg.

CAP. X.

7. scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 8 (ὁ λαος φαγειν και πιειν.)
11. 2. παντα τυπικως συνεβαινον, cum Vulg.
13. 3. δυνατος δε ὁ Θεος, ὅς ουκ.
14. scribendum in Textu ut legunt MSS. 5, (διοπερ αγαπηται μου,) cum Vulg.
16. 1. το ποτηριον της ευχαριστιας.
16. 1. ουχι κοινωνια του Χριστου εστιν; et mox, ουχι κοινωνια του Χριστου εστιν.
19. 1. οτι ειδωλοθυτον τι εστιν, η οτι ειδωλον τι εστιν;
cum Vulg.
28. 1. τουτο ιεροθυτον εστι.
28. 1. non addit, (τον γαρ Κυριον ἡ γη, και το πληρωμα αυτης,) cum Vulg.
30. legendum in Tex. ut MSS. 8, (ει εγω χαριτης)
cum Vulg.

CAP. XI.

4. 1. καλυμμα κατα κεφαλης εχων.
14. 1. ουδε ἡ φναις αυτη διδασκει, cum Vulg.
22. 1. επαινω ὑμας εν τουτω, cum Vulg.
26. 1. και το ποτηριον πινητε, cum Vulg.
31. 1. ει δε ἑαυτους, cum Vulg.

CAP. XII.

- Ver. MSS.
2. 1. ὡς αυγησθε απαγ., cum Vulg.
3. 1. αναθεμα Ιησους, et mox, Κυριος Ιησους, cum Vulg.
9. 1. ἑτερω πιστις εν τω, cum Vulg. mox, ιαματων εν
τω ἐνι πνε., cum Vulg.
13. 1. και παντες ἐν πνευμα εποτισθ.
24. 1. τω ὑποταγμενω τι περισσοτερον δους.
31. 1. τα χαρισματα τα μειζονα.

CAP. XIII.

4. 1. ἡ αγαπη ου ζηλει, ου περιπερευεται, cum Vulg.
5. scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 7 (ου ζητει το ἑαυτης.)
5. 1. ου ζητει τα ἑαυτης, cum Vulg.
5. 1. ου ζητει το μη ἑαυτης.
9. 1. εκ μερους γαρ γιν., cum Vulg.
10. 1. το τελειον, το εκ μερους, cum Vulg.
12. 1. αρτι ὡς δι' εσοπτρον.

CAP. XIV.

7. 1. διαστολην φθογγου μη.
10. 1. και ουδεν αφωνον, cum Vulg.
19. 2. λογους τω νοι μου λαλησαι, cum Vulg.
21. 1. χειλεσιν ἑτερων.
25. 2. παντων. τα κρυπτα της καρδ., cum Vulg.
29. ponendum in Tex. ut MSS. 8, (προφθαι δε δυο η τρεις,) cum Vulg.
31. legendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (καθ' ἑνα παν-τες προφητευειν,) cum Vulg.
32. 1. και πνευμα προφητων.
34. 2. αἱ γυναικες εν ταις, cum Vulg.
39. scribendum in Tex. ut legunt MSS. 5, (ὡστε αδελφοι ζηλουτε,) cum Vulg.
40. 1. παντα δε ενσχημονως, cum Vulg.

CAP. XV.

6. 1. τινες δε εκοιμηθησαν, cum Vulg.
8. legendum in Tex. ut MSS. 5 (ὡσπερι τω εκτρωματι.)
8. 3. ὡσπερι τω εκτρ.
10. 1. ἀλλ' ἡ χαρις του Θεου συν εμοι, cum Vulg.
15. legendum in Textu ut MSS. 5, (δε και ψευδο-μαρτυρες του Θεου,) cum Vulg.
20. 1. non legit, (γενετο,) cum Vulg.
31. 2. καυχησιν αδελφοι ἡν, cum Vulg.
34. 2. ἡμων λαλω.
44. 1. ει εστι σωμα ψυχικον, εστι και πνευματικον, cum
Vulg.
47. 1. ὁ δευτερος ανθρωπος εξ ουρανον.
49. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 7, (φορεσωμεν και,) cum Vulg.
55. 1. πον σου, Θανατε, το ρικος; πον σου, Θανατε, το κεντρον, cum Vulg.

CAP. XVI.

2. 1. κατα μιαν σβ33ατου, cum Vulg.
2. 1. ὁ, τι αν ευοδωθῃ.
3. 1. παραγενωμαι προς ὑμας, οἰς.
7. 1. ελπιζω γαρ χρονον, cum Vulg.
22. 3. τον Κυριον ἡμων Ιησουν Χριστον, et mox, του Κυριου ἡμων, cum Vulg.

EPIST. AD II. CORINTHIOS.

CAP. I.

- Ver. MSS.
5. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8 (δια τον Χριστου.)
8. 1. της γενομενης εν τη Ασια, cum Vulg.
12. 1. και ουκ εν σοφια, cum Vulg.
15. 2. ἡνα δευτεραν χαραν εχητε. MS. 1, ἡνα και δευ-τεραν χαριν εχητε.
16. scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 6, (διελθειν εις Μακεδονιαν,) cum Vulg.

Ver. MSS.

17. 2. τουτο ουν βουλομενος, cum Vulg.
18. 1. ὁ προς ὑμας ουκ εστι ναι και ου.
20. 1. εν αυτω το ναι· διο και δι' αυτου το αμην τω Θεω, cum Vulg.

CAP. II.

3. legendum in Tex. ut MSS. 8 (ἡνα αη ελθων λυ-πην εχω ἀφ'.)

- Vor. MSS.
3. impressi et Vulg. legunt (ἵνα μὴ ἐλθὼν λυπῇ ἐπὶ λυπῇ αἰῶν.)
16. 2. ἐκ θανάτου εἰς θάνατον, μοχ, ἐκ ζωῆς εἰς ζωὴν
17. legendum in Textu ut MSS. 5, (οὐ γὰρ ἐσμιν, ὥς οἱ πολλοί,) cum Vulg.

CAP. III.

1. 2. πρὸς ἡμᾶς ἡ ἐξ ἡμῶν; ἢ ἐπιστολὴ, cum Vulg.
4. 1. καὶ ἐγγεγραμμένη οὐ μελανί, cum Vulg.
9. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 6, (περισσεύει ἡ διακονία,) cum Vulg.
14. 1. ἀχρι γὰρ τῆς σημερινῆς ἡμέρας το αὐτο, cum Vulg.

CAP. IV.

6. legendum in Textu ut MSS. 6, (εἰκὼν τοῦ Θεοῦ.
οὐ γὰρ ἑοῦτος,) cum Vulg.
10. 2. τὴν νεκρώσει τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, cum Vulg.
14. 1. ὁ ἐγείνωσεν τὸν Ἰησοῦν, cum Vulg.
14. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 7, (διὰ Ἰησοῦ ἐγε-ρει,) cum Vulg.
16. 5. ἀλλ' ὁ ἐσώθητι ἀνακαίνονται.

CAP. V.

5. 2. ὁ δὸς ἡμῖν τὴν, cum Vulg.
10. legendum in Textu ut MSS. 8 (ἐκαστος τα δια του σώματος.)
10. impressi et Vulg. lat. legunt, τα ἴδια του σώματος.
12. legendum in Textu ut MSS. 8 (καυχήματος ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν.)
15. 2. τῷ ὑπὲρ πάντων ἀποθάνοντι. MS. 1, τῷ ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν πάντων.
16. legendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (ἀλλὰ νῦν οὐκετι γινώσκουμεν,) cum Vulg.
19. 2. ὥς ὅτι ὁ Θεὸς ἦν.

CAP. VI.

1. 2. συνεργούντες δε παρακαλούμεν, cum Vulg.
11. 1. ἡ γὰρ καρδία ἡμῶν.
14. 1. ἡ τις κοινωνία φωτι, cum Vulg.

CAP. VII.

8. 1. εἰ δε καὶ μετεμελομένην, βλέπω, ὅτι, κ.τ. λ.
11. scribendum in Textu ut legunt MSS. 7 (κατεργ-γασατο ἡμῖν.)
11. 1. κατεργασατο ἐν ἡμῖν, cum Vulg.
11. 2. ἀγνοεῖς εἶναι τῷ πραγματι, cum Vulg.
12. scribendum in Textu ut legunt MSS. 7, (τὴν σπουδὴν ἡμῶν τὴν ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ,) cum Vulg.

Ver. MSS.

12. 1. τὴν ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν πρὸς ἡμᾶς.
12. 1. τὴν σπουδὴν ἡμῶν τὴν ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν πρὸς ἡμᾶς.
14. 2. ἐν ἀληθείᾳ ἐγενήθη.

CAP. VIII.

4. 3. non legunt, (δεξασθαι ἡμᾶς,) cum Vulg.
12. 1. καθὼ ἐὰν ἐγγ, ἐν προσδέκτο, cum Vulg.
18. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8 (οὐ ὁ ἐπαυτος ἐν τῷ εὐαγγ.)
19. 1. ἐν τῇ χαρίτι ταυτῇ τῇ.
21. 1. προνοούμεν γὰρ καλά, cum Vulg.
22. 1. πεποιθήσει δε πολλὴ τῇ.
24. 1. ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν, ἐνδείξασθε εἰς.

CAP. IX.

4. 1. non addit, (τῆς καυχήσεως,) cum Vulg.
5. 1. τὴν προσεγγεγελμένην, cum Vulg.
10. 1. χορηγήσει, καὶ πύθονει τοὺς σκοποὺς ἡμῶν, καὶ ἀνέξῃ, cum Vulg.
15. 1. χάρις τῷ (ὁ) ῷ, cum Vulg.

CAP. X.

7. 1. εἰ τις δοκεῖ πεποιθέναι.
7. 1. πολλὴν ἐφ' ἑαυτοῦ, cum Vulg.
9. legendum in Textu ut MSS. 7 (ἵνα μὴ δόξω.)
9. 1. ἵνα δε μὴ δόξω, cum Vulg.

CAP. XI.

6. 1. φανερώσαντες.
13. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8 (ψευδαποστολοί.)
31. 3. τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ, cum Vulg.
32. 1. non addit, θελῶν, cum Vulg.

CAP. XII.

1. 1. οὐ συμβόλον μὲν, ἐλεντομαι δε καὶ εἰς.
11. 1. non addit, κατ' ὡμῶν, cum Vulg.
12. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8 (κατειργασθῇ ἐν.)
14. 5. ἴδου τρίτον ἑτοιμῶς.
14. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (καὶ οὐ καταναρκήσω ἡμῶν,) cum Vulg.

CAP. XIII.

1. 4. τρίτον ἐρχομαι πρὸς ἡμᾶς.
2. 1. καὶ ἀπὸν τὸν τοῖς προσημαρτηκοσί, cum Vulg.
4. 1. καὶ γὰρ καὶ ἡμεῖς ἀπὸν ἀρχίμεν, cum Vulg.
4. 1. non addit, εἰς ἡμᾶς.
5. 6. εἰ μὴ τι ἀδοκίμοι.
9. 1. χαίρουμεν γὰρ, ὅτι, cum Vulg.
11. legendum in Textu ut MSS. 7 (καὶ ὁ Θεὸς τῆς ἀγάπης καὶ εἰρήνης.)

EPIST. AD GALAT.

CAP. I.

- or. MSS.
4. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 4, (ὑπὲρ τῶν ἁμαρ-τιῶν ἡμῶν,) cum Vulg.
9. 6. εἰ τις ἡμᾶς εὐαγγελίζεται.
10. 1. εἰ ἐτι ἀνθρώποις ἠρεσκον, cum Vulg.
11. 1. γνωρίζω γὰρ ἡμῖν, cum Vulg.
15. 1. εὐδοκήσεν ὁ ἀφορίσας με, cum Vulg.
17. 1. οὐδε ἀπηλθὼν εἰς Ἱερ.
18. 1. ἱστορησαὶ Κηφᾶν.
21. 1. ὅτι ἦλθον εἰς τα κλίματα.

CAP. II.

6. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (ἀνθρώπου οὐ λαμβάνει,) cum Vulg.
7. legendum in Textu ut MSS. 8 (Πέτρος τῆς περιτομῆς.)
10. legendum in Textu ut MSS. 8 (μόνον τῶν πτωχῶν.)
11. 2. ὅτε δε ἦλθε Κηφᾶς.
13. 1. αὐτῷ οἱ λοιποὶ Ἰουδαῖοι, cum Vulg.
13. legendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (ὥστε καὶ Βαρι-βας,) cum Vulg.
14. 1. εἰπον τῷ Κηφᾶ ἐμπροσθεν, cum Vulg.

Ver. MSS.

16. 1. εἰδοτες δε, ὅτι οὐ δικαιούνται, cum Vulg.

CAP. III.

1. 3. ἐβασκηνε τῇ ἀληθείᾳ μὴ.
11. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8 (ὅτι δε ἐν νόμῳ οὐδεῖς.)
12. 1. αὐτὰ ζησεται, cum Vulg.
15. legendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (ἀδελφοὶ κατα ἀνθρώπον λεγῶ,) cum Vulg.
16. legendum in Textu ut MSS. 7, (οὐ λεγεί, καὶ τοῖς σπερμασιν,) cum Vulg.
16. legendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (καὶ τῷ σπερ-ματι σου, ὅς,) cum Vulg.
17. 2. non addunt εἰς Χριστόν, cum Vulg.
19. 1. χάριν ἐρεθῇ, cum Vulg.
21. 1. legendum in Textu ut MSS. 7, (οὕτως ἀν ἐκ νομον ἦν,) cum Vulg.
22. legendum in Textu ut MSS. 8 (ἡ γραφὴ τα πάντα.)
23. legendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (προ τοῦ δε ἐλ-θεῖν τὴν,) cum Vulg.
26. legendum in Textu ut MSS. 8 (πάντες γὰρ υἱοί.)

VARIAE LECTIONES.

Ver. MSS.

29. legendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (εἰ δὲ ὑμεῖς Χριστου,) cum Vulg.

CAP. IV.

4. corrigendum in Text. mendum Regiæ, et scribendum ut MSS. 8, (γενομενος ὑπο νομον,) cum Vulg.
6. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 7, (ὅτι δὲ εἴστε νιοί,) cum Vulg.
7. 1. καὶ κληρονομος διὰ Θεου, cum Vulg.
14. 1. καὶ τὸν πειρασμὸν ὕμων ἐν τῇ σαρκὶ μου, cum Vulg.
15. 1. ποῦ οὖν ἦν, cum Vulg.
17. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8 (ἵνα αὐτοὺς ζηλοῦντε.)
23. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (ἀλλ' ὁ μὲν ἐκ,)
cum Vulg.
24. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8 (αὐταὶ γὰρ εἰσι δύο διαθηκαί.)

Ver. MSS.

25. 3. το δὲ Ἀγαρ Σίνα.
26. 1. μητὴρ ἡμῶν, cum Vulg.

CAP. V.

3. scribendum in Text. ut MSS. 6, (τὸν νομὸν ποιῆσαι,) cum Vulg.
3. 1. τὸν νομὸν πληρῶσαι.
14. scribendum in Text. ut MSS. 5, (ὡς σεαυτὸν,) cum
Vulg.
18. legendum in Text. ut MSS. 8, (οὐκ εἴστε ὑπο νομον,) cum Vulg.
21. legendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (ὃ προλεγω ὑμῖν,) cum
Vulg.
26. 3. προκαλουμένοι, cum Vulg.

CAP. VI.

1. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (εἰ καὶ προληφθῇ,) cum Vulg.
2. 1. ἀναπληρώσατε, cum Vulg.

EPIST. AD EPHES.

CAP. I.

Ver. MSS.

1. 1. τοῖς ἁγίοις πασι τοῖς, cum Vulg.
6. 1. ἧς ἐχαρίτωσεν.
20. 2. καὶ καθίσας ἐν δεξιᾷ αὐτοῦ ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς.
20. 1. καὶ καθίσας αὐτὸν ἐν δεξιᾷ ἑαυτοῦ ἐν τοῖς ἐποῦρ.

CAP. II.

1. 2. τοῖς παραπτώμασι καὶ ταῖς ἐπιθυμίαις.
12. 1. καὶ ξένοι τῶν ἐπαγγελιῶν τῆς διαθήκης, ἐλπίδα.
17. 1. καὶ εἰρηνὴν τοῖς ἐγγύς, cum Vulg.
19. 1. ἀλλ' εἴστε ἀνυπόκριται τῶν, cum Vulg.
21. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8 (ἐν ᾧ πάσα οἰκοδομή.)

CAP. III.

1. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8 (ὑπὲρ ὕμων τῶν πιστῶν.)
6. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 6, (ἐν πνεύματι. εἶναι τα,) cum Vulg.
7. 1. οὐ ἐγενόμην ἐγὼ διὰ.
8. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (παντῶν ἁγίων ἐδόθη,) cum Vulg.
15. 2. ἐν οὐρανῷ καὶ ἐπὶ.
19. 1. ἵνα πληρωθῇ παντὸς πληρῶμα.
21. 2. καὶ ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ, cum Vulg.

CAP. IV.

4. 2. καθὼς ἐκληθήτε, cum Vulg.

Ver. MSS.

6. 1. καὶ διὰ παντῶν ἐν πασίν. ἐνὶ δε.
7. 3. ἐδόθη χάρις.
27. scribendum in Text. ut MSS. 8 (μὴδε διδοτε.)
28. scribendum in Text. ut MSS. 7 (το ἀγαθὸν ταῖς χερσίν.)
28. 1. το ἀγαθὸν ταῖς ἰδίαις χερσίν.
32. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (καθὼς καὶ ὁ Θεὸς ἐν Χριστῷ ἐχαρίσατο ἡμῖν,) cum Vulg.

CAP. V.

5. corrigendum in Text. ex MSS. 3, cum Vulg.
(ταῦτο γὰρ ἴστε γινώσκοντες.)
5. 3. ὁ ἐστὶν εἰδωλόλατρός, cum Vulg.
9. 1. ὁ γὰρ καρπὸς τοῦ φωτός, cum Vulg.
15. 2. βλέπετε οὖν ἀκριβῶς πῶς περιπατεῖτε.
23. 1. τῆς ἐκκλησίας, αὐτός, Σωτὴρ τοῦ σώματος, cum
Vulg.
28. 1. οὕτως οφείλουσι καὶ οἱ ἄνδρες, cum Vulg.
29. 2. καθὼς καὶ ὁ Χριστὸς τὴν, cum Vulg.

CAP. VI.

2. 1. καὶ τὴν μητέρα σου, cum Vulg.
9. legatur in Text. ut MSS. 7 (ὅτι καὶ ὕμων αὐτῶν ὁ Κύριος.)
9. 1. ὅτι καὶ ὕμων καὶ αὐτῶν ὁ Κύριος, cum Vulg.
16. 2. ἐν πασίν ἀναλαβόντες, cum Vulg.

EPIST. AD PHILIPP.

CAP. I.

ei. MSS.

8. 2. μαρτυρὸς γὰρ μοι ἐστὶν ὁ, cum Vulg.
11. 1. δικαιοσύνης διὰ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, cum Vulg.
14. 4. ἀφοβῶς τοῦ λόγου λαλεῖν.
23. 1. πολλῶν γὰρ κρείσσον. MS. 1, πολλῶν γὰρ μαλλόν κρείσσον.
26. 2. ὕμων περισσεύου ἐν.

CAP. II.

4. 1. ἕκαστος σκοποῦντος, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὰ ἑτέρων.
5. 1. φρονεῖτε ἐν ὕμνῳ, cum Vulg.
12. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (ὑπήκουσατε, μὴ ὡς ἐν τῇ παρουσίᾳ μου μόνον, ἀλλὰ νῦν πολλῶν μαλλόν,) cum Vulg.
14. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (χωρὶς γογγυσ-μῶν καὶ διαλογισμῶν,) cum Vulg.

Ver. MSS.

19. scribendum in Text. ut MSS. 8, (ἵνα κἀγὼ ἐνψυχῶ,) cum Vulg.
26. 3. παντὸς ὕμνος ἰδεῖν.

CAP. III.

3. 1. οἱ πνεύματι Θεῷ λατρεύοντες, cum Vulg.
11. 2. εἰ τὴν ἐξαναστασίν τὴν ἐκ νεκρῶν, cum Vulg.
12. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 7, (ὑπὲρ τοῦ Χριστοῦ Ἰησοῦ,) cum Vulg.
13. 5. οὕτω λογιζομαι κατεῖλ.

CAP. IV.

3. scribendum in Text. ut MSS. 8, (ναὶ ἐρωτῶ καὶ σε,) cum Vulg.
13. 1. ἐν τῷ ἐνδυναμονεῖ με. πλην, cum Vulg.
23. 1. Χριστὸν μετὰ τοῦ πνεύματος ὕμων. ἀμήν, cum
Vulg.

EPIST. AD COLOSS.

| CAP. I. | | CAP. II. | |
|-----------|---|-----------|--|
| Ver. MSS. | | Ver. MSS. | |
| 2. 4. | τοὺς ἐν Κολασσαῖς. | 2. 1. | συμβιβασθέντες, cum Vulg. |
| 7. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 7 (καθὼς καὶ ἐμαθετέ.) | 2. 1. | τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ Πατρὸς τοῦ Χριστοῦ. |
| 7. 1. | καθὼς ἐμαθετέ. | 11. 1. | ἐν τῇ ἀπεκδύσει τοῦ σώματος τῆς σαρκὸς, cum Vulg. |
| 10. 5. | τῇ ἐπιγνώσει τοῦ Θεοῦ. | 13. 1. | συνέζωποιήσεν αὐτῷ, cum Vulg. |
| 12. 1. | τῷ καλέσαντι ἡμᾶς. MS. 1, τῷ καλέσαντι καὶ ἱκανώσαντι. | 15. 1. | θριαμβεύσας αὐτὰς ἐν. |
| 14. | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 8, (τὴν ἀπολυτρώσιν διὰ τοῦ αἵματος αὐτοῦ, τὴν ἀφεσίν,) cum Vulg. | 21. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (μὴ ᾄψῃ, μὴδε γεύσῃ, μὴδε θιγγῃ,) cum Vulg. |
| 15. 1. | πρωτοτοκος τῆς κτίσεως. | CAP. III. | |
| 18. | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 8 (καὶ αὐτὸς ἐστὶν ἡ κεφαλὴ.) | 13. 1. | καὶ ὁ Κύριος ἐχαρίσατο, cum Vulg. |
| 20. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8 (ἀποκαταλλάξαι τὰ πάντα.) | 15. 1. | καὶ ἡ εἰρήνῃ τοῦ Χριστοῦ, cum Vulg. |
| 26. 2. | γενεῶν, ὃ νῦν ἐφανερώθη. | 16. 1. | ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις ὑμῶν τῷ Θεῷ, cum Vulg. |
| 27. | corrigen- dum in Tex. Regia mendum, et legendum (τοῦ μυστηρίου τούτου) ut MSS. 8. | 18. 6. | τοῖς ἰδίῃς ἀνδράσιν. |
| 18. | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 8, (καὶ διδασκόντες πάντα ἀνθρώπων ἐν πάσῃ σοφίᾳ, ἵνα παραστήσωμεν πάντα ἀνθρώπων τελειοὺς ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ,) cum Vulg. | 21. 1. | οἱ πατέρες μὴ παρηργίζετε τὰ. |
| | | 24. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (εἰδοτες, ὅτι ἀπὸ Κυρίου,) cum Vulg. |
| | | 24. 5. | λήψεσθε τὴν ἀνταπόδοσιν. |
| | | CAP. IV. | |
| | | 1. 1. | Κυρίον ἐν οὐρανῷ, cum Vulg. |
| | | 3. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (ανοίξῃ ἡμῖν θύραν,) cum Vulg. |
| | | 12. 1. | τελείοι καὶ πεπληροφνημένοι |

EPIST. I. AD THESSALON.

| CAP. I. | | CAP. IV. | |
|-----------|--|-----------|---|
| Ver. MSS. | | Ver. MSS. | |
| 7. 1. | τυπὸν πᾶσι, cum Vulg. | 1. 2. | ἵνα καθὼς παρελάβετε, &c., περισσεύητε μᾶλλον |
| 7. | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 5, (καὶ ἐν τῇ Ἀχαΐᾳ,) cum Vulg. | 9. 1. | οὐ χρεῖαν ἔχομεν γράφειν, cum Vulg. |
| | | 11. 2. | ταῖς χερσὶν ὑμῶν, cum Vulg. |
| | | 13. 2. | περὶ τῶν κοιμωμένων. |
| | | 18. 1. | ἐν τοῖς λόγοις ταῦτοις τοῦ Πνεύματος. |
| | | CAP. V. | |
| | | 1. 2. | πάντες γὰρ ὑμεῖς νῦν φωτός, cum Vulg. |
| | | 15. 1. | διώκετε εἰς ἀλλήλους καὶ εἰς, cum Vulg. |
| | | 21. | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 5, (πάντα δε δοκιμάζετε,) cum Vulg. |
| | | 24. | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 7, (ὅς καὶ ποιήσει ἀδελφοὶ προσευχεσθε,) cum Vulg. |
| CAP. II. | | CAP. III. | |
| Ver. MSS. | | Ver. MSS. | |
| 8. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 5, (ἀγαπητοὶ ἡμῖν,) cum Vulg. | 4. 3. | τοῦ Θεοῦ καθίσαι. |
| 12. 3. | εἰς τὸ περιπατεῖν ὑμᾶς. | 16. | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 8, (καὶ δόντες παρακλῆσιν αἰωνίαν,) cum Vulg. |
| 15. 1. | ἀνθρώποις ἐναντιούμενων, cum Vulg. | CAP. III. | |
| 20. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8 (ἡ δόξα ὑμῶν καὶ ἡ χάρις.) | 4. 1. | καὶ ἐποίησατε καὶ ποιήσετε. |
| CAP. III. | | | |
| Ver. MSS. | | | |
| 3. 1. | τοῦ μὴδενα σαινεσθαι, cum Vulg. | | |

EPIST. II. AD THESSALON.

| CAP. I. | | CAP. II. | |
|-----------|-------------------------------|-----------|--|
| Ver. MSS. | | Ver. MSS. | |
| 8. 1. | ἐν φλογὶ πυρός, cum Vulg. | 4. 3. | τοῦ Θεοῦ καθίσαι. |
| | | 16. | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 8, (καὶ δόντες παρακλῆσιν αἰωνίαν,) cum Vulg. |
| CAP. II. | | | |
| Ver. MSS. | | | |
| 2. 2. | ἡ ἡμέρα τοῦ Κυρίου, cum Vulg. | | |

EPIST. I. AD TIM.

| CAP. I. | | CAP. II. | |
|-----------|---|-----------|---|
| Ver. MSS. | | Ver. MSS. | |
| 1. 3. | κατ' ἐπιταγὴν Θεοῦ Σωτῆρος ὑμῶν, καὶ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ. | 16. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 7, (πρῶτον ἐν δειξῇται,) cum Vulg. |
| 1. 2. | κατ' ἐπιταγὴν τοῦ Σωτῆρος ὑμῶν Θεοῦ καὶ. | CAP. II. | |
| 2. 2. | ἀπὸ Θεοῦ Πατρὸς, καὶ Χριστοῦ Ἰησοῦ τοῦ, cum Vulg. | 5. | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 4, (ἀνθρώπος Χριστὸς Ἰησοῦς,) cum Vulg. |
| 9. | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 6 (πατραλοῖαις καὶ μητραλοῖαις.) | 9. | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 7, (μὴ ἐν πλεγμασίν, ἢ Χρυσῷ,) cum Vulg. |
| 12. | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 7, (τῷ ἐνδύναμωσαντι με Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ,) cum Vulg. | CAP. III. | |
| | | 12. 1. | τεκνῶν καλῶν. |

VARIAE LECTIONES.

| CAP. IV. | | Ver. MSS. |
|-----------|--|--|
| Ver. MSS. | | |
| 6. | 1. και τη καλη διδασκαλια, ή, cum Vulg. | 14. scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 6 (βουλομαι δε νεωτερας γαμειν.) |
| 16. | 1. προσεχε σεαυτω και τη, cum Vulg. | 14. 2. βουλομαι ονν νεωτερας, cum Vulg. |
| CAP. V. | | CAP. VI. |
| 4 | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 5, (τουτο γαρ εστιν αποδεκτον,) cum Vulg. | 12. 3. εις ην και εκληθης, και. |
| | | 16. scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 7, (ή τιμη και κρατος,) cum Vulg. |

EPIST. II. AD TIM.

| CAP. I. | | Ver. MSS. |
|-----------|---|--|
| Ver. MSS. | | |
| 4. | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 6 (iva χαρας πληρωθω.) | 14. 2. εν οίς εμαβες και οίς επιστενθης, cum Vulg. |
| | | 16. 1. θεοπνευστος εστιν ωφελιμος, cum Vulg. |
| | | 17. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 5, (εξηρτισμενος,) cum Vulg. |
| CAP. II. | | CAP. IV. |
| 4. | 1. ενωπιον του Θεου. | 13. 2. μαλιστα δε τος μεμβρανας, cum Vulg. |
| | | 19. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 5, (Πρισκαν και Ακυλαν,) cum Vulg. |
| CAP. III. | | |
| 9 | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 6, (αλλ' ου προκοψουσιν επι πλειον,) cum Vulg. | |

EPIST. AD TIT.

| CAP. I. | |
|-----------|---------------------------------|
| Ver. MSS. | |
| 10. | 2. εισι γαρ πολλοι ανηποτακτοι. |

EPIST. AD PHILEM.

| Ver. MSS. | Ver. MSS. |
|-----------|--|
| 6. | 5. εν επιγνωσει παντος αγαθου. |
| 7. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 7 (χαριν γαρ εχομεν.) |
| 7. | 1. χαραν γαρ εχομεν, cum Vulg. |
| | 11. 1. νυνι δε και σοι και εμοι ευχρ., cum Vulg. |
| | 23. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 6, (ό συν αιχμαλωτος μου εν Χριστω Ιησου,) cum Vulg. |

EPIST. AD HEBR.

| CAP. I. | | CAP. VII. | |
|-----------|--|------------|--|
| Ver. MSS. | | Ver. MSS. | |
| 2. | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 7, (επ' εσχατου των ημερων,) cum Vulg. | 1. | apponendus articulus in Tex. ut MSS. 8 (του Θεου του υψιστου.) |
| 3. | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 8, (εν δεξια της μεγαλωσυνης,) cum Vulg. | 17. | 2. μαρτυρεται γαρ. |
| | | 25. | legendum in Tex. ut MSS. 8 (εις το εντυχα ειν υπερ αυτων.) |
| | | 27. | 1. εαυτον προσενεγκας. |
| CAP. II. | | CAP. VIII. | |
| 7. | 7. desunt hæc verba (και κατεστησας αυτον επι τα εργα των χειρων σου.) | 6. | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 7, (τετευχε λειτουργιας, δσω και κρειττονος,) cum Vulg. |
| CAP. III. | | 11. | scribendum in Tex. ut legunt MSS. 5, (εκαστος τον πλησιον αυτου, και εκαστος,) cum Vulg. |
| CAP. IV. | | 12. | 1. και των αμαρτιων αυτων ον μη μνησθω ετι, cum Vulg. |
| 2. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (καθαπερ κρκεινοι,) cum Vulg. | | |
| 7. | 2. καθως προειρηκεν, σημερον, εαν. | | |
| 8 | corrigendum in Textu ut legunt MSS. 8, (μετα ταυτα ημερας,) cum Vulg. | | |
| CAP. V. | | CAP. IX. | |
| 4 | 4. αλλ' ό καλουμενος ύπο του Θεου, cum Vulg. | 1. | 2. ειχε μεν ονν ή πρωτη σκηνη. |
| 12 | 1. γαλακτος, ου στερεας τροφης, cum Vulg. | 1. | 2. ειχε μεν ονν ή πρωτη δικαιοματα. |
| | | 1. | 1. ειχε μεν ονν ή πρωτη διαθηκη. |
| | | 8. | emendandum in Tex., et legendum (μηπω πεφανερωσθαι) ut MSS. 8. |
| | | 9. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (εις τον καιρον τον ενεστηκοτα,) cum Vulg. |
| | | 11. | 1. των γενομενων αγαθων. |
| | | | (B*) |

VARIAE LECTIONES.

| Ver. MSS. | |
|-----------|---|
| 14. | 4. ὁς δια Πνευματος Ἀγίου, cum Vulg. |
| 19. | corrigendum in Textu cum artic., (παντε τῷ λαῷ,) ut MSS. 8. |
| 25. | 2. εἰς τὰ ἅγια τῶν ἁγίων κατ' ἐνιαυτον. |
| 28. | 2. ἀπεκδεχομενοι δια πιστεως εἰς Σωτηριαν. |

CAP. X.

| | |
|-----|---|
| 2. | 1. ἐπει καν ἐπανσαντο. |
| 9. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 7, (τον ποιησαι ὁ Θεος το θελημα σου. αναγει το,) cum Vulg. |
| 10. | 1. εσμεν δια της προσφορας, cum Vulg. |
| 17. | 3. ὑστερον λεγει. και των ἁμαρτιων, και των. |
| 18. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (ὁπον δε αφε- σεις τουτων,) cum Vulg. |
| 23. | 1. της πιστεως ακλινη. |
| 25. | 1. την συναγωγην ἐαυτων, cum Vulg. |
| 31. | 3. ἐν ἑαυτοις κρειττανα. |
| 39. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (εἰς περιποι- ησιν ψυχης,) cum Vulg. |

CAP. XI.

| | |
|----|--|
| 4. | 1. ἐτι λαλει, cum Vulg. |
| 5. | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 8 (διότι μετεθηκεν.) |
| 8. | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 8 (ἐξελθεῖν εἰς τον τοπον.) |

| Ver. MSS. | |
|-----------|---|
| 9. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (πιστει παρ- κησεν εἰς γην της,) cum Vulg. |
| 11. | 6. και αυτη Σαρβα δυναμιν εἰς. |
| 29. | 1. οἱ Αἰγυπτιοι κατεποντισθησαν. |
| 39. | 1. τας επαγγελιας. |

CAP. XII.

| | |
|-----|--|
| 1. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8 (και την ευπε- ριστατον ἁμαρτιαν.) |
| 2. | 1. ἐν δεξια τε του Θεου. |
| 3. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (αναλογισασ- θε γαρ τον,) cum Vulg. |
| 7. | 2. εἰς παιδειαν ὑπομνετε. |
| 13. | legendum in Tex. ut MSS. 8, (και τροχιας ορ- θας,) cum Vulg. |
| 18. | 1. και γνωφω, και ζοφω, και θυελλη. |
| 25. | 3. οἱ τον ἀπ' ουρανων αποστρεφονται, cum Vulg. |

CAP. XIII.

| | |
|-----|--|
| 9. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 7, (μη παραφε- ρεσθε,) cum Vulg. |
| 12. | 1. ἐξω της πολεως επαβη. |
| 14. | corrigendum in Textu juxta MSS. 8, (αλλα την μελλουσαν ἐπιζητουμεν,) cum Vulg. |
| 21. | addendum in Textu, ut legunt MSS. 7, (εἰς τους αιωνας των αιωνων. αμην,) cum Vulg. |

JACOBI EPIST. CATHOL.

CAP. I.

| Ver. MSS. | |
|-----------|--|
| 3. | 1. το δοκιμιον ἡμων κατεργαζεται. |
| 18. | 1. ἀπαρχην των αὐτου κτισματων. |
| 19. | 2. ἰστε ἀδελφοι μου αγαπ., cum Vulg. |
| 19. | 1. εστω δε πας ἀνθρωπος, cum Vulg. |
| 21. | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 7 (ἐν πρᾶτῃ.) |
| 23. | 4. ακροατης νομον εστι. |
| 25. | 1. και παραμεινας, ονκ ακροατης. |
| 26. | 2. θρησκας ειναι, μη χαλιναγ., cum Vulg. |

CAP. II.

| | |
|-----|---|
| 4. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 6, (ου διεκριθητε ἐν ἑαυτοις,) cum Vulg. |
| 10. | 1. ὅλον τον νομον τελεσει. |
| 13. | 4. ἐλουν κριστως. |
| 13. | 1. κατακαυχεται δε ελεος, cum Vulg. |
| 18. | 1. δειξον μοι την πιστιν σου χωρις των εργαων, καγω δειξω σοι εκ των εργαων μου την πιστιν, cum Vulg. |
| 24. | 2. ὁρατε, οτι εἰς, cum Vulg. |

CAP. III.

| | |
|-----|--|
| 2 | 3. δυναμενος χαλιναγ. |
| 5. | 1. ἰδου ἡλικον πυρ, cum Vulg. |
| 6. | 2. της αδικιας. ἡ γλωσσα καθισταται, cum Vulg. |
| 10. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 7, (ου χρη ἀδελ- φοι μου ταυτα,) cum Vulg. |
| 12. | 3. οὕτως οὐδε μια πηγη. |
| 13. | legendum in Tex. ut MSS. 5, (τις σοφος και επιστημων ἐν ἡμιν,) cum Vulg. |

| Ver. MSS. | |
|-----------|--|
| 17. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 6, (ελεους και καρπων αγαθων,) cum Vulg. |
| 18. | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 8 (καρπος δε δικαι σσυνης.) |

CAP. IV.

| | |
|-----|---|
| 6. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (ὁ Θεος ὑπερ- φανους ἀντισσσεται,) cum Vulg. |
| 11. | 2. ἀδελφον, η κρινων, cum Vulg. |
| 12. | 4. ὁ νομοθετης και κριτης ὁ δυναμ., cum Vulg. |
| 12. | 2. τις εἰ ὁ κρινων τον πλησιον; cum Vulg. |
| 13. | 2. σημερον η αιριον, cum Vulg. |
| 14. | 4. ατμεις γαρ εστιν ἡ προς ολιγον φαινομενη. |
| 14. | 1. ἐπειτα δε ἀφανιζομενη. MS. 1, ὑπεται και εφανις. |

CAP. V.

| | |
|-----|--|
| 4. | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 8 (τας χωρας ἡμων, ἀπεστερημενος.) |
| 5. | 1. εθρεψατε τας παρκας ἡμων. |
| 5. | 1. ἡμων ἐν ἡμερα σδαγης, cum Vulg. |
| 10. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 5 (ἀδελφοι της κακοπαθειας.) |
| 10. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 5, (ἐν τῷ ονομα- τι Κυριου,) cum Vulg. |
| 14. | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 8 (προσκαλεσασθω τους.) |
| 15. | 1. ἀφενθουσονται αυτω, cum Vulg. |
| 19. | 2. ἀδελφοι μου, εαν τις, cum Vulg. |
| 20. | 2. σωσει την ψυχην αὐτον εκ θανατον. |

PETRI EPIST. CATHOL. I.

CAP. I.

| Ver. MSS. | |
|-----------|---|
| 11. | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 8 (πραμαρτυρο- μενον.) |
| 12 | 2. ἡμας Πνευματι Ἀγίῳ, cum Vulg. |
| 16. | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 7 (ἅγιοι γινεσθε.) |
| 16. | 1. ἅγιοι εσεσθε, οτι, cum Vulg. |
| 22. | 2. της αληθειας εἰς φιλαδελφίαν. |

CAP. II.

| Ver. MSS. | |
|-----------|---|
| 21. | 2. δοξα αυτης ὡς ανθος, cum Vulg. |
| 2. | scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 7, (ανζηθητε εἰς σωτηριαν,) cum Vulg. |
| 5. | 5. εἰς ἱερατευμα ἁγιον. |
| 6. | scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 5 (διότι περιεχει ἡ γραφη,) cum Vulg. |

Ver. MSS.

8. 1. απιστούντες, εις ὃ και, cum Vulg.
 9. 2. τας ἀρετας εξαγγελλήτε, cum Vulg.
 12. scribendum in Text. ut MSS. 8, (εν ᾧ καταλαλούσιν,) cum Vulg.
 16. scribendum in Text. ut MSS. 8 (ἀλλ' ὡς δούλοι Θεου.)
 17. scribendum in Text. ut MSS. 8 (την ἀδελφότητα ἀγαπήσατε.)
 19. 1. τοῦτο γὰρ χάρις παρὰ Θεοῦ.
 19. 1. εἰ δια συνειδήσιν ἀγαθὴν ὑποφ.
 21. 5. εἰς τοῦτο γὰρ και ἐκληθήτε.
 24. 2. οὐ τῷ μῶλωπι ἰσθήτε, cum Vulg.

CAP. III.

6. 1. ὑπήκουε τῷ Ἀβραάμ, cum Vulg.
 7. *scribendum in Text. ut MSS. 6, (χάριτος ζωῆς.)
 cum Vulg.*
 7. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 5, (εἰς το μὴ ἐγκοπτεσθαι,) cum Vulg.
 9. 1. ἵνα εὐλογίας κληρονομ.
 15. 1. ἀλλὰ μετὰ πλείτερος και φόβου, cum Vulg.
 16. 2. τῇ ἀγαθῇ ἐν Χριστῷ ἀναστροφῇ.
 21. scribendum in Text. ut MS. 1, (ὁ ἀντιτυπον νυν,) cum Vulg.
 21. 1. δὲ ὕδατος και ἡμᾶς ἀντιτυπον νυν σώζει βαπτισμα.

CAP. IV.

Ver. MSS.

1. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 6 (ὅτι ὁ παθὼν σαρκί.)
 1. 2. ὅτι ὁ παθὼν ἐν σαρκί.
 1. 1. πέπνυται ἁμαρτίαις.
 3. 3. ἀρκετός γὰρ ὁ παρεληλυθώς, cum Vulg.
 8. scribendum in Text. ut MSS. 8, (καλύπτει πλη-θος,) cum Vulg.
 9. 1. κατὰ ἀνθρώπον σαρκί.
 11. *legendum in Text. ut MSS. 6, (ἥς χορηγεῖ ὁ Θεός,)
 cum Vulg.*
 14. 2. *ὅτι το τῆς δόξης και δυναμείως και το του Θεου
 Πνεῦμα ἐφ' ἡμᾶς ἀναπνεύεται, cum Vulg.*
 16. 2. τον Θεον ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦτω, cum Vulg.
 19. 1. ἐν ἀγαθοποιαῖς, cum Vulg.

CAP. V.

5. 1. ἀλλήλοις τὴν ταπεινοφροσύνην, cum Vulg.
 5. legendum in Textu ut MSS. 8 (ἐγκομβώσασθε.)
 8. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 5, (ὅτι ὁ ἀντιδ. κος ἡμῶν,) cum Vulg.
 8. 4. περιερχεται ζήτων, cum Vulg.
 8. 4. τίνα καταπιεῖν.
 12. 2. εἰς ἣν στητε.
 14. 1. ἐν φιληματι ἀγίῳ, cum Vulg.

PETRI EPIST. CATHOL. II.

CAP. I.

Ver. MSS.

1. 5. Συμεὼν Πέτρος.
 5. 4. και αὐτο δε τοῦτο.
 10. 1. σπουδάσατε, ἵνα δια των καλων ἐργων βεβαίαν ἡμῶν τὴν, cum Vulg.
 11. scribendum in Text. ut MSS. 5, (τον Κυριον ἡμῶν και Σωτηρος Ἰησου Χρ.,) cum Vulg.
 16. 1. ἀλλ' αὐτοῦται γεννηθέντες.
 21. 1. ἐλάλησαν ἀπο Θεου ἀνθρώποι.

CAP. II.

2. 4. δὲ ἄς ἡ ὁδὸς τῆς ἀληθείας.
 3. 5. οὐ νύσταζει.
 4. 1. εἰς κρίσιν κολαζομένους τηρεῖν, cum Vulg.
 9. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 5, (ἐκ πειρασμῶν ῥυεσθαι,) cum Vulg.
 10. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (και Κυριοτη-τος καταφρονούντας,) cum Vulg.
 13. 1. (ἐντροφῶντες ἐν ταῖς ἀγαπαῖς αὐτῶν,) cum Vulg.

Ver. MSS.

14. 1. και ἀκαταπανστον ἁμαρτίας, cum Vulg.
 15. 2. Βαλαάμ τον Βεωρ.
 17. 2. και ὀμίχλαι ὑπο λαίλαπος ἐλάννομ.
 17. 3. εἰς αἰῶνας τετηρηται.
 17. 1. τον σκοτους τετηρηται, cum Vulg.
 18. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 5, (σαρκὸς ἀσελγείας,) cum Vulg.
 18. 5. τους οὕτως ἀποφύγοντας. MS. 1, ἀποφύγοντας, cum Vulg.

CAP. III.

3. 2. ἐν ἐμπαιγμῶν ἐμπαικται, cum Vulg.
 5. 4. και δὲ ὕδατος σινεστώτα.
 10. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8 (και στοιχεῖα καυσουμένα τηκεται.)
 10. impressi cum Vulg., στοιχεῖα δε καυσουμένα λυθήσονται.
 16. 2. ἐν αἷς ἐστὶ θύσσητα.
 18. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (και νυν, και εἰς ἡμέραν αἰῶνος,) cum Vulg.

JOHANNIS EPIST. CATHOL. I.

CAP. I.

Ver. MSS.

3. corrigendum in Textu ut legunt MSS. 8, (ἀπαγ-γελλόμεν ἡμῖν,) cum Vulg.
 3. 1. και ἡ κοινωνία ἡ ἡμετέρα, cum Vulg.
 5. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 7, (και ἐστὶν αὐτῇ ἡ ἀγγελία,) cum Vulg.

CAP. II.

6. 2. και αὐτος περιπατεῖν, cum Vulg.
 7. 2. ἀγαπήτοι, οὐκ ἐντολὴν καινὴν, cum Vulg.
 7. 2. ὃν ἠκούσατε· παλιν ἐντολὴν, cum Vulg.
 12. 3. ἐργάσα ἡμῖν παιδία.
 13. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8 (ὅτι ἐγνώκατε τον Πατέρα.)
 13. impressi cum Vulg., ὅτι ἐγνώκατε τον ἀπ' ἀρχῆς.
 13. vocem γραφῶν mutandum in ἐργάσα, juxta MSS. 8.
 23. 2. οὐδε τον Πατέρα ἐχει. ὁ ὁμολῶν τον Υἱον, και τον Πατέρα ἐχει. ἡμεῖς ὁ ἠκούσατε, cum Vulg.
 27. 1. ἀπ' αὐτου, μένετω ἐν ᾧ, cum Vulg.

Ver. MSS.

27. 1. ἀλλ' ὡς το αὐτο Πνεῦμα.
 27. 1. ἀλλ' ὡς το αὐτον χρίσμα, cum Vulg.
 27. 2. ἐδίδαξεν ἡμᾶς, μένετε ἐν αὐτῷ, cum Vulg.
 29. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 5, (ἐξ αὐτου γεγεννηται,) cum Vulg.

CAP. III.

1. 2. κληθώμεν και ἐσμεν.
 5. 2. ἵνα τας ἁμαρτίας ἀρῇ.
 14. 1. ὁ μὴ ἀγαπῶν μένει ἐν τῷ θανάτῳ, cum Vulg.
 16. scribendum in Text. ut MSS. 8 (ἐν τοῦτω ἐγνώκαμεν τὴν ἀγαπὴν, ὅτι ἐκεῖνος.)
 16. impressi cum Vulg., τὴν ἀγαπὴν τον Θεου, ὅτι.
 17. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 5, (τα σπλάγχνα αὐτου ἀπ' αὐτου,) cum Vulg.
 23. 1. ἵνα πιστευώμεν τῷ Υἱῷ αὐτου Ἰησου Χριστῷ.
 23. 2. ἐντολὴν ἡμῖν, cum Vulg.
 24. corrigendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (και αὐτος ἐν αὐτῷ. και ἐν,) cum Vulg.

VARIAE LECTIONES.

CAP. IV.

Ver. MSS.

3. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8 (και τουτο εστι το του Αντιχριστου.)
6. 1. εν τω γινωσκωμεν το πνευμα, cum Vulg.
9. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8 (απεσταλκεν ο Θεος εις τον.)
16. scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 6, (και ο Θεος εν αυτω εν τω,) cum Vulg.
19. 1. ημεις αγαπωμεν τον Θεον, οτι ο Θεος πρωτος, &c., cum Vulg.

CAP. V.

2. 1. και τας εντολας αυτου ποιωμεν, cum Vulg.
6. 1. τις εστι δε ο νικων.
6. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8 (αλλ' εν τω υδατι και τω αιματι.)
7. 8. οτι τρεις εισιν οι μαρτυροντες, το πνευμα, και το υδωρ και το αιμα· και οι τρεις εις το εν εισιν. Ει.
7. 8. Porro totus septimus versus hujus Capitis desideratur in 8 MSS. Cod. Græcis, scilicet, οτι τρεις εισιν οι μαρτυροντες εν τω ουρανω, ο Πατηρ, και ο Λογος, και το Άγιον Πνευμα· και οι τρεις εις το εν εισι. Sed quia citatur a sanctis Patribus, tum ante Arianorum tempora a S. Cypriano, quem etiam citat Fulgentius, lib. Contra Arianos ad 10 objectiones eorumdem, libro de Unitate Ecclesie Catholice, his verbis, Et iterum de Patre, et Filio, et Spiritu Sancto, scriptum est, et hi tres unum sunt; tum furente passim, et devastante omnia Arianorum hæresi, a Sancto Athanasio in opusculo, cui prænotatus est titulus, Disputatio cum Ario Nicææ habita; his verbis: προς δε τούτοις πασιν Ιωαννης φασκει, Και οι τρεις το εν εισιν, hoc est Præter hæc omnia Johannes inquit; et hi tres unum sunt; et sumit hæc verba ex. 7. non 8. versu, cum expresso agat de Consubstantialitate Trium Divinarum Personarum: ideirco versus integer in Textu Græco relictus est, juxta veritatem Lat. Vulg. editionis, et impressos etiam Codd. Græcos.

Ver. MSS.

13. 2. ταυτα εγραψα υμιν, ινα ειδητε.
20. scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 7 (ινα γινωσκωμεν τον Αληθινον· και εσμεν.)
20. 1. τον Αληθινον Θεον· και εσμεν.
20. scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 8 (και η ζωη η αιωνιος.)

JOHANNIS EPIST. II.

Ver. MSS.

7. 3. εξηλθον εις τον κοσμον, cum Vulg.
8. 2. ινα μη απολεσητε α εργασασθε, αλλα μισθον πληρη απολαβητε, cum Vulg.

Ver. MSS.

12. 1. ελπιζω γαρ ελθειν προς υμας, cum Vulg.
12. 1. ινα η χαρα υμων, cum Vulg.

JOHANNIS EPIST. III.

Ver. MSS.

4. μειζοτεραν ταυτης ουκ.
5. 1. μισθον ποιεις, ο εαν.
5. 2. και τουτο ξενους, cum Vulg.
7. 1. απο των εθνικων.

Ver. MSS.

10. corrigendum in Textu ut legunt MSS. 8, (υπο μνησω αυτου τα,) cum Vulg.
12. 3. και οιδας οτι, cum Vulg. MS. 1, και οιδαμεν οτ
15. 1. ασπαζον τους αδελφους κατ'.

JUDÆ EPIST. CATHOL.

Ver. MSS.

1. 2. Πατρι αγαπημενοις, cum Vulg.
3. 2. περι της κοινης ημων σωτηριας.
3. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8 (τη άπαξ παραδοθειση.)
4. 3. και τον μονον Δεσποτην, και Κυριον ημων Ιησουν Χρ., cum Vulg.
4. 5. και τον μονον Δεσποτην, Θεον, και Κυριον ημ., &c.
5. 1. ειδοτας άπαξ τουτο, οτι. MS. 1, ειδοτας άπαξ παντα οτι Ιησους λαον, cum Vulg.
9. 1. οτε Μιχαηλ ο αρχαγγελος τω διαβολω, cum Vulg.
12. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 8, (συννευχωσμενοι αφοβως,) cum Vulg.

Ver. MSS.

15. 1. και εξελεγξαι.
15. 3. τους ασεβεις περι παντων, cum Vulg.
18. 2. επ' εσχατου του χρονου ελευσονται εμπαικται, cum Vulg.
- 22, 23. 1. και ους μεν ελεγχετε διακρινομενους, ους δε σωζετε, εκ πυρος αρπ., cum Vulg.
23. 2. addunt, ους δε ελεειτε εν φοβω, μισουντες και, cum Vulg.
25. 2. μονω Θεω Σωτηρι ημων δια Ιησου Χρ. Κυριον ημων δοξα και, cum Vulg.
25. 1. δοξα και μεγαλοπρεπεια, cum Vulg.

APOCALYPSIS,

Ex Collatione Codicum Manuscriptorum iv. antiquorum.

CAP. I.

Ver. MSS.

1. 1. non legit verba hæc, (και άτινα εισι, και α χροη γενεσθαι μετα ταυτα,) cum Vulg.
3. 1. ο αναγινωσκων και ακουων τους, cum Vulg.

CAP. II.

Ver. MSS.

1. legendum in Tex. ut MSS. 4, (τω αγγελω της εν Εφεσω εκκλησιας γραφον,) cum Vulg.
7. 1. ο εστιν εν τω παραδεισω του Θεου μου, cum Vulg

Ver. MSS.

9. 2. εκ των λεγοντων Ιουδαιους ειναι, cum Vulg.
15. 2. των Νικολαιτων ὁμοιως· μετανοησον ουν, cum Vulg.
17. 1. δωσω αυτω του μαννα του κεκρυμμενου, cum Vulg.
17. scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 4, (ὁ ουδεις οιδεν, ει μη ὁ,) cum Vulg.
20. 1. ἀλλ' εχω κατα σου πολυ, ὅτι, cum Vulg.
22. 1. εκ των εργαων αυτων, cum Vulg.
25. 1. αχρις οὐ ανοιξω.

CAP. III.

4. 1. οἱ ουκ εμολυναν, cum Vulg.
7. 1. και ουδεις κλεισει· και ὁ κλειων, και ουδεις ανοιξει.
7. 1. ὁ ανοιγων, και ουδεις κλεισει αυτην, ει μη ὁ ανοιγων· και κλειων, και ουδεις ανοιξει.
12. scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 4 (και γραψω επ' αυτον το ονομα.)
18. 2. και μη φανερωθῃ ἡ αισχυνη, cum Vulg.
18. 2. και κολλουριον, ἵνα εγχιση τους οφθαλ.
20. 1. την θυραν εισελευσομαι προς, cum Vulg.

CAP. IV.

3. 1. ὁρασις σμαραγδινων.
4. 2. και επι τους θρονους εικοσι τεσσαρας πρεσβυτερους, cum Vulg.
6. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 3 (ὑαλινη.)
7. 2. εχον προσωπον ανθρωπου.
8. 3. λεγοντες, ἁγιος, &c. MSS. 2, ἁγιος, ἁγιος, ἁγιος, Κυριος, cum Vulg.
10. scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 4 (και βαλονσι τους στεφανους.)
11. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 4 (ησαν, και εκτισησαν.)

CAP. V.

2. 2. εν φωνη μεγαλη.
5. 2. ὁ ανοιγων το βιβλιον, και τας ἑπτα.
6. scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 4 (και ειδον εν μεσῳ του θρονου.)
6. impressi cum Vulg. και ειδον, και ιδου εν μεσῳ του θρονου.
6. corrigendum in Tex. mendum, et legendum cum MSS. 4 (ὡς εσφαγμενον.)
7, 8. legendum in Tex. ut MSS. 4 (επι του θρονου. και ὅτε ελαβε το βιβλιον.)
10. scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 3 (και βασιλευσουσιν επι της γης.)
13. 1. και παντα τα εν αυτοις, παντας ηκουσα.

CAP. VI.

- 1, 2. 2. ερχου, και ιδε. Και ιδου ἵππος λευκος.
3, 4. 1. ερχου και ιδε. Και εξηλθεν αλλος ἵππος, cum Vulg.
5. 2. ερχου και ιδε. Και ιδου ἵππος μελας, cum Vulg.
7, 8. 2. ηκουσα του τεταρτου ζωνου λεγοντος, Ερχου και ιδε. και ιδου ἵππος.
8. 2. και ὁ ῥῆς ηκολουθει αυτω, cum Vulg.
9. 2. τας ψυχας των εσφαγμενων, cum Vulg.
11. scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 4, (και εδοθη αυτοις ἑκαστῳ στολη λευκη, και ερρεθη αυτοις, ἵνα αναπαυσωνται ετι χρονον, ἕως οὐ πληρωσωσι και οἱ,) cum Vulg.
12. 1. και ειδον, ὅτε ηνοιξε την, cum Vulg.

CAP. VII.

1. scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 4 (και μετα τουτο ειδον.)
1. 2. μητε επι τι δενδρον, cum Vulg.
3. corrigendum in Textu ut legunt MSS. 5 (μη αδικησητε.)
9. 2. ἐστωτας ενωπιον του θρονου. μοχ, περιβεβλημενους.
9. scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 4 (και φοινικας εν ταις.)
17. scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 4 (ποιμαινει αυτους, και ὁδηγει αυτους.)
17. impressi cum Vulg., ποιμανει αυτους, και ὁδηγησει αυτους.

CAP. VIII.

Ver. MSS.

7. scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 4, (κατεκαη, και το τριτον των δενδρων κατεκαη, και πας χορτος, cum Vulg.
12. 2. το τριτον αυτων, και το τριτον αυτων μη φανῃ, ἡ ἡμερα, και ἡ νυξ ὁμοιως.
13. 1. και ειδον, και ηκουσα ἑνος αγγελου πετομενου, λεγοντος.
13. 2. φωνη μεγαλη, Ουαι, &c., cum Vulg.

CAP. IX.

4. scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 4 (και ερρεθη αυταις.)
5. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 4 (ἀλλ' ἵνα βασανισθωσι.
5. impressi et Vulgata, ἀλλ' ἵνα βασανισωσι.
5. 3. ὅταν παισι ανθρωπου.
6. corrigendum in Tex. ut MSS. 2, (ζητησουσιν οἱ ανθρωποι του θανατου,) cum Vulg.
7. scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 4, (ἡτοιμασμενοις εις,) cum Vulg.
9. 2. ἄρματων πολλων.
10. 1. και κεντρα εν ταις ονραις αυτων· εξουσιαν εχονσι, cum Vulg.
12. 1. ετι δυο οναι. Και μετα ταυτα και ὁ ἑκτος αγγελος.
14. 1. εν τῳ ποταμῳ, cum Vulg.
15. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 4, (εις την ὥραν, και εις την ἡμεραν, και μηνι,) cum Vulg.

CAP. X.

1. scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 4 (και ἡ ἱρις επι.)
4. 2. βρονται· και μη αυτα γραψῃς, cum Vulg.
7. 2. και ετελεσθη το μυστηριον του Θεου, ὡς ευηγγελισεν τους.
9. 2. λεγων αυτω, δουναι μοι το βιβλιον, cum Vulg.

CAP. XI.

1. 2. non legunt illas voces, (και εισηκει ὁ αγγελος,) cum Vulg.
2. 2. εκβαλε εξω, και μη αυτην μετρησης.
5. 1. και ειτις αυτους θελει αποκτειναι, οὕτως δει αυτον.
8. 1. εασει επι της πλατειας της πολ.

CAP. XII.

10. 2. ὅτι εβληθη ὁ κατηγορος.
11. 1. της μαρτυριας αυτου, cum Vulg.

CAP. XIII.

7. 2. επι πασαν φυλην, και λαον, και γλωσσαν, και, cum Vulg.
15. scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 4, (και ποιηση ὅσοι αν μη προσκυνησωσι τη εικονι,) cum Vulg.
17. 3. το χαραγμα, το ονομα του θηριου.
17. 1. το χαραγμα του θηριου, η τον αριθμον.

CAP. XIV.

1. 2. και ειδον, και ιδου το αρνιον.
1. 2. και μετ' αυτον αριθμος ἑκατον.
4. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 4, (ὅπου αν ὑπαγη,) cum Vulg.
6. 3. και ειδον αγγελον πετομενον.
7. 2. φηθητε τυν Κυριον, και δοτε, cum Vulg.
7. 2. και προσκυνησατε αυτον τον ποιησαντα του ουραν., cum Vulg.
8. 2. ἡς πεποτικε παντα τα εθνη.
9. 1. και λιμβανει το χαραγμα.
12. 2. των ἁγιων εστιν, οἱ τηρουντες τας εντολας, cum Vulg.
19. 2. εις την ληνον την μεγαλην του θυμου του.

CAP. XV.

6. 2. τας ἑπτα πληγας εκ του ναου, οἱ ησαν, cum Vulg.
6. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 4 (λινον καθαρον, λαμπρον, και.)
8. 2. αἱ ἑπτα πληgai των ἑπτα αγγελων, cum Vulg.

CAP. XVI.

1. 2. ὑπαγετε, και εκχεατε, cum Vulg.
3. 2. και πασα ψυχη απεθανεν.

Ver MSS.

4. 2. και ὁ τρίτος ἐξεχεε, cum Vulg.
 4. 3. και εἰς τὰς πηγὰς τῶν ὕδατων, cum Vulg.
 7. scribendum in Textu ut MSS. 4 (και ηκουσα του θυσιαστηριου λεγοντος.)
 7. impressi, και ηκουσα εκ του θυσιαστηριου, λεγον-τος.

14. 2. εἰσι γὰρ πνευματα δαιμονιων, cum Vulg.

16. 1. μαγεδων.

21. 1. μεγαλη ταλαντιαια.

CAP. XVII.

5. 2. των πορνων και των βδελυγματων της.
 8. 1. οἱ κατοικουντες την γην, cum Vulg.
 8. 1. και ουκ ἐστι, και παρεστιν.
 11. 1. και τουτο αγδος ἐστι.
 17. 2. αχρι τελεσθωσιν οἱ, cum Vulg.

CAP. XVIII.

3. 2. πεπωκασι παντα τα εθνη, cum Vulg.
 2. και διπλωσατε τα διπλα, ὡς και αυτη, και κατα τα εργα αυτης.

Ver. MSS.

7. 2. βασανισμον και πενθος. ὅτι, cum Vulg.
 9. 2. και κλανσουσι, και πενθησουσιν ἐπ' αυτη οἱ βασ
 17. 2. και πας ὁ ἐπὶ τοπων πλεων, και.

CAP. XIX.

13. 2. και κεκληται το ονομα αυτου.

CAP. XX.

2. 2. ὅς ἐστι διαβολος και Σατανας.
 4. 2. μετα του Χριστου τα χιλια ετη.

CAP. XXI.

12. 2. ἡ ἐστιν ονοματα των δωδεκα φυλων, cum Vulg.
 20. scribendum in Tex. ut MSS. 3, (ὁ ἐνδεκατος ἰακινθος,) cum Vulg.

CAP. XXII.

1. 1. ποταμον ὕδατος, cum Vulg.
 3. 1. και παν καταθεμα ουκ ἐσται ἐτι, cum Vulg.
 7. 1. και ἰδου ἐρχομαι ταχυ μακαριος, cum Vulg.

GENERAL INDEX

TO THE

NOTES ON THE NEW TESTAMENT.

N. B. In principio refers to the observations at the beginning, and in fine to those at the end, of the chapter.

- Ab, one of the supreme officers in the Jewish sanhedrin, Matt. xx. 21; xxiii. 9.
- Abba, import of this Syriac word, Mark xiv. 36. In what it differs from Abbi, ibid. Slaves were not permitted to use the term Abba in accosting their masters, Rom. viii. 15.
- Abilene, a province of Syria, Luke iii. 1.
- Abrech, אברך, probable conjecture relative to its import, Matt. iii., in fine.
- Academics, a sect of Greek philosophers founded by the celebrated Plato, Acts xvii. 18.
- Acanthus, or Bear's-foot, Pliny's account of the, Matt. xxvii. 29; Mark xv. 17. The acanthine crown, which the Jews in derision put on the head of our Lord, supposed by Michaelis and Bishop Pearce to have been formed of this herb, ibid.
- Acanthus hieifolius, some account of this plant, Mark xv. 17.
- Accusation of the criminal who was crucified affixed to the cross, Matt. xxvii. 37. Exhibition of our Lord's accusation in the Hebrew, Greek, and Latin, as it was probably written by the command of Pilate, ibid.; John xix. 19.
- Accuser of the Israelites, an appellation of Satan exceedingly frequent in rabbinical writings, Rev. xii. 10.
- Aceldama, a word not of Hebrew, but of Chaldaio-Syriac origin, Acts i. 19. Its import, ibid.
- Achus, אכזר, a species of ophthalmia, Acts xiii. 11.
- Acropolis, some account of the, Acts xvii. 15.
- Acts of the Apostles, the first history of the Christian Church on record, Preface to the Acts. By whom written, ibid. General observations on this book of the sacred canon, Acts xxviii., in fine.
- Adam, difference of import between אדם Adam, and אנוש Enosh, Heb. ii. 6.
- Additions to the commonly received Greek text, Luke vi. 4; John vi. 56; Acts v. 17; x. 25; xi. 3; xvi. 35, 39; Heb. xi. 23, 31; Rev. viii. 7.
- Adieu, its derivation and import, Acts xv. 29.
- Adjuration, form of, according to Homer, used in the ratification of the covenant made between the Greeks and the Trojans, when the throats of the lambs were cut, and their blood poured out, Matt. xxvi. 28.
- Admael, the angel of the earth, according to the rabbins, Rev. xvi. 5.
- Adonai, אדני, the Jews always substitute this word for Jehovah, יהוה, whenever they meet with it in their reading of the law and the prophets, 2 Cor. xii. 4; Rev. xix. 12.
- Adoption, nature of the act of, so frequent among the ancient Hebrews, Greeks, and Romans, Rom. viii. 15.
- Adria, an ancient appellation for the Sicilian Sea, Acts xxvii. 17, 27.
- Adulteresses, punishment of, among the ancient Germans, 1 Cor. xi. 5.
- Adversary, the Greek word so rendered a forensic term, Matt. v. 25.
- Aeneas, Homer's description of the last office performed by this Trojan for his friend Pallas, Rom. ix., in fine.
- Enon, where situated, John iii. 23.
- Eons of the Gnostics, some accounts of the, Preface to John.
- Αερα δειπν, to beat the air. Kypke's observations on the three different ways in which the combatants in the ancient games were said to beat the air, 1 Cor. ix. 26.
- Eschylus, citation of a passage of great sublimity relative to the Supreme Being, 1 Tim. vi. 15.
- Ethiopic Version, Introduction to the Gospels and Acts, p. 17.
- Affirmation of a Quaker in a court of judicature, thoughts concerning the, 2 Cor. i., in fine. Form of the affirmation as required by stat. 7 and 8 W. 3., cap. 34. § 1, ibid. Form of it as finally settled by 8 Geo. 2., c. 24. § 6, ibid.
- Agabus, account of the famine foretold by this prophet, Matt. xxiv. 7; Acts xi. 28.
- Αγαπαι, Lovefeasts, in use of the primitive Church till the middle of the fourth century, Jude 12. Lately revived among the Moravians and Methodists, ibid. At what times originally celebrated, ibid.
- Αγαπω, import of this word, John xxi. 15. In what it differs from φιλω, ibid.
- Αγανη, definition of this word by the author of a MS. lexicon in the late French king's library, Matt. xxii. 37; 1 Cor. xiii. 1. Of what words supposed to be compounded, ibid.
- Agdistis, an object of idolatrous worship among the ancient Galatæ, Preface to Galatians.
- Αγενηλογητος, without descent, in what sense this term is applied to Melchizedek, Heb. vii. 3.
- Αγιαζω, an important meaning of this word pointed out, John xvii. 19.
- ΑΤΗΝΩΣΤΩ ΘΕΩ, To the Unknown God, remarks upon this ancient inscription which St. Paul made the basis of his celebrated sermon at Athens, Acts xvii. 23. Citations from Lucian, Philostratus, Pausanias, Minutius Felix, and Tertullian, in which there is an allusion to the ancient heathen custom of dedicating altars to the unknown divinity, ibid.
- Agony of our Lord in Gethsemane, thoughts concerning the cause of the, Luke xxii., in fine.
- Αγορατοι, definition of this word by Hesychius, Acts xvii. 5. Import of it among the rabbins when written in Chaldee characters, ibid.
- Agree to ask, the original so translated, a beautiful metaphor from a number of musical instruments set to the same key, and playing the same tune, Matt. xviii. 19.
- Aqua, a frequent acceptance of this word in classic writers pointed out, Acts xvii. 26.
- Ατω, inquiry into the proper meaning of this term, Matt. xxv. 46; 1 Cor. x. 11; 2 Cor. iv. 18; Heb. vii. 28. Whence derived, according to Aristotle, Matt. vi. 13; xxiv. 3; John xvii. 3; Acts iii. 21.
- Aisar, אסר, its import among the rabbins, Matt. x. 29.

- AIΣION, one of the six Ephesian characters, Acts xix. 19. Its import, according to Hesychius, ibid.
- Ajacee al Makhlookat, description of a beautiful painting in this work, Acts ii. 3.
- Alabaster-box, various conjectures concerning the import of the Greek word so translated, Mark xiv. 3.
- Alcmaeon, remarkable anecdote concerning, Luke vi. 38.
- Alexandria, some account of this celebrated city of Egypt, Acts xviii. 24.
- Αλεξικακος, The Dispeller of Evil, an epithet given by the ancient inhabitants of Malta to Hercules, Acts xxviii. 6.
- Αλληλολατρία, the Hebrew words יהללו יה hallelu Yah, in Greek characters, Rev. xix. 1. Its import, ibid. The ελελευ in of the pœans a manifest corruption of αλληλολατρία, ibid.
- Allegory, derivation and definition of this word, Gal. iv. 24. The rabbinical writings full of allegories, ibid. Examples from heathen writers, ibid. Dr. Lowth's account of the three species of allegory to be met with in the sacred writings, Gal. iv., in fine. The very injudicious method of allegorizing among Jews and Christians has been of great disservice to the cause of religion, Gal. iv. 24.
- Almah, מלכה, its derivation and import, Matt. i. 23. This term, in its most obvious and literal acceptation, applicable to the mother of our Lord till she had brought forth her first-born Son, Matt. i. 23. The house of David could not fail till the almah or virgin had both conceived and brought forth her Son, ibid. The destruction of the Jewish polity and genealogical registers in the apostolic age an irrefragable demonstration that the miraculous conception spoken of by the prophet had already taken place, ibid. This great Offspring of Jehovah emphatically named from this circumstance, THE SON OF GOD, shown to be no other than Jesus the Christ, ibid.
- Almsgiving, Pharisaic doctrine of the meritoriousness of, Matt. vi. 1.
- Alpha and Omega, import of this phraseology, Rev. i. 8.
- Ἀμαρτία, reference to a great number of passages in the Septuagint where ἁμαρτία or ἁμαρτία, sin-offering, is so translated, 2 Cor. v. 21.
- Ἀμαρτωλός, sinner, a word signifying a heathen throughout the gospels, and in some other parts of the New Testament, Matt. ix. 10; Mark ii. 16; Luke vii. 37; xiii. 4; xv. 1; xxiv. 7; Gal. ii. 15.
- Amen, its import, Matt. vi. 13; John x. 1. Whence derived according to some, Matt. vi. 13. This response considered by the ancient Jews of the highest authority and merit, 1 Cor. xiv. 16. The repetition of this word among the Jewish writers thought to be of equal import with the most solemn oath, John iii. 3; xxi. 25.
- Amethyst, account of this precious stone, Rev. xxi. 20.
- Amphipolis, a city of Macedonia, by whom built, and why so named, Acts xvii. 1.
- Ἀναπληροῦναι, a very important meaning of this Greek word, which is generally overlooked, Matt. xiii. 14.
- Ἀναστασις, and Ἐξανάστασις, in what these words probably differ in import, Phil. iii. 11.
- Ἀναθεμα of the same import with the חרם cherem of the rabbins, Rom. ix. 3; 1 Cor. xvi. 22. See Cherem.
- Ἀνὴρ προφήτης, a Hebraism for προφήτης, according to some, Luke xxiv. 19. A more probable meaning of this phrase proposed, and illustrated by several examples from sacred and profane writers, ibid.
- Ἀνὴρ διψυχός, the man of two souls, import of this Hebraism, James i. 8.
- Angari, the messengers or posts among the ancient Persians, Matt. v. 41. Their modern appellation, ibid.
- Angel of death, how represented by the Jews, 1 Cor. xv. 55. Jewish fables concerning, Heb. ii. 14.
- Angelic ministry, doctrine of, defended, Matt. xviii. 10.
- Angels, strange opinions of the rabbins relative to the formation of, Heb. i. 7.
- Anglo-Saxon Version, Introduction to the Gospels and Acts, p. 20.
- Animals that had been employed for agricultural purposes not offered in sacrifice by the Hebrews, Greeks, Romans, nor Egyptians, Mark xi. 2.
- Annihilation of the wicked, doctrine of the, considered, Matt. xxv. 46; xxvi. 24.
- Anointing the head with oil*, very frequent among the ancient Jews, Luke vii. 46.
- Anointing the sick*, a ceremony frequent among the ancient Jews, Mark vi. 13.
- Anointing of our Lord*, Bishop Newcome's account of the, Matt. xxv., in fine.
- Antehieronymian Versions of the Scriptures, some account of the, Introduction to the Gospels and Acts, p. 19.
- Anthologia, citation of a passage from the, in which the hen's affection for her brood is very beautifully described, Matt. xxiii. 27.
- Ἀνδραπνιγὴ ἡμέρα, a frequent import of this phrase, 1 Cor. iv. 3.
- Ἀνδραπνός, examples produced in which this word is apparently used as an expletive, Acts vii. 2. Derivation of this word, according to the best etymologists, 1 Pet. iii. 4.
- Antichrist, who or what, in the apostolic sense of the word, 1 John ii. 18.
- Ἀντιδικός, rendered adversary, a forensic term, Matt. v. 25.
- Antinomianism, a very dangerous heresy, against which the Church of Christ should be always on its guard, Rom. iii., in fine; 1 Cor. iii. 15; Heb. iii. 1; James v., in fine.
- Antioch, a city of Syria, by whom built, and where situated, Acts xi. 19. The disciples of our Lord first called Christians in this city, Acts xi. 26.
- Antioch in Pisidia, analysis of St. Paul's sermon at this place, Acts xiii. 52.
- Antioch, several cities of this name, Acts xiii. 14.
- Antiochus Epiphanes, account of his defiling the temple, John x. 22.
- Antipas, a martyr of the primitive Christian Church, very uncertain who, Rev. ii. 13. A work still extant, professing to give an account of this man, a most manifest forgery, Rev. ii. 13.
- Antipatris, where situated, Acts xxiii. 31. Why so named, ibid. Anciently called Capharsaba; and supposed to be the same with the Capharsalama, or Capharsalama, of the Apocrypha, ibid.
- Antonia, description of the castle of, by Josephus, Acts xxi. 31. Built by John Hyrcanus, and was the royal residence of the Asmonean princes as long as they reigned in Jerusalem, ibid. Its original appellation, ibid.
- Antoninus, (Marcus) very remarkable saying of this Roman emperor, when speaking of Nature, whom he addresses as God, Rom. xi. 35.
- Ἀπατωρ, αμητωρ, without father, without mother, shown to be a Jewish phrase, importing that the name of the father or mother was not entered in the public genealogical registers, Heb. vii. 3.
- Ἀπαυγασμα, synonymous with ἡλιον φεγγος, according to Hesychius, Heb. i. 3. In what απαυγασμα differs in import from αυγασμα, ibid.
- Ἀφεδρῶν, rendered draught, what it properly imports, Matt. xv. 17.
- Apion, very fanciful reason given by this ancient grammarian why Homer commenced his Iliad with the word μηνιν, Rev. xiii. 18.
- Apis, the white bull appointed to be sacrificed to this Egyptian idol must be without blemish, John vi. 27. Account by Herodotus of the curious mode adopted by the Egyptians of ascertaining whether the animal were proper for sacrifice, ibid.
- Apocalypse, see Revelation.
- Ἀποκρισις, inquiry into the import of this term, Luke ii. 47.
- Ἀποκαθιστάνειν, different acceptations of this word, Acts i. 6.
- Apollonia, a city of Macedonia, Acts xvii. 1.
- Apollo, remarkable that a Jew should have been so named, Acts xviii. 24. How this circumstance may be accounted for, ibid.
- Apologies of the primitive Christians, brief account of the, 2 Tim. iv., in fine.
- Apology, ancient and modern acceptations of this word, Acts xxii. 1; 2 Tim. iv. 16.
- Apostasy, five degrees of, pointed out, Heb. iii. 12.
- Apostasy of the latter times, Bishop Newton's observations on St. Paul's prophecy concerning the, 1 Tim. iv., in fine.

INDEX TO THE NEW TESTAMENT.

- Apostle*, derivation and import of this word, Matt. x. 2; Rom. i. 1. Ἀποστολῶν, apostles, and κήρυκες, heralds, used synonymously by Herodotus, ibid. Essential to the character of an apostle that he had seen and conversed with Christ, 1 Cor. ix. 1; xv. 8.
- Appeals to the emperor*, ancient Roman laws respecting, Acts xxv. 11.
- Appii Forum*, a town about 52 miles from Rome, now called Casarilla de S. Maria, Acts xxviii. 15.
- Arabic Versions*, short account of the, Introduction to the Gospels and Acts, p. 16.
- Arabon*, עֲרָבֹן, rendered pledge, inquiry into its import, 2 Cor. i. 22.
- Araboth*, עֲרֹבוֹת, the seventh heaven, according to the rabbins, 2 Cor. xii. 2.
- Araspes*, very remarkable anecdote concerning, related by Xenophon, in his Life of Cyrus, Rom. vii. 20.
- Aratus*, St. Paul's citation from the phenomena of, in his celebrated sermon at Athens, Acts xvii. 29.
- Archangel*, this word not found in the sacred writings in the plural number, and why, Jude 9.
- Ἀρχαῖα*, extensive import of this word in the sacred canon, John xiii. 5.
- Archimedes*, how this celebrated mathematician destroyed the Roman fleet, and thus prolonged for a short time the political existence of Syracuse, Acts xxviii. 12.
- Architrictinus*, original acceptation of this word, John ii. 8. What it afterward imported, ibid.
- Areopagus*, a hill not far from the Acropolis, where the supreme court of justice of the Athenians was held, one of the most sacred and reputable courts in the whole Gentile world, Acts xvii. 19. Poetic fiction from which this Athenian court obtained its name, ibid. Proverbial impartiality of the judges of the Areopagus, ibid. Time of their sitting, great solemnity of their deliberations, and their mode of giving decisions, ibid.
- Arianism*, probable origin of, Heb. i., in fine.
- Aristides*, the author of an Apology for the Christians, long since lost, 2 Tim. iv., in fine.
- Ἀσάριον*, what among the Jews, Luke xi. 37; John xxi. 12. The legal hour of the ἄσάριον on the Sabbath, according to Josephus, Luke xi. 37.
- Armageddon*, the original of this word variously formed, and variously translated, Rev. xvi. 16.
- Armenian Version of the New Testament*, account of the, Introduction to the Gospels and Acts, p. 18.
- Armour*, offensive and defensive, of the ancients, particular description of the, Eph. vi. 13.
- Arms* of the first inhabitants of the earth, as described by Lucretius, Eph. vi. 13.
- Ἀραγμός*, inquiry into the import of this term, Phil. ii. 6.
- Ἀπὸ πνεύματος*, why this appellation was given to the spirit of man, James i. 15.
- Ἀπρεμύον*, improperly translated mainsail, Acts xxvii. 40.
- As* of the Romans, what, Matt. x. 29.
- Asia*, different acceptations of this word in ancient and modern writers, 1 Pet. i. 1.
- Asiarchs*, those to whom the regulation of the public games was intrusted, Acts xix. 31.
- Asipatravana*, what, Matt. viii. 12.
- ΑΣΚΙΟΝ*, an Ephesian character or amulet, Acts xix. 19. Its import, ibid.
- Ἀσπίς*, the clypeus or shield, account of this species of defensive armour among the ancients, Eph. vi. 13.
- Ass*, speech of, to Balaam, as given in the Targums of Jonathan ben Uzziel and Jerusalem, 2 Pet. ii. 16.
- Assarius*, the twenty-fourth part of a silver penny, Mark xiii. 41.
- Assos*, a maritime town of Asia Minor, called also Apollonia, Acts xx. 13.
- Astronomical phenomena* very difficult to be accounted for upon natural principles, and strong evidences of the being and continual agency of God, Heb. xi., in fine.
- Athenagoras*, a Christian apologist of the second century, whose work is still extant, 2 Tim. iv., in fine.
- Athenodorus*, remarkable anecdote concerning, Matt. vi. 15.
- Athenians*, a people formerly grossly superstitious, Acts xvii. 16. Citations from Pausanius and Petronius in illustration of this circumstance, ibid. Passages from Demosthenes and Thucydides which concur in the statement of St. Luke that the Athenians spent their time in nothing else but either to tell or to hear some new thing, Acts xvii. 21. Foolish notion of the Athenians that they were self-produced finely ridiculed by Lucian, Acts xvii. 26. Observations on the religious disposition of the Athenians, Acts xvii., in fine.
- Athens*, a very celebrated city of antiquity, by whom founded, Acts xvii. 15. Its ancient appellation, ibid. On what account it obtained its present name, ibid. Now under the power of the Turks, who have turned the celebrated Parthenon into a mosque, ibid.
- Attonement or expiation of sin*, necessity of, inculcated throughout the Muslim economy, Luke xviii. 13.
- Ἀττικῶν*, Attics, in what they differed from Ἀττικιστῶν, Atticists, Acts vi. 1.
- Attraction, or gravity*, thoughts on this astonishing influence, which has been lately demonstrated to pervade the material universe, Heb. xi., in fine.
- Atush perest*, or warshipper of fire, a name given by way of derision, in Mohammedan countries, to a Christian monk, Matt. ii. 1.
- Ἀντανα*, see Ἀντανακτα.
- Augstine*, a Manicheen till the thirty-second year of his age, Rom. xiii., in fine. History of his conversion to the faith of Christ, ibid.
- Augustus*, Cohort of, see Cohort.
- Aune*, an ancient king of Sweden, remarkable for having offered up to Woden his nine sons to obtain the prolongation of his life, Rom. ix., in fine.
- Aurea Legenda*, character of this papistical work, 1 Tim. iv. 7.
- Aurichalcum*, a famous fictitious metal of antiquity, Rev. i. 15.
- Auricular Confession*, such as is prescribed by the Romish Church, cannot be supported by the precept of St. James relative to confession, James v. 16.
- Ἀρά*, ἄρα, different acceptations of this word, Matt. xi., in fine.
- Avarice*, observations on this vice, when covered with the veil of religion, Matt. xxi. 12; John vi., in fine.
- Avatars*, of the Hindoos, what, Acts xiv. 11.
- Ave Maria*, that this salutation was given in a dream or vision, as some have stated, highly improbable, Luke i. 28.
- Ἀσπίς*, or common battle-axe, a sort of military weapon among the ancients, Eph. vi. 13.
- Azotus* of the New Testament the same with the Ashdod of the Old, Acts viii. 10.
- Babbler*, original acceptation of the Greek word so translated, Acts xvii. 18.
- Babylonish captivity*, enumeration of the classes of persons who returned from the, according to the Talmud, Matt. i. 8.
- Bacchus*, young women formerly scourged to death by the Spartans and Arcadians, in order to appease the wrath of this divinity, Rom. ix., in fine.
- Backbone*, singular opinion of the Jews respecting the lower joint of the, 1 Cor. xv. 44.
- Backsliders*, awful condition of, Heb. iii. 12; 2 Pet. i. 9.
- Balaam*, the Hebrew word בָּלָעַם Balaam, and the Greek word Νικόλαος, Nicolaus, of the same import, Introduction to 2 Peter.
- Bale*, bishop of Ossory, account of this commentator, Preface to the Revelation.
- Balls*, thoughts on their ruinous tendency, Matt. xiv. 12.
- Bambukholasi*, see Hierapolis.
- Band*, σπειρα, cohort or regiment, see Acts x. 1.
- Baptism*, a rite among the ancient Jews, by which proselytes were received into the full enjoyment of the Jewish privileges, John i. 25. How baptism was administered by the primitive Christians, Matt. iii. 6; xxviii. 19; Mark xvi., in fine. Copious extract from Dr. Lightfoot relative to the nature and importance of baptism, Mark xvi., in fine. Baptism of water not superseded by the baptism of the Holy Ghost. This clearly proved in the case of the first Gentile converts, all of whom had received the Holy Ghost previously

- to their baptism by water, Acts x. 47, 48. The iteration of baptism, after it has been once essentially performed, a profanation of this sacred rite, Acts xix. 5.
- Baptism of fire*, strange trifling of the primitive professors of Christianity relative to the import of this phrase, Matt. iii. 11.
- Baptismal registers* in churches, origin of, Rev. iii. 5.
- Bar*, import of this Syriac word, Mark x. 46.
- Barabbas*, very remarkable reading in a Vatican manuscript relative to the name of this murderer, Matt. xxvii. 16.
- Barbarian*, Barbarus, βαρβαρος, what anciently intended by this term, Acts xxviii. 2; Rom. i. 14. Its etymology, according to Bishop Pearce, ibid.
- Barbarous nations*, dreadful violence of their irruptions into the Roman dominions in the fifth century, as described by Drs. Mosheim and Robertson, Rev. xii. 15.
- Barchochab*, an impostor in the reign of Adrian, John iv. 29. On what account put to death, ibid.
- Barley*, considered a very mean fare in the east, John vi. 9. This illustrated by a quotation from Plutarch, ibid.
- Barnabas*, Chrysostom's conjecture why the Lycaonians took this Christian minister for a manifestation of their supreme divinity, Acts xiv. 12.
- Bar Naphli*, an appellation of the Messiah among the rabbins, Acts xv. 16.
- Bartholomew*, conjecture concerning the real name of this apostle, Matt. x. 4.
- Βασιλεὺς τῶν αἰώνων*, import of this remarkable apostolical expression, 1 Tim. i. 17.
- Baskets and hay*, why carried by the Jews when travelling in Gentile countries, Matt. xiv. 20. Quotations from Sidonius Apollinaris and Juvenal, in which there is allusion to this custom, ibid.
- Bastard wheat*, what, Matt. xiii. 25.
- Bastinado*, short account of the, by J. Antes, Heb. xi., in fine.
- Bath*, some account of this Hebrew measure of capacity, Luke xvi. 6.
- Beating the air*, see Αερα δρᾶν.
- Βεβηλος*, profane, whence derived, Heb. xii. 16. An epithet given by the ancient Greeks to any person or thing not consecrated to the gods, ibid.
- Beelzebub*, or Berlzebub, import of this word, Matt. x. 25. Dr. Lightfoot's very judicious observations, showing in what the horrid blasphemy of the Jews consisted when they gave the name of Beelzebub to our Lord, ibid.
- Beith*, בית, a frequent acceptance of this word, 2 Cor. v. 2.
- Βελος*, a word signifying any kind of military missile, Eph. vi. 16.
- Benedictus*, Wakefield's criticism on a remarkable expression in the, Luke i. 76.
- Beneficiarii*, among the Romans, who, Luke xxii. 5.
- Bequests of lands, &c.*, to Churches or religious uses exceedingly common before the Reformation, Matt. xv. 5. A frequent form of these instruments, ibid.
- Berea*, a city of Macedonia, near Pella, Acts xvii. 10.
- Berenge-arook*, among the Hindoos, what, 1 Cor. vii., in fine.
- Berenice*, or Bernice, sister of Agrippa, character of, Acts xxv. 13.
- Bethesda*, why probably so named, John v. 2.
- Beth-lehem*, two cities of this name in the Promised Land, Matt. ii. 1. Derivation and import of the name, ibid. Appositeness of this appellation to the place of our Lord's birth, ibid.
- Bethphage*, where situated, and why probably so named, Matt. xxi. 1.
- Bhargas*, Sir William Jones' remarks upon this Hindoo word, John i. 9.
- Bigotry*, reflections on the spirit of, which is manifested by some professing Christians, Mark ix. 39; 2 Pet. i. 7.
- Binding and loosing*, a mode of expression frequently used by the Jews, Matt. xvi. 19. Its import, ibid. xviii. 18.
- Birthday* of a monarch either meant the day on which he was born, or on which he commenced his reign, Matt. xiv. 6.
- Bishop*, derivation and import of this word, 1 Tim. iii. 2. Fifteen qualifications of a Christian bishop, 1 Tim. iii. 2-7.
- Bishop of Rome*, Grenville Sharp's observations on the pretended supremacy of the, Luke ix., in fine.
- Bismillahi Arrahmani Arrahcemi*, "In the name of the most merciful and compassionate God," a sentence, in very frequent use among the Mohammedans in matters sacred and profane, Col. iv. 17.
- Bithynia*, boundaries of this ancient kingdom of Asia, 1 Pet. i. 1. Its various appellations, ibid. Now under the domination of the Turks, ibid.
- Bituminous Salt*, a species of salt generated at the lake Asphaltites, easily rendered rapid, Matt. v. 13.
- Black Robes* of Christian ministers, thoughts concerning the, Matt. xxviii. 3.
- Βλασφημία*, blasphemy, its import when used in reference to God, Matt. ix. 3; xv. 19; John x. 33; Acts vi. 11; 1 Cor. iv. 12; 2 Tim. iii. 2: when applied to man, ibid. Among the Jews all who heard a blasphemous speech were obliged to rend their clothes, and never to sew them up again, Matt. xxvi. 65.
- Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost*, inquiry into the meaning of this expression, Matt. xii. 31, 32. Dr. Lightfoot's vindication of this phrase and its context from a false gloss of some commentators by numerous citations from rabbinical writers, Matt. xii. 32.
- Blessing*, Jewish form of, before and after meat, Matt. xiv. 19; xxvi. 26. The Mohammedan form of, Matt. xxvi. 26.
- Blindness*, remarkable cure of, by Cheselden, John ix. 32.
- Blood*, the eating of, forbidden by the law of Moses, Acts xv., in fine.
- Bloody sweat*, instance of a, as related by De Thou, Luke xxii. 44.
- Blotting out of the book of God*, what meant by this phrase, Luke x. 20.
- Boanerges*, inquiry into the derivation of this word, Mark iii. 17. Why, in the opinion of some, this surname was given to the sons of Zebedee, ibid.
- Board*, account of the, borne by the criminal in China, to which the accusation is affixed, Matt. xxvii. 37.
- Bohemian Version* of the Scriptures, short account of the, Introduction to the Gospels and Acts, p. 18.
- Boiga*, copious extract relative to this serpent from Cope's History of Oviparous Quadrupeds and Serpents, Matt. x. 16.
- Boldon Book*, account of the, Matt. xxi. 34; 1 Cor. vii., in fine.
- Bood-dha*, a name of the Deity among the Hindoos, Luke i. 68.
- Borrowing and lending*, Christian precept concerning, Matt. v. 42.
- Bosc*, (Peter du.) account of this French Protestant divine, 1 Cor. ii. 3.
- Βοσκεω*, in what this word differs in import from ποιμαίνω, John xxi. 15.
- Bottles* of the ancients ordinarily made of goat's skin, Matt. ix. 17; Luke v. 37.
- Bounarbachi*, a village on the site of which the ancient city of Troy is supposed to have stood, Acts xvi. 8.
- Boxing match* between Entellus and Dares, Virgil's description of the, 1 Cor. ix. 26.
- Boyd*, (H. S.) observations by this Greek critic on two remarkable laws to which the Greek article is universally subjected, Eph. vi., in fine. The influence of these rules on certain passages in the Septuagint Version, and also in the New Testament, shown to be a very powerful auxiliary evidence in favour of an essential article of the Christian religion, viz., the Divinity of Jesus Christ, ibid.
- Boyle*, anecdote relative to his great reverence for the name of God, 2 Cor. xii. 4.
- Βραβεύτης*, the person who awarded the prize to the victor in the ancient Grecian games, 1 Cor. ix. 27.
- Brahma*, the Hindoo deity in his creative quality, Luke i. 68; John i. 11.
- Branches of Supplication*, ἱκετηρίας θαλλοί, import of this phrase as used by Herodian and others, Heb. v. 7.

Breaking of the bread, essential in the right administration of the Lord's Supper, Matt. xxvi. 26.
Bride, how long a woman was considered among the Jews to be a, after marriage, Matt. ix. 15.
British and Foreign Bible Society, great extent of its operations, Rev. xiv. 6.
Brute creation, doctrine of the restoration of the, to a state of happiness considered, Rom. viii., in fine. The sacred canon totally silent upon this subject, ibid. Several reasons produced to show that this doctrine is not destitute of probability, ibid.
Burying in towns, churches, and chapels, observations on the great impropriety of, Luke vii. 12.
Caduceus, the peculiar badge or ensign of the ancient heralds, Matt. iii., in fine. The Caduceus, or rod of Mercury, evidently borrowed from the Scripture account of the rod of Moses, Matt. iii., in fine.
Cæsar, remarkable saying of, respecting his mutinous soldiers, Tit. i. 16.
Cæsarea Philippi, where situated, Matt. xvi. 13. Its ancient names, ibid.
Castans, among the Asiatics, what, Matt. xxii. 11. To refuse to accept or wear the castan deemed the highest insult, ibid.
Caiaphas, the high priest, some account of, Matt. xxvi. 3.
Caius Caligula, remarkable saying of Tiberius Cæsar concerning, Luke iii. 1.
Calendar of the ancient Romans, in which are incorporated the festivals, &c., of the present Romish Church, Rom. xvi., in fine.
Calvary, the place of our Lord's crucifixion, why probably so named, Matt. xxvii. 33.
Camel passing through the eye of a needle, a proverbial form of expression among the ancients, Matt. xix. 24. Examples produced, ibid.
Cana of Galilee, its situation, John ii. 1.
Candace, Bruce's observations respecting the territory under the subjection of this queen, Acts viii. 27. Strabo's account of a queen of the Ethiopians of this name who reigned before the commencement of the Christian era, ibid. Candace a common name of the queens of Ethiopia, according to Pliny, ibid.
Candia, how the island of Crete obtained this appellation, Preface to Titus.
Candles, always lighted by the Jews at the commencement of their Sabbath, Luke xxiii. 54. Solemn precept to this effect, ibid.
Caoian, particular description of this funeral solemnity of the Irish, Matt. ix. 32.
Capernaum, situation of this famous city of antiquity, Matt. iv. 13; John vi. 17.
Carabas, Philo's account of this man's being invested by the inhabitants of Alexandria with the mock ensigns of royalty in derision of Agrippa, whom Caligula had appointed tetrarch. Matt. xxvii. 29.
Carthaginian ambassadors, very humiliating manner of their supplicating the Romans for peace, as related by Polybius, Luke vii. 38.
Castor and Pollux, fable concerning, Acts xxviii. 11.
Catholic, reason given by Ecumenius why this epithet was given to the epistles of James, Peter, John, and Jude, Preface to James. A more probable conjecture proposed, ibid.
Cauponari bellum, import of this phrase, 2 Cor. ii. 17.
Cedron, situation of this very small rivulet, John xviii. 1.
Celibacy has no countenance in the sacred oracles, Heb. xiii. 4.
Cenchrea, situation of this sea-port, Acts xviii. 18; Rom. xvi. 1.
Census of the Romans, by whom instituted, Luke ii. 3. Account of its institution by Dionysius of Halicarnassus, ibid. In what a Roman census consisted, ibid. This census probably similar to that made in England in the reign of William the Conqueror, ibid.
Centaur, the name of a vessel mentioned by Virgil, Acts xxviii. 11.
Centurion, derivation and import of this word, Matt. xxvii. 54; Acts x. 1.
Certificate, form of the, among our Saxon ancestors, of a man's having purchased his own freedom, with an English translation. 1 Cor. vii., in fine. Form of the certificate of one having purchased the liberty of another, ibid. Form of the certificate of redemption in behalf of one departed, ibid. Form of the certificate of persons manumitted to be devoted to the service of God, ibid.

Chacham, one of the supreme officers in the Jewish sanhedrin, Matt. xx. 21.
Chalcodon, account of four species of this semipellucid gem, Rev. xxi. 19.
Xalkos ηχων, sounding brass, a figure of speech for a trumpet, 1 Cor. xiii. 1. Citations from Flower and Virgil in illustration of this sense of the phrase, ibid.
Chanderaym, account of this Hindoo fast, Matt. ix., in fine.
Chappers, the posts or messengers of the Persian monarchs, Matt. v. 41. Have the royal authority for pressing horses, ships, and even men, to assist them in the business in which they are employed, ibid.
Charger, ancient acceptation of this word, Matt. xiv. 8.
Xapē, twelve acceptations of this word in the Scriptures pointed out, Rom. i. 7.
Charity, inquiry into the derivation and original acceptation of this term, 1 Cor. xiii. 1.
Chazan, an officer in the Jewish synagogue, Matt. ix. 18.
Xripides, gounthls, account of this species of defensive armour, Eph. vi. 13.
Cheirotonia, among the primitive Christians, what, Acts xiv. 23.
Chel, the wall that separated the court of Israel from the court of the Gentiles, Eph. ii. 14.
Xpā, translated widow, probably sometimes used as the name of an office, 1 Tim. v. 10.
Cherem, translation of a form of the, from Buxtorf's Talmudical Lexicon, 1 Cor. xvi. 22.
Chief priests, among the Jews, who, Matt. ii. 4.
Child of God, who properly so called, Matt. v. 45.
Children, among the Jews, frequently employed in public acclamations, Matt. xxi. 16.
Children of the bridegroom, who, among the Jews, Matt. ix. 15.
Chimra, the name of a vessel mentioned by Virgil, Acts xxviii. 14.
Chios, an island famous in antiquity for its extraordinary wines, Acts xx. 15.
Xīwā, Bishop Pearce's observations on the import of this word, Luke vi. 29. In what it differed from the ιπαριον, ibid.
Chonos, see Konos.
Chopping off the different members of the body seriatim, first the feet, then the legs, arms, and head, an ancient mode of punishment, still in use among the Chinese, Matt. xxiv. 50.
Chotham, חֹתָם, a frequent sense of this word in rabbinical writings, Rom. iv. 11.
Xpēa, Bishop Pearce's remark on the import of this word, Luke x. 42.
Xpēthai Kpētiqūw, how these words came to import, to deceive, Tit. i. 11.
Chrestus, mentioned by Suetonius in his life of Claudius. very uncertain who, Acts xviii. 2.
Christ, of the same import with Messiah, Luke ii. 11. Should always have the demonstrative article prefixed, Matt. i. 16. The rectilinear ancestors of Jesus the Christ among the most illustrious of the human race, Matt. i. 1. The commonly received Greek text of Matthew, which contains an account of Christ's genealogy, most evidently defective, Matt. i. 11. This deficiency supplied, and the sacred text rendered perfectly consistent with itself, by means of a very important various reading which is supported by many manuscripts, ibid. List, in collateral columns, of the three times fourteen generations from Abraham to Christ, as corrected by these manuscripts, ibid. Considerations on the best mode of reconciling and explaining the accounts of the genealogy of our Lord, as given by Matthew and Luke, Luke iii., in fine. The three offices of prophet, priest, and king, never united except in the person of Christ, Matt. i. 1, 16. What probably gave the first idea to the ancient painters of representing Christ in the manger, with a glory surrounding his

- head, Matt. ii. 9. Sturm's reflections on the place of Christ's nativity, Matt. ii., in fine. Thoughts on the temptation of Christ in the wilderness by a correspondent, Matt. iv., in fine. Reflections on Christ's last journey to Jerusalem, a circumstance narrated by all the Evangelists, Matt. xxi., in fine. Bishop Newcome's critical remarks on the anointing of Christ as recorded by Matthew, Mark, and John, Matt. xxvi., in fine. The question whether Christ ate the passover with his disciples before he suffered, largely considered, ibid. Inquiry into the language of Christ's exclamation on the cross, as related by Matthew and Mark, Matt. xxvii. 46. The doctrine of the two natures in Christ, the human and the Divine, the only ground on which the Scriptures which speak of him, either in the Old or New Testament, can be rationally explained, John xii. 31. Bishop Pearce's enumeration of the several appearances of Christ during the forty days which elapsed between his resurrection and ascension, John xxi. 14; Acts i. 3.
- Christianity*, observations on the manner of its propagation, Acts xviii., in fine.
- Christians*, remarks on the origin of this appellative of the disciples of the Lord, Acts xi., in fine.
- Chronological Tables*. Tables extending from A. M. 3999 to A. D. 100, in which the years of the reigns of contemporary kings and rulers are reduced to the years of thirteen different eras, to which are added the years of the principal ecclesiastical cycles, with other notations of time, Tables I. and II. at the end of Acts. Table of remarkable events from B. C. 6, to A. D. 100, in which the year of the world, the year from the building of Rome, and the year before or after the birth of Christ of each event, are carefully noted, Table III., at the end of Acts.
- Chironus*, a divinity of the Carthaginians, to whom they sacrificed many of their children, Rom. ix., in fine. Horrible mode in which these children were put to death, ibid.
- Chrysolite*, some account of this precious stone, Rev. xxi. 20.
- Chrysoprasus*, a variety of the chrysolite, Rev. xxi. 20.
- Chrysostom*, extract from his fifth homily, Περὶ Ἀκαταλήκτου, (translated by H. S. Boyd,) concerning the Divinity of Jesus Christ, Eph. vi., in fine.
- Church*, derivation of the word, Matt. xvi., in fine. Definition of the word according to the nineteenth article of the Church of England, ibid. What is implied in its construction and edification, Acts ix. 31. The cry of "the Church is in danger," by whom generally echoed, Acts xix., in fine.
- Circulation of the blood* in the animal system, probably not unknown to the great apostle of the Gentiles, Eph. iv. 16. Account of some wonderful phenomena in the animal system with which the circulation of the blood is accompanied, Heb. xi., in fine. Astonishing influence which angry or irritating language has on the circulation of the blood, James iii. 6.
- Citizen*, what constituted a, among the Jews, Matt. iv. 13.
- Clauda*, an island near Crete, now called Gozo, Acts xxvii. 18.
- Claude's* excellent remarks on the subjects treated of in the second chapter of Luke's Gospel, Luke ii., in fine.
- Cleanthes*, citation of a passage from this writer, in his hymn to Jupiter, almost in the same words with that which St. Paul most probably quoted from the Phenomena of Aratus in his celebrated sermon at Athens, Acts xvii. 28.
- Clarke of Ozenford*, Chaucer's character of the, 1 Tim. iii. 2.
- Clitophon*, remarkable saying of, on having received a letter from Leucippe, 1 Cor. ix. 22.
- Clothed with a person*, import of this Greek phraseology, illustrated by citations from Chrysostom, Dionysius of Halicarnassus, and Eusebius, Rom. xiii. 14; 1 Pet. v. 5.
- Cloud*, employed metaphorically by the ancients to denote a great number, Heb. xii. 1.
- Clypeus*, see Ἀσπίς.
- Cnidus*, where situated, Acts xxvii. 7.
- Coals of fire, heaping of, upon the head*, a metaphor taken from smelting metals, Rom. xii. 20. Its import, ibid.
- Cohort*, among the Romans, what, Acts x. 1. Account of the Italian band or cohort, with an ancient inscription given by Gruter, relative to it, ibid. The cohort of Augustus mentioned by Suetonius, and its name found by Lipsius on an ancient marble, Acts xxvii. 1.
- Colony*, קולוניה, Κολωνία, Jewish definition of this term, Acts xvi. 12.
- Colosse*, or Colassa, where formerly situated, Preface to Colossians. Brief sketch of its revolutions, ibid. The ancient city destroyed by an earthquake in the reign of Nero, ibid.
- Colossians, Epistle to the*, when written, Preface to the Epistle. Style of this apostolical letter, ibid.
- Colassus of Rhod's*, account of this very celebrated statue of antiquity, Acts xxi. 1.
- Columella's* advice to the ploughman respecting the use of the goad, Acts ix. 5.
- Coming of Christ*, various acceptations of this phrase in the sacred writings, Preface to the Second Epistle to the Thessalonians.
- Coming in the name of another*, import of this phrase as used by the rabbins, John v. 43.
- Common swearing*, ancient Jews notoriously guilty of, as shown by numerous extracts from their own writings, Matt. v. 37; James v. 12.
- Compassion*, its powerful effect upon the animal system, Matt. ix. 36.
- Conclamatio*, and Conclamatum est, what the Romans meant by these words when employed in their funeral solemnities, Matt. ix. 32.
- Condemnation*, apostolic doctrine of, John xx. 23.
- Conscience*, the question, "What is conscience?" largely considered, Heb. xiii., in fine.
- Consolation of Israel*, a name among the Jews for the Messiah, Luke ii. 25; Acts xiii. 15. Frequently used in the form of an oath, Luke ii. 25.
- Constantia*, see Salamis.
- Constantine the Great*, conversion of, and the amazing influence of this event on the whole Roman world, Rev. vi. 12-17; xii. 4, &c.
- Conversation*, very remarkable, between a white man and a negro, Mark x. 50.
- Conversation*, derivation and import of the original term thus translated, 2 Cor. i. 12.
- Conversion of Saul of Tarsus*, in the opinion of Lord Lyttleton, an illustrious proof of the truth of Christianity, Acts ix. 16.
- Coos*, an island of the Grecian archipelago, formerly famous for the worship of Esculapius and Juno, and for being the birthplace of Hippocrates and Appelles, Acts xxi. 1.
- Coptic Version*, Introduction to the Gospels and Acts, p. 18.
- Cor*, the largest measure of capacity among the Hebrews, whether for solids or liquids, Luke xvi. 7.
- Corinth*, a celebrated city, formerly the capital of all Achaia, or Peloponessus, Acts xviii. 1. Greatly celebrated for its statues of Venus, the Sun, Neptune and Amphitrite, Diana, Apollo, Jupiter, Minerva, &c., Preface to the first Epistle to the Corinthians. Why this city was called by Cicero Totius Lumen Græciæ, "The Eye of all Greece," ibid. Corinth destroyed by the Romans under Mummius, ibid. Rebuilt by Julius Cæsar, and again became an important city, ibid. Now under the domination of the Turks, ibid.
- Corinthians*, in their pagan condition, excessively dissolute, public prostitution forming a considerable part of their religion, and the multiplication of prostitutes being a constant subject of prayer to their idols, Preface to the First Epistle to the Corinthians.
- Corinthians, First Epistle to the*, its authenticity demonstrated by Dr. Paley, Introduction to the Epistle. Analysis of this Epistle, Preface to the Epistle. The thirteenth chapter from an ancient manuscript, (containing the first English translation of it known to exist,) with all its peculiar orthography, points, and lines, 1 Cor. xiii. 1. General observations on this apostolic letter, 1 Cor. xvi., in fine.
- Corinthians, Second Epistle to the*, its authenticity de- monstrated by Dr. Paley, Introduction to the Epistle. Substance of Dr. Lightfoot's observations relative to the date of this Epistle, ibid. Dr. Whitby's remarks upon the same point, Preface to the Epistle. General analysis of this apostolic letter, ibid.

- Cornelius, remarks on the wonderful circumstances with which the conversion of this Roman centurion was accompanied, Acts x., in fine.
- Cornelius Gallus, sentiment attributed to, very similar to a passage in the Apocalypse, Rev. ix. 6.
- Courts of judicature among the Jews, Dr. Lightfoot's observations on the legal proceedings in the, Matt. v., in fine.
- Covenants, inquiry into the practices of the ancients in the formation of, Matt. xxvi. 28.
- Cranache's remarkable reply, when asked why he put no wound on either side of his figure of Christ crucified, John xix. 31.
- Create, "to create," several citations produced to show that the Romans employed this term when speaking of the appointment of magistrates, 1 Pet. ii. 13.
- Creeshna, an incarnation of the Supreme Being, according to the theology of the ancient Hindoos, John i. 11, 14. Remarkable words of, as related in the Bhagvat Geeta, Matt. iii. 15; John i. 11, 14, xii. 26, xv. 5, 7.
- Crete, sketch of the revolutions of this island from its first mention in history to the present time, Preface to Titus. Homer's description of its ancient condition, ibid. Various names by which it was formerly known, ibid. Now called Candia, ibid.
- Criminal code published by Joseph II., late emperor of Germany, remarkable character of the, Matt. v. 21.
- Criminals punished by the Jews at the times of the public festivals, Matt. xxvi. 5. A constant practice among the Romans to oblige criminals to bear their cross to the place of execution, Matt. xxvii. 32. This illustrated by a quotation from Plutarch, ibid. Raiment of the criminals claimed by the executioners both in ancient and modern times, Matt. xxvii. 31. Criminals frequently offered up in sacrifice to the gods, Rom. ix., in fine.
- Crown of thorns, the Greek words so translated more probably mean the acanthine crown, or crown formed of the herb acanthus, Matt. xxvii. 29.
- Crowns worn by the victors in the Olympic, Pythian, Nemean, and Isthmian games, of what constructed, 1 Cor. ix. 25.
- Crucifixion, particular description of this very ancient mode of punishment, Matt. xxvii. 35. Formerly very common among the Syrians, Egyptians, Persians, Greeks, Romans, and the ancient Hindoos, ibid. Still in use among the Chinese, ibid. Crucifixion probably introduced among the Jews by the Romans, ibid. Considered the most shameful of all punishments, ibid. Citations from Horace, in which there is allusion to this punishment, ibid.
- Cup, observations on the denial of the, to the laity by the Romanists in their administration of the Eucharist, Matt. xxvi. 27; 1 Cor. xi., in fine.
- Cup of trembling, probably an allusion to the ancient method of taking off criminals by a cup of poison, Matt. xxvi. 39; Heb. ii. 9.
- Cupid and Psyché, an ancient allegory by which marriage is happily illustrated, Matt. xix. 6. Particular description of the very beautiful allegorical representation of the marriage union on an antique gem representing the marriage of Cupid and Psyché, Matt. xix. 6.
- Curlus, (M.) history of his devoting himself to death for the welfare of the Roman state, Rom. ix., in fine.
- Cutting in two, an ancient mode of punishment, mentioned by sacred and profane writers, Matt. xxiv. 50.
- Cutting off the hair, a sign of great distress, and practised on the death of near relatives, 1 Cor. xi. 5. Women, when reduced to a state of slavery, had their hair cut off, ibid.
- Cycles, Ecclesiastical, account of some of the most remarkable, Preface to Matthew.
- Cymbal, description of this ancient musical instrument, 1 Cor. xiii. 1. Winged cymbal, a periphrastical expression among the Hebrews for the Egyptian sistrum, ibid.
- Cyrene, where situated, Acts ii. 10. When built, according to Eusebius, Acts xi. 20. Its present appellation, ibid.
- Daily bread, see Επιούσιον.
- Δαίμων, never used by the inspired writers in a good sense, Luke iv. 33. Remarkable passage in Herodotus in which this term is employed in a similar manner to that in the New Testament, Luke ix. 39. Distinction made by heathen writers between δαίμων and θεός, Acts xvii. 18.
- Damascus, how it could be said to have been under the government of an Arabian king in the time of St. Paul, 2 Cor. xi. 32.
- Damnameneus, ΔΑΜΝΑΜΕΝΕΥΣ, one of the six Ephesian characters, Acts xix. 19. Its import according to Hesychius, ibid.
- Darmadêvê, or Darmadêvê, the Indian god of virtue, Luke i. 68; John i. 14.
- Darkness at the time of our Lord's crucifixion, observations concerning the, Matt. xxvii. 45. Citations from ancient writers in which it is supposed there is an allusion to this preternatural darkness, ibid.
- David, in what sense those scriptures are to be understood which state David to have been a man after God's own heart, Acts xiii. 22.
- Day, Jewish division of the, Matt. xxviii. 1.
- Day of judgment, various acceptations of this phrase in the sacred canon, Matt. xi. 24.
- Dayspring from the sky, οὐρανὸν ἐκ ἰσότητος, Wakefield's criticism on this remarkable passage in the Benedictus, Luke i. 76. A more probable view of this portion of holy writ, Rev. vii. 2.
- Deacon, the lowest ecclesiastical officer in the apostolic age, Matt. xx. 26. Account of the office of deacon in the Romish and English Churches, Acts vi. 4.
- Dead, rabbinical notions relative to the mode in which God will raise the, 1 Cor. xv. 52.
- Dead body, binding a, to a living man, (who was obliged to carry it about till the contagion from the putrid mass took away his life,) a mode of punishment among some ancient tyrants, Rom. vii. 24. Citation from Virgil, in which this punishment is painted in all its horrors, ibid. Remark of Servius on this passage in Virgil, ibid.
- Death, three kinds of, mentioned in the Scriptures, John v. 25. Thoughts on all mankind having fallen under the empire of death through the original transgression, Rom. v., in fine. Beautiful personification of death by St. Paul, 1 Cor. xv. 54. The destruction of death predicted by Isaiah and Hosea necessarily implies the revivification of all that have ever been subjected to his empire; hence the doctrine of a general resurrection, 1 Cor. xv. 26, 51. How death is usually represented in ancient paintings, 1 Cor. xv. 55.
- Death of Christ shown to be an atonement, or expiation, for the sins of the world, Rom. iv., in fine.
- Debtors, Insolvent, see Insolvent Debtors.
- Deapolis, where this country was situated, Matt. iv. 25. Why so named, ibid.
- Decrees of God, thoughts concerning the nature of the, Acts i. 7.
- Dedication, feast of the, why instituted, John x. 22. Time of its celebration, ibid.
- Defensive armour of the ancients, particular description of the, Eph. vi. 13.
- Δειπνόν, supper, the principal meal among the ancient Jews, Greeks, and Romans, Luke xi. 37.
- Δεισιδαιμονεστερος, probably used by St. Paul in a good sense, Acts xvii., in fine. Its derivation, ibid.
- Δεισιδαιμονία, synonymous with φοβία, according to Hesychius, Acts xvii., in fine. Definition by Suidas to the same import, ibid. This word similarly employed by Herodotus and Josephus, ibid. See also Acts xxv. 19.
- Delancy, copious extract from this writer, respecting the unlawfulness of eating blood, Acts xv., in fine.
- Demoniacs, the plain and obvious meaning of this term, Matt. iv. 24. Reason given by Dr. Lightfoot why Judea, in our Lord's time, abounded with demoniacs, Matt. viii. 16.

- Demonism*, notion of some that this was a vulgar error current in our Lord's time and in that of his apostles, considered, Matt. viii. 16, xii. 43; Mark ix. 25; Luke ix. 1; Acts xix. 12. Silly trifling of some commentators on the cases of demonism recorded by the evangelists, Matt. viii. 34; Mark v. 4, 9; Luke viii. 33; Acts viii. 7, xvi. 18.
- Demons, material*, of the Chaldaic philosophy, account of the, by Psellus, Luke viii. 31.
- Denarius* of the Romans, what, Matt. x. 29, xviii. 28, xx. 2; Luke x. 35; John vi. 7, xii. 5.
- Devil*, whence this word is derived, Matt. iv. 24. The name of this apostate spirit nearly the same in most European languages, ibid.
- Διαβολός*, Devil, not found in any part of the sacred writings in the plural number when speaking of evil spirits, and why, Matt. iv. 24; Jude 9. Derivation of the word, Matt. iv. 24, xiii. 19. This word sometimes imports a calumniator, talebearer, whisperer, or backbiter, Eph. iv. 27; 1 Tim. iii. 11; 2 Tim. iii. 3; Tit. iii. 3.
- Diana, temple of*, at Ephesus, its former magnificence and dimensions, Acts xix. 21. Reduced to ashes by Erostrates on the same night in which Alexander the Great was born, ibid. Afterwards rebuilt and adorned, ibid. Now a Turkish mosque, ibid. Account of a beautiful representation of this temple on a medal engraved by Montfaucon, ibid. Medals of this description thought by some to be what is meant by the silver shrines which Demetrius made for Diana, ibid. These silver shrines more probably small portable representations of the temple of Diana, bought by strangers as matters of curiosity, and for purposes of devotion, ibid.
- Diana of Ephesus*, an ancient object of idolatry widely different from Diana the huntress, Acts xix. 27. General description of the statues of this goddess which still remain, ibid. Reasons for believing that, by the statue of the great goddess Diana, the pagans intended to represent "Nature full of varied creatures, and mother of all things," ibid.
- Διαθήκη*, derivation and import of this word, Preface to Matthew, p. 27. Dr. Macknight's observations, Heb. ix., in fine.
- Didrachma*, what, Matt. xvii. 24.
- Didymus*, import of this name, John xi. 16.
- Dii Majores*, among the Greeks and Romans, their number and names, Acts xix. 27.
- Dii Manes*, customary among the ancient heathens, in the time of any plague or public calamity, to sacrifice one of the lowest or most execrable of the people to these infernal gods, Rom. ix. 3.
- Dii Minores*, among the heathen, who, Acts xix. 27.
- Δικαιοσύνη*, seven acceptations of this word in the New Testament pointed out, Rom. i. 17.
- Δικαιοσύνη*, ten acceptations of this word in the New Testament, Rom. i. 17.
- Δικασταί*, why heathen judges were so named, 1 Cor. vi. 1.
- Δίκη*, Diké, Justice, personified by Hesiod, and represented as a goddess, Acts xxviii. 1. The ancient Maltese seem to have had a similar idea, ibid.
- Διωκεῖν*, rendered to persecute, a forensic term, Matt. v. 11.
- Dionysian period*, account of this very celebrated ecclesiastical cycle, Preface to Matthew, p. 34.
- Dionysius the Arcopagite*, saying attributed to this man which is supposed to have an allusion to the preternatural darkness at the time of our Lord's crucifixion, Matt. xxvii. 45.
- Disciple*, import of the original word so translated, Matt. v. 1, x. 24.
- Discipline*, absolute necessity of, in the Christian Church, 1 Cor. v., in fine.
- Dispositions*, four kinds of, as stated in the Midrash Hanaalam, James i. 19.
- Divine inspiration*, Dr. Whitby's observations on the various manners in which it was granted to the sacred writers, Introduction to the Gospels and Acts, § I.
- Divinity of Christ* demonstrated, Matt. xii. 6, 11, xv. 30, xviii. 20, xxviii. 18; Luke v. 21, xxii. 43; John i. 1, ii. 24, iii. 13, v. 8, 19, 20, 21-23, xviii. 6, xxi. 28; Acts vii. 59; Rom. ix. 5; Eph. iv. 7; Col. i. 16, 17, iii. 11; Tit. ii., in fine; Heb. i. 3, &c., et in fine; iii. 4; 2 Pet. i. 1; Rev. v. 13; xxii. 16.
- Divorcee*, doctrines of the two great schools at Shammai and of Hillel respecting, Matt. xix. 3.
- Divorcement*, form of a bill of, among the Jews, Matt. v. 31; 1 Cor. vii. 10.
- Dog*, a sacred animal among the ancient Egyptians, Rom. i. 23.
- Dogma*, derivation and original import of this term, Acts xvi. 4.
- Δοκεῖν*, various acceptations of this word, Luke viii. 18; 1 Cor. vii. 40, x. 12. Often an expletive, Luke viii. 18.
- Domitian*, a title refused by the emperors Augustus and Tiberius, Acts xxv. 26. Affected by some of the succeeding emperors, ibid. Celebrated saying of Tiberius relative to this title, ibid.
- Doob*, among the Hindoos a species of small salad, 1 Cor. vii., in fine. Its mystical import when employed in the ceremony of the manumission of a slave, ibid.
- Door*, metaphorical acceptance of this term among the rabbins, Rev. iii. 20.
- Dorcas*, import of this name, Acts ix. 36.
- Δόρυ*, דורן, its different acceptations, Matt. v. 24.
- Δόρυ* or Lance, account of this military weapon of the ancient Greeks, Eph. vi. 13.
- Δοσις* and Δωρημα, indifferently translated in our version gift, distinction between, James i., in fine.
- Δουλεία* and Δατρεία explained, see Rom. xii. 1.
- Δουλος*, inquiry into the import of this term, Rom. i. 1, vi. 16.
- Doxology of the Lord's Prayer*, rejected by Griesbach, Weistien, and the most eminent Greek critics, Matt. vi. 13. Various written in the manuscripts, ibid. Certainly very ancient, and probably genuine, ibid.
- Drachma* of the Greeks of about the same value as the Roman denarius, Luke xv. 8.
- Drag-mat*, the proper meaning of σαγήνη, Matt. xiii. 47.
- Dragon*, when this military standard was introduced among the Romans, Rev. xii. 2. The standard, and the image of the dragon itself, of a purple or red colour, ibid.
- Draught*, see Ἀφεδρῶν.
- Drawing nigh to God*, a phrase of very frequent occurrence, in the sacred writings, whence it originated, Matt. xxvii. 6.
- Dress*, Rev. J. Wesley's remarks on, 1 Tim. ii., in fine.
- Dropsy*, why this disorder is so named, Luke xiv. 2.
- Drowning with a great weight hung on the neck*, an ancient mode of punishing criminals, Matt. xviii. 6; Luke xvii. 2.
- Drusilla*, wife of Felix, some account of, Acts xxiv. 24.
- Dust, shaking off the*, from the clothes or feet, what this symbolical action imported among the ancient Jews, Matt. x. 14; Acts xiii. 51.
- Dust, throwing of, into the air*, a mark among the ancients of the greatest contempt, Acts xxii. 23.
- Dying daily*, citations from Philo, Libanius, and Livy, to show that this is an ancient form of speech for continual exposure to a violent death, 1 Cor. xv. 31.
- Eagle*, the, was the Roman ensign, Matt. xxiv. 3; Rev. xii. 12.
- Ear*, consecrated by the ancients to Memory, Matt. xvii. 14.
- Earth*, notions of the ancients respecting its origin and formation, 2 Pet. iii. 5. The earth's rotation round its axis the cause of the regular succession of day and night, Heb. xi., in fine. Its spheroidal figure, 2 Pet. iii. 5.
- East*, opinion predominant throughout the, about the time of our Lord's nativity, that some great personage would soon make his appearance for the deliverance of Israel, and obtain universal empire, Matt. ii. 3. Citations from Suetonius and Tacitus to this effect, ibid.
- Easter, Christian*, rules by which the time of this moveable festival is ascertained, Acts xii. 4.
- East Indian ink*, how made, Col. ii. 14. The whole of

- It readily discharged from the paper by the application of a wet sponge, ibid.
- Ecclesiastical works*, alphabetical list of, referred to in the various readings quoted occasionally in these notes, with the times in which they are supposed to have been written, Introduction to the Gospels and Acts, pp. 25, 26.
- Echein*, citations from classical writers to show that this word, without the negative particle, is synonymous with οἱ πλουσιοί, the rich, and vice versa, Matt. xiii. 12.
- Eclipse of the sun* by the interposition of the moon, shown not to have been the cause of the darkness over the land of Judea at the time of our Lord's crucifixion, Matt. xxvii. 45.
- Economy, οἰκονομία*, definition of, by Dr. Macknight, Eph. i. 10.
- Eden*, its derivation and import, Luke xxiii. 43.
- Eγγυς*, surety, in what it differs from μεσίτης, mediator, Heb. vii., in fine.
- Egypt*, boundaries of this extensive country of Africa, Acts ii. 10.
- Egyptian*, Josephus's account of a commotion occasioned by an, in the apostolic age, Acts xxi. 35. Great discrepancy in the numbers stated by St. Luke and Josephus to have been assembled on this occasion, how accounted for by Dean Aldridge, ibid. Another mode of solving the difficulty, ibid.
- Egyptians*, formerly a settled belief among these people that their gods, in the likeness of men or animals, occasionally descended to the earth, and travelled through different provinces, to punish, reward, and protect, Acts xiv. 11.
- Ei, Thou art*, a word above the door of the ancient temple of Delphos, on which Plutarch has written an express treatise, 2 Tim. ii. 19.
- Εἰσκήρυξις*, and Εὐαγγελισμός, derivation and import of these words, 2 Cor. i. 12.
- Eisōmē*, nine acceptations of this word in the New Testament pointed out, Rom. i. 7.
- Εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν*, a Jewish phrase for εἰς τὸν Θεόν, Luke xv. 18.
- Εκχέω* and Εκχύω, used in the Septuagint in a sacrificial sense, Matt. xxvi. 28.
- Εκκλησία*, this word, generally translated church, means an assembly of any kind, good or bad, lawful or unlawful, Acts xix. 32.
- Ελαχιστότερος*, observations on this singular expression of St. Paul, Eph. iii. 8.
- Elazar*, manner in which this Jew of the apostolic age is said to have ejected demons, as related by Josephus, Acts xix. 11.
- Election and Reprobation, unconditional*, doctrine of, considered, Rom. ix., in fine; 1 Thess. i. 4; Heb. iii. 10; 1 Pet. i. 2.
- Elevation of the holy Roman empire*, period of their institution involve in great uncertainty, Rev. xvii. 9. Their original number, ibid. Brief sketch of the very great influence of the sovereigns of these states before and at the period of the Reformation, ibid.
- Ελεγχος*, demonstration, logical definition of this word, Heb. xi. 1. Arist. 11's definition, ibid.
- Ελπίς*, words with which the psalms, or hymns in honour of Apollo, commenced and terminated, a manifest corruption of the Hebrew הללו יה hallelu Yah, Rev. xix. 1.
- Ελευθερος*, translated freeman, properly imports freedman, 1 Cor. vii., in fine. Synonymous with libertus among the Romans, ibid.
- Ελκία*, its import, Matt. vi. 27.
- Ελizabeth*, import of this name, Luke i. 60.
- Ελληνες*, Greeks, very extensive meaning of this word among the ancient Jews, Mark vii. 26. In what Ελληνες, differs from Ελληνισται, Acts vi. 1.
- Ellipsis*, or oral, the figure of every planetary orbit hitherto discovered, Heb. xi., in fine.
- Elymas*, inquiry into the import of this name, Acts xiii. 8.
- Εμεοα* often has the import of judgment, for which some examples are produced, 1 Cor. iv. 3.
- Emerald*, account of this precious stone, Rev. xxi. 19.
- Emperors of Germany*, great revolutions in the kind of power appertaining to one, from the ninth to the fourteenth century, Rev. xvii. 9.
- Εὐαγγέλιον* sometimes imports to be satisfied, to be gratified, and to enjoy, Rom. xv. 21. Citations from Ælian, Maximus Tyrius, and Homer, in which this word is to be thus understood, ibid.
- Ενχος*, Εγγυς, or spær, form of the, among the ancient Greeks, Eph. vi. 13.
- Engroßing*, mode of, among the Romans, according to Virgil, Rom. xi. 22.
- Engraved stones*, sometimes placed over the principal gates of cities and fortresses, in Mohammediian countries, specifying the date of erection, repairs, &c., and containing some religious sentiment or verse from the Koran, 2 Tim. ii., in fine.
- Enigma* attributed to Lactantius, Matt. xxiii. 33.
- Ensigns*, different sorts of, among the ancient Romans, Rev. xii. 14.
- Entellus and Dares*, Virgil's account of the boxing match between, 1 Cor. ix. 26.
- Envy*, beautiful personification of this vice by Ovid, with Addison's elegant and nervous translation, Rom. i. 29.
- Εφεσια ἡρώματα*, Ephesian characters, account of these amulets by Suidas, Hesychius, and Clemens Alexandrinus, Acts xix. 19.
- Ephesians*, very corrupt state of this people in the apostolic age, Eph. v. 7.
- Ephesians, Epistle to the*, demonstrated by Dr. Paley to be an authentic letter of St. Paul, Introduction to the Epistle, pp. 421-426. Consideration of the disputed point, whether this apostolic letter was written to the Ephesians or to the Laodiceans, Preface to the Epistle, pp. 427-429.
- Ephesus*, an ancient city of great celebrity, in which was the famous temple of Diana, Acts xviii. 19. Chandler's very impressive description of the ancient and modern condition of Ephesus, ibid. The illustrious title of Neocorus said to have been first assumed by this city, Acts xix. 35.
- Ephraim, Ephraim, Ephram, or Ephratha*, where situated, according to Jerome and Eusebius, John xi. 54.
- Epicureans*, a famous sect of ancient philosophers, Acts xvii. 18. Brief sketch of their doctrines, ibid. Why so named, ibid.
- Epicurus*, a celebrated Greek philosopher, when and where born, Acts xvii. 18.
- Epimenides*, an ancient Greek poet, a hexameter line from whom is cited by St. Paul, Tit. i. 12. Reputed a prophet by the Cretans, ibid. Citations to this effect from Plato, Diogenes Laertes, and Cicero, ibid.
- Επινοήτων*, a word which has greatly perplexed critics and commentators, Matt. vi. 11. Origen's conjecture concerning its origin, ibid. The interpretation of this word given by Theophylact the most probable of any, ibid. Wakefield's conjecture, ibid. To what custom this word has probably an allusion, according to Harmer, ibid.
- Επισκοπος*, bishop, its derivation, Acts i. 20. What the office of επισκοπος was in the primitive Christian Church, ibid.
- Επιθυμew*, in what sense used by our Lord, Matt. v. 28.
- Επιτροπος*, various acceptations of this word, Luke viii. 3. What meant by this word in the rabbinical writings, when written in Chaldaic characters, ibid.
- Equal areas in equal times, description of*, a law to which every primary and secondary planet in the solar system is subjected, and probably every other body in the whole material universe, Heb. xi., in fine. This law the necessary consequence of a universal and continually operating influence diffused throughout nature, which philosophers term gravity or attraction, ibid.
- Equinumeral verses* of Leonidas of Alexandria, three curious examples from this poet, Rev. xiii. 18. Account given by Aulus Gellius, of equinumeral verses in the Iliad and Odyssey, ibid.
- Eras of the world*, short account of the Usherian, Alexandrian, Antiochian, and Constantinopolitan, Preface to Matthew, p. 4.
- Eso*, an object of idolatrous worship among the ancient Gauls, to whom human victims were offered, Rom. ix., in fine.

- Εἰσπρὸν ἐν ἀνιμῶσι*, inquiry into the import of this remarkable expression of St. Paul, 1 Cor. xiii. 12.
- Espousal*, the, among the Jews, though the marriage had not been consummated, considered as binding on both sides, Matt. i. 18. A breach of this contract deemed a case of adultery, and punished as such, ibid. The contract could only be legally dissolved by a regular divorce, ibid.
- Essenes*, some account of this Jewish sect, Matt. xix. 12.
- Eternal filiation of the Son of God*, remarks on the doctrine of the, Luke i. 35; Acts xiii. 33; Heb. i., in fine.
- Eternity of rewards and punishments*, in a future state, shown to be a doctrine of Scripture, Matt. xxv. 46; xxvi. 21; Mark ix. 43-50; John iii. 36; 2 Thess. i. 9.
- Eternity*, beautiful saying of Plutarch relative to, 2 Pet. iii. 8.
- Εἶπεν*, in what sense this verb is frequently used in the Septuagint, Matt. xxvii. 43.
- Eucharist*, observations on the institution of the, Matt. xxvi. 26. Harmonized view of the account given of this ordinance in three gospels and one epistle, ibid.
- Εὐαγγελιστὴν*, Gospel, shown to signify the reward which the bringer of good tidings is entitled to receive, Preface to Matthew, pp. 30, 31. Other acceptations of this term, Preface to Matthew, p. 31.
- Εὐεργεσία*, Dr. Macknight's observations on the meaning of this word, 1 Tim. vi. 2.
- Euphorbus*, death of, as related in the Iliad, cited to show how the ancient Greeks plaited and adorned their hair, 1 Tim. ii. 9.
- Euripides*, extract from the Alcestis of, very similar to a saying of St. Paul, 2 Tim. iv. 8.
- Euroclydon*, in the opinion of Dr. Shaw, one of those tempestuous winds now called levanters, Acts xxvii. 14. Derivation of the word, ibid.
- Εὐερεν ἡ ἐρερε*, a very happy rendering of εὐς τοὺς αἰῶνας, Matt. vi. 13.
- Evermore*, import of this term, Matt. vi. 13.
- Evil*, thoughts on the origin of, Matt. xiii. 36. Reflections on the mysterious permission of this principle in the world for so many ages, ibid.
- Evil communications corrupt good manners*, a saying of St. Paul which, it is generally supposed, he cited from Menander's lost comedy of Thais, 1 Cor. xv. 33. Quotations from Æschylus, Diodorus Siculus, and Theognis, of similar import, ibid.
- Eunuchs*, various kinds of, Matt. xix. 12.
- Εὐαγγελιστὴς*, in what this word probably differs in import from ἀναγγελεῖς, Phil. iii. 11.
- Excommunication*, description of the three kinds of, among the Jews, the niddui, נִדְּוִי, the cherem, חֵרֵם, and the shammatha, שְׁמַתָּה, 1 Cor. xvi. 22.
- Exorcisms* very frequent in the primitive Church, Acts xix. 17. The name of Jesus was that alone used in the adjuration, ibid. The adjuration commonly made over the catechumens before they were admitted to baptism, ibid.
- Exorcists* among the Jews adjured by the name of Solomon, according to Josephus, Acts xix. 14. Exorcists a distinct class in the primitive Christian Church, Acts xix. 17.
- Εἰσὼσα*, in what this word differs in import from ἐνέβαλεν, Acts i. 8.
- Εἰσὼσεν ἡμετέρας*, why this epithet was given to the lowest bench of justice among the Jews, 1 Cor. vi. 4.
- Extreme Unction* of the Romish Church shown to be widely different from the anointing mentioned by St. James, James v. 14.
- Fables* of the ancients, reasons for believing that some of these have arisen out of the names of ships, Acts xxviii. 11.
- Faith*, the grace by which it is produced, and the act of, demonstrated to be essentially distinct things, without the harmonious union of which no man ever was or ever can be saved, Eph. ii. 8.
- Faith, hope, and love*, observations on, in reference to a future world, 1 Cor. xiii., in fine.
- Faithfulness of God*, a favourite expression among the ancient Jews, 1 Cor. i. 9. Two anecdotes related by the rabbins in illustration of this attribute of the Divine nature, ibid.
- Falarica*, see Phalarica.
- Fall*, metaphorical import of this term, Rom. v., in fine.
- Falling stars* have been deemed by the common people an omen of evil times, Matt. xxiv. 29. Examples produced, ibid.
- False Christs*, some account of the, who appeared before the destruction of the Jewish polity by the Romans, Matt. xxiv. 5.
- Famines*, account of four, in the reign of Claudius the Roman emperor, Acts xi. 28.
- Farewell*, an old English form of expressing good wishes and good will, Acts xv. 29. Derivation of the word, ibid.
- Farthing*, a corruption of fourthing, Luke xxi. 2. Why so named, ibid.
- Fasting*, general observations on, Matt. ix., in fine. Considered by the Mohammedans as an essential part of piety, ibid.
- Fasts* of the Pharisees, many of them very superstitious, Matt. ix. 14. Particular description of the twelve kinds of fasts among the Hindoos, Matt. ix., in fine.
- Father*, curious note in a Bible published by Edmund Becke, relative to the title of father given to the pope, Matt. xxiii., in fine. The four things which, among the ancient Jews, every father was bound to do for his son, Mark vi. 3. He who acted a kind, instructing, and indulgent part to another, was styled the father of such a one, Rom. xvi. 13. This sense of the word illustrated by a citation from Terence, ibid.; 1 Cor. iv. 15.
- Fearful portents* that immediately preceded the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, Matt. xxiv. 7.
- Festivals of Charity*, in the primitive Christian Church, see Αγάπαι.
- Filiæ*, account of this Roman governor by Tacitus and Suetonius, Acts xxiii. 24.
- Femote dancers*, the people of the East from time immemorial very extravagant in their testimony of respect to, Mark vi. 23. A remarkable example produced, ibid.
- Ferdol system*, brief sketch of the, as it prevailed in Europe, before the Reformation, Rev. xvii. 9.
- Final perseverance of the saints*, doctrine of the, considered, John x. 28; Acts ii. 47, xi. 23; 1 Cor. x. 12; Heb. iii. 7, vi. 6.
- First Course*, general definition of the Great, John iv. 24.
- Flesh and blood*, a Hebrew periphrasis for man in his present state of infirmity and decay, Matt. xvi. 17; 1 Cor. xv. 50; Gal. i. 16; Eph. vi. 12.
- Flux and reflux of the ocean*, phenomena and cause of the, Heb. xi., in fine.
- Fool*, the original word so rendered, implied the highest enormity and most aggravated guilt, Matt. v. 22. How such an expression, opprobriously applied, was punished among the Gentiles, ibid.
- Forehead* consecrated by the ancients to Genius, Matt. xvii. 14.
- Foreknowledge of God*, observations on the, Acts ii., in fine.
- Form of doctrine*, the original words so rendered a figurative expression taken from the melting of metals, Rom. vi. 17.
- Form of God*, μορὴ θεοῦ, substance of Dr. Whitby's observations on this remarkable expression of St. Paul, Phil. ii. 6.
- Forms of government* of the ancient Latins and Romans, enumeration of the, in their chronological order, Rev. xii. 3, xiii. 1, xvii. 10.
- Foul*, whence this word is probably derived, John iii. 20.
- Four* which have pre-eminence in this world, according to the rabbins, Rev. iv. 8.
- Franks*, a general appellation in Asiatic countries for the inhabitants of Europe, Acts xi. 20.
- Free agency of man* demonstrated, Eph. ii. 8; Phil. ii. 18.
- Friend*, Aristotle's very remarkable definition of a, Acts iv. 32.
- Friend of the bridegroom*, or paramph, observations on the office of the, John iii., in fine.
- Friendship*, remarkable instances of, John xv. 13.

Frivolous questions, and the answers given to them, by the wisest and most reputable of the Jewish rabbins, Tit. iii. 9.

Ful, whence this Saxon word is probably derived, John iii. 20.

Funerol banquets to commemorate the dead, and comfort the surviving relatives, common among the ancients, Matt. ix. 32.

Fur, how this Latin word has been applied by the ancient Romans, Tit. ii. 10.

Gad-runes, see Gergasenes.

Gaul, the Greek mode of writing the Roman name Cæus, 3 John i.

Galata or Galatians, the tribes into which these people were divided, with the number of their tetrarchies and cantons, according to Strabo and Pliny, Preface to Galatians. Religion and personal appearance of the ancient Galata, ibid.

Galatia, where situated, and why so named, Preface to Galatians. When reduced into the form of a Roman colony, ibid. Boundaries of Galatia, ibid. Under the Christian emperors divided into two provinces, Galatia Prima, and Galatia Secunda, ibid.

Galileas, authenticity of the Epistle to the, ably vindicated by Dr. Paley, Introduction to the Epistle. Inquiry into the date of this epistle, Preface to the Epistle. Synopsis of the arguments employed in this apostolic letter to prove the truth of the Christian religion, ibid. Observations on the great similarity between St. Paul's Epistle to the Galatians and his Epistle to the Romans, Gal. vi., in fine.

Galilee, its boundaries, Matt. iv. 3. Singular tradition among the ancient Jews that the Messiah should begin his ministry in this country, Matt. iv. 15.

Galilee, sea of, or lake of Tiberias, Jewish tradition relative to the right of fishing in this water, Matt. iv. 18.

Gall of bitterness, import of this Hebraism, Acts viii. 23.

Gallio, some account of this Roman deputy or proconsul, Acts xviii. 12. A passage in the life of this man generally misunderstood, Acts xviii. 17.

Gamaliel, some account of this very celebrated doctor of the law among the Pharisees, Acts v. 31.

Gauler, among the Romans, responsible for his prisoner, under the same penalty to which the prisoner himself was exposed, Acts xvi. 27.

Garment, some account of the rough, of the ancient prophets, Heb. xi. 37.

Gê, its metaphorical acceptation among the Jews, Matt. vii. 14.

Gates of hell or of Hades, import of this figurative expression, Matt. xvi. 18.

Gaza, why so named, and where situated, Acts viii. 26.

Gê, a term by which the land of Judea is not unfrequently expressed, Luke ii. 1; Rev. ix. 7.

Gemarists, citation of very remarkable passages from the, in which open confession is made that the birth of the Messiah had taken place long before their times, Matt. ii. 5.

Gemoniæ Scabæ, a place at Rome where criminals were executed, Matt. xxvii. 33.

Genea, a general acceptation of this word in the evangelists, Matt. xi. 16, xii. 39, xxiii. 36, xxiv. 31; Mark xiii. 30.

Genealogyn, he whose stock and descent is entered on record, Heb. vii. 3.

Genealogical tables of the Jews, thoughts on their total destruction in the apostolic age, 1 Tim. i. 1.

Genealogy of our Lord, considerations on the best mode of recording and explaining the, as given by St. Matthew and St. Luke, chiefly extracted from the Prolegomena of the Rev. Dr. Barrett's fac-simile of a fragment of the Gospel of St. Matthew, from a manuscript in Trinity college, Dublin, Luke iii., in fine.

General council, authority of a, declared at the synods of Constance and Basil to be superior to that of the pope, Rev. xvii. 9.

Gennesaret, where this country was situated, Mark vii. 53. Why possibly so named, ibid.

Gennesaret, lake of, its length and breadth, according to Josephus, Luke v. 1.

Gentile world, reflection on the destruction of the, as described by St. Paul, Rom. i., in fine.

Gentiles, citation from Virgil to show that in their sacrifices they fed on the slain beasts, and ate and drank in honour of the gods, 1 Cor. x. 21. General observations on the calling of the Gentiles, Rom. xvi., in fine.

George III., tribute of praise to the character and conduct of this British king, Rom. xiii. i.

Gergasenes, Gergesenes, Gerarces, Gerarones, Gerpesians, or Gersidenians, who, Matt. viii. 28.

Germany, very singular constitution of the late empire of, Rev. xvii. 9.

Teppan, or Tippa, the gerron, a species of shield first used by the Persians, Eph. vi. 13.

Gethsemane, a garden at the foot of the Mount of Olives, Matt. xxvi. 36. Conjecture concerning the derivation of the name, ibid.

Ghost, to give up the, an act properly attributable to Jesus Christ alone, Matt. xxvi. 50.

Gifts of the Holy Ghost, Dr. Lightfoot's remarks on these being thrice summed up by the apostle in his First Epistle to the Corinthians, 1 Cor. xii., in fine.

Gifts from Jove not to be despised, a proverbial expression among the heathens, 1 Tim. iv. 1.

Girding up of loins, what meant by this phrase among the ancients, 1 Pet. i. 13.

Glencus, Glencoe, what, according to Hesychius and Suidas, Acts ii. 13.

Γλασκωνιον, import of this word, as given by Pollux, in his Onomasticon, John xii. 6. What did T. haudis mean by this word, when written in Chaldaic characters, ibid.

Gloria, round the heads of Chinese, Hindoo, and Christian saints, real or supposed, what intended to import, Acts ii. 3.

Glory, seven degrees of, according to the rabbins, 1 Cor. xv. 42.

Gnostic theology, some account of the, Preface to the Gospel of John; Preface to the First Epistle of John.

Goths, represented by Homer as being so well acquainted with their own flocks, as easily to distinguish them, though intermixed with others, John x. 14.

God, proofs a priori and a posteriori of the being of a, Heb. xi., in fine. Another proof of the being of an ancient Jew and heathen, that if any man saw God, or his representative angel, he must surely die, Luke v. 8.

God of this world, exceedingly likely that by this expression St. Paul means the devil, 2 Cor. iv. 4. Irénæus, Tertullian, Chrysostom, Theodoret, Photius, Theophylact, and Augustine entertained this opinion, ibid.

Gods, occasional appearing of, in the similitude of men, or animals, a notion entertained by the heathens, Acts xiv. 11, 15. Citations from Homer and Virgil to this effect, ibid.

Gods, carrying of the, to battle, summary among most nations, Acts vii. 43.

Gog, various conjectures concerning the person or people intended by this name, Rev. xx. 8.

Going to law, observations on this practice of some professing Christianity, Matt. v. 40; 1 Cor. vi., in fine.

Gold, observations on the curious properties of, 1 Pet. i., in fine. Saying of a Scottish poet respecting the baleful effects of the love of gold, 1 Tim. v., in fine.

Gold coin, of the Great Mogul Shah Jean very circumstantially described, 2 Tim. ii., in fine.

Golden Bull of Charles IV., emperor of Germany, citation of a very remarkable passage from the, Rev. xiii. 6.

Golden chain of Jupiter, beautiful fable of the, with its most excellent moral, John xii. 32.

Golden chain of justice among the ancients, what, John xii. 32. Description of one belonging to Jehungeer Namch, ibid.

Golgotha, the place of our Lord's crucifixion, why probably so named, Matt. xxvii. 32. The same with Calvary, ibid. Not unlikely that this was the place of public execution near Jerusalem similar to the Gemoniæ Scabæ at Rome, ibid.

Good news, when unexpected, its general effect upon the animal system, Matt. xxviii. 8.

Gospel, inquiry into the derivation and import of this word, Preface to Matthew. Dr. Whitty's enumeration of the particulars in which the superiority of the Gospel dispensation over the law consists, 2 Cor. iii., in fine.

Gospel of the Infancy, character of this apocryphal work, Matt. ii. 13.

Gospels, harmonized Tables of Contents of the, by Dr. Marsh, John xxi., in fine.

Gothic Version of the New Testament, some account of the, Introduction to the Gospels and Acts.

Grace, see Napier.

Grace before and after meal, see Blessing.

Grain of wheat, death of the, what implied by this phrase, John xii. 21. A most philosophical verity beautifully illustrative of the resurrection of the body, ibid.; 1 Cor. xv. 36.

Great fish that swallowed up Jonah, strange trifling of ancient and modern commentators relative to this subject, Matt. xii. 40.

Gravitation, remarks on this wonderful influence which is diffused throughout the material universe, Heb. xi., in fine. Two remarkable laws that necessarily result from this all-pervading and continued energy, and from which its existence has been demonstrated, ibid.

Grecian armies, customary with the, before engagement to offer prayers to the gods for their success, Eph. vi. 18.

Grecian games of antiquity, general observations on the, 1 Cor. ix., in fine.

Greece, why the Roman deputy in this country was named the proconsul of Achaia, Acts xviii. 12.

Greek article, H. S. Boyd's observations on a very remarkable rule to which it is universally subjected, Eph. vi., in fine. This rule illustrated by a vast variety of citations from the New Testament; and also from Chrysostom, Gregory Nazianzen, Basil, Lucian, Xenophon, Æschylus, Heliodorus, Metho-lius, Justin Martyr, Sophocles, Eusebius, Theodoret, Irenæus, Ignatius, and Cantacuzen, ibid. Remarks by the same Greek critic on another law to which this article is subjected, Heb. i., in fine. This rule illustrated by several examples, ibid.

Greeks, this appellative not unfrequently synonymous with Gentile, Acts xi., 20.

Gregory, (Joshiah) remarkable saying of this illiterate collier of Somersetshire, 1 Cor. xiii. 1.

Gregory VII., (surnamed Hildebrand), ambitious character of this pontiff, Rev. xiii. 15.

Guardian angels, opinions of the Jews and Romanists concerning, Act xii. 15.

Γυμνός, naked, often signifies the absence of the upper garment only, John xxi. 7. Some examples produced, ibid.

Hades, whence derived, and its import, Matt. xi. 23; Acts ii. 27.

Hades, beautiful personification of, 1 Cor. xv. 55.

Hadley's Hundred n Dialogues, citation from, in illustration of our Lord's parable of the unjust steward, Luke xvi. 7.

Hagiographa, what books of Holy Writ were known among the Jews by this name, Luke xxiv. 44.

Hail of God, import of this Hebraism, Luke vi. 12.

Hair of the ancient Grecian and Roman women often crisped and curled in the most variegated and complex manner, 1 Tim. ii. 9; 1 Pet. iii. 3.

Happy man, Virgil's definition of a, Matt. v. 3.

Happy on the road, a proverb of frequent occurrence in the Greek and Roman poets, Rev. xiv. 13. Two examples produced, ibid.

Harmosyni, a sort of magistrates among the Lacedæmonians, 2 Cor. xi. 2. The nature of their employment, ibid.

Hastati, who, among the Romans, Matt. viii. 9.

Hahm Tui Nam h, very instructive anecdote from the, 1 Thess. iv. 12.

Heads of married and single women, how distinguished in monuments of antiquity, 1 Pet. iii. 3.

Health, description of, by Maximus Tyrius, Heb. iv. 2.

Heathen, state of the, who have no opportunity of knowing how to escape from their corruption and misery, Rom. v., in fine.

Heathenism, brief sketch of the rapid decline of, in the Roman world, in the fourth century, Rev. xii. 9.

Heathen names, great impropriety of the use of, in Christian countries, Acts xxviii. 11.

Heathens, when about to perform some very sacred rites, were accustomed to command the irreligious to keep at a distance, 1 Tim. i. 9. Citations from Orpheus and Virgil in illustration of this circumstance, ibid.

Heavens, seven in number, according to the rabbins, 2 Cor. xii. 2. Their names, ibid. The number of heavens that can be legitimately deduced from the sacred records are only three, ibid. Their names, ibid.

Hebrew Scriptures, how divided by the ancient Jews, Matt. xvii. 9; Luke xxiv. 44.

Hebrews, Epistle to the, Dr. Lardner's inquiry to whom it was written; in what language, by whom, and the time and place of writing it, Introduction to the Epistle. Mr. Thomas Oliver's observations relative to the occasion and design of this epistle, ibid. This letter by far the most important and useful of all the apostolic writings, Preface to Hebrews. General plan and analysis of this epistle, ibid.

Hebron, where situated, Luke i. 39.

Hell, whence derived, and what it now imports, Matt. xi. 23. This place or state of torment as described by two of our greatest poets, Matt. viii. 12.

Hellenists, who, Acts vi. 1, xi. 20.

Hen, citation from the Anthologia, in which the strong affection of this animal for her brood is very beautifully described, Matt. xxiii. 37.

Henry IV., remarkable passage in the life of this emperor of Germany, Rev. xiii. 15.

Herald, copious disquisition concerning the office of, among the ancients, Matt. iii., in fine. Various conjectures respecting the derivation of the word, ibid. The herald acts an important part in all heroic history, ibid.

Herbert, advice of, respecting the spirit in which religious disputation should be always conducted, Rom. xv., in fine; James iii. 14.

Hercules, worshipped by the ancient Maltese, to whom they gave the epithet of Αρξινακος, Acts xxviii. 6.

Heresy, ancient and modern acceptations of this word, Acts v. 17, xxiv. 5, 14.

Hermes, his very reverential epithets of the Supreme Governor of heaven and earth, 2 Cor. xii. 4.

Herod Agrippa, very tragical end of, as related by St. Luke and Josephus, Acts xii. 21.

Herodians, account of this Jewish sect, Matt. xvi. 1.

Herodotus, citation of a very remarkable passage of this author respecting demonism, Luke ix. 39.

Herods, list of the family of the, with their genealogy, Matt. ii. 1.

Hierleria, a branch of olive, rolled round with wool, which suppliants were accustomed to deposit in some place, or to carry in their hands, Heb. v. 7.

Ηιππο πικρα, ἵππα πικρα, some account of this modern quack medicine, Eph. iv. 31.

Hierapolis, a town of Phrygia, famous for its hot baths, now called Bombukholci, Col. ii. 1.

Hillel of the Jews, what, Matt. xxvi. 30.

Hindoo, great hospitality of, to travellers, Matt. x. 42. Citation of a beautiful passage from their ancient scriptures, John i. 9.

Hinnom, valley of the son of, the rites of Moloch said to have been performed here, Matt. v. 22.

History, derivation and original import of this word, Gal. i. 18.

Holiness unto the Lord, observations on this inscription, upon the high priest's forehead, 2 Tim. ii. 19.

Holy Ghost, sin against the, Matt. xii. 31, 30; Acts v. 3.

Holy Roman empire, why the late Germanic empire was so named, according to Leibnitz, Rev. xiii. 1.

Holy sepulchre at Jerusalem, account of the destruction of the, in 1808, John xix., in fine.

Homage, eastern modes of, Matt. ii. 2.

Hope, comparison of, to an anchor, frequent in ancient heathen writers, Heb. vi. 19.

Horace, epistle of, to Tiberius, in behalf of Septimius,

- exhibiting a fine model of recommending a friend to the attention of a great man, Philem. 17. Successful issue of this letter of Horace, Philem., in fine.
- Horn*, Bruce's description of that worn by the Abyssinian chiefs, Luke i. 69. Horn filled with various fruits, the emblem of abundance among the ancients, ibid.
- Horns*, why the heathen god Apollo was represented with, Luke i. 69. Horns frequently blown by the derveshes when any thing is given to them, in honour of the donor, Matt. vi. 2.
- Hosanna*, and Hosanna Rabba, import of these terms, Matt. xxi. 9; John vii. 2.
- Hospitality*, observations on the duty of, Heb. xiii., in fine.
- Hot iron*, conscience scored with a, to what custom the apostle alluded when he used this expression, 1 Tim. iv. 2. A saying of Claudian very similar to this of St. Paul, ibid.
- Hours*, Jewish day divided into, John i. 39. The ancients divided the time from sunrise to sunset into twelve equal parts or hours, which were longer or shorter according to the different seasons of the year, John i. 39, xi. 9.
- Houses in the East*, how generally constructed, Mark ii. 4.
- Human prudence*, in what it generally consists, 1 Cor. iv., in fine.
- Human victims* offered, on extraordinary occasions, by almost all nations to their gods, Rom. ix., in fine; 1 Cor. iv. 13. Account of the human victims which Themistocles was obliged to offer up to Bacchus, Rom. ix., in fine.
- Humiliation of Jesus Christ*, thoughts concerning this great and unfathomable subject, Phil., in fine.
- Hunger and thirst*, what metaphorically represented by, Matt. v. 6.
- Hust and*, its derivation and original import, Matt. xix. 9.
- Hydrogen*, a constituent part of water, 2 Pet. iii. 10.
- Hyle, ὕλη*, what the ancients intended by this term, 2 Pet. iii. 5.
- Hyperbole*, definition of the, John xxi. 25. This figure of speech abounds in oriental writings, ibid. Several examples produced, ibid.; Rev. xiv. 20.
- Hypocrite*, description of the, in the Scripture sense of the term, Matt. vi. 5.
- Iconium*, where situated, according to Strabo, Acts xiii. 51, xiv. 6. Its present appellation, Acts xiii. 51. Why not called by St. Luke a city of Lycaonia, Acts xiv. 6.
- Idleness*, its ruinous tendency, Matt. xiii. 55; Rom. xii. 11.
- Ignorance*, plea of, will be of no avail to any who has the book of God within his reach, and lives in a country blessed with the preaching of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, Luke xii., in fine.
- ἱκετήρια*, and ἱκετης, definition of these words by Snidas, with an account of the ancient custom to which they have an allusion, Heb. v. 7.
- Ἰλαριο or Ἰλαριοι*, inquiry into the import of this term, Luke xviii. 13.
- Ilud inexprimibile*, an epithet given by Cicero to the Supreme Being of heaven and earth, 2 Cor. xii. 4.
- Illyricum, Illyria, Illyrica, Illyris, or Illyrium*, Pliny's account of the extent of the country known by these names, Rom. xv. 19.
- Image worship*, consideration of a passage of Scripture which the Romanists allege in favour of, Heb. xi. 21.
- Image of Adam* in his heavenly or paradisaical state, rabbinical notions concerning the, 1 Cor. xv. 49.
- Image of God*, what is meant by man being made in this similitude, Heb. ii. 7.
- Images* said to have fallen from Jupiter, Acts xix. 35.
- Images of the gods*, account of several ancient Egyptian images of Isis, Osiris, Anubis, &c., in the author's possession, Rev. xix. 16.
- Ignorance*, import of this word, Matt. v. 40; Luke vi. 29. In what it differed from the ἡττων, ibid.
- Imma*, mother, slaves were not permitted to use this term, when addressing their mistresses, Rom. viii. 15.
- Immanuel*, a name given to the Messiah, Matt. i. 23. Its derivation and import, ibid. Could not be applied to Jesus Christ, unless he were truly and properly God, ibid.
- Immersion*, baptism, in the apostolic age, not always administered by, Acts xvi. 32.
- Imposition of hands*, inquiry into the nature of this rite in the primitive Christian Church, Acts vi. 6, xiv. 23.
- Imputed righteousness of Christ*, doctrine of the, considered, Rom. iv., in fine.
- Inebriating liquors*, three species of, according to the Institutes of Menu, Luke i. 15.
- Infallibility of the Romish Church*, observations on this papistical doctrine, 2 Pet. iii. 16.
- Infant baptism*, Dr. Lightfoot's observations concerning, Mark xvi., in fine.
- Infants*, state of, who die before they are capable of hearing the Gospel, considered, Rom. v., in fine.
- Influence of the Spirit of God*, necessity of the, in both preachers and hearers, John v. 1; Acts xi. 21, xiii. 1; Rom. viii. 26; 1 Cor. xii. 3; Phil. iii., in fine.
- Inheritance*, an immemorial custom in the East for sons to demand and receive their portion of the, during their father's lifetime, Luke xv. 12. Gentoo law in case of the irreproachable character of the father, and the profligacy of his son, ibid.
- Inner man*, import of this phrase, 1 Pet. iii. 4.
- Innocence*, primitive age of, succeeded by the age of depravity, as described by Spencer, Heb. i. 11.
- Innocents, murder of the*, modern objection against the evangelical history respecting the, (founded on the statement of St. Luke that our Lord's thirtieth year coincided with the fifteenth of the reign of Tiberius,) demonstrated to be wholly destitute of foundation, Advertisement to the Chronological Tables placed at the end of the Acts.
- Inns*, striking contrast between those of ancient and modern times, Luke ii. 7.
- Inscriptions* on a gold circular coin of the Great Mogul Shah Jehan, struck at Delhi, A. D. 1651, 2 Tim. ii., in fine.
- Inscriptions, eastern*, frequently found on the images of the ancient deities, princes, victors at public games, &c., Rev. xix. 16. Several instances produced from Herodotus, Demetrius, Montfaucon, and Gruter, ibid. Description of eight ancient images with inscriptions in the author's possession, ibid.
- Insolvent debtors*, thoughts on the manner of their treatment in this country, Matt. xviii., in fine.
- Inspiration*, see Divine Inspiration.
- Instruct*, Chrysostom's excellent remark on the prerogative of an, Acts i. 8.
- Intercession of Christ*, doctrine of the, Luke xxiii. 42; Heb. v. 7.
- Ireland*, inhabitants of, reason for the supposition that these people received the Christian religion, not from the popes of Rome, but through the means of Asiatic missionaries, Matt. i. 18.
- Iron*, ready method of gilding this metal, 1 Pet. i., in fine.
- Israh*, rabbinical tradition concerning the manner of his death, Heb. xi. 37.
- Isariot*, Lightfoot's conjecture why this surname was given to one of the twelve apostles, Matt. x. 4. Observations on the death and final state of Judas Isariot Acts i., in fine.
- Isis*, description of five images of this Egyptian idol in the author's possession, Rev. xix. 16.
- ἱσοψηφία* of the ancients, what, Rev. xiii. 18.
- ἱσως*, critical observations on Greek words terminating in, Acts vi. 1.
- Isthmian games*, account of the, 1 Cor. ix. 21. Celebrated every fifth year, ibid. The crown won by the victor in these games made of the pine, 1 Cor. ix. 25.
- Italia*, or Antichieronymian versions, some account of the, Introduction to the Gospels and Acts, p. 19.
- Italian band*, or cohort, see Cohort.
- Iurca*, where situated, Luke iii. 1.
- Jacinth*, account of this precious stone, Rev. xxi. 20.
- Jacob's Well*, Maundrell's account of, John iv. 6.
- Jailer*, see Gaoler.
- James*, the writer of one of the Books of the New Testa- ment Scriptures, very uncertain who, Preface to James. Opinion of Drs. Lardner and Macknight, ibid.; and see James v., in fine. Martin Luther's singular saying relative to the Epistle of James, chap. ii. 14. How James the apostle is represented in ancient paintings, Mark vi. 8.

- Jasper*, some account of this precious stone, Rev. xxi. 18.
- Jehangeor Namsh*, curious account of the golden chain of justice belonging to this eastern monarch, John xii. 32.
- Jehovah*, observations upon this appellative of the Divine Being, Luke ii. 11. Great reverence of the Jews for this name, which they never venture to pronounce; Adonai being always substituted whenever they meet with it in their reading of the Law and the Prophets, 2 Cor. xii. 4; Rev. xix. 12.
- Jeopardy*, a word of French origin, derived from the explanation of a disappointed gamester, Luke viii. 23.
- Jerusalem*, the inhabitants of this city did not let out their houses to those who came to the annual feasts, but afforded all accommodations of this kind gratis, Matt. xxvi. 17; Acts ii. 41.
- Jesus*, of the same import as Joshua, Matt. i. 21; Heb. iv. 8. Dr. Lightfoot's judicious remark why this name was given to the Messiah, ibid. Professor Schulten's excellent observations respecting the origin of this name, John i. 17.
- Jesus*, very remarkable cry of a Jew of this name against Jerusalem and the temple, Matt. xxiv. 7. Manner of his death, ibid.
- Jewish benches of judicature*, account of the, 1 Cor. vi. 4.
- Jewish colonics*, remarkable passage from Philo respecting the great number of, in heathen countries in his time, Acts ii. 11.
- Jewish commonwealth*, collection of passages in the Old Testament that seem to point out a restoration of the, to a higher degree of excellence than it has yet attained, Rom. xi. 27.
- Jewish priesthood*, great corruption of the, in the apostolic age, Rom. ii. 21.
- Jewish registers*, thoughts on the total destruction of these documents in the first and second centuries of the Christian era, Matt. xxii. 42.
- Jewish women*, names of the, sometimes taken from flowers and trees, Acts xii. 13. Instances produced, ibid.
- Jews*, when and how the Jews lost their power of life and death, according to Lightfoot, John xviii., in fine. Enumeration by Josephus of the Jews who perished in their final conflict with the Romans, Matt. xxiv. 31.
- Jochanan ben Zochai*, very affecting and instructive remarks of this rabbin, as reported in the Talmud, Matt. xxv. 6.
- John*, this name of Hebrew origin, Mark i. 4. Conjecture why given to the harbinger of the Messiah, ibid.; Luke i. 60.
- John*, the son of Zebedee, some account of this evangelist and apostle, Preface to John. Various opinions respecting the motive which influenced this apostle to write his Gospel, ibid.
- John, First Epistle of*, inquiry of Michaelis to whom it was written, Preface to the Epistle. Dr. Macknight's observations on the authenticity of this epistle, ibid. Whether the term Epistle be properly applicable to this work of St. John, ibid.
- John, Second and Third Epistles of*, inquiry into their authenticity, Preface to the Second Epistle. Very uncertain when written, ibid.
- Josephus*, substance of his history relative to the destruction of the Jewish polity by the Romans, Matt. xxiv.
- Judah Hakkudesh*, very remarkable saying of this rabbi concerning the death and resurrection of the Messiah, Matt. xxviii. 17.
- Judas of Galilee*, mentioned by St. Luke, uncertain who, Acts v. 37.
- Judas Iscariot*, remarks on the manner of his death, Matt. xxvii. 5. Dr. Lightfoot's singular opinion on this subject, ibid. See Iscariot.
- Jude*, canonical authority of the Epistle ascribed to, extremely dubious, in the opinion of Michaelis. Preface to Jude. Great uncertainty as to the persons to whom, and the time when, it was written, ibid.
- Judgment day*, Scripture doctrine concerning the, Matt. xxv. 31; John iii. 19; Acts xvii. 31; Rom. ii. 11; 1 Cor. vi. 2; 1 Thess. v., in fine; 2 Pet. iii. 10.
- Julian Period*, account of this very celebrated factitious era, Preface to Matthew.
- Juliopolis*, why the city of Tarsus was so named, Acts xxii. 28.
- Julius Caesar*, three hundred senators and knights said to have been sacrificed to the divinity of this emperor on the ides of March, Rom. ix., in fine.
- Jupiter*, whence the name of this divinity is said to have been derived, Acts xiv. 13. Sublime address to Jupiter extracted from the Antigone of Sophocles, 1 Tim. vi. 16.
- Jupiter Custos*, or Jupiter Propuleius, description of a fine engraving of this heathen deity in Gruter, Acts xiv. 13.
- Just persons*, a phrase sometimes used in contradistinction from lawbreakers and heathens, Luke xv. 7.
- Justification by faith*, without any merit of works, shown to be a doctrine of Scripture, Rom. iv., in fine; Eph. ii. 8; 2 Tim. i. 9; James ii.
- Justin Martyr*, the author of two very important Apologies for Christianity, almost the whole of which has come down to us entire, 2 Tim. iv., in fine.
- Juvenal*, beautiful passage of, against false witness, Matt. x. 39. Citation in which there is an allusion to Nero's horrible persecution of the Christians, 2 Tim. iv. 16.
- Kalon agan*, a phrase used among the Greeks to express a contest of the most honourable kind, 2 Tim. iv. 8. This illustrated by a citation from the Alcestis of Euripides, ibid.
- Kat'aleuontes*, the import of this term illustrated by citations from Herodian and Aristophanes, 2 Cor. ii. 17.
- Karules*, among the ancient Jews, who, Matt. xxvi., in fine; 1 Cor. viii. 1.
- Kardioungstos Theos*, an epithet of the Divine Being, Acts i. 24, xv. 8.
- Karōs*, definition of this word by Hesychius, Matt. vii. 3.
- Katapavstis* and Σαβατισμος, indifferently rendered rest in our version, not absolutely synonymous, Heb. iv. 9.
- Katakion*, KATAKION, an Ephesian amulet, Acts xix. 19. Its import, according to Hesychius, ibid.
- Katastoletē*, probably the same with the pollium, or mantle, worn by the ancient Roman and Grecian ladies, 1 Tim. ii. 9.
- Kat'egor*, accuser, an appellative of Satan found in rabbinical writings in Hebrew characters, Rev. xii. 10.
- Katecho*, definition of this word by Hesychius, Rom. i. 18.
- Katairpein*, sometimes imports to prune, John xv. 2.
- Kalistanen*, import of this word, when the preposition apo is prefixed, Acts iii. 21.
- Kat' hyper balanē*, Chrysostom's explanation of this very strong expression of St. Paul, 2 Cor. iv. 17.
- Kenchrea*, see Cenchrea.
- Kenos kurpos*, how this phrase is used by Lucian, Mark iv. 28.
- Kepler*, account of a wonderful law regulating the motions of the planets, first discovered by this philosopher, and afterwards demonstrated by Sir Isaac Newton, Heb. xi., in fine.
- Keratia*, rendered husks, in the opinion of Bochart means the fruit of the ceratonia, or charub tree, Luke xv. 16.
- Keus*, the four, which, according to the rabbins, God never trusts to angel or seraph, Rev. i. 18.
- Keus of the kingdom of heaven*, meaning of this phrase, Matt. xvi. 19.
- Kicking against the goad*, a proverbial expression among the ancients, Acts ix. 5. Several examples produced, ibid.
- Kimchi*, (Rabbi David) quotation from this writer very similar to our Lord's parable of the ten virgins, Matt. xxv. 1. One of his parables very like that of the unjust steward, Luke xvi. 1.
- King*, remarkable saying of a, to his particular friend Matt. vi. 33.

- King's Gallery, Στρατοδουλία, account of this part of the temple by Josephus, Matt. iv. 5.
- Kingdom of heaven, two acceptations of this term in Scripture, according to Lightfoot, Luke xvii. 20.
- Kiss anciently used as the emblem of love, religious reverence, subjection, and supplication, Luke vii. 38. Used by the primitive Christians in their public assemblies as well as in their occasional meetings, Rom. xvi. 16. Afterwards discontinued, and shaking of hands substituted, ibid.; 1 Cor. xvi. 20.
- Kissing the feet, a heathen expression for subjection of spirit and earnest supplication, Luke vii. 38. This illustrated by a remarkable passage from Polybius, ibid.
- Κλέπτης, in what it differs from ληστής, John x. 8.
- Knavebull's remarks upon the statement of St. Paul that God gave the Hebrews judges for the space of four hundred and fifty years, Acts xiii. 20.
- Κνημίδες, greaves, account of this ancient species of defensive armour, Eph. vi. 13.
- Knees consecrated by the ancients to Mercy, Matt. xvii. 11.
- Knowledge, four things easily distinguishable in, James i. 5.
- Kodrantēs, Κοδραντής, the smallest coin among the Romans, Matt. v. 26.
- Κόλπος, this word shown to have sometimes the signification of lap, and why, Luke vi. 38. This sense of the word illustrated by a remarkable passage from Herodotus, ibid.
- Κομὴ πόρνης, what meant by this word, Mark i. 38.
- Konos or Chonos, a city possessing the site of the ancient Colosse, Preface to Colossians; and see Col. i. 2.
- Korban, import of this word, Matt. xv. 5.
- Κορινθία κορνή, why this phrase was used by the Greeks for a common prostitute, Preface to the First Epistle to the Corinthians.
- Κορινθίων ἑσθλαί, to Corinthians, how it came to be synonymous with to act the prostitute, Preface to the First Epistle to the Corinthians.
- Κορινθία, a military weapon used by the ancient Greeks and Persians, Eph. vi. 13.
- Κοσμος, a frequent acceptation of this word, 1 Cor. iii. 22, vi. 2. Pliny's definition, Heb. ix. 1. In what it differs from cosmos, according to Lightfoot, Luke xii. 30. Distinction between κοσμος and οικουμένη, Heb. i. 6.
- Κρητίειν, imports to lie, and why, Tit. i. 12.
- Κρινω, rendered in our Version to judge, sometimes imports to punish, and why, Acts vii. 7.
- Κύβητος, meaning of this word according to Wetstein, Kypke, and Wakefield, Matt. xv. 30.
- Kyrie, often improperly translated Lord, Matt. xxvii. 63.
- Κυριος, derivation of this word, according to Hesychius, Luke ii. 11. This lexicographer states it to be a proper rendering of יהוה, Jehovah, ibid.
- Lal-koner, her great influence with the Mogul emperor, Maaz-eddin, Mark vi. 23.
- Labarum, what, Rev. xii. 10.
- La-edamian women, usual sayings of the, when they presented the shields to their sons going to battle, Heb. x. 35.
- Lactantius, enigma attributed to, Matt. xxiii. 33.
- Lais, some account of this celebrated Corinthian prostitute, Preface to the First Epistle to the Corinthians.
- Λασιονον, the Lasion, a species of shield, covered with rough hides or skins with the hair on, Eph. vi. 13.
- Lamentations, days of, among the Jews, John xi. 31.
- Lamps of Israel, a term given by the Jews to their eminent doctors, John v. 35.
- Lamps of the East, some account of the, Matt. xxv. 7.
- Laodicea, a city of Asia Minor on the borders of Caria, Phrygia, and Lydia, Col. ii. 1; Rev. i. 11. Originally named Diospolis, ibid. Afterwards called Rhoeas, Col. ii. 1. How it obtained the appellation of Laodicea, ibid. Its present name, ibid.
- Laodiceans, apocryphal epistle to the, given at full length, (from the best Latin copies,) with an English translation, Col. iv., in fine. Character of this spurious production, ibid.
- Latin Church, ἡ Λατινικὴ ἐκκλησία a name given by the Greeks of the Lower Empire to that of Rome, and why, Rev. xiii. 1.
- Latins, supreme forms of government of these ancient people, Rev. xvii. 10.
- Λατρία and Λογία explained, see Rom. xii. 1.
- Law, remarkable saying of Rabbi Chanina, why the words of the, are likened to water, Matt. v. 3.
- Leazarus, import of this name, Luke xvi. 20.
- Learning, remarks on that species of, which may be a useful handmaid to religion, in the ministry of the Gospel, 1 Tim. vi., in fine.
- Lecheum, situation of this seaport, Rom. xvi. 1.
- Left hand, its metaphorical acceptation among the rabbins, Matt. xxv. 33.
- Legion, a grand division of a Roman army, Matt. xxvi. 53. Contained different numbers at different times, ibid. The legionary soldiers were not permitted to engage in husbandry, in merchandise, or any thing inconsistent with their employment, 2 Tim. ii. 1.
- Leul, why this annual fast is so named, Matt. ix. 15.
- Levitas of Alexandria, account of the connumerated disciples of this Greek poet, Rev. xiii. 18. Three examples produced, ibid.
- Levra, description of this terrible disorder, Matt. viii. 2. Dr. Mead's relation of a remarkable case, which came under his own observation, Matt. viii. 2. Herodotus mentions this disorder as existing among the Persians, who considered it as a punishment from their great god, the sun, ibid. This malady a most expressive emblem of the pollution of the soul of man by sin, ibid.
- Levra, the same with the prutah, which see.
- Λεπτος. See Κλεπτης.
- Let, derivation and import of this old English word, Rom. i. 13.
- Letters of the alphabet used by the ancients for numbers, Rev. xiii. 18.
- Levants, Dr. Shaw's account of these tempestuous winds, Act. xxvii. 14. Customary among the Mohammedans, during these levants, to tie to the mast, or to a sign staff, some apposite passage from the Koran; then to collect money to sacrifice a sheep, and throw them both into the sea, ibid.
- Libertines, Bishop Pearce's observations concerning that portion of the Jewish people formerly so named, Acts vi. 9.
- Lido's, who, among the ancient Romans, Act. xvi. 35.
- Light, its immense diffusion and extreme velocity, 1 John i. 5.
- Light of the world, a title anciently given to the most eminent rabbins, Matt. v. 14.
- Lightfoot, (Dr. John) his very ingenious solution of the difficulty existing in the Gospel of St. Matthew respecting the writer of the prophecy concerning the thirty pieces of silver for which our Lord was betrayed, Matt. xxvii. 9.
- Liturgy, derivation and import of this term, Act. xiii. 2.
- Living stones, the import of this apostolic metaphor largely considered, 1 Pet. ii. 5.
- Living waters, what meant by this phrase among the ancients, John iv. 10; Rev. vii. 17.
- Lix, Alē, an Ephesian character or amulet, Acts xix. 19. Its import, according to Hesychius, ibid.
- Loan, in what respects better than a gift, Matt. v. 42.
- Logos, or Word, remarks upon this appellative of the Divine Being who was incarnated for the redemption of man, John i. 1. Testimonies concerning the Logos from the Chaldee Targums, John i., in fine. Testimonies concerning the personality, attributes, and influence of the Word of God, taken from the Zend Avesta and other writings attributed to Zoroaster, ibid. Testimonies concerning the Logos from Philo the Jew, ibid. List of some of the particular terms and doctrines found in Philo, with parallel passages from the New Testament, ibid. Chinese testimonies concerning the Logos, ibid. St. John the only New Testament writer who has used this word in a personal sense, Heb. iv. 12.
- Λογος, how figuratively used by the ancients, Acts xxiv. 5.
- Lo's Prayer, form of, collected by our Lord from the Jewish Eucharist, according to Gregory, who gives us the whole form, Matt. vi. 13.
- Lord's Supper, see Eucharist.
- Love, inquiry into the import of this term, Matt. xxii. 37. A word of Anglo-Saxon, or perhaps of Teutonic origin.

- gin, 1 Cor. xiii. 1. Apostolic definition of the Greek word so translated, in which are sixteen particulars, 1 Cor. xiii. 4-8.
- Love-feasts* of the primitive Christians, see Αγάπαι.
- Love of enemies*, Christian precept concerning, Matt. v. 43; John xiii. 31; Rom. v. 6, 10.
- Love of God*, Matt. xxii. 36-40; Luke vii. 47; John iii. 16, xv. 12, 13; Eph. iii. 18; Tit. iii. 4; 1 John iv. 8, v. 18.
- Love of neighbour*, Scripture precept concerning, Matt. xxii. 39; Col. iii. 14.
- Luke*, some account of this evangelist, Preface to Luke. Five classes or sections into which some critics have divided his history, ibid. Facts and circumstances related at large by Luke, which are either not mentioned at all, or but very transiently, by the other evangelists, Luke xxiv., in fine. From what epoch Luke computed the years of the reign of Tiberius Cæsar, Advertisement to the Chronological Tables at the end of Acts.
- Lunacy*, observations on the cause of this disorder, Matt. iv. 24.
- Λύπη*, definition of, by Suidas, Rom. ii. 24.
- Λύτρον*, its import, Matt. xx. 28; Luke i. 68; 1 Tim. ii. 6.
- Lycaonia*, account of, by Strabo, Acts xiii. 51. Jablon-ski's remarks upon the language probably spoken in this district in the time of St. Luke, Acts xiv. 11. How Lycaonia is said to have obtained its name, Acts xiv. 15.
- Lydda*, situation of this town, Acts ix. 32.
- Lustra*, a city of Lycaonia, Acts xiv. 6. Reputed to have been under the guardianship of Jupiter Propuleius, or Jupiter Custos, ibid.
- Μαχαίρα*, a species of sword frequently used by the ancient gladiators, or in single combat, Eph. vi. 13.
- Macrobius*, citation of a remarkable passage from this Roman writer relative to the slaughter of the innocents by Herod, Matt. ii. 16.
- Magdala*, the name of a city and country, where situated, according to Whitby, Matt. xv. 39.
- Magdalene hospitals*, great impropriety of this appellation for the receptacles of penitent prostitutes, Luke viii. 2.
- Magi*, some account of the, Matt. ii. 1. Whence the name is derived, ibid.
- Mugicians* among the Jews, why named בעל־שם baaleyskim "masters of the name," Acts xix. 14.
- Magnificent*, observations on this very sublime specimen of Greek poetry, Luke i. 46, &c.
- Mahesh*, among the Hindus, the Deity in his destroying quality, Luke i. 68; John i. 14.
- Μακάρ*, and Μακαρίος, derivation and import of these words, Matt. v. 3. Μακάρ and θνητός used antithetically by Homer, ibid.
- Malta*, see Melita.
- Mammon*, inquiry into the derivation and import of this word, Matt. vi. 24. An idol of this name mentioned in Kircher's Œdipus Egyptiacus, ibid.
- Man*, beautiful passage in a heathen poet relative to the formation of, 1 Pet. iii. 4.
- Man of sin*, Bishop Newton's and Dr. Macknight's observations on St. Paul's prophecy concerning the, 2 Thess. ii., in fine.
- Mancipium*, why a prisoner was so named by the Romans, 2 Pet. ii. 19.
- Mania*, children sacrificed to this divinity by the Romans in the first ages of their republic, Rom. ix., in fine.
- Manipulus*, a subdivision of the Roman infantry, Matt. viii. 9.
- Mankind*, curious rabbinical division of, with respect to their moral character, Rom. v. 7; Heb. xii. 23.
- Manumission of slaves*, three modes in which this was performed by the ancient Romans, 1 Cor. vii., in fine. Various accounts on which these manumissions were granted among our Saxon ancestors, ibid. Particular description of the manumission of a slave among the Gentiles, with an explanation of the mystical ceremonies, ibid. See Certificate, form of the.
- Manuscripts of the Greek Testament*, classification of the, by Griesbach and Michaelis, Introduction to the Gospels and Acts, p. 15. Account of the manuscripts of the Gospels and Acts referred to by the letters ABCD, &c., ibid., xiii., &c.
- Μαρανάθα*, import of this Syriac phrase, 1 Cor. xvi. 22, Jude 15.
- Marcus Minucius Felix*, Dr. Lardner's character of his Apology for the Christian religion, 2 Tim. iv., in fine.
- Mark*, some account of this evangelist, Preface to Mark. Thought by many of the primitive fathers to have been merely the amanuensis of St. Peter, ibid. Other opinions, ibid. The original language of Mark's Gospel most certainly the Greek, though some have contended for the Latin, ibid. List of circumstances omitted by Mark in the beginning of his Gospel, which are mentioned by Matthew and Luke, ibid.
- Marriage*, Dr. Macknight's observations on the mystery of marriage, Eph. v., in fine. General observations on marriage, 1 Cor. vii., in fine. Citations from Menander and Metellus Numidicus concerning the general expediency of marriage, 1 Cor. vii. 1. Laws of Lycurgus relative to marriage, ibid. Singular opinion of the ancient Jews respecting those who would not enter into this state, ibid., and ver. 6.
- Marriage-feasts*, duration of, among the Jews, Matt. ix. 15; John ii. 1. Times of extraordinary festivity, and even of riot, among several people of the East, Matt. ix. 15. Formerly customary for the ruler of the feast to procure suitable raiment for accidental guests on such occasions, Matt. xxii. 11.
- Mary I.*, queen of England, number of bishops, clergymen, lay-gentlemen, tradesmen, husbandmen, women, and children, burnt to death in this reign on account of their religious principles, James iii. 16.
- Mary Magdalene*, conjecture why so named, Matt. xxvii. 56. The common opinion concerning this woman most probably erroneous, Luke viii. 2.
- Mass, sacrifice of the*, Dr. Macknight's judicious observations on the antichristian character of this Romish ceremony, Heb. x. 18.
- Materiality of the human soul*, a doctrine which has no place in the sacred records, Luke xxiv. 3.
- Matthew the Evangelist*, some account of, Preface to Matthew. The original language of his Gospel most probably the Hebrew, ibid. Critical remarks on the list given by this evangelist of our Lord's rectilinear ancestors, Matt. i. 8-12. General observations on the Gospel of Matthew, chap. xxviii., in fine.
- Mecon*, מֶכֶן, the sixth heaven, according to the rabbins, 2 Cor. xii. 2.
- Media*, where formerly situated, Acts ii. 9.
- Mediator and Surety*, distinction between, Heb. vii., in fine.
- Meek*, derivation and import of this word, Matt. v. 5.
- Melchisedek*, king of Salem, derivation and import of his name, Heb. vii. 1. This Canaanitish prince an illustrious type of Christ, ibid. Heb. v. 10, 11, vii. 1, &c.
- Melita*, or Malta, a celebrated island in the Mediterranean, between Sicily and Africa, Acts xxviii. 1. Conjectures why so named, ibid. Sketch of its revolutions from its first mention in history to the present period, ibid. The modern language of the Maltese bears a strong resemblance to the ancient Punic, ibid.
- Melita*, an island in the Adriatic Gulf, or Gulf of Venice, near Epidaurus, Acts xxviii. 1. Several reasons to show that St. Paul was not wrecked at this island, but at another of the same name, now called Malta, ibid.
- Members*, cutting off, from the Christian Church, manner and spirit in which this should be done, 2 Cor. ii., in fine; 1 Tim. v. 2.
- Mendicant friars*, amazing influence of the, during the three centuries that immediately preceded the Reformation, Rev. xiii. 12.
- Menenius Agrippa*, famous apologete of, as related by Livy, and the effect it had upon the Roman people, 1 Cor. xii. 21.
- Mens*, fine saying of this heathen lawgiver respecting the only means by which man can arrive at beatitude, John xiii. 17. Another on the true knowledge of one supreme God, John xvii. 3.
- Men*, מֶנ, the fifth heaven, according to the rabbins, 2 Cor. xii. 2.
- Mercury*, a heathen deity to whom the gift of great eloquence was attributed, Acts xiv. 12.

- Mercy*, different acceptations of this word, Matt. v. 7. Elegant and nervous saying of one of our best poets on the subject of mercy, ibid.
- Μερίμνα*, its import, Matt. vi. 25, xiii. 22.
- Merit of works*, doctrine of the, in the Romish Church reprobated, Matt. vi. 20.
- Meroe*, why so named, according to Diodorus Siculus, Acts viii. 27.
- Μεταρρ, mediator*, what signified by this term, 1 Tim. ii. 5. Synonymous with εἰρηνηποιος, peacemaker, according to Suidas, ibid. In what it differs from εἰρως, Heb. vii., in fine.
- Mesopotamia*, its modern appellation, Acts ii. 9.
- Messiah*, citation of very remarkable passages from the Talmudists and Gemarists relative to the birth of the Messiah, Matt. ii. 5. Curious rabbinical saying respecting the cessation of all sacrifices in the days of the Messiah except the sacrifice of praise, IIeb. xiii. 15. Strange rabbinical story about the as. on which the Messiah was to ride, Matt. xxi. 8. Childish notion of the rabbins relative to two Messiahs, Messiah ben David, who should reign, conquer, and triumph; and Messiah ben Ephraim, who should suffer and be put to death, Acts xxvi. 23. Remarkable saying of Judah Hakkoresh relative to the resurrection of the Messiah, Matt. xxviii. 7.
- Metempsychosis*, or transmigration of souls, a doctrine credited by the Pharisees, Matt. xvi. 1, 13; John ix. 2. The Hindoos still hold this doctrine, and profess to tell the sin which a person committed in another body by the nature of his present afflictions, John ix. 2.
- Μετρωω* and Μετροω, what these words import, John ii. 8.
- Μετρητες*, an ancient measure of capacity, John ii. 6.
- Μετρωω*, as used by St. Paul, an agonistical expression, 2 Cor. x. 13.
- Michael*, apparent import of this name, Jude 9. The rabbinical writings abound in allusions to this personage, ibid. Considered the advocate of Israel, in contradistinction to Sammael, who was reputed their enemy, ibid.
- Midrash Shochar*, curious story in, where Korah is represented as showing the oppressive nature of the law, and avarice of its priests, in justification of his rebellion, Acts xv. 10.
- Mile*, among the Jews, of what length, John xi. 18.
- Miletus*, a city of Caria, famous for being the birthplace of Thales and Anaximander, Acts xx. 15. Its modern appellation, ibid.
- Militia*, manner of raising the, among the Romans, Matt. xx. 18, xxii. 14.
- Milk*, metaphorically used by sacred and profane writers to express the first principles of religion and science, Heb. v. 12.
- Millenary of the world*, reflections upon our Saviour's being born at the termination of the fourth, Tit. ii. 11.
- Millennium*, thought concerning the duration of the, Matt. xix. 28; Rev. xx. 4.
- Mina*, what, Luke xix. 13.
- Minister*, anecdote of a, Matt. xxi. 13.
- Ministry*, Divine call to the, and directions for the proper discharge of the ministerial office, Matt. iv. 18, vii. 28, viii. 21, ix. 9, 18, x. 1, 5, 8, 10, xi. 7, 8, xiii. 1, 52, xv. 21, xvii. 20, xix. 20, xxiv. 45; Mark iii. 15, iv. 29, 33; Luke iii. 23, v. 16, xxii. 2; John x. 1, 2, 10, xv. 17; Acts iv., in fine; xiii. 47; Rom. xi. 13; 1 Cor. iv., in fine; 2 Cor. x., in fine; Tit. i., in fine; 1 Pet. v. 3.
- Mirrors* of brass, steel, tin, copper, and silver, in use among the ancients, 1 Cor. xiii. 12.
- Misaw*, an important meaning of this word generally overlooked, Luke xiv. 26.
- Missionary*, very remarkable providence in behalf of a, Luke iv. 30.
- Mite*, a word derived from the French, Mark xiii. 41; Luke xxi. 2. Its import, ibid.
- Mithras*, human victims offered by the ancient Sabian idolaters in Persia to this idol, Rom. ix., in fine.
- Mitylene*, where situated, Acts xx. 14.
- Moderation*, definition of this word by Dr. Macknight, Phil. iv. 5.
- Μοδιος*, Modius, what, among the Greeks and Romans, Matt. v. 15.
- Mohammed*, manner of his death as related by Al Kodai, Abul Feda, and Al Janabi, Mark xvi. 18.
- Moon*, her motion round the earth of a very intricate character, IIeb. xi., in fine.
- Μωρor*, definition of this word in the Etymologicon, Matt. xxv. 2.
- Moroseus*, why this tree is so named, Luke xvii. 6.
- Mosaic pavement*, some account of the, John xix. 13.
- Most High*, thoughts on the very mysterious character of the counsels and purposes of the, Rom. xi., in fine.
- Motions of the planets*, reflections on their wonderful harmony, IIeb. xi., in fine.
- Mount of Beatitudes*, Maundrell's account of this small elevation, Matt. v. 11.
- Mountains of the precipitation*, Maundrell's description of the, Luke iv. 29.
- Mountain of God*, import of this Hebraism, Luke vi. 12.
- Mourning among the Jews*, how long it generally lasted, John xi. 19. Manner of it, as described by Lightfoot, ibid.
- Mourning women*, account of the, among the ancients, who were hired to make lamentations for the dead, Matt. ix. 32.
- Multimunia*, a name of Diana of Ephesus, Acts xix. 27.
- Mus rad-ant*, as nishing size to which this herb attains in eastern countries, Matt. xiii. 32.
- Mundus, world*, Pliny's definition of this Latin word, Heb. ix. 1.
- Murder*, the only crime for which a human being should be punished with death, Matt. v. 20.
- Murderer*, who reputed a, among the ancient Jews, Mark iii. 4.
- Music*, those skilled in it seldom remarkable for piety, 1 Cor. xiv. 15.
- Mutability of human affairs*, thoughts concerning the, James i., in fine.
- Myra*, a city of Lycia, supposed by Grotius to be the same with Limyra, Ac. xxvii. 5.
- Myriad*, Μυριας, the highest number known in Greek arithmetical notation, Matt. xviii. 24. Amount in British sterling of a myriad of gold and silver talents, ibid. This word often used by the Greeks for any indefinite multitude, 1 Cor. iv. 15.
- Mysia*, its boundaries, Acts xvi. 7.
- Nain*, where situated, according to Eusebius, Luke vii. 11.
- Nemo of the own* - anciently stamped with a hot iron upon the forehead or shoulder of his slave, Rev. vii. 3.
- Namus* given in derision to the people of God often become the general appellatives of religious bodies, Mark xvi. 6. Instances produced, ibid. Names of the Jewish ancestors formerly contained among their descendants, and why, Luke i. 61. Calhact's judicious remarks on the difference of names, which so frequently occur in the sacred era, Acts ix. 33. Representation of names by the numbers contained in them, an ancient custom. Rev. xiii. 18.
- Naplouse*, the ancient Shechem or Sychar, Matt. x. 5; John iv. 5.
- Nard*, Calmet's description of this Indian plant, Mark xiv. 3.
- Nasi*, the supreme officer in the Jewish sanhedrin, Matt. xx. 21, xxiii. 9.
- Nathanael*, reasons for supposing this apostle to have been the same with Bartholomew, John i. 45.
- Nativity of our blessed Lord*, vast variety of conjectures respecting the period of the, Luke ii. 8. Very unlikely that it took place in the month of December, ibid. Julius I. fixed it on the 25th of December, the very day on which the ancient Romans celebrated the feast of their goddess Bruma, ibid. What might have moved the pontiff thus to alter the festival of the nativity, ibid.
- Nativity*, account of vulgar era of the, Preface to Matthew.
- Nazarene*, what meant by this word in its application to our Lord, Matt. ii. 23.
- Nazareth*, where situated, Matt. iv. 13.
- Nepolis*, see Naplouse.
- Neighbour*, what the original word so rendered imported among the Jews, Matt. v. 43; Luke x. 29.

Nemean games, crown won by the victor in the, made of parsley, 1 Cor. ix. 25.

Neocorus, Νεωκορος, rendered worshipper, originally imported the sweeper of the temple, Acts xix. 35. Afterwards, a title of great distinction assumed by whole cities, ibid.

Nesim, נְסִימ, among the Jews, who, Eph. i. 21.

Nhatus implies a total abstinence from food, Matt. vi. 16.

New Birth, doctrine of the, considered, John iii. 10.

New Covenant, or New Testament, why this appellation is given to that portion of the sacred canon written in the Greek language, Preface to Matthew; Matt. xxvi. 28. Dr. Lardner's observations on the credibility of the Gospel history, Acts xxviii., in fine. Chronological arrangement of the books of the New Testament, with the places where written according to Lardner, and the number of chapters and verses in each book, Introduction to the Gospels and Acts, p. 28.

New Moon, method adopted by the ancient Jews of ascertaining the day of the new moon, Matt. xxvi., in fine.

Newton, (Sir Isaac) epigram on this great mathematician and philosopher, by one of our best poets, 1 Cor. xiii. 9.

Nicanor's gate, the east gate of the court where the women were placed for purification after delivery, Luke ii. 22.

Nicias, remarkable passage in Thucydides which gives an account of the total overthrow of this Athenian general, Eph. iv., in fine.

Nicolaitans, account of the doctrines of the, Introduction to the Second Epistle of Peter; Rev. ii. 6. Criticism of Michaelis on the name of these people, Introduction to the Second Epistle of Peter.

Nicopolis, situation of two towns of this name, Tit. iii. 10.

Nidui, or Viddui, נִדּוּי, the less excommunication among the Jews, John ix. 22; 1 Cor. xvi. 22.

Nisus and Euryalus, affecting account of the friendship of, as given by Virgil, John xv. 13.

Northern nations, grand transmigration of, into the Roman territories in the fifth century, Rom. xii. 15.

Nosus, import of this word, Matt. iv. 23. In what it differs from μα'ακια, ibid.

Nullis majoribus orti, "sprung from no ancestors," import of this phrase in Horace, Heb. vii. 3.

Number of the beast, conjectures respecting the import of this hieroglyphical prophecy, Rev. xiii. 18. The name of the power or being to which this number has apparently an illusion still involved in the greatest uncertainty, Rev. xi. 7.

Numbered, observations on the Greek word thus rendered, and the ancient custom to which it has an allusion, Acts i. 26.

Numbers, how represented on the Arundelian marbles, Rev. xiii. 16.

Nunc dimitt', Claude's remarks on this beautiful song, Luke ii., in fine.

Nuptial solemnities of the ancients, account of the, Matt. viii. 12.

Oath, inquiry into the spirit and essence of an, 2 Cor. i., in fine.

Ochema psuchos, and Ochema psuchikon, what, among the Platonists, 2 Cor. iv. 7.

Offend, critical inquiry into the import of the Greek word thus rendered in our version, Matt. v. 29, xi. 6.

Offensive armour of the ancients' particular description of the, Eph. vi. 13.

Oikonomos, or steward, who, among the ancients, 1 Cor. iv. 1.

Oikoumene, a term by which the land of Judaea was commonly expressed, Luke ii. 1. Difference in import between οἰκουμένη and κόσμος, Heb. i. 6.

Oil, sanative properties of, James v. 14.

Oil, anointing with, an ancient method of installation to particular offices, Luke ii. 11.

Olam, עוֹלָם, inquiry into its general import, 1 Cor. i. 20, ii. 6. 2 Tim. iv. 10; Heb. ii. 5.

עוֹלָם olam haba, the world to come, a phrase applied by the Jews to the days of the Messiah, Heb. ii. 5.

Old vine, what so named among the rabbins, Luke v. 39.

Olive tree, account of the, Rom. xi. 24.

Olympiads, account of the very celebrated ancient era of the, Preface to Matthew.

Olympic games, description by Epictetus and Horace of the painful preparations those were obliged to go through who contended in these exercises, 1 Cor. ix. 25. The crown won by the victor in these games made of the wild olive, ibid.

O'M, a mystic emblem of the Deity among the Hindoos, forbidden to be pronounced but in silence, Luke i. 68; John i. 14. How this emblem is formed, ibid. Of the same import among the Hindoos as יהוה Yehorah among the Hebrews, ibid.

Ousuvuadov, critical remarks on this Greek word, Acts ii. 1.

On, or Aren, the famous Heliopolis, three men said to have been sacrificed in this city every day to Juno, Rom. ix., in fine.

One accord, amazing expressiveness of the Greek word thus rendered, Acts ii. 1.

One jot or one tittle, a proverbial expression among the Jews, Matt. v. 18. Its import illustrated by numerous extracts from rabbinical writers, ibid.

One thing needful, a phrase in St. Luke's Gospel generally misunderstood, Luke x. 42.

Ophēlatai, meaning of this word among the Jews, Luke xiii. 4. In what it differs from ἀμαρτωλοί, ibid.

Opprobrious expressions, how punished among the Gentiles, Matt. v. 22.

Or, import of this word illustrated by quotations from classical writers, Matt. xxviii. 1.

Oracles of the heathens, the credit given to, formerly so very great that, in all doubts and disputes, their determinations were held sacred and inviolable, Heb. v. 12.

Oral law of the Jews, what, Matt. xv. 2. Finally digested and collected into the book called the Mishneh, ibid.

Orbits of the primary and secondary planets not circular, but elliptical, Heb. xi., in fine. The areas which the radius vector of a planet describes being equal in equal times, though the portions of the periphery of its orbit moved through in the same times be unequal, a very plain demonstration of the principle of universal gravitation, ibid. Great advantage which the northern hemisphere of the earth derives from the higher apsis of the terrestrial orbit being placed near the summer solstice, Heb. xi., in fine.

Ordained, inquiry into the import of the original term thus rendered, Acts xiv. 23.

Ormen, definition of, by the Etymologicon, Acts xxvii. 28. About the quantity of our fathom, ibid.

Original, doctrine of, Rom. v. 1-21, et in fine.

Ormuzd, the supreme divinity of the ancient Persians, John i., in fine.

Orphan, derivation of the word, according to Minuart and others, John xiv. 18.

Orphic demonology, classes into which evil spirits were divided, according to the, Matt. xii. 43.

Os Coxendicis, or lower joint of the backbone, singular opinion of the Jews respecting the, 1 Cor. xv. 44.

Osiris, description of a beautiful marble figure of, in the author's possession, Rev. xix. 16.

Oth, os, translated sign, inquiry into its import, Rom. iv. 11.

Oti has sometimes the import of diatri, Luke vii. 47.

Ou tac a Hebraism for oudeis, Matt. vii. 21. Examples of a similar idiom in Roman writers, ibid.

Outer darkness, its literal and metaphorical acceptations, Matt. viii. 12.

Outer man, import of this phrase, 1 Pet. iii. 4.

Ovens in the East heated with dry straw, withered herbs, and stubble, Matt. vi. 30.

Ox-goad of Palestine and Syria, description of the, Jud. iii., in fine; Acts ix. 5. The ox-goad appears to have been known in the time of Homer, ibid.

Oxygen, a constituent part of water, 2 Pet. iii. 10. In what proportion oxygen exists in water as to its weight and volume, ibid.

- Paganism, brief sketch of the rapid decline of, in the Roman empire in the fourth century, Rev. xii. 9.
- Παγς, signification of this word, 1 Tim. vi. 9.
- Παιδαγωγός, Pedagogue, who among the ancient Greeks, 1 Cor. iv. 15. In what the παιδαγωγός, pedagogue, differed from the διδασκαλός, teacher, ibid.
- Παῖδια, a term of familiarity and affectionate kindness, John xxi. 5.
- Παῖς, import of this word, as used by the apostle, 1 Cor. x. 7.
- Παῖς, import of this term in the Pythagorean philosophy, Matt. xix. 28.
- Pelinnus, death of, as related by Virgil, a very remarkable example, showing the notions the heathens entertained respecting vicarious atonement, John xi. 51.
- Pelisy, definition of this disorder, Matt. iv. 24. In general incurable except in its slighter stages, ibid.
- Pemphig, the same with the modern Catarrhia, Acts ii. 10.
- Pemphyr, Παμφύριος λόγος, origin of this phrase, Heb. xii. 23.
- Pemphyr, brief sketch of the amazing extent of the biblical Reformation, Rev. xiii. 15.
- Pemphyr, account of, Acts xiii. 6.
- Περὶ τοῦ πνεύματος, at 1st fect, several quotations from classical writers to show that this phrase is often used in the sense of πνεῦμα, spirit, Acts xiii. 3.
- Perible, its derivation and general definition, Matt. xiii. 3. In what perible differs from perible and similitude, Matt. xiii. in fine.
- Perible, dissertation on the nature and use of, Matt. xiii. in fine.
- Paradise, its derivation and import, Luke xxiii. 43. Notions of the Mohammedans respecting paradise, 2 Cor. xii. 4.
- Παρακλησις, derivation and import of this term, Matt. v. 4.
- Παράκλητος, Paraclete, why this name is given to the Holy Ghost, John xiv. 16.
- Parallax, the import of this astronomical term, illustrated by a diagram, James i. in fine.
- Paralymp, observations on the office of the, John iii. in fine.
- Parents loving up property for their offspring, under what limitations this is proper among those professing Christianity, 2 Cor. xii. 15.
- Parnas, Πάρναξ, a sort of deacon in the Jewish Church, Acts vi. 4. Derivation of the word, ibid.
- Paraphrase, or play upon words, instances of, Acts xvii. 23; 1 Cor. vi. 1; Phil. iii. 2.
- Παρθένος, rendered virgin, signified among the Greeks one unmarried person of either sex, 1 Cor. vii. 25.
- Part, where situated, Acts ii. 9.
- Part, a very improper rendering of this word pointed out, Acts xii. 4.
- Paschal Cycle, or Dionysian Period, account of the, Preface to Matthew.
- Passover, a Jewish festival, whence so named, Matt. xxvi. 2. The question considered whether our Lord ate the passover before he suffered, Matt. xxvi. in fine. Citation from the tract Pesachim to show that the Jews, in eating the passover did it to represent the sufferings of the Messiah, Luke xxii. 19.
- Palara, a seaport of Syria, Acts xxi. 1.
- Palnos, account of this island of the Ægean sea, Rev. i. 9. Its present appellation, ibid.
- Πατριάρχης, derivation and import of this word, 1 Tim. i. 9.
- Πατριάρχης, patriarch, two etymologies of this word, Heb. vii. 4.
- Patrician of the Romans, what, Rev. xvii. 10.
- Paul, Παῦλος, whence this name of the great apostle of the Gentiles is derived, according to Jerome and Hesychius, Acts xiii. 9. Another conjecture, ibid. Remarks on the method adopted by St. Paul of quoting Scripture, Rom. x. in fine. Citations from Nicephorus and others respecting the personal appearance of this apostle, 2 Cor. x. 10. Observations on the very extraordinary circumstances with which his conversion was accompanied, Acts ix. in fine. Manner of his death extremely uncertain, Acts xxviii. 31. What is said by Eusebius and others upon this subject not to be depended upon, ibid. Eminent men who were contemporary with St. Paul, Chronological Notes at the commencement of 2 Corinthians.
- Peace, remarkable saying of the rabbins relative to, Matt. x. 12. Very extensive meaning of the Hebrew word thus rendered, ibid. Its definition and various significations, Rom. i. 7.
- Πεπρωτος, its derivation and import, Matt. vi. 13.
- Πελεκύς, or Bivvy, a sort of battle-axe, with double face, one opposite to the other, Eph. vi. 13.
- Pella, remarkable for being the place whither the Christians retired from the apostate word of the Roman army, Matt. xxiv. 13, 16, 20; 1 Pet. iv. 18. Citation from Eusebius and Epiphanius, in which this very beautiful interposition of Providence in behalf of the primitive Christians is stated, Heb. x. in fine.
- Pella, Πελλήνη, account of this species of shield used by the ancients, Eph. vi. 13.
- Penal object of the Greeks, account of the, James iii. 6.
- Pemphyr, the daily wages in this country, in the fifth century, of cornworkers or hawmakers, without meat, drink, or other easiness, demanded, Matt. x. 2.
- Pentecost, first of, why instituted, Acts i. 1.
- Perdition, or destruction, perverted, John xvii. 12.
- Perdition, description of perdition by one of our best poets, Matt. viii. 12.
- Perfection, Christian, doctrine of, stated and defended, Matt. v. 48, vi. 10; Luke xvii. 10; Heb. vi. 1.
- Persance, account of this ancient town of Mysia, Rev. i. 11.
- Περικεφάλαια, the helmet, some account of this species of armour among the ancients, Eph. vi. 13.
- Periphetes, a very famous sort of philosophy, founded by Aristotle, Acts xiii. 18.
- Periphetes, this word improperly rendered in our version, 1 Cor. iv. 13. Heathen custom to which the apostle alluded in applying this term to himself and his fellow labourers, ibid.
- Peroun, or The Thunderer, a divinity of the ancient Slavi, to whom human victims were offered, Rom. ix. in fine.
- Persian versions of the Gospels, account of the, Introduction to the Gospels and Acts, p. 20, &c. Some quotations from the Persian version in the London Polyglot to show its Catholic origin, ibid.
- Petrus, Kypke's definition of the original term thus rendered, Matt. xvii. 17.
- Petrus, some account of this celebrated Syriac version of the New Testament, Introduction to the Gospels and Acts, p. 22.
- Petris, how figuratively used by the ancients, Acts xxiv. 5.
- Peter, import of this name, Matt. xvi. 18; Luke ix. in fine; John i. 42. Peter's denial and fall illustrated by a fact in the English history, John xiii. in fine. Farther observations on Peter's denial of our Lord, John xviii. 27. Thoughts on the prevarication of Peter, mentioned by the apostle Paul, Gal. ii. in fine. Biographical sketch of this apostle, Preface to the Epistles of Peter.
- Peter, Epistles of, inquiry into their authenticity, Preface to the Epistles. Mr. Hallet's arguments to show that these apostolical letters were addressed to Gentile converts, and not to the Jews, ibid. The Babylon mentioned at the close of the First Epistle to be liberally, and not mystically, understood, ibid.
- Peter's supremacy, Romish doctrine of, a fable, Matt. xvi. 18.
- Petronius Arbiter, citation from, very similar to a passage in Isaiah and the First Epistle to the Corinthians, 1 Cor. xv. 32.
- Phalarica or Falarica, why so named, Eph. vi. 16.
- Pharise's pride, genuine specimen of, Luke xviii. 12.
- Pharise's, some account of this ancient Jewish sect, Matt. iii. 7, xvi. 1. Derivation of the name, ibid.
- Φάρμακον, meaning of this word according to Weiler, Luke ii. 7.
- Φελωνος, rendered cloak, probably means a bag or mantle, 2 Tim. iv. 13.
- Phenomena, Astronomical, see Astronomical Phenomena.
- Phylarath Mosch, substance of a very ridiculous legend in the, relative to the dispute of Michael and the - devil, concerning the great Jewish lawgiver, Preface to Jude.

- Philadelphia*, a city of Natolia, now called Alahshekir, Rev. i. 11.
- Philemon*, Epistle to, reason which moved the apostle to write this letter, Preface to Philemon. General observations on the great excellences of this epistle, Philem., in fine.
- Philip* the apostle, some account of, John i. 43.
- Philippi*, a town of Macedonia, remarkable for two great battles, Acts xvi. 12. Preface to Philippians.
- Philippians*, Epistle to the, when it was written, Preface to the Epistle. Style of the epistle, ibid.
- Philosophy*, probable origin of this word, Eph. v. 15.
- Philo*, a version, some account of this translation of the New Testament into the Syriac tongue, Introduction to the Gospels and Acts, p. 22.
- Philo*, citation from this writer, in which it is thought there is an allusion to the preternatural darkness at the time of our Lord's crucifixion, Matt. xxvii. 45.
- Photion*, remarkable saying of the wife of this celebrated Athenian general on receiving a visit from a lady who was elegantly adorned with gold and jewels, and her hair with pearls, 1 Pet. iii. 4.
- Phariseans* and Cannanites, these names frequently confounded in the Septuagint, Matt. xv. 22.
- Pharis*, rendered by nature, according to Suicer frequently imports certainly, truly, Rom. ii. 16. It also frequently signifies the natural birth, family, or nation, of a man, a sense of the word illustrated by citations from Josephus, Chrysostom, and others, Gal. ii. 15. Dr. Macknight's observations on the various acceptations of this word, Eph. ii. 3.
- Phylacteries*, particular account of the, Matt. xxiii. 5. Description of one in the author's possession, ibid.
- Physiognomist*, remarkable anecdote of a, 1 John iii. 9.
- Pillar and ground of the truth*, variety of opinions relative to the import of this apostolical expression, 2 Tim. iii. 15.
- Pillars of the world*, men of great eminence and importance were so named among the Jews, Gal. ii. 9.
- Paradise*, meaning of this word illustrated by a passage from Shaw's Travels, Luke i. 63.
- Pipes* anciently used by the Jews in times of calamity, Matt. ix. 32.
- Πῆμα*, quotations from Homer, in which this word imports to be slain, Rom. xi. 12.
- Pithul*, one of the Islandic, who, Matt. ix. 32.
- Pisidia*, situation of this province of Asia Minor, Acts xiii. 11. Four languages anciently spoken in this district according to Strabo, viz., the Pisidian, the Solymanian, the Greek, and the Lydian, Acts xiv. 15.
- Plotting the hour*, observations on the manner of, among the ancient, 1 Pet. iii. 3.
- Plutus*, the heaviest of all the metals, 1 Pet. i., in fine. But recently known to Europeans, ibid. Its specific gravity ibid.
- Plutus*, citation from, very similar to a saying of our Lord, Luke xii. 31.
- Placuit-takers and voluptuaries*, saying of Seneca respecting, 1 Tim. i. 6.
- Πλάτων*, its meaning among the Hellenistic Jews, Matt. v. 13; Luke x. 29.
- Pliny*, epistle of, to his friend Sabinianus, in behalf of his manumitted slave who had offended him, Philem., in fine. Pliny's second letter to Sabinianus, in which he expresses his obligation for the successful issue of the preceding, ibid.
- Plutarch*, remarkable passage in the Conjugalia Precepta of, very similar to a saying of St. Peter, 1 Pet. iii. 3.
- Πρεσβυς*, a frequent acceptation of this word in classical writers, Acts ix. 1.
- Πρεσβυς* in what this word differs in import from ψυχη, 1 Thess. v. 23.
- Πολιτικὸν*, rendered conversation, properly signifies citizenship or civil rights, Phil. iii. 20.
- Πολυμάρτος*, an epithet of the Ephesian Diana, Acts xix. 27.
- Pompey*, how he was enabled to take Jerusalem, Matt. xii. 2.
- Pontius Pilate*, Roman governor of Judea in the reign of Tiberius, Matt. xxvii. 2. Deposed by the emperor on account of his great cruelties to the Samaritans, and banished to Vienne in Dauphiny, ibid. His tragical end, ibid.
- Pontus*, formerly a very powerful kingdom of Asia, Acts ii. 9. Its boundaries, ibid.
- Popish bishops*, remarkable saying of the, in the time of Mary I., queen of England, respecting the then recent art of printing, Acts v. 40.
- Poplitæ artery*, great weight raised by the action of the, Heb. xi., in fine.
- Popular fame*, remarkable example of the great fickleness of, Acts xiv. 19.
- Porch or portico* of Solomon, account of the, John x. 23.
- Portents, fearful*, see Fearful portents.
- Pound*, great impropriety of thus rendering the original word, pointed out, Luke xix. 13.
- Power, might, and energy*, in what these words differ in import, Eph. i. 19.
- Prætorium*, a place of judicature among the Romans, why so named, Matt. xxvii. 27; John xviii. 28.
- Prose*, ascription of seven species of, to the Lamb, a rabbinism, Rev. v. 12. This illustrated by a remarkable passage in the Sephir Raseel, ibid. Seven kinds of praise ascribed to God, which are nearly the same with those ascribed to the Lamb, and a very illustrious proof of the essential Divinity of Jesus Christ, Rev. v. 12, vii. 12.
- Prayer*, observations on, Matt. vi. 5, vii. 8, ix. 18, xiv. 23, xv. 22, xviii. 19, xx. 33; John xi. 5, xii. 32; Acts i. 14, iv. 31, x. 2; Rom. viii. 27; 1 Tim. ii. 8; Heb. x. 19. Jewish superstition relative to the place or places where prayer could be legally offered, 1 Tim. ii. 8. In what light prayer to God is viewed by the Mohammedans, Matt. vi. 16. Distinction between prayer and supplication, Acts i. 14.
- Prayer for all secular governors* the constant practice of Christians, 1 Tim. ii. 2. Sayings of Cyprian, Tertullian, and Origen on this subject, ibid.
- Prayers, hours of*, among the Jews, Acts iii. 1. By whom appointed, in the opinion of the rabbins, ibid.
- Predestination, unconditional*, to eternal life and to eternal death, cannot be supported by the example of God's dealings with Jacob and Esau, or their posterity, Matt. vi. 24; Rom. ix. 12, &c., et in fine; Heb. xii. 17. See also, upon the doctrine of unconditional predestination, Acts xiii. 46; Rom. viii., in fine; 2 Cor. ii. 16; Eph. i. 5; 1 Thess. i. 4; Heb. iv. 6; 1 Pet. i. 2; 1 John ii. 2.
- Prefect, or overseer*, of the mountain of the temple, plain allusion to the office of the, Rev. xvi. 15.
- Preference given to one thing beyond another* usually expressed in the sacred canon by an affirmation of that which is preferred, and a negation of that which is contrary to it, 1 Cor. i. 17. An example produced, ibid.
- Preparation for the Sabbath*, when it commenced, John xix. 31.
- Presbyters or elders* of the primitive Christian Church, who, Acts xx. 17. The ἐπισκοποι or bishops anciently selected from the presbyters, ibid.
- Presbytery*, Πρεσβυτεριον, all who held offices in the Christian Church at Lystra collectively so named, 1 Tim. v. 17.
- Presumption*, observations on this vice, Matt. xxvi. 33.
- Presumption on a precarious life*, curious rabbinical relation in which this is very strongly reprobated, James iv. 13. Another anecdote to the same effect from the Gulistan of Saady, James iv., in fine.
- Prices of labour, provisions, and clothing*, in this country in the fourteenth century, Matt. xx. 2.
- Pride*, nothing more hateful in the sight of God, Matt. xxiii. 12.
- Priest*, derivation and original acceptation of this term, Acts xx. 17.
- Priestley* (Rev. Dr.) his observations on the genuineness of the Apocalypse, Rev. xxii., in fine.
- Priests*, customary among the Jewish, according to the Talmud, to divide the different functions of the sacerdotal office by lot, Luke i. 9.

- Primitive fathers*, alphabetical list of the, referred to in the various readings quoted occasionally in these notes, with the times in which they were born, flourished, or died, Introduction to the Gospels and Acts, p. 25, &c.
- Primogeniture*, rights generally supposed to have been attached to, in ancient times, Heb. xii. 16.
- Principes*, who, among the Romans, Matt. viii. 9.
- Principles* which the author of this Commentary, on carefully reading and studying the sacred writings, finds unequivocally revealed there, Conclusion of the Notes on the New Testament.
- Proconsul*, see Propraetor.
- Prodigal Son*, Queen's reflections on the parable of the, Luke xv., in fine.
- Propheta*, occurs only once in the New Testament, Heb. vi. 20. Its import, ibid.
- Profane*, whence derived, 1 Tim. i. 9; Heb. xii. 16.
- Projectile forces* of the planets, satellites, and comets, what, Heb. xi., in fine. The harmonious adjustment of the projectile force of a planet to its gravitation, or the sun's attraction; or, in other words, the balancing of the centrifugal and centripetal forces in such a manner as to cause the planet to describe an ellipse little differing from a circle; a very strong evidence of the being of a God, ibid. Quantities of projectile force necessary to be impressed on a planet, or other celestial body, to cause it to move in a circle, ellipsis, parabola, and hyperbola, ibid.
- Prophecies of Enoch*, this work a most manifest forgery, Preface to Jude. See also Jude 14.
- Prophet*, what this word imports in different parts of the sacred oracles, Matt. x. 41; Luke i. 67, ii. 36; Rom. xii. 6.
- Propheta*, Prophet, apostolic definition of this Greek word, 1 Cor. xiv. 3.
- Propraetor and Proconsul*, distinction between the, Acts xiii. 7.
- Prosa*, prosaic synonymous with aprosopoi, according to Hesychius, Heb. v. 9.
- Proselytes*, four conditions of, among the ancient Jews, Mark viii. 31.
- Proserpina*, among the Jews, what, Acts xvi. 13, xvii. 1, xxi. 5.
- Proterogon*, derivation and import of this word, Matt. vi. 5. In what it differs from δυναμις, Acts i. 14; Eph. vi. 18.
- Proterogon*, proterogon, the import of this phrase illustrated by numerous citations from sacred and profane writers, Luke vi. 12.
- Protophæresis Orbis* of Ptolemy, what, James i. in fine.
- Prostration*, on a religious account, and before great men, how performed in Hindostan, Matt. ii. 2. Prostrations to superiors common in all Asiatic countries, Acts x. 25; Rev. xix. 10. Reason why the act of prostration was refused by the angel of the Apocalypse, Rev. xix. 10, xxii. 8.
- Protoros*, Chief, the title of the Roman governor of the ancient Malto, Acts xxviii. 7.
- Provident*, general and particular doctrine of Matt. x. 29, 30; John iv., in fine. A popular saying of one of our best poets up in this subject shown to be a direct contradiction to the words of our Saviour, Matt. x. 30. Observations on the economy of Divine Providence, Acts x. 17, xiv. 17, xxiii. in fine, xxvii. 31.
- Prudence*, definition of, by Sir William Temple, Eph. i. 8.
- Prutah*, the smallest coin among the Jews, Matt. v. 26; Mark xii. 42. Its weight, Matt. v. 26.
- ῥηλαβόμενον ὄρος*, import of this phrase, Heb. xii. 18.
- ῥηδός λευκή*, and ῥηδός μελαίνη, of the ancients, what, Rev. ii. 17.
- ῥυχή*, in what this word differs in import from πνεῦμα, 1 Thess. v. 23.
- Platanus*, a seaport of Galilee, Acts xxi. 7. Its ancient appellation, ibid.
- Πρωτος*, derivation of this word, Matt. v. 3.
- Public worship*, times of, among the Turks, proclaimed from the house-tops, Matt. x. 27. Observations on the great importance of a strict attendance to public worship among Christians, Luke iv. 16; John xx. 21; Heb. x., in fine.
- Publicans*, who, among the Jews, Matt. v. 46. Their character, ibid. Remarkable saying of Theocritus respecting these Roman officers, ibid.
- Pulsation of the heart*, natural cause of the, unknown, Heb. xi., in fine.
- Punic language*, remarkable specimen of the, as copied from a square stone discovered in Malta in the 17th century; with Sir W. Drummond's translation, Acts xxviii. 1.
- Purgare*, a peculiar meaning of this word in Horace, John xv. 2.
- Purification of the Temple* by our Lord, whether performed once or twice, John ii. 14.
- Purgatory*, doctrine of, in the Romish Church, whence it originated, Matt. iii. 11. Inquiry into the import of a saying of St. Paul, which the Romanists have applied to the fire of purgatory, 1 Cor. iii. 15.
- Hypocritae*, import of this word illustrated by a curious story from the rabbinical tract Kiddushin, 1 Cor. vii. 9.
- Purple Island*, citation of a very remarkable passage from this poem of Phineas Fletcher respecting the conversion of a soul to God, John viii. 12.
- Puteoli*, a town of Naples, now called Pozzuoli, Acts xxviii. 13. Two etymologies of its name given by Varro, ibid. Famous for the temple of Jupiter Serapis, and for the remains of Cicero's Villa, ibid. Present condition of Puteoli, ibid.
- Pythagoreans*, Pythagorists, in what they differed from the Pythagoreans, Acts vi. 1.
- Pythian crown*, crown worn by the victor in the, made of laurel, 1 Cor. ix. 25.
- Pythius*, why this epithet was given to Apollo, Acts xvi. 16.
- Pytho*, in the heathen mythology, what, Acts xvi. 16.
- Quadragesima*, different opinions concerning the meaning of this word, Matt. ix. 15.
- Quadrans*, the fourth part of the Roman as, Luke xxi. 2. In Plutarch's time the smallest piece of brass coin in use among the Romans, ibid.
- Quadratus*, a Christian apologist of the second century, 2 Tim. iv., in fine.
- Quaker*, thoughts concerning the affirmation of a, in a court of judicature, 2 Cor. i., in fine.
- Quarrel's* homely rymes on the wife's usurpation of the authority of her husband, Eph. vi. 22.
- Quarrel's*, what, Acts xii. 1.
- Quick*, derivation and import of this Old English word, Acts x. 12.
- Quotations*, how made in the New Testament from the Old according to Surenhusius, Gualter, Wolf, Rosenmüller, and others, Matt. ii. 23.
- Rabbi*, a title of dignity among the Jews, Matt. xxiii. 7. In what it differs from Rabbi, and Rabbin, ibid.
- Racer*, its derivation and import, Matt. v. 22. Citations from rabbinical writers to show how this word was used by the ancient Jews, Matt. v., in fine.
- Raging waves of the sea*, foaming out their own shame, explanation of this very elegant metaphor, Jude 13.
- Rahab*, the angel of the sea, according to the rabbins, Rev. xvi. 5.
- Raiment*, showing of the, what it imported among the ancient Jews, Matt. x. 14; Acts xviii. 6.
- Rain*, times of the former and latter, Luke iv. 26.
- Rakia*, רָקִיעַ, translated firmament, the second heaven, according to the rabbins, 2 Cor. xii. 2. The lowest of the three heavens that can be legitimately deduced from the sacred records, ibid.
- Remayvno*, account of this sacred book of the Hindoos, Rom. ix., in fine.
- Reverend's* cartoon of Paul preaching at Athens, particular description of, by Mr. Thomas Holloway, Acts xvii., in fine.
- Reapers*, an appellation given by the Jews to their rabbins, Matt. ix. 37.
- Receivers of customs*, the place where the taxes levied by the Romans of the Jews were collected, Matt. ix. 9.
- Reconciliation*, apostolic doctrine of, John xx. 23.
- Reverend's* renewed, renewed influence of this branch of the papal hierarchy in the dark ages, Rev. xiii. 12.
- Relics*, Romish doctrine concerning, Acts v. 15.

- Religion*, definition of, by Cicero and Lactantius, James i. 27. Distinction between religion and superstition, ibid. Definition of true religion, James i. 27.
- Religious persecution*, very sensible observations of Dr. Dodd on the absurdity and wickedness of, Luke xiv., in fine.
- Remphan*, or Rephan, conjectures concerning this ancient object of idolatry, Acts vii. 43.
- Reus of a sum*, payment of the, in kind, an ancient custom in most nations, and still prevailing in the Highlands of Scotland, and in some other places, Matt. xxi. 34.
- Repentance*, genuine, what essential to, Matt. iii. 6.
- Reveries* in civil and religious supplications common among the ancient Greeks and Romans, and even among the primitive Christians, Matt. vi. 7. The Mohammedans also remarkable for vain repetitions, of which an example is produced, ibid. Citation from the Heautontimorumenos of Terence in which this heathen practice is very strongly ridiculed, ibid.
- Reprobat*, or signify, this expressed in the Hebrew, Chaldee and Chaldean-Syriac languages by the substantive verb, Matt. xxvi. 26.
- Revelation*, unconditional, doctrine of, demonstrated to be a lie, in all the attributes of Deity, Matt. vii. 11, xxii. 12; John x. 27, xi. 33, xii. 39; 2 Cor. ii. 16, xiii. 5; 1 Pet. iii. 15; 2 Pet. iii. 9.
- Revelation*, citation of a passage from this treatise very similar to our Lord's parable of the ten virgins, Matt. xxv. 1.
- Revelation*, why repentance was so named by the Romans, Matt. iii. 2.
- Revelation of persons*, good rabbinical saying concerning, Eccl. vi. 9.
- Revelation of all things*, inquiry into the import of this phrase as employed by St. Peter, Acts iii. 21. This phrase, as used by our Lord, gives not the least countenance to the doctrine entertained by some that the punishment of the wicked in a future state of existence shall be of a limited duration, Matt. xvii. 11.
- Revelation of the Lord*, doctrine of the, a popular and common doctrine among the Jews long before the advent of our Lord, Matt. xiv. 2; Luke xx. 38, et in fine; John xi. 34; 2 Tim. i. 10. Analysis of St. Paul's argument relative to the doctrine of a general resurrection, 1 Cor. xv., in principio.
- Revelation*, or Apocalypse, Dr. Lardner's inquiry into the authenticity of this book of the sacred canon, Introduction to the Revelation. Various opinions concerning the time in which it was written, ibid. Great uncertainty as to the writer of the Apocalypse; and the arguments of Dr. Lardner, who defends the generally received opinion of the Church, not satisfactory, ibid. The very elevated style of this book, so totally dissimilar from that of St. John's accredited works, a sufficient demonstration that it is not the production of this apostle, unless we could suppose that the words will admit of a more than inspired language, and which we have not conceded in examining the claims to authenticity of any of the other books of holy writ, ibid. But it want of holiness of nature, no defence to the Church provide this book to be admitted. Preface to the Revelation. Dr. Lardner's plan upon which the Revelation has been attempted to be explained, ibid. The scheme of Signor Pastori, ibid.; of West, ibid.; and of Protestants in general, ibid. Eichhorn's singular scheme, ibid. Mr. Lowman's scheme and order of the Apocalyptic vision, Rev. xxiii., in fine. Conjecture concerning the design of the Apocalypse, Preface to the Revelation. Rabbinical character of its phraseology and imagery, Rev. iv. 7. Observations of Grotius, as in the innumerable difficulties which present themselves in the book of sacred hieroglyphics, a sentiment in which the writer of this commentary most heartily concurs. Preface to the Revelation. A most solemn and awful warning relative to the words of the prophecy of this book. If any man have an ear, let him hear, Rev. xxii. 18, 19.
- Revolutions*, periodic and sidereal, of the sun, moon, and planets. Observations on Kepler's famous discovery that the mean distances of the planets from the sun are in subequalateral geometrical proportion to their periodic revolutions, Heb. xi., in fine.
- Rhegium*, a city and promontory in Italy, now called Reggio, Acts xxviii. 13. Why so denominated, ibid.
- Rhodes*, an island of the Mediterranean, Acts xxi. 1.
- Rich man*, in the apostolic sense of the term, 1 Tim. vi. 9. Sense in which our Lord is to be understood when he asserted the extreme difficulty of a rich man's entering into the kingdom of heaven, Matt. xix. 25.
- Right hand* consecrated by the ancients to Faith, Matt. xvii. 14. Metaphorical acceptance of this term among the rabbins, Matt. xxv. 33. Giving the right hand to another formerly a mark of confidence, friendship, and fellowship, Gal. ii. 9. In eastern countries the highest favourite of the king sits on the right hand of the throne, Heb. i. 3.
- Righteousness of God*, God's method of saving sinners by faith in Christ, see Rom. iii. 20-26.
- Rights of God and Caesar* defined, Matt. xxii. 16-21.
- Roman arms*, how anciently recruited, Matt. xx. 16.
- Roman calendar*, observations on the progressive improvement of the, from the days of Romulus, about 730 years before Christ, to the present time, Rom. xvi., in fine.
- Roman Catholic monarchies*, enumeration of the, at the commencement of the Reformation, Rev. xvii. 16.
- Roman census*, see Census of the Romans.
- Roman citizen*, great privileges of a, in the apostolic age, Acts xvi. 37, xxii. 29, xxv. 11.
- Roman consuls*, table of, for one hundred and seven years (from B. C. 6 to A. D. 100,) with the times in which these magistrates ruled, reduced to the years of seven different epochs, Table II. at the end of the Acts.
- Roman infants*, how divided and subdivided, Matt. viii. 9.
- Roman law and government*, remark on the grand principle of the, "to condemn no man unheard, and to confront the accusers with the accused," Acts xxv. 16, et in fine.
- Roman women*, Tertullian's description of their superstitious and idolatrous practices during pregnancy, 1 Cor. vii. 11.
- Romans* very jealous of their national worship, Acts xvi. 21.
- Romans*, Epistle of Paul to the, its object excellently shown by Dr. Paley to be, to place the Gentile convert upon a parity of situation with the Jewish, in respect of his religious condition, and his rank in the Divine favour, Preface to Romans. Various opinions respecting the language in which this epistle was originally written, ibid. Citations extracted from Dr. Taylor's Key to the Apostolic Writings, in which St. Paul's principal design in writing his Epistle to the Romans is very luminously set forth, ibid. In this extract the following subjects are discussed:—The original and nature of the Jewish constitution of religion. The peculiar honours and privileges of the Jewish nation, while they were the peculiar people of God, with an explication of the terms by which the honours are expressed. Reflections on the Jewish privileges and honours. The Jewish peculiarity not prejudicial to the rest of mankind, the Jewish economy being established for the benefit of the world in general. The Jewish peculiarity to receive its perfection from the Gospel. The particular honours and privileges of Christians, with an explanation of the terms by which they are expressed. Reflections on the honours and privileges of the Christian Church. All the great of the Gospel is dispensed to us by, in, or through Christ. Irresistible conclusion from an harmonious union of all the arguments employed in the discussion of the preceding topics. General survey of the Epistle to the Romans. The three grand divisions into which the Epistle to the Romans is naturally divisible, the Preface, the Tractation, and the Peroration or Epilogue, Rom. i., in principio.
- Rome* at present exhibits but a very faint image of its former magnificence, Acts xxviii. 14. Its population in 1709; and the number of bishops, priests, monks, nuns, courtizans, Jews and Moors, at the time of that census, ibid.
- Romish Church*, observations relative to the doctrines of the, Rom. xvi., in fine; 2 Pet. iii. 16.

Romish hierarchy, amazing influence of the, in the dark ages, Rev. xiii. 12. Account of its two grand divisions, the regular and secular clergy, ibid.
Root of bitterness, a Hebraism for a poisonous plant, Heb. xii. 15.
Rough garments of the ancient prophets, some account of the, Heb. xi. 37.
Ruler of the Jews, a member of the grand Sanhedrin was usually so named, John iii. 1.
Russian or Slavonic version of the New Testament, account of the, Introduction to the Gospels and Acts, p. 22.

Sabbath, observations on the institution of the, Matt. xii. 7, 8; Mark ii. 28. Rigid observances of this day by the ancient Jews, Matt. xii. 2. The coming in of the Sabbath formerly announced by the minister of the synagogue with a trumpet sounded six times from the roof of a very high house, Matt. x. 27.

Sabbath-day's journey, what, Acts i. 12.
Σαββατομαχία and Σαββατοδουλοπαιον, Lightfoot's observations on the import of the Greek phrase, Matt. xii. 1. Dr. Whitby's and Wodwain's observations, Luke vi. 1.

Sacerdotal absolution, doctrine of, held among the ancient Jews as well as modern papists, Acts xxiii. 12. A remarkable instance produced, ibid.

Sacramental cup, observations on the denial of the, to the laity by the Romanists, Matt. xxvi. 27.

Sacrifices formerly not unfrequently sent by the Gentiles to the temple at Jerusalem, John xi. 20.

Sacrum Romanum Imperium, or Holy Roman Empire, origin of this appellation of the late Germanic empire, Rev. xiii. 1.

Sadducees, some account of this famous Jewish sect, Matt. iii. 7, xvi. 1; Acts xxiii. 8.

Sahidic Version of the New Testament, account of the, Introduction to the Gospels and Acts, p. 21.

Sakar, סכר, according to Jerome, any intoxicating liquor, Luke i. 15.

Salvum, sacredness of this word of salutation among the Arabs, 2 John 10.

Salamis, the capital of Cyprus, afterwards called Constantia, Acts xiii. 5. Its present appellation, ibid.

Salmone, Σαλμων, or Salmoneum, a promontory on the eastern coast of Crete; now called Cape Solomon or Salmone, Acts xxvii. 7.

Salmich, the ancient Thessalonica, Acts xvii. 1.

Salutations, Harmer's observations on the manner of giving and receiving, in eastern countries, Matt. v. 47.

Salvation brought by Jesus Christ, in what it consists, Luke i. 71.

Salvati, from sin, the spirit and design of the Gospel, Rom. vi. 18, issim.

Samoindraki, the ancient Samothracia, Acts xvi. 11.

Samaritans, account of the, Matt. x. 5.

Samaritan, Jewish fable concerning, John xii. 31.

Samuel's doctrine, Scripture doctrine of, John xvii. 17; Acts x. 43, Rom. iii. 1, in fine; 2 Cor. vii. 1, xi. 30; 1 Thess. v. 23; James iv. 8.

Sandal, what, among the ancients, Mark vi. 9.

Sanhedrin, account of this famous Jewish council, Matt. v. 22. Its supreme officers, Matt. xx. 21.

Saphir, supposed to be the same with the ancient Bethulia, Matt. v. 11.

Sapphire, description of this precious stone, Rev. xxi. 19.

Sarcasm, remarkable example of this figure of speech, Rev. xvi. 6.

Sardis, an ancient city of Asia Minor, now called Sardis and Sordi, Rev. i. 11.

Sardius, description of this precious stone, Rev. xxi. 20.

Sardour, account of this precious stone, Rev. xxi. 20.

Sardis, Zerephath, where situated, Luke iv. 26.

Sardis, situation of this country, Acts ix. 35.

Sardis, delivering over to, what meant by this phrase, John xx. 23; 1 Cor. v. 5. A species of power never committed to any but the apostles, ibid.

Saul, import of his name, Acts xiii. 9.

Saxon or Anglo-Saxon version of Holy Writ, some account of the, Introduction to the Gospels and Acts, p. 22.

Seculus incredible et inauditum, "an incredible and unheard-of wickedness," what so styled by Cicero, 1 Cor. v. 1.

Scorpion, a military weapon among the Romans, why so named, Rev. ix. 5.

Σκοπιος, whence derived, according to the Greek etymologists, Luke xi. 12.

Scourging, great severity of this punishment among the Romans, Matt. xxvii. 26. The criminal was sometimes scourged to death, ibid. How the punishment of scourging was performed among the Jews, 2 Cor. xi. 21.

Scribes, who, among the Jews, Matt. ii. 4. How the Greek word so translated is used in the Septuagint, ibid.

Scriptures, remarkable passage in the Talmudical Tract Shabbath relative to the time of the, John v. 39. Examination of a passage of 8th hour which the Romanists allege in favour of their doctrine that the Oracles of God cannot be understood without the help of an authorized expositor, Acts xiii. 34. Observations on the papistical doctrine that the Holy Ghost has constituted the Romish hierarchy the only infallible interpreters of the Holy Scriptures, 2 Pet. iii. 16.

Scute, see Oni.

Scut, formerly customary for a purchaser to mark his goods with a, that he might be able to distinguish and claim them, if mixed with others, Eph. i. 13.

Scut, thing of a, upon the victim, see Victim.

Scut, thing of a, their import, according to W. L. in Preface to the Revelation. Mr. Lowman's scheme of interpretation, Rev. xxi. 1, in fine.

Scut, thing of a, our observations concerning the, John xix. 23. Description of it by Josephus, ibid.

Scut, method of dividing the, among the Jews, John iv. 33.

Scut, a term usually translated Augustus, appears to be used by St. Paul as simply synonymous with Caesar or emperor, Acts xxv. 21.

Scut, a Jewish phrase for the punishment of hell in a future life, 2 Tim. ii. 11.

Scut, the same with the shekel, Matt. xxvi. 15. Thirty scut, שלשים, of pure silver, the standard price of a slave, according to the rabbins, ibid. Amount of this in British sterling, ibid.

Scut of Patria, where situated, Acts xiii. 4.

Scut, era of the or era of Antiochus, account of the, Preface to Matt. v.

Self-love, what, in the only proper Scriptural sense of the term, Matt. xix. 19.

Semir, account by Diogenes Siculus of the marches of this monarch into Media and Persia, Matt. iii. 3.

Semir, לדרת, a phrase of frequent occurrence in the Jewish writings, Matt. i. 1. Its import, ibid.

Septuagint version, great importance of, to every minister of the word of God, Heb. i. 6.

Septuagint, Lucan's account of the terrible effects of the bite of a, Acts xxviii. 6. Septuagint.

Septuagint, this word shown not fully to express the sense of the original, Rom. i. 1.

Septuagint and Fur, its actual use synonymously, and why Tit. ii. 10.

Septuagint, a number of perfection or completion among the Hebrews, Matt. xii. 45.

Septuagint Churches of Asia Minor, Rev. David Lindsay's account of their present condition, Rev. v. iii, in fine.

Septuagint, things erected before the foundation of the world, according to the rabbins, Matt. xxv. 31.

Shabbath, relation in this Talmudical tract very similar to our Lord's parable of the merchantmen seeking goodly pearls, Matt. xiii. 45.

Shadiv of death, שדיו, שדיו, observations on this remarkably energetic expression, which is of frequent occurrence in the sacred Scriptures, Matt. iv. 16.

Shah Jahan, circumstantial description of a gold circular coin of this great Mogul prince, 2 Tim. ii. 1, in fine.

Shalom, a term frequent in Hebrew salutations, its import, Matt. x. 12, 31.

Shammatha, שמתה, the most dreadful of all the Jewish excommunications, 1 Cor. xvi. 22. Some account of it, ibid.

Shark, the original word σαρξ should rather be understood of a species of this fish than of the whale, and why, Matt. xii. 40.

Sharp, (Granville) his remarks on the pretended supremacy of the bishop of Rome, Luke ix., in fine.

Sheekakim, שְׁחָקִים, the third heaven, according to the rabbins, 2 Cor. xii. 2.

Sleep, an ancient custom in eastern countries for the shepherd to go at the head of his, and they to follow him from pasture to pasture, John x. 4. A circumstance of this kind witnessed by the author on the extensive downs in the western parts of England, ibid.

Shepherds of the people, ποιμένες λαου, a title given by the ancient Greeks to sovereign princes, Matt. ii. 6.

Shewbread, why probably so named, Matt. xii. 4. Parkhurst's thoughts on its typical import, ibid.

Shibba, שִׁבָּה, among the rabbins, the name of an evil spirit, Matt. xv. 2.

Shields, account of the different sorts of, employed by the ancients, Eph. vi. 13.

Ship, the original word thus rendered more frequently means a fishing-bout, Matt. iv. 22.

Shor of the ancients, properly only a sole tied round the foot and ankle with strings or thongs, Mark i. 7.

Shoes, putting on, taking off, and carrying the, of their masters, the work of the vilest slaves among the Jews, Greeks, and Romans, Matt. iii. 11.

Shophet, שׁוֹפֵט, a term applied by the rabbins to the hole in the public alms-chest, Matt. vi. 2.

Showing good works, or good things, a Hebraism, John x. 32. Its import, ibid.

Shrine of our lady of Lorn, supposed by the Italian papists to have been a Divine gift to their country, Acts xix. 35.

Sicarii, Σικαριῶται, why assassins were so named, according to Josephus, Acts xxi. 38.

Signs of the approaching destruction of Jerusalem, observations on the, contained in our Lord's prophecy to his disciples, Matt. xxiv. 1-7.

Sikkir, the same with the cupepa of the Greeks, Luke i. 15. How made, according to the Hedaya, ibid. One of the four prohibited liquors among the East Indian Moslimans, ibid.

Silence in heaven for the space of half an hour, Sir Isaac Newton's very beautiful explanation of this phrase, Rev. viii. 3.

Siloam, pool of, where situated, John ix. 7. The Turks have this fountain in great veneration, ibid. Thought by Calmet to be the same with En-rogel, or Fuller's Fountain, mentioned in the Old Testament, ibid.

Simon, Claude's remarks on the song and prophecy of this holy man, Luke ii., in fine.

Simkinthis, Σικκινθῖς, what, Acts xix. 12.

Simon Magus, various opinions and legends concerning the heresy of this man, Acts viii. 9, 21. Very remarkable various remarks in the Scripture account of Simon Magus, Acts viii. 10, 21.

Sin, notions of, irritated by the law, Rom. vii. 8, &c. Citations from Livy, Horace, and Ovid, in which this evil propensity in man is acknowledged, ibid.

Sin unto death, and sin unto death, import of these Jewish phrases, 1 John v. 16.

Singing, remarks on the use and abuse of, in the Church of God, 1 Cor. xiv. 15.

Singular number, the ancient Hebrews not unfrequently subjoined the plural to the, Matt. xxvi. 5; xxvii. 41.

Sinners, See ἁμαρτωλοί.

Sin-offering. See Ἀπομάρτυρον.

Silphus, the general picture of the ancient Jews when commenting on the sacred Scripture, or the traditions of the elders, Luke iv. 16.

Sitting at the feet of the rabbi said to be the usual posture of a Jewish scholar while listening to his instructions, Luke x. 39. This statement controverted by Vitranga, Acts xxii. 3.

Sikhote and siru-sir, see number of the beast.

Skand, σκάνδαλον, explanation of this word by Suidas, Matt. v. 23.

Σκευή ὑποκριτικῆς and Σκευὴ καρπικῆς, distinction between, according to Chrysostom, 2 Cor. iv. 7.

Σκνῆμα, σκνῆμα, import of this Hebraism, Acts ix. 15.

Σκηνοποιοί, various conjectures concerning the nature of the employment intended by this term, Acts xviii. 3.

Slavery, among the ancients, as described by Dr. John Taylor, 1 Cor. vii., in fine.

Slaves, ceremonies observed by our Saxon ancestors in the enfranchisement of slaves, 1 Cor. vii., in fine.

Slavonian or Russian version of the New Testament, account of the, Introduction to the Gospels and Acts, p. 22.

Sleep, common metaphor among the Jews for death, John xi. 11. Probably used by them to signify their belief in the immateriality of the soul and the resurrection of the body, John xi. 11. Saying of Menander respecting the beneficial effects of sleep, John xi. 12.

Sleep of the soul, from the moment of the death of the body till the resurrection, a doctrine which cannot be legitimately deduced from the sacred oracles, 2 Cor. v. 6.

Smyrna, some account of this ancient city, Rev. i. 11. Its present appellation, ibid.

Social worship among Christians, thoughts respecting, Heb. x. 25.

Socrates, remarkable passage in the last conversation of this great philosopher with his friends, 2 Pet. i. 15.

Sohar Chadash, citation from, similar to our Lord's parable of the talents, Matt. xxv. 15.

Solea, among the Romans, what, Mark vi. 9.

Son, in the Jewish phraseology, a man who has any good or bad quality is called the son or child of that quality, Luke x. 6. A person is sometimes called the son or child of what he is doomed to, ibid. Examples of these different acceptations, ibid.

Son of David, an appellation of the Messiah among the Jews, Matt. ix. 27.

Son of God, when applied to the Messiah, points out his miraculous conception in the womb of the virgin, Mark i. 1. This appellation not given to the Divine nature of Christ, but to that holy person born of the virgin by the energy of the Holy Ghost, Luke i. 35; Heb. i. 5. Essential absurdity of the contrary doctrine, ibid.; Acts xiii. 33. Remarks on that passage in Mark's Gospel which states the Son of God to have been ignorant of the time in which the Jewish polity should be destroyed by the Romans, Mark xiii. 32.

Song of the blessed virgin, parts into which this inimitable piece of poetry is obviously divisible, Luke i. 54.

Sons of thunder, import of this Hebraism, Mark iii. 17.

Sons of Zebulon, probable import of the very extraordinary petition of the mother of these apostles to our Lord, Matt. xx. 21.

Soothsayer, derivation and import of this word, Acts xvi. 16.

Sorcerei, a word of French origin, Acts viii. 9.

Σωτηρ, definition of this word by Minert, Luke ii. 11. ἡ σωτηρία and σωτηρ nearly of the same import, John i. 17; Acts v. 28.

Soul, doctrine of the materiality of the, has no place in the sacred records, Matt. x. 28; Act. vii. 59.

Σπουδαίον ἡμῶν ἀπορίας, a very elegant and expressive metaphor employed by our Lord for that supremacy of intention and purity of affection with which the supreme good should be pursued, Matt. vi. 22.

Spheres of the planets by which in their descent to the earth (no matter what their surface, volubility, masses, or specific gravities, provided they are weighy enough not to be sensibly affected by the action on the atmosphere) bring as the squares of the times of falling; or in other words the velocities being as the squares of the space fallen through, a very plain illustration of the attraction of the earth, Heb. xi., in fine. The periodic times of the planets being in sesquialteral geometrical proportion to their mean distances from the sun, a most manifest evidence that the influence of the earth on falling bodies is precisely of the same nature with that which emanates from the sun, and retains the planets in their orbits, ibid.

Σπαραγμοί, the meaning of this word illustrated by a remarkable passage from an epistle of Tibanus to Eubulus, 1 Tim. v. 6.

Spell, derivation and import of this word, Preface to Matthew.

Σόπαις, or Seal, among the ancients, a figure cut in a stone, and that set in a ring, by which letters of credence and authority were stamped, 1 Cor. ix. 2.

Spira, according to some the same with the Roman cohort, John xviii. 3. The fortieth part of a legion, according to Raphelius, ibid.

Spirit, existence of an immaterial and immortal, in man, demonstrated, Matt. x. 28; Luke xxiii. 43, 46, xxiv. 37.

Spirit of God, office of this person of the holy Trinity in the work of man's redemption, Matt. iii. 11; John iii. 5.

Spirits in prison, observations on this remarkable expression attributed to St. Peter, 1 Pet. iii. 19. Various readings of this passage in the manuscripts and versions, ibid.

Σπλῆχνιστος, Minter's definition of this word, Matt. ix. 36.

Splinter, a more proper rendering of καρπός than that contained in our common English version, Matt. vii. 3.

Spring Fast, or Lent, the only annual fast observed in the primitive Church, Matt. ix. 15. Kept in commemoration of the time the body of our Saviour lay in the grave, ibid. Discordant opinions among ancients and moderns relative to the duration of this fast, ibid. Τεσσακοστή and Quadragesima, the Greek and Latin names for this fast, shown to have originally meant a fast of the duration of forty weeks, and not of forty days, ibid.

Squares of the periodic times of the planets being to each other as the cubes of the semi-major axes of their orbits, or, which is the same thing, as the cubes of their mean distances from the sun, a wonderful law by which the whole solar system is governed, Heb. xi., in fine.

Stadium, a measure of length among the Romans, Luke xxiv. 13. Arbuthnot's statement of the number of yards in the stadium, ibid.

Standards, different sorts of, among the ancient Romans, Rev. xii. 14.

Standing, the posture of the Jews when reading either the law or prophecies, Luke iv. 16.

Star which guided the magi to the place of our Lord's nativity, probably a simple meteor provided for the occasion, Matt. ii. 2, 9.

Stars, fixed, Table of the most remarkable fixed stars from the first to the sixth magnitude, 1 Cor. xv., in fine.

Stars, falling, see Falling stars.

Stater, value of this ancient piece of money, Matt. xvii. 27, xxvi. 15.

Statute, judicious criticism of a very learned writer on the original word thus rendered in our common version, Matt. vi. 27.

Stole, method of gilding, 1 Pet. i., in fine.

Στεφανος ἀκροθίνος, see Crown of thorns.

Steward of the household, who, Luke viii. 3. Derivation of the word steward, according to Junius, ibid.

Stibium, or stibium, employed in Asiatic countries to the present day, in staining the eyes, 1 Tim. ii. 10.

Stocks, description of this ancient mode of punishment, Acts xvi. 24.

Stoics, a very remarkable sect of ancient philosophers founded by Zeno, Acts xvii. 18. Why so named, ibid. Brief sketch of their doctrines, ibid.

Stola, Στολά, particular description of this part of the dress of the ancient Greek and Roman ladies, 1 Tim. ii. 9.

Stoning, Dr. Lightfoot's observations on the punishment of, among the Jews, Acts vii., in fine.

Strait Gate, Ἡ στενὴ πύλη, to what our Lord probably alluded in his use of this phrase, Matt. vii. 13. Observations on a very remarkable various reading of πύλη ἢ πύλη, Matt. vii. 14.

Strangers, hospitality to, a duty strongly inculcated in the Scriptures, Heb. xiii., in fine. The heathen considered those who entertained strangers to be under the peculiar protection of Jupiter, ibid. This sentiment very beautifully and forcibly expressed in the Odyssey, ibid.

Strato's Tower, the same with Cæsarea of Palestine, Acts x. 1.

Στρατοπεδάρχης, inquiry into the import of this word, Acts xxviii. 16.

Strymon, sacrifice of white horses to this river by the magi, Rom. ix., in fine.

Στρυγὼ implies to shiver with horror, and why, Tit. iii. 3.

Stupifying potions usually administered by the ancients to condemned malefactors to assuage their pains, Matt. xxvii. 34. Of what ingredients composed, according to the rabbins, ibid. Michaelis's critical inquiry into the kind of potion offered to our Lord while hanging on the cross, ibid. Dr. Marsh's sensible remarks upon this subject, ibid.

Styx, according to the heathen mythology, the river of hell, by which, if any of the gods swore falsely, he was for a certain time expelled from their society, Tit. iii. 3.

Subordination to the civil powers, great political question of, discussed, Rom. xiii. 1, et in fine.

Substantive verb, a very frequent acceptance of the, in the Hebrew, Chaldee, and Chaldaeo-Syriac languages, Matt. xxvi. 26; Rev. v. 8.

Suctovid, the god of war among the ancient Slavi, to whom a great number of prisoners were annually presented as a burnt-offering, Rom. ix., in fine. Supposed residence of this divinity, ibid.

Συκκαρῶν/ος, inquiry into the derivation and import of this word, Acts i. 26.

Suicide, a very frequent preventive of, finely expressed by one of our best poets, Heb. ii. 15.

Συνοβία, Dr. Taylor's definition of this term, Rom. i. 5.

Sun, standing still of the sun and moon at the command of Joshua explained agreeably to the Newtonian system of the universe, Matt. viii. 26. Method by which the distance and magnitude of the sun have been ascertained, James i., in fine.

Superstition, Superstition, origin of this word according to Cicero, James i. 27. Its definition by Lactantius, ibid. Distinction between religion and superstition, ibid.

Supremacy of the bishop of Rome, observations on this papistical tenet, Luke ix., in fine.

Supreme Being, very remarkable invocation of the, (translated from the original Sanscrit by Dr. C. Wilkin) still existing on a stone in a cave near the ancient city of Gya in the East Indies, Luke i. 68.

Surety and Mediator, inquiry into the import of the Greek words εγγύς and μεσίτης so translated, Heb. vii., in fine.

Swathing of the corpse, manner of the, among the Jews, John xi. 44.

Sweat of blood, Galen's statement of its cause, Luke xxii. 44. An instance of bloody sweat related by Thuanus, ibid.

Synchord, no character meaner in the sight of a Jew than that of a, Luke xv. 15. Not permitted by the Egyptians to mingle with civil society, nor to appear in the worship of the gods, ibid.

Sword by which a Jewish criminal was beheaded, why buried with him in the same grave, Acts viii. 2.

Synonym, probably the same with the synomere, Luke xvii. 6.

Sychar, situation of this city, John iv. 5. The same with Σιχάρ of the Old Testament, ibid. Its present appellation, ibid.

Synchord, Potter's account of the origin of this word, Luke xix. 8.

Synagogue, what number of persons considered necessary to compose a synagogue, Matt. iv. 23. Great number of synagogues in Jerusalem in the apostolic age, ibid. Enumeration of the chief things belonging to a synagogue, ibid. The Jewish place of worship governed by a council, over whom was a president, called the ruler of the synagogue, ibid. Times at which Divine service was performed by the Jews, ibid. Four kinds of men who enter the synagogues according to the rabbins, James i. 25. In ancient times, petty courts of judicature were held in the synagogues, James ii. 2.

Synesius, two passages from the third hymn of this Greek poet on the mode of the Divine existence, the sentiment of which was probably borrowed from St. Paul, 1 Tim. vi. 16.

Syracuse, account of the temporary preservation of this city by Archimedes, Acts xxviii. 12. Present condition of Syracuse, ibid.

Syriac version, account of the Syriac versions of the New Testament, Introduction to the Gospels and Acts, p. 22.

Syrtis Major, and Syrtis Minor, two quicksands near the African coast, Acts xxvii. 17.

Taberna, rendered lavarn, its general import, Acts xxviii. 15.

- Tabernacle, description of the, Heb. ix. 2. Typical import of the tabernacle and its contents, according to Cyril, Heb. ix. 5.
- Tabernacles, Feast of, how celebrated, John vii. 2.
- Tabittha, import of this name, Acts ix. 36.
- Tacitus, citation from his Roman history relative to the crucifixion of Christ and the horrible persecution of his followers, Matt. xxvii. 26.
- Talent of gold, amount, in British sterling, of ten thousand talents of gold and silver, Matt. xviii. 24.
- Talmud of Babylon, account of the, Matt. xv. 2.
- Talmud of Jerusalem, account of the, Matt. xv. 2.
- Tamisra, what, Matt. viii. 12.
- Tanchun, remarkable saying of this rabbin respecting the importance and excellence of implicit faith in the testimony of God, John xxi. 29.
- Tarassa, the ancient Tarsus, Acts ix. 11.
- Targum Yerushleny, singular comment in, relative to the two great lights of heaven, 1 Tim. i. 7.
- Tar-sis, a city formerly the capital of all Cilicia, Acts ix. 11. In what manner the inhabitants obtained the privilege of Roman citizens, ibid., xxii. 28. Citations from Xenophon, Josephus, and Ammianus Marcellinus, in attestation of the great respectability of this city, Acts xxi. 39.
- Tartarus, or hell, opinion of the ancients respecting, 2 Pet. ii. 4.
- Taxgatherers, or publicans, two classes of, in the land of Judea in the apostolic age, Matt. v. 46.
- Tertiaci, a tribe of the ancient Galatæ, Preface to Galatians.
- Teknia, a word frequently used by St. John, the whole force of which is not expressed in our English version, John xiii. 33. Anecdote related by Jerome respecting the frequent repetition of this word by the apostle to his flock in his old age, John xv. 12.
- Τελευωτικ, a word importing, among the primitive Christians, martyrdom, Phil. iii. 12. This shown by citations from Clemens Alexandrinus, Basil Magnus, Eusebius, and Eusebius, ibid.
- Tempest, superstitious practices of the ancient sailors during a, Acts xxvii. 11. The tempest supposed by the heathens to be occasioned by evil spirits, ibid. Sir George Taunton's account of similar superstitions among the Chinese, ibid.
- Temple, which ἱερόν the, was probably called ἡ ναὶα, or Beautiful, Acts iii. 2.
- Tenation, the Greek word περιπατος not fully expressed by this term, Matt. vi. 13. How the petition in the Lord's Prayer, in which this word is contained, was understood by several of the primitive fathers, ibid. The usual process of temptation pointed out, ibid. Observations on the three forms under which Satan tempts the human race, 2 Cor. xi. 11.
- Tentation of Christ in the wilderness, ingenious theory of a correspondence relative to the, Matt. iv., in fine.
- Temple of Jerusalem, apparent allusion of St. Paul to this appellation of Satan, Matt. iv. 11.
- Tertullian, the author of an apology for the Christians, still extant, 2 Tim. iv., in fine.
- Tertullus, observations on the oration of, against St. Paul, Acts xxiv. 2, 8.
- Tessera, of the ancients, what, and why so named, Rev. ii. 17.
- Tetragrammaton, an appellation of יהוה, Jehovah, on account of the number of letters it contains, 2 Cor. xii. 4; Rev. xix. 12. See Jehovah and Adonai.
- Tetrarch, meaning of this word, Matt. xiv. 1; Luke iii. 1.
- Tetraz, ΤΕΤΡΑΞ, one of the six Ephesian characters, Acts xix. 19. Its import, according to Hesychius, ibid.
- Tentative, an object of idolatrous worship among the ancient Gauls, to whom human victims were offered, Rom. ix., in fine.
- Thallus, citation from this writer, in which it is supposed by some there is an allusion to the preternatural darkness at the time of our Lord's crucifixion, Matt. xxvii. 45.
- Theotres often used by the ancients for popular assemblies and public deliberations, especially in matters which regarded the safety of the state, Acts xix. 29.
- Θεωω, in what sense this verb is frequently used in the Septuagint, Matt. xxvii. 43.
- Θηλυ, this appellation given by the ancients to the soul, which they considered the seat of the appetites and passions, and why, James i. 15.
- Θεος, several citations from the Septuagint in which this word with the article prefixed has the import of Oce, O God, Heb. i., in fine.
- Θεος εφανερωθη εν σαρκι, "God was manifested in the flesh," inquiry whether these words were originally in St. Paul's First Epistle to Timothy, 1 Tim. iii. 16.
- Θεος and Δαμων, distinction between, in heathen authors, Acts xvii. 18.
- Therapeutics of the ancient Jewish physicians in reference to hemorrhages, Mark v. 26.
- Thessalonians, First Epistle to the, generally believed to be the first letter which St. Paul addressed to any of the churches of Jesus Christ, Preface to the Epistle.
- Thessalonians, Second Epistle to the, what principally moved the apostle to write this letter, Preface to the Epistle. Parts into which it naturally divides itself, ibid.
- Thessalonica, a celebrated city of Macedonia, situated on what was formerly called the Thermaic Gulf, Acts xvii. 1. Different opinions concerning the origin of its name, ibid. Its present appellation, ibid. See also the Preface to the First Epistle to the Thessalonians.
- Theudas mentioned by St. Luke, very uncertain who, Acts v. 36.
- Third hour, remarks on this hour being stated by St. Mark to have been the period of the day in which our Lord's crucifixion commenced, Mark xv. 25.
- Third part, a rabbinism for a considerable number, Rev. viii. 8.
- Thirty pieces of silver, various readings of the passage of Scripture thus rendered, Matt. xxvi. 15.
- Thonias, import of this name, John xi. 16. Observations on the very remarkable exclamation of Thomas Didymus, when he first saw Christ after his resurrection, John xxi. 28. Strange trifling of some of the ancients and moderns relative to the import of this exclamation, ibid.
- Thomas de Contelupo, extract from a letter which Edward I wrote, at the instigation of his clergy, to Pope Clement V. relative to this bishop of Hereford, in which the gross superstition of that age is very conspicuous 1 Tim. iv. 2.
- Θωπας, or Breastplate, account of this ancient species of defensive armour, Eph. vi. 13.
- Thorn in the flesh with which St. Paul was afflicted, various conjectures concerning the, 2 Cor. xii. 7. The false apostle at Corinth most probably intended by this phrase, ibid.
- Thought, the import of the original term μεριμνα not fully expressed by this word, Matt. vi. 25.
- Thousand, very probably the name of a division of a Jewish tribe, in the same manner as certain divisions of our English counties are called hundreds, Matt. ii. 6.
- Thousand years, a mystical number among the rabbins, Rev. xx. 4. A famous number in heathen authors, ibid.
- Three heavenly witnesses, passages in St. John's First Epistle relative to the, most evidently spurious, 1 John v. 7, et in fine. Fac-simile of this disputed passage, and its context, from the Codex Montfortii in Trinity College, Dublin, 1 John v. 7. Fac-simile from the Editio Princeps of the Greek Testament printed at Complutum, ibid.
- Three days and three nights, what meant by this phrase, according to the Jewish mode of reckoning, Matt. xii. 40. Illustrated by some extracts from rabbinical writers, ibid.
- Three taverns, a place about thirty-three miles from Rome, in the Appian-way, Acts xxviii. 15. Quotations from Cicero and Zozimus in which this place is mentioned, ibid.
- Three years and six months, the duration of the great famine in the time of Ahab, according to Luke and James, how reconcileable with an apparently different statement in the First Book of Kings, Luke iv., in fine.
- Θρησκεια, to worship, origin of this word, according to Suidas, James i. 26. Indifferently applied to true religion and superstition, ibid.
- Thunders of the Apocalypse, very probable conjecture why seven in number, Rev. x. 3. Import of each of these thunders professed to be understood by some expositors,

- though the writer of the Apocalypse was not permitted to reveal what they uttered! Preface to the Revelation, and see chap. x. 3.
- Opua*, a metaphorical acceptance of this word, illustrated by quotations from Cicero and Ovid, Col. iv. 3.
- Opeser*, or Scuta, some account of this oblong shield of the ancients, Eph. vi. 13.
- Thyatira*, a city of Natolia, in Asia Minor, now called Ak'sat, and Akkissar, Rev. i. 11.
- Thyn*, Thyin, or Thyine, a tree mentioned by Homer, Theophrastus, and Pliny, Rev. xviii. 12.
- Tiberias*, sea of, its length and breadth according to Josephus and Pliny, John vi. 19.
- Tiberius Caesar*, character of this Roman emperor, Luke iii. 1.
- Tides*, phenomena and cause of the, Heb. xi., in fine.
- Tiger*, a vessel so named, according to Virgil, Acts xxviii. 11.
- Tigranes*, remarkable anecdote respecting, John xv. 13.
- Tith* frequently signifies a pecuniary recompense, or present, Acts xxviii. 10. Several examples produced, ibid.; 1 Tim. v. 18.
- Timothy*, biographical sketch of this minister of Jesus Christ, to whom two apostolical letters in the sacred canon are addressed, Preface to the First Epistle.
- Timothy, First Epistle to*, the time when, and the place from which, it was probably written, discussed at considerable length, Preface to the Epistle. This apostolical letter of great use to every minister of the Gospel, ibid.
- Timothy, Second Epistle to*, observations of Dr. Paley and Lewis Capellus relative to the date of this apostolical letter, Preface to the Epistle.
- Tippoo Sultan*, remarkable form of prayer used by, Matt. vi. 7.
- Titon*, Teurav, a name famous for containing the Apocalyptic number 666, a number supposed by Wetstein and others to have an allusion to the name of the Roman emperor Titus, who was an instrument in the hand of God of dissolving the whole Jewish polity, Preface to the Revelation. Without the last letter the name contains 616, a various reading of the number of the beast supported by some very respectable manuscripts, ibid.
- Tithnai tu a eis ti*, a phrase frequent among the purest Greek writers, 1 Pet. ii. 8. Its import, ibid.
- Titles*, Dr. Taylor's observations on the titles bestowed on Christians in the New Testament, 1 John ii., in fine.
- Titus*, inscription in honour of, extracted from Gruter's work, Matt. xxiv. 34.
- Titus, Triumphal Arch of*, on what account erected, Matt. xxiv. 3. Still exists in the Via Sacra, leading from the forum to the amphitheatre, ibid. Particular description of the devices and inscription on this arch, Matt. xxiv. 34.
- Titus*, biographical sketch of this frequent companion of St. Paul, Preface to Titus.
- Titus, Epistle to*, great affinity between this apostolical letter and St. Paul's First Epistle to Timothy, Preface to Titus.
- Tolistobaii*, a tribe of the ancient Galatæ, Preface to Galatians.
- Tombs of the dead*, why the Jewish tombs were white-washed, Matt. xxiii. 27.
- Tongue*, curious rabbinical saying relative to the, James iii. 10.
- Tongue of fire*, a Hebraism, Acts ii. 3. Its import, ibid. Examples of a similar Hebraism, ibid.
- Tongue of the heart*, what has been so denominated, Matt. vii. 16.
- Topaz*, description of this precious stone, Rev. xxi. 20.
- Τοπος*, a very frequent import of this term in the sacred and apocryphal writings, John xi. 48.
- Tormentors, delivering over to the*, Asiatic custom to which these words have an allusion, Matt. xviii. 34.
- Tormil*, תורמיל, in what sense this word is used by the rabbins, Matt. x. 10.
- Tortures* of a very cruel description among the Asiatics to induce confession, Matt. xviii. 34.
- Τοξον*, or bow, a military weapon of the ancients, Eph. vi. 13.
- Τραχηλιω*, inquiry into the import of this word, Heb. iv. 13.
- Trachonitis*, where situated, Luke iii. 1.
- Traditionists*, a Jewish sect, who interpreted the Divine testimonies agreeably to the decisions of the elders, 1 Cor. viii. 1.
- Traditions of the Jewish elders*, remarks upon the, Matt. xv. 2, et in fine.
- Transfiguration of our Lord*, impious trifling of some of the foreign critics on the Scripture account of the, Matt. xviii., in fine.
- Transmigration of souls*, a Pythagorean doctrine. See Metempsychosis.
- Transposition* in the Greek text, Matt. vii. 6.
- Transpositions* in the Hebrew text, some instances of, Matt. vii. 6.
- Transubstantiation*, doctrine of, shown to be in direct opposition to the plain tenor of Holy Writ, Matt. xxvi. 26. When this doctrine was first advanced among the Romanists, Rev. xiii. 6. Date of its full reception as an article of the Roman Catholic faith, ibid.
- Treasure*, Hebrew and Greek words so translated import any kind of store or collection, Rom. ii. 5.
- Treasure hid in a field*, a phrase very generally misunderstood, Matt. xiii. 44.
- Truth*, truth, up of, how far this is consistent with the Christian character and profession, Matt. vi. 19.
- Trees of God*, import of this Hebraism, Luke vi. 12.
- Trepas*, remarkable difference in import between παμπαρα, which is thus rendered in our common version, and αδρινατα, translated by the same word in the Book of Common Prayer, Matt. vi. 15.
- Triorin*, who, among the Romans, Matt. viii. 9.
- Tribute*, supposed amount of the Jewish, paid into the imperial exchequer after the destruction of the temple, Matt. xxii. 21.
- Tribute money*, the τα διδραχμα thus rendered in our common version alludes not to a tax to be paid to the Roman government, but to a tax for the support of the temple, Matt. xvii. 24.
- Trinity*, doctrine of the, shown to be a doctrine of Scripture, Matt. iii. 16, xix. 17, xxviii. 19; John i., in fine; 2 Cor. xiii. 14; Eph. ii. 18.
- Trinity of the Hindoos*, account of the, Luke i. 68.
- Triumph*, particular description of this public and solemn honour conferred by the ancient Romans on a victorious general, 2 Cor. ii. 11.
- Trocmi*, a tribe of the ancient Galatæ, Preface to Galatians.
- Troy*, supposed situation of, Acts xvi. 8.
- Trumpet-holes*, שופרות, shepheroth, what, Matt. vi. 2.
- Trumpets of the Apocalypse*, what they import, according to Wetstein, Preface to the Revelation. Mr. Lowman's scheme of interpretation, Rev. xxii., in fine.
- Truth* was of small account among many even of the best heathens, Eph. iv. 25. Dr. Whitby's collection of some of their maxims on this subject, ibid.
- Tsidekah*, or Tsid-keth, צדקה, a common word among the Jews for charity, Matt. vi. 1. Striking contrast between the ancient and modern acceptations of this word, ibid.
- Tuisco*, an object of idolatrous worship among the ancient Germans, Rom. ix., in fine.
- Tunicus Popellus*, why the common people of Rome were so named, Luke vi. 29.
- Τυπος διδαχης*, import of this figurative expression, Rom. vi. 17.
- Tutelary deity*, image of the, was placed at the entrance of the city to signify that he was the guardian and protector, Acts xiv. 13.
- Twelve years*, the age at which, according to the Jewish canons, a child was obliged to begin to learn a trade, Luke ii. 41.
- Twice born*, a term used by the Brahmins in the same sense as born again among the Christians, Luke i. 15.
- Twice dead*, how this phrase is to be understood, Jude 12.
- Twilight*, rules by which it was distinguished by the rabbins, Mark xvi. 2.
- Twin*, a word of Saxon origin, John xi. 16.
- Υιος Θεου* and Ο Υιος του Θεου, critical observation on the difference of import between these two Scriptural phrases, Matt. xiv. 33.

Ulatoo, or Ullaloo, particular description of, Matt. ix. 32.
Unbelief, good saying of Quesnel respecting, Matt. xiii. 58.
Unam sanctam, citation from this celebrated papal document, Rev. xiii. 15.
Uncircumcision, different species of, as enumerated by Rabbi Seira, Acts vii. 51.
Unction, prophets, priests, and kings, among the Jews, consecrated by, in order that they might legitimately exercise their respective offices, Matt. i. 16; Luke ii. 11. What unction considered an emblem of, ibid.
Understanding, general definition of this term, Rom. viii. 16; Eph. i. 18. Philo's definition of the Greek word voys, which is sometimes thus rendered, Eph. i. 18.
Uninterrupted succession boasted of in the Romish Church, shown to be a mere fable, Rom. xvi. 15; Heb. v. 4.
Universal restoration, remarks on this antisciptural tenet, Matt. v. 26.
Uncavened bread shown to be necessary in the proper administration of the Lord's Supper, Matt. xxvi. 26.
Unregenerate mind, apostolic doctrine of the perpetual struggles of two opposite principles in the, when enlightened by natural or revealed religion, Rom. vii. 15, &c. Citations from Ovid, Terence, Horace, Arrian, and Euripides, in which these two opposing principles in man are acknowledged, and very forcibly expressed, ibid. Relation of a very remarkable anecdote by Xenophon in his life of Cyrus, which is strongly illustrative of this doctrine, Rom. vii. 20.
Υπερης, imports of this word, 1 Cor. iv. 1.
Υποκριτης, hypocrite, derivation and import of this word, Matt. vi. 5.
Υποστασις, hypostasis, meaning of this term, Heb. xi. 1.
Upper rooms in private houses formerly used by the Jews for the purposes of devotion, Acts i. 13. The upper room in which the apostles with some others were assembled after the ascension of our Lord, and at the election of Matthias, probably an apartment of the temple, ibid.
Uro, citations from Terence and Virgil to show that this word sometimes imports to rex or trouble, 1 Cor. vii. 9.
Ushwamedha, or solemn sacrifice of the white horse, description of this very remarkable Hindoo ceremony, Rom. ix., in fine.
Uttermost forth, 'Ο εσχατος κοδωντης, import of this phrase, Matt. v. 26. This expression as figuratively used by our Lord, when considered in connection with its context, gives not the least support to the doctrines of purgatory and universal restoration, ibid.
Vagabond, ancient and modern acceptations of this word, Acts xix. 13.
Vain repetitions, see Repetitions.
Valley of Salt, Maundrell's description of the, Matt. v. 13.
Various readings in the Scriptures, thoughts on the, with an enumeration of the sources whence almost the whole of them have sprung, Introduction to the Gospels and Acts, p. 11, &c. Excellent remark of Dr. Mill on their immense number, ibid., p. 12. A collection of, for the New Testament, made from ancient Greek MSS., see end of the New Testament.
Vates and Poeta, synonymous terms among the Romans, Tit. i. 12.
Veeshnoo, among the Hindoos, the Deity in his preserving quality, Luke i. 68; John i. 14.
Veil of the temple, typical import of the rendering of the, at the time of our Lord's dismissing his spirit, Matt. xxvii. 51.
Velum, or curtain, וָלוֹן, the first of the seven heavens, according to the rabbins, 2 Cor. xii. 2.
Verbs which express the accomplishment of a thing often to be understood as only signifying the beginning of that accomplishment, Luke v. 6. An example produced, ibid.
Verriculum, definition of this word by Martinus, Matt. xiii. 47.
Versions of the New Testament, short account of the, Introduction to the Gospels and Acts, p. 17, &c.
Vespasian, description of the coin struck by this emperor at the capture of Jerusalem, Matt. xxiv. 34.

Vessels of earth and silver, very interesting and instructive sayings of the rabbins relative to, 2 Cor. iv. 7.
Vials of the Apocalypse, their import, according to Wetstein, Preface to the Revelation. Lowman's scheme of interpretation, Rev. xxii., in fine. Mr. Robert Fleming's very remarkable explanation of the hieroglyphic of an angel pouring out his vial upon the sun, Rev. xvi. 8.
Vicarious sacrifices, after the similitude of the Jewish scape-goat, have been common among most ancient nations, Matt. xx. 28; John xi. 51; Rom. ix., in fine, 1 Cor. iv. 13.
Victim of the heathens, an ancient custom to set a sea upon that deemed proper for sacrifice, John vi. 27. This illustrated by a quotation from Herodotus, ibid. How the ancient heathens adorned their sacrificial victims, Acts xiv. 13. This illustrated by citations from Ovid and Virgil, ibid.
Vile, whence this name is probably derived, John iii. 20.
Villani, among our Saxon ancestors, who, 1 Cor. vii., in fine.
Vinegar, whence this word is derived, Matt. xxvii. 34. A common drink of the Roman soldiers, Luke xxiii. 36.
Virginity of Mary, previously to the birth of our Lord, an article of the utmost consequence to the Christian system, Matt. i. 25. The doctrine of her perpetual virginity, so much insisted on by the Romanists, a mere chimera, Matt. i. 25, xii. 46, xiii. 55; John vii. 3.
Volumen, Volume, why the Romans gave this appellation to a book, Heb. x. 7.
Vulgate, or Latin version of the Scriptures by Jerome, some account of the, Introduction to the Gospels and Acts, p. 22.
Wages of a Roman soldier per diem, Luke iii. 14.
Waking of the dead, practised among the ancient Greeks, Acts ix. 37. A similar custom still observed among the native Irish, ibid.
Wandering stars, Αστέρες πλανηται, why this phrase should not be understood of the planets, but rather of the ignes fatui, Jude 13.
Washing the corpse before interment, and before it was laid out to lie in state, a custom of very remote antiquity, Acts ix. 37.
Washing the feet of a superior, a custom observed by the Hindoos, Luke vii. 41. The office of the meanest slaves, John xiii. 5.
Washing the hands, a religious ceremony among Jews and Mohammedans, Mark vii. 3. Washing the hands in token of innocence an ancient rite among the Hebrews, Greeks, and Romans, Matt. xxvii. 24.
Watches, into how many the night was divided, Matt. xiv. 25; Mark xv. 25.
Watchmen in the temple, on constant duty, Luke xxii. 4.
Water, constituent parts of, 2 Pet. iii. 10.
Water baptism, see Baptism.
Water crinking, saying of Libanius respecting, 1 Tim. v. 23.
Water, (Dr.) late bishop of Llandaff, character of his Apology for the Bible, 2 Tim. iv., in fine.
Wax-beard or cloth, employed by the ancients to write upon, Luke i. 63.
Weather, signs of fair and foul, according to the Jews and Romans, Matt. xvi. 2, 3.
Wedding, account of the celebration of a, in Persia, as given in the Zend Avesta, Matt. xxv. 7.
Weeping, days of, what, among the Jews, John xi. 31. On what account they were succeeded by the seven days of lamentation, ibid.
Wells in the East, some of the Indian devotees accustomed to stand with a girbah to give drink to weary travellers, Matt. x. 42.
Whale, a very improper rendering of κητος, Matt. xii. 40.
What have we to do with the? import of this Jewish phrase, which is of frequent occurrence in the sacred oracles, Matt. viii. 29.
Whited sepulchres or whitewashed tombs, see Tombs.
White bulls without blemish offered in sacrifice to Apis by the ancient Egyptians, John vi. 27. Curious mode

- adopted by the Egyptians to ascertain whether the animal was proper for sacrifice, ibid.
- Whoredom, the only case in which the Author of the Christian religion admits of divorce, Matt. v. 32. The idolatries of the Jews very frequently termed whoredom in the prophetic writings, Rev. xvii. 1.
- Wicked one, ὁ πονηρὸς, derivation and import of this appellative of the great adversary of mankind, Matt. vi. 13, xiii. 19. Ἀπο τοῦ πονηροῦ, in the Lord's Prayer, should be rendered from the wicked one, and not as in our common version, Matt. vi. 13. See also 1 John v. 19.
- Widow's son of Nain, reflections on the resurrection of the, Luke vii., in fine.
- Will, observations on the freedom of the, Matt. vi. 10; Phil. ii. 13.
- Will worship, Εὐλασθησικεια, observations on the meaning of this word, as used by the apostle, Col. ii. 23.
- Wind of God, import of this Hebraism, Luke vi. 12.
- Wine, laws among the ancient Greeks and Romans, relative to the drinking of, mixed and unmixed, 1 Tim. v. 23.
- Wine of three leaves, what meant by this phrase among the rabbins, Luke v. 39.
- Wisdom, definition of, by Sir W. Temple, Eph. i. 8. The wisdom that is from above, חכמה עליונה choemah aliona, a very favourite expression among the rabbins, of which some examples are produced, James iii., in fine. Dr. Lightfoot's observations on a fourfold wisdom mentioned by St. Paul, 1 Cor. ii. 6.
- Woden, a principal divinity of the ancient Swedes, to whom human victims were very frequently offered, Rom. ix., in fine. Account of the grand festival formerly celebrated every ninth year to this idol, ibid. A similar abomination practised by the ancient Danes and Norwegians, ibid.
- Wo unto thee, the original words ovai σοι, thus rendered, to be understood rather as an exclamation of pity, than a denunciation of judgment, Matt. xi. 21, xviii. 7.
- Woman taken in adultery, account of this circumstance in St. John's Gospel, translated from the Codex Bezae and other MSS., John vii., in fine.
- Women employed in eastern countries in grinding the corn, Matt. xxiv. 40, 41. Political condition of woman under the ancient Roman government, 1 Tim. ii. 12. Their state under the British laws, ibid. Women, especially those advanced in years, employed by the ancients as porters, John xviii. 17. Examples produced, ibid. Ancient method of purifying women who were appointed to be consorts to kings, Eph. v. 26.
- Works, beautiful personification of, Rev. xiv. 13.
- World, this word sometimes used for land or country, Matt. iv. 8, xxvii. 15; Luke ii. 1. Destruction of the world by fire, an ancient opinion among the heathens, 2 Pet. iii. 12. Notions of the ancients respecting the origin and formation of the world, 2 Pet. iii. 5. Very affecting apostolical account of the moral condition of the world, 1 John v. 19.
- Wormwood, supposed import of the Apocalyptic hieroglyphic of a star so named, which fell from heaven upon the third part of the rivers and fountains of water, Rev. viii. 12.
- Worship, reflections upon that species of, which can alone be acceptable in the sight of God, Matt. xv. 9.
- Worshipping of images, consideration of a passage of Scripture which the Romanists allege in favour of, Heb. xi. 21.
- Watteth, its derivation and import, Acts iii. 17.
- Writing of divorce sent, see Divorce.
- Writing-table, or little board, Dr. Shaw's description of the, used by the boys in Barbary, and also by the Jewish children, Luke i. 63.
- Ξιφος, a sort of ancient sword originally made of brass, Eph. vi. 13.
- Ya'acub, ibn Leits Saffer, remarkable anecdote respecting, Luke xiv. 1.
- Ye ho wah, import of this phrase used by the Indians of North America in their religious worship, Rev. xix. 1.
- Yod and point, see One jot and tittle.
- Yoke, formerly a custom at Rome to put the necks of those to be crucified into a yoke, and to stretch out their hands and fasten them to the end of it; and having thus led them through the city, to carry them to the place of execution, John xxi. 18. How the word γυαρά, rendered Yoke, has been figuratively employed by the Jews, Matt. xi., in fine.
- Yom, יום, examples in which this word is taken in the sense of judgment, 1 Cor. iv. 3.
- Yuchanan, parable of this rabbi similar to that of our Lord concerning the wise and foolish virgins, Matt. xxv. 1.
- Zacharias or Zechariah, import of this name, Luke i. 60.
- Zalcucus, law of, against the drinking of unmixed wine, unless prescribed by a physician, 1 Tim. v. 23.
- Zorphan, remarkable saying of this rabbi, Matt. vii. 5.
- Zal, description of that species of, which every minister of Jesus Christ should possess, 1 Cor. iv., in fine. Remarkable saying of a pious papist respecting that species of zeal which prompts to the extirpation of heretics and wicked men, Matt. xiii. 29.
- Zebul, זבול, the fourth heaven of the rabbins, 2 Cor. xii. 2. זבול zehul, du ig, or dung' il, a very common Jewish appellation of an idol or an idol temple, Matt. x. 25.
- Zebulun, situation of the country of the descendants of this patriarch, Matt. iv. 15.
- Zealot, Zeal, derivation and import of this Greek word, Acts v. 17.
- Zelotes, a surname given by the Jews to certain persons, and why, Luke vi. 15.
- Zend Artu, citation from this work in which is contained an account of the celebration of a wedding in Persia, Matt. xxv. 7.
- Zeno, the founder of the Stoic sect, when and where born, Acts xvii. 18.
- Zizania, inquiry into the import of this word, Matt. xiii. 25.
- Zwa, very improperly rendered beasts in our version, Rev. iv. 6.
- Zuqa or girdle, account of this species of defensive armour among ancients and moderns, Eph. vi. 13.

AN

INTRODUCTION TO THE FOUR GOSPELS,

AND TO THE

ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

CONTAINING

INFORMATION NECESSARY TO A PROPER UNDERSTANDING OF THE VARIOUS REFERENCES FOUND IN THE NOTES ON THESE BOOKS

THE introduction, so long promised, giving an account of the manuscripts, versions, &c., referred to in this work, is at last before my readers; and could not, with any propriety, have been published sooner, as the Gospel history could not be considered complete till the book of the Acts was finished. As the chronology of the New Testament ends with the two years' imprisonment of Paul at Rome, it may be thought needless to carry it any farther down: but as there is some reason to believe that he visited Rome a second time, and suffered martyrdom there about A. D. 64 or 65; and as learned men have agreed that the Apocalypse, which completes the canon of the New Testament, was not written till about the year 96; I have thought it necessary to carry down the chronology through the whole of the first century of the Christian era; that, if I should not have health or life to proceed any farther in this work, that important part should be left in a state of tolerable perfection. I have proceeded on the same plan with the four gospels, and the book of the Acts, as I have done with the Pentateuch and the book of Joshua; and have reason to thank God that he has spared me to go through (in the manner I first proposed) with these two most important parts of that revelation which his mercy has granted to man. In the first, (the Pentateuch and the book of Joshua,) the history of the world and its original inhabitants, and the history of the Church, are brought down from the creation to the final settlement of the Israelites in the promised land. In the second, (the four gospels and book of Acts,) I have deduced the important events of the Christian dispensation from six years before the vulgar era, down to the year 100. This chronology is as rich in the necessary eras as that which is attached to the book of Deuteronomy, and has, I hope, left nothing unnoticed that belongs to such a work. The account of MSS., versions, &c., is necessarily short: I could not proceed farther in this description, without involving much of that sort of Biblical criticism which could not be advantageous to general readers. I have, therefore, only introduced what I deemed necessary for a proper understanding of the references to be found in the commentary itself.

I have purposely avoided the question concerning the authenticity of the sacred writings in general. On a thorough conviction, I assume the fact, that they are a Divine record, a revelation from God. This has been so amply proved that the Christian cause has had a complete triumph. I consider, therefore, the question to be for ever at rest. As to the particular books, scriptures, or Scripture facts, to which objections have been made, I have carefully considered them as they occur in their respective places; and I hope I have fully removed every such objection, and have exhibited the doctrines of the Gospel, and the facts of the evangelical history, in their own certain and steady light: at least, I have carefully laboured to do it; and, like the woman in the Gospel, I have done what I could.

When the great difficulty of my work is considered, no one will suppose that mistakes were avoidable; general consistency and correctness are all that candour can require. I have met with difficulties in every part of my undertaking, such as a commentator only can feel and estimate. On the Acts of the Apostles alone I have spent many months of almost incessant labour. Difficulties occurred in every page; and I could not proceed till I had made the way plain before me, and left it open to those who might come after. This alone is sufficient to account for the delay in this part, and for any casual mistakes into which I may have fallen: mistakes, if such there be, over which the candid reader will find little difficulty gently to draw the pen of correction remembering that it is much more easy to find faults than to mend them.

§ I. Concerning the MANNER in which Divine INSPIRATION was granted to the sacred writers.

The manner in which the Divine inspiration has been granted to the sacred writers, is a question of more than mere curiosity. As every work of God is done in an orderly, rational manner, so must this also; but we must take heed not to confine him to one particular form, and say, it must be thus and thus, or not at all. God is sovereign of his own ways, and so does his wondrous works that they may be had in everlasting remembrance. As he has spoken at sundry times to our fathers and predecessors, by the prophets and other inspired men; so has he done this in divers manners; ever adapting the manner to time, place, circumstance, &c. Hence we are not to look for a uniformity in the manner of communicating his inspirations, any more than we are to look for identity of time, place, and persons. He has done great things; and he has done all things WELL. On the inspiration of the Scriptures themselves, I must therefore refer my readers to those who have written professedly on the subject; but, on the mode of communicating that inspiration, I beg leave to make a few extracts from Dr. Whitby, who has written excellently on this point. After asserting that the apostles and evangelists indited these Scriptures by the assistance of the Holy Ghost; and that as the immediate succeeding ages did, so we at present securely may, rely upon them as a rule of faith, he proceeds to show:—

“ I. How this assistance may fitly be explained.

“ For explication of this Divine assistance, let it be considered,

“ 1. That prophecy is sometimes represented as the word of the Lord, and he is said to speak to the prophet; and, suitably to this metaphor, some illustration of the assistance of the Holy Spirit may be made from the analogy it bears to human conversation; thus, that as we convey our thoughts one to another by such words as, by the organs of hearing, make such a motion on their brain to whom we speak as gives them an idea of the words we utter, and by them of the things which by those words are signified, and so it is the impression made upon the brain which doth communicate our thoughts to them; so, when it pleased God to reveal his will to any person, it seems only necessary that he talk inwardly with them, that is, that he make such a motion on their brain as gives them a deep and clear idea of that which he intended to make known unto them: only the impression must then be made in such a manner and degree, and with such circumstances, as may make it certain to the inspired person that it derives from God. Now seeing, when we hear the voice of any one, or receive a letter from him, we may be certain from the knowledge we have of his voice, or his handwriting, that it is he indeed who speaks or writes to us; we may very well conceive that God can easily give such distinctive marks of what he inwardly speaks to us, or writes upon the tables of our hearts, as shall enable us to discern what he imprints upon them from any impression that shall otherwise be made upon them.

“ 2. Sometimes the prophet is in Scripture styled a seer, and his word a vision; and then the parallel, or the analogy, runs thus: As we see, by virtue of a light reflecting the species of things upon the retina of the eye, and thence deriving a peculiar motion to, and making a distinct impression on, the brain; so may the prophet be supposed to see what God reveals unto him, by a like motion of the Holy Spirit made upon his brain concerning it. And, as it is as easy to propose a material object to the view as to describe it by our words, so must it be as easy for God to dart such an impression or inward light upon the brain of the prophet, or spiritual man, as shall give him a more bright and sensible idea of things than if he did perceive them by the ear, or even view them by the eye. And as we more exactly discern a sensible object by the view than we know it by a description of it without that view, so the Jews say that prophecy במראת in vision is more excellent than that which comes only בחלום by dream, or in a dream, in which we seem to hear one talking with us.

“ Now though this impression may be sufficient to convince the prophet and inspired person that his revelation did indeed derive from God; yet, since this revelation was intended not for himself, but for the use of others, he, with the revelation, must be enabled, by some convincing proof, to evidence to those who were concerned to embrace it that he was sent indeed by God with such a message to them. Now of this they only could be satisfied by some outward marks or notes, of which they, by their senses, were enabled to judge, viz. The miracles wrought for confirmation of his testimony, or some prophetical prediction of something future and contingent, exactly verified in the event. And thus, says the apostle, was their preaching confirmed to the world; God bearing witness to them, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to his will, Heb. ii. 4.

“ The ways of prophecy, under the Old Testament, seem to be comprehended under these four heads, viz. Either the prophets received their revelation in a dream or trance, or in a vision, or by a voice from heaven, or by the secret suggestions of the Holy Ghost.

“ Now some of the apostles had their visions, 1st. Either by day, as Peter; for an ecstasy fell upon him, and he saw the heavens opened, and he heard a voice saying unto him, Arise, Peter, kill and eat, Acts x. 11. And this is called opapa, a vision, ver. 17. And by this, saith he, God taught me to call no man common or unclean, ver. 28. Or by NIGHT: Thus a vision of the night was seen by Paul, and a man speaking to him, in the vision of the night, Acts xvi. 9. 2dly. They had also the Spirit speaking to them; for the Spirit said to Peter, Behold, three men seek thee: arise, therefore, and go with them, nothing doubting, for I have sent them, Acts x. 20, 21. 3dly. And sometimes they had visions and revelations of the Lord, either by way of rapture to them, 2 Cor. xii. 2, or of conversation with them; as when Christ said to St. Paul, My grace is sufficient for thee, ver. 9. Here then are three kinds of revelation granted to the apostles; but then these things were mostly occasional, and accidental to them, in respect of their apostolical functions.

"Only the case of the Apostle Paul must here admit of an exception; for it being necessary for an apostle, that is, a witness of Christ's resurrection, to have seen the Lord risen from the dead, according to those words, Am I not an apostle? Have I not seen the Lord? 1 Cor. ix. 1; and for an apostle, not of man, neither by man, but by Jesus Christ, Gal. i. 1; to receive his message immediately from the Lord Jesus; Christ speaks thus to him, I have appeared unto thee for this purpose, to make thee a minister and a witness, both of those things which thou hast seen, and of those things in the which I will appear unto thee, Acts xxvi. 16. Which words contain a promise of an immediate instruction from Christ in his apostolical function. Whence this apostle declares, confirming that his declaration with an oath, the Gospel which was preached by me was not after man: for I neither received it of man, neither was I taught, (by man,) but (only) by the revelation of Jesus Christ, Gal. i. 11, 12. He therefore had his message from Christ, as Moses had from God, Christ speaking to him mouth to mouth, &c. See Num. xii. 7.

"But yet, that which enabled them for the inditing of these writings, as a rule of faith to all succeeding ages, was the internal and powerful assistance of the Holy Spirit.

"To proceed then to the consideration of the distinction made by some, viz. Of inspiration by suggestion, and inspiration of direction only: I say, then,

"First, Where there is no antecedent idea or knowledge of the things written for the good of others to be obtained from reason, or a former revelation, there, an inspiration of suggestion must be vouchsafed to the apostles, to enable them to make them known unto the world. But where there is an antecedent knowledge of the things to be indited, it can only be necessary that God should, either immediately, or by some special occasions, excite them to indite those things, and should so carefully preside over and direct their minds, whilst writing, as to suggest, or bring into their memories, such things as his wisdom thought fit to be written; and should not suffer them to err in the delivery of what was thus indited in his name, or which they had written as apostles of God the Father, and our Lord Jesus Christ.

"Secondly, In all their revelations of mysteries, or things which could not otherwise be made known to them, either by natural reason or antecedent revelation, they must be acknowledged to have had them by an immediate suggestion of the Holy Spirit. Hence, of these things, the apostle says, negatively, that the natural man (who only judges of things by his natural reason) cannot know them, because they are spiritually discerned, 1 Cor. ii. 14, i. e., they, being mysteries, can only be discerned by the revelation of the Spirit; and positively, that they spake the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the wisdom hid from former ages, which eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, nor had it entered into the heart of man to conceive, 1 Cor. ii. 7. And that because God had revealed these things to them by his Spirit, ver. 9, they having received the Spirit of God that they might know the things which are freely given to us of God, ver. 10. Thus was the mystery of the calling of the Gentiles into an equality of privileges with the believing Jews made known unto them; for God by revelation, saith St. Paul, made known to me the mystery of Christ, which in other ages was not made known, as it is now revealed to his holy apostles and prophets by the Spirit; that the Gentiles should be fellow heirs, and of the same body, and partakers of his promise in Christ, by the Gospel, Eph. iii. 3, 4, 5, 6; chap. i. 9; vi. 19; Col. i. 26, 27; ii. 2; iv. 3, 4. So they knew the mystery of the recalling of the Jews, Rom. xi. 25, 26. The mystery of the resurrection, i. e., the quality of the bodies to be raised, and the order of it, with all the other special circumstances mentioned, 1 Cor. xv; 1 Thess. iv.; and the apostasy of the latter times; for the Spirit speaketh expressly, saith the apostle, that in the latter days men shall depart from the faith, 1 Tim. iv. 1. This inspiration of suggestion must also be allowed to St. John, the author of the Revelation; for he, speaking only what was represented to him in visions, or by angelical discourses, or apparitions, must have that assistance which suggested these ideas to him.

"Thirdly, As for those things which they did know already, either by natural reason, education, or antecedent revelation, they needed only such an assistance, or direction in them, as would secure them from error in their reasonings, or in their confirmation of their doctrines by passages contained in the Old Testament; and, therefore, a continual suggestion must be here unnecessary. And, indeed, one great work they had upon their hands, both in preaching the Gospel, and writing these gospels and epistles, being to convince the unbelieving Jew, or to confirm the wavering Jew, or rectify the errors of the Judaizing Christian, the gift of knowledge of the scriptures of the Old Testament was very necessary for them, and therefore is deservedly reckoned among the primary gifts of the Holy Ghost; and, being so, we have reason to believe that either the Holy Ghost suggested to their memory those scriptures which they used in these sacred writings to convince them; or else presided so over them as not to suffer them to make any inferences from them which were not agreeable to the true intent and meaning of them; though, at this distance of time, we may not always be able to discern the strength and clearness of the consequence.

"Fourthly, In writing the historical parts of the New Testament, or matters of fact relating to themselves, or others, it is only necessary that what is there delivered as matter of fact should be truly performed, as it is said to have been done: but it is not necessary that they should be related in that order of time in which they were performed, unless that also be affirmed of them; for this must be sufficient to assure us of the truth of what they thus delivered.

"Moreover, in writing the discourses contained in these books, it is not necessary that the very words should be suggested, or recorded, in which they were first spoken, but only that the true intent and meaning of them should be related, though in diversity of words. Though the promise made to the apostles by our Lord, that the Holy Spirit should bring to their remembrance, παντα, all things which he had said unto them, John xiv. 20, doth fairly plead for this exactness in what they have delivered of our Saviour's sermons; it being scarcely imaginable that their memory, without Divine assistance, should exactly give us all that was spoken in such long discourses.

"And hence we may account for the objections against this Divine assistance, arising from the viith of Acts; for, though I have showed, in the note on ver. 15, 16, that there is no real mistake in the words of the protomartyr; yet, were it granted that there is an error in his account of the sepulchres of the patriarchs, that affects not the authority of St. Luke at all, provided he have exactly related what was then said by St. Stephen, who was not chosen to be a penman of the Holy Scriptures.

"Lastly, From what is thus discoursed, it may appear that I contend only for such an inspiration, or Divine assistance of the sacred writers of the New Testament, as will assure us of the truth of what they wrote, whether by inspiration of suggestion, or direction only; but not for such an inspiration as implies that even their words were dictated, or their phrases suggested to them by the Holy Ghost: this, in some matters of great moment, might be so; St. Paul declaring that they spake the things which were given them of God in the words which the Holy Ghost teacheth, 1 Cor. ii. 13, if that relate not to what the Holy Ghost had taught them out of the Old Testament. But that it was not always so is evident, both from the consideration that they were hagiographers, who are supposed to be left to the use of their own words, and from the variety of the style in which they write, and from the solecisms which are sometimes visible in their compositions; and more especially from their own words, which manifestly show that, in some cases, they had had no such suggestion from the Holy Ghost as doth imply that He had dictated those words unto them. For instance, when St. Paul declares his will or purpose to do what he was hindered by the providence of God from doing; as, when he says to the Romans, When I go into Spain, I will come to you, chap. xv. 24; I will come by you into Spain, ver. 28. For though he might, after his enlargement, go into the west, where St. Clement (Ep. ad, Cor. § 6,) says he preached; and even into Spain, as Cyril, (Catechis. 17, p. 204. C.,) Epiphanius, (Hær. 27, p. 107. C.,) and Theodoret (in 2 Tim. iv. 17, and Præfat. in Psalm cxvi.,) says he did; yet it is certain he did not designedly go to Rome, in order to an intended journey into Spain: and when he says to the Corinthians, I will come to you, when I pass through Macedonia, 1 Cor. xvi. 5, and yet confesses in his second epistle, 2 Cor. i. 15, 16, 17, that he did not perform that journey; for it is not to be thought that the Holy Ghost should incite him to promise, or even to purpose, what He knew he would not perform. This also we learn from all those places in which they do express their ignorance or doubtfulness of that which they are speaking of; as when St. Paul says, I know not whether I baptized any other, 1 Cor. i. 16. And again, τυχον παραμεινω, Perhaps I will abide, yea, and winter with you, 1 Cor. xvi. 6. And when St. Peter saith, By Sylvanus, a faithful brother as I suppose, have I written to you, 1 Pet. v. 12: for these words plainly show that, in all these things, they had no inspiration, or Divine assistance. This, lastly, may be gathered from all those places in which they only do express their hope, and that conditionally, of doing this or that; as in these words, I hope to see you in my journey, Rom. xv. 24. I will come unto you quickly, if the Lord will, 1 Cor. iv. 19. I hope to stay some time with you, if the Lord permit, 1 Cor. xvi. 7. I hope in the Lord Jesus to send Timothy quickly to you, Phil. ii. 19, 23. And I trust that I myself also shall come quickly, ver. 24. These things I write, hoping to come to thee quickly, but, if I should tarry, that thou mayest know how to behave thyself in the Church of God, 1 Tim. iii. 14, 15. I hope, by your prayers, to be given to you, Philem. 22. This will we do, if the Lord permit, Heb. vi. 3. I hope to come to you, St. John, 2 Ep. ver. 12; 3 Ep. ver. 14. For, spes est incertæ rei nomen, the word hope implies an uncertainty, whereas the Holy Spirit cannot be uncertain of any thing: nor can we think he would inspire men to speak so uncertainly. And (2) There can be no necessity, or even use, of a Divine assistance to enable a man to express his hopes, seeing all men do, by natural reflection, know them.

"II. Having thus premised these things, for the right stating and explication of the controversy. I proceed to lay down the arguments, which prove that in these writings the apostles were assisted and preserved from error by the Spirit of God; and therefore were enabled to deliver to us an unerring rule of faith.

"And, 1st. I argue for the Divine assistance of the inditers of these sacred records, from what they do assert concerning their own writings; and what they say touching the declarations made, the doctrines delivered, and the directions given in them.

"As for the writers of the gospel, St. Luke declares he writes his gospel to Theophilus, that he might know the certainty of those things in which he had been instructed; and St. John declares his gospel was written that they might believe that Jesus was the Christ, the Son of God. Now it is plain, that neither Theophilus could be certain of the truth of what he had been taught by any writing which was not absolutely certain in itself; nor could others be induced, by what St. John had written, to believe that Jesus was the Christ, unless they could be certain that he spake the truth throughout his gospel. Now, if we do consider how many things contained in the beginning of St. Luke's gospel he must have by hearsay, and how many long discourses both he, St. Matthew, and St. John, deliver as spoken by our Lord and others, of which we can have no assurance, after so many years before the writing of them, on the mere strength of human memory, so as to ground an article of Divine faith upon the very words in which they were delivered, we must be forced to conclude that, upon this account, we cannot depend upon the very letter and minute circumstances of every discourse related by them, unless, according to Christ's promise, they had the assistance of the Holy Ghost, to bring these things to their remembrance: wherefore this promise is made to them in very general and comprehensive terms—viz., the Holy Ghost shall bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you, John xiv. 26. And then there being nothing considerable in St. Mark, which is not also in St. Matthew or St. Luke, or both, the certainty of all that is contained in them must make us also certain of the truth of what St. Mark delivers in his gospel. Moreover, the word spoken and indited by them is styled the word of God: men, saith the apostle, could not believe the Gospel unless they heard it preached to them; nor could they hear it preached unless some were commissioned to preach the Gospel; for faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God, Rom. x. 14, 15, 16, 17. And, for this cause, says he, thank we God without ceasing, because, when ye received the word of God, which ye heard of us, ye received it not as the word of men, but as it is, in truth, the word of God, 1 Thess. ii. 13. I am made a minister of Christ, saith he, according to the dispensation of God, which is given to me, to fulfil (i. e., fully to preach) the word of God, Col. i. 25. (2) It is called the COMMANDMENT OF GOD; for my Gospel, says St. Paul, and the preaching of Jesus Christ, is made manifest, and, according to the commandment of the everlasting God, made known unto you for the obedience of faith, Rom. xiv. 23, 26; which faith is always built on a Divine testimony. And again, If any man be a prophet, or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord, 1 Cor. xiv. 37. (3) It is declared to be the wisdom of God, 1 Cor. i. 24. For, we preach Christ, to you that are called, both Jews and Greeks, the power of God, and the wisdom of God; we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even that wisdom which God has revealed to us by his Spirit, 1 Cor. ii. 7, 10. (4) It is the TESTIMONY of God, for I came not to you, saith he, in excellency of speech, declaring to you the testimony. 1 Cor. ii. 1. (5) It is the GOSPEL OF GOD: for St. Paul styles himself the minister of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles, ministering the Gospel of God to them, Rom. xv. 16. We preach, says he, the Gospel of God freely, 2 Cor. xi. 7. We were bold to preach to you the Gospel of God; we were willing to have imparted to you not the Gospel of God only, but also our own lives, 1 Thess. ii. 2, 8, 9. Even the glorious Gospel of the blessed God committed to my trust, 1 Tim. i. 10. (6) It is the GOSPEL OF CHRIST; for I came, says he, to Troas, to preach Christ's Gospel, 2 Cor. ii. 12. We sent Timotheus, our fellow labourer in the Gospel of Christ, 1 Thess. iii. 2. (7) It is the MYSTERY of his WILL, Eph. i. 9. The mystery of God the Father and of Christ, Col. ii. 2. The mind of Christ made known to the apostles, 1 Cor. ii. 16. And the word of Christ which must dwell richly in believers, Col. iii. 16.

"Now, certainly it cannot rationally be conceived that the apostles should be ignorant of that assistance by which they were enabled to indite these records; if then they were assured of that assistance of the Holy Spirit which they challenged, then must the Gospel, which they both preached and indited, be received as the word of God and Christ, the mind of Christ, the Gospel of God and Christ, the mystery of God the Father, and of Christ, the commandment and testimony of God, which is the thing I am concerned to make good; and then it highly must concern all persons to be mindful of the commandments of the apostles of our Lord and Saviour, 2 Peter iii. 2. If they had no such assurance of the assistance of the Holy Spirit, they did grossly impose upon the world, in thus pretending that they preached the Gospel by the assistance of the Holy Spirit sent down from heaven. If they were not assured that, in those writings, they delivered only those doctrines which God required all men to believe, those precepts he required them to do, they must be very confident in daring to make this the preface to some of their epistles, Paul an apostle, according to the will and the commandment of God, 1 Cor. i. 1; 2 Cor. i. 1; Eph. i. 1; Col. i. 1; 2 Tim. i. 1; and saying, with so much assurance, If any be a prophet, let him acknowledge that the things I write unto you are the commandments of God, 1 Cor. xiv. 37; and much more, in declaring to all Christians thus:—We are of God; he that knoweth God, heareth us; he that is not of God, heareth not us; by this we know the spirit of truth and the spirit of error, 1 John iv. 6. For this seems equal to what their Master himself said in the like words, Why do you not believe me? He that is of God, heareth the words of God; you therefore hear them not, because you are not of God, John viii. 46, 47. Yea, they must be false witnesses of God, by styling human writings the word, the Gospel, the command, the testimony, the mind, the mystery of God and Christ; and by requiring others to receive it not as the word of man, but as the word of God, even that word by which they must be judged at the last day, Rom. ii. 16; which again runs as high as those words of Christ: The word that I have spoken shall judge him that believes it not at the last day, John xii. 48.

“2dly, They who, when they indited these writings, were assisted by the Holy Ghost, the Spirit of truth, indited these records by Divine assistance; for the things God spake to his servants the prophets are styled, the things which I commanded, ἐν πνεύματι μου, by my Spirit, Zech. i. 6: but the apostles were thus assisted; this they in terms, or by just consequence, assert. For St. Peter says of them all, in general, that they preached the Gospel by the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven, 1 Peter i. 12. And is not this as much as he said of the prophets of the Old Testament, when he declares they spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost? 2 Peter i. 1. St. Paul asserts, in the same general expression, that those great things belonging to the Gospel which neither eye had seen, nor ear had heard, nor heart was able to conceive, God had revealed to them by the Spirit, 1 Cor. ii. 10; that they had received not the spirit of the world, but the Spirit which is of God, that they might know the things which were freely given to Christians of God; and that these things they taught, not in the words which man’s wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth, comparing spiritual things with spiritual, verses 12, 13. In which place the very design of the apostle is to prove, against the Greek philosophers, how unreasonable it was to reject the Gospel, because it came not in the way of demonstration to human reason, but by way of revelation from God; and so required faith, as of necessity it must do, since it contained such things concerning the design of Christ’s salutary passion, his resurrection, ascension, and a future judgment at the general resurrection, which no natural man could know by the utmost improvement of his human reason; and such discoveries of the counsel of God, concerning man’s justification, which depended upon his good pleasure; which was known only to that Holy Spirit which searcheth all things, even the deep things of God. It is this Spirit, says he, that we have received, and by this Spirit hath God revealed these things unto us; and we accordingly do teach them to the world, not in the words which human wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth, comparing the revelations made to us by the Spirit with the revelations made to the prophets in the Old Testament, by the same Spirit, and finding that the revelations made to us do far exceed what was discovered to them; for, what the eye of those prophets had not seen in vision, or their ear heard in dreams, nor can the heart of man conceive, without a revelation, even these things hath God revealed to us by his Spirit. Thus did they speak the word of God in demonstration of the Spirit: whence he declares that, if any man despise their testimony or instructions, he despised not man only, but God also, who had given them his Spirit, 1 Thess. iv. 8, they being not sufficient for this work of themselves, but their sufficiency was of God, who, by this ministration of the Spirit, had made them able ministers of the New Testament, 2 Cor. iii. 5, 6. And thus, says he, that God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, (and who illuminated the prophets by shining upon their imagination and their understanding,) hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God, in the face of Jesus Christ, 2 Cor. iv. 5. In his Epistle to the Ephesians, he declares that the mystery of Christ was made known to him by immediate revelation, and not to him only, but to the rest of the apostles and prophets of the New Testament; for God, says he, hath made known this revelation to us, the apostles and prophets, by the Spirit, Eph. iii. 3, 5. And hence he speaks to the Corinthians in this language, If any man be a prophet, or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things I write unto you are the commandments of God, 1 Cor. xiv. 37. Here then the argument runs thus:—

“They who had a like assistance to that of the prophets under the Old Testament, must write by the direction of the Holy Ghost: for holy men of old spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost; and the scriptures they indited were of Divine inspiration; and their words are cited, in the New Testament, as spoken by the Holy Ghost. But the apostles had a like assistance; for, in the words now cited, they style themselves apostles and prophets; they challenge a like illumination, or shining of God upon their hearts, a like revelation of their Gospel by the Holy Spirit; and they pretend to teach it to others, in words taught them by the Holy Ghost. In all which sayings, they must be guilty of a false testimony concerning God, and must impose upon the Church of Christ, if no such assistance of the Holy Ghost was imparted to them.

"3dly. These sacred records, which were indited to be a standing rule of faith to Christians throughout all ages of the world, the Gospel contained in these Scriptures being made known to all nations for the obedience of faith, Rom. vi. 26, they must, in all things propounded in them to our faith, contain a Divine testimony, or a revelation of the will of God. For, as human faith depends upon the testimony of man, so Divine faith is that which depends upon the testimony of God. And, as obedience to men consists in doing the will of men, so our obedience to God consists in conformity to the will of God. Again, If we must all be judged by this law of liberty, James ii. 12; if Christ, at the last day, will judge the secrets of men's hearts according to the Gospel of St. Paul, Rom. ii. 16 if he will come in flaming fire, taking vengeance of all that obey not his Gospel, then must this Gospel, and this law of liberty, be a rule of faith until Christ's second coming; for upon that account alone can men be bound, under this dreadful penalty, to yield obedience to it, and be judged by it."

The whole of Dr. Whitby's important general preface, from which the above is extracted, is well worth the attention of the reader.

§ II. Of various readings in the Scriptures, and the sources whence they sprung.

Before I proceed to give an account of the principal manuscripts, ancient versions, and ecclesiastical writers, frequently referred to in this work, it may be necessary to say a little on the various readings of the Old and New Testaments in general, and the manner in which they originated; as several of my readers may not have had the opportunity of acquainting themselves with that branch of Biblical criticism in which this subject is particularly discussed.

By a various reading, I mean a word existing either in the ancient versions, or in ancient MSS., or in both, different from the word in the commonly received and printed text, whether of the Old or the New Testament. The sources whence these are derived are those ancient versions and MSS., the chief of which are enumerated and described in the following lists.

But it may be asked of what authority are these versions and manuscripts? And why appeal to them from and sometimes against the commonly received text?

Into the discussion of this question, I cannot minutely enter; it is not the province of a commentator. But, lest it should be supposed that I wished to elude it, I would simply observe, 1. That, before the invention of printing, the whole of the sacred writings, both of the Old and New Testaments, must have existed either in MS. or by oral tradition. 2. If they existed originally by oral tradition, they must have been, at one time or other, reduced from that into a MS. or written form. 3. As these records were considered of general importance, being a revelation from God to man, concerning his salvation, manuscripts would be multiplied, as the people increased who professed to believe that these writings were divinely inspired. 4. Wherever the Jews were dispersed, they carried copies of the law and the prophets with them; and the Christians did the same with the gospels, epistles, &c. And as these copies were formed by skilful or unskilful hands, so they would be less or more accurate in reference to the originals, from which they were taken. If a MS. which had been carelessly copied became the source whence others were taken, they could not be expected to express a better text than was found in that from which they were copied. 5. When such a MS. was collated with others more carefully copied, various readings, or differences between such MSS. would necessarily appear. 6. As some of these readings would appear irreconcilable or contradictory, subsequent scribes would alter or amend from conjecture, where they could not have access to the original MSS., and this would give birth to another class of various readings. 7. When, after the invention of printing, the sacred writings were multiplied by means of the press, the copy, thus prepared, must be one of those MSS. or one containing a collation of various MSS., and the printed edition must, of course, give the text of one only MS. or a text formed from the various readings of several. 8. As, at the epoch of the invention of printing, great ignorance prevailed both in literature and religion, it was not likely that the best helps, even had they been at hand, would have been critically used; and therefore those primitive editions must necessarily have been, in many respects, imperfect; and these imperfections could only be removed, in subsequent editions, by a careful collation of the most ancient, most authentic, and most correctly written MSS. 9. As such MSS. exist in different places, widely remote from each other, in various parts of Europe, Asia, and Africa, it must be a work of considerable time to find them out, collate and extract their various readings; communicate them to the public in separate editions, or in critical dissertations; and much time must necessarily elapse before the public would feel the necessity of having one authentic edition of the original texts formed from such separate editions and critical dissertations. 10. All versions, or translations of the Scriptures into the language of the different nations which had received the word of God as the rule of their faith and practice, must have been made, previously to the invention of printing, from a MS. or MSS., such as the translator had at hand; therefore, such versions could be no more than a faithful translation of such MS. or MSS. 11. As the MSS. differ among themselves, from the reasons assigned above, so that different MSS. would exhibit different readings in certain cases, though the text in the main was the same in all, so the versions must differ among themselves, according to the particular MSS. from which they were taken.

Hence both the MSS. and the versions would necessarily contain various readings; and these readings must be important and valuable in proportion to their agreement with the autograph from which they were all originally derived; and, upon the whole, the most ancient and carefully written MS. might be considered as containing the purest text. 13. All the versions of all countries differ, less or more, among themselves; which is a proof that they were formed from different MSS., and that those versions exhibited the readings which were contained in those MSS. 14. And it may be added, that the most ancient versions were likely to contain the purest text, because made from the most ancient MSS., which, we may fairly presume, were the most accurate copies of the original; as, in that case, the stream could not be rendered turbid by a long and circuitous flow from the fountain. This the reader may conceive to have been the origin of various readings, both in the manuscripts, and ancient versions, previously to the invention of printing.

Most copies of the Hebrew Bible have been taken from the same MSS., as the subsequent editions have generally copied the preceding ones, with very little alteration in any thing that could be considered essential to the text. The first editions of the Greek Testament, viz., the Complutensian and the first of Erasmus, were taken from different MSS.; but these sources were in general not the most pure and correct, as the text formed from them sufficiently proves; and hence, most succeeding editors have found it necessary to make a variety of alterations and amendments, in the editions which they have published, from such MSS. as they had the opportunity of collating. Hence very few of these editions agree perfectly among themselves; consequently, the necessity of forming one general and authentic edition, from a careful, judicious, and conscientious collation of all the ancient MSS. and versions known to exist. Preparations for such an edition of the HEBREW BIBLE have been made by Kennicott, and De Rossi. For the SEPTUAGINT, by Wechel, (i. e., in the edition printed by him.) Lambert Bos, Dr. Holmes, and his present continutors at Oxford. For the GREEK TESTAMENT, by Robert Stephens, Bp. Fell, Dr. Mill, Bengel, Wetstein, Birch, Alter, Matthai, and Griesbach. We therefore possess, at present, materials, from which nearly immaculate editions of the sacred writings may be formed; so that the Hebrew and Greek originals, and, indeed, all versions faithfully deduced from them, may appear in all their simplicity, energy, and splendour. It is to these materials, as they exist in the above collections, that I am indebted for the various readings of Hebrew and Greek MSS., supported by the ancient versions, which I have introduced in these notes.

Notwithstanding all the helps which the various MSS. and ancient versions afford for the illustration of the sacred text, the reader must not imagine that, in those MSS. and versions which do contain the whole of the sacred text, there is any essential defect in matters that relate to the faith and practice, and consequently to the salvation, of the Christian:—There is no such MS., there is no such version. So has the Divine Providence ordered it, that, although a number of mistakes have been committed by careless copyists, as well as by careless printers, not one essential truth of God has been injured or suppressed. In this respect, all is perfect, and the way of the Most High is made so plain, even in the poorest copies, that the wayfaring man though a fool, utterly destitute of deep learning and critical abilities, need not err therein.

All the omissions of the ancient manuscripts put together would not countenance the omission of one essential doctrine of the Gospel, relative to faith or morals: and all the additions countenanced by the whole mass of MSS. already collated do not introduce a single point essential either to faith or manners, beyond what may be found in the most imperfect editions, from the Complutensian editors down to the Elzevirs. And though, for the beauty, emphasis, and critical perfection of the letter of the New Testament, a new edition of the Greek Testament, formed on such a plan as that of Professor Griesbach, is greatly to be desired, yet from such a one infidelity can expect no help; false doctrine no support; and even true religion no accession to its excellence; though a few beams may be thus added to its lustre.

The multitude of various readings found in MSS. should no more weaken any man's faith in the Divine word, than the multitude of typographical errors found in printed editions of the Scriptures. Nor indeed can it be otherwise, unless God were to interpose, and miraculously prevent every scribe from making a false letter, and every compositor from mistaking a word in the text he was copying. It is enough that God absolutely preserves the whole truth, in such a way as is consistent with his moral government of the world. The preservation of the jots and the tittles in every transcriber's copy, and in every printer's form, by a miraculous act of almighty power, is not to be expected; and is not necessary to the accomplishment of the purposes of providence and grace.

On this subject the intelligent reader will be pleased with the opinion of that very eminent critic, Dr. Bentley. Speaking in reference to those who were needlessly alarmed at the multitude of various readings collected by Dr. Mill, and said to amount to 30,000, he says: "Not frightened with the present 30,000 various readings. I, for my own part, and as I believe many others, would not lament if, out of the old MSS. yet untouched, 10,000 more were faithfully collected: some of which, without question, would render the text more beautiful, just, and exact, though of no consequence to the MAIN of religion: nay, perhaps, wholly synonymous in the view of common readers, and quite insensible in any modern version." Philaleuth. Lipsiens. p. 90.

After such a testimony as this, from one of the greatest scholars and critics of his age, it is hoped that no minor person will hazard a contrary assertion; and that prejudices against the collation of MSS. and collections of various readings will not be entertained by the honest and well meaning; as such may see, at once, both the propriety and necessity of such measures.

In the MSS. of the Greek Testament, critics have noticed several which have an affinity to each other. This affinity has been denominated familia, family, by Bengel, recensio, revision, by Griesbach; and edition, by Michaelis. These editions depend on the diversity of time and place, and are divided by Griesbach into three :—

1. The WESTERN edition, or that formerly used where the Latin language was spoken: with this agree the old Italia, the Vulgate, and the quotations found in the Latin fathers.

2. The ALEXANDRINE, or Egyptian edition: with this agree the quotations found in the works of Origen, and the Coptic version.

3. The Byzantine, or EASTERN edition: that in general use at Constantinople, after this city had become the capital of the eastern empire. The greater number of the many MSS. written by the monks on Mount Athos are evidently of this edition. To this edition may be referred the quotations found in St. Chrysostom, St. Theophylact, bishop of Bulgaria, and the Slavonic or Russian version. The readings of this edition are those which are generally found in the printed text of the Greek Testament. All these recensiones, or editions, belong to ages prior to the eighth century, according to Griesbach.

To these Michaelis adds a fourth, called—

4. The EDESSENE edition, which comprehends those MSS. from which the Peshito or old Syriac version was made, though no MS. of this edition now remains. The Philoxenian Syriac version was corrected from MSS. found in the library at Alexandria. Any reading supported by the authority of these different editions possesses the highest degree of probability, and may be, in general, fairly taken for the word written by the inspired penman. This is a general rule, to which there will be found very few exceptions.

The propriety of this classification is questioned in a very able pamphlet just published, by Dr. Richard Laurence, intitled, Remarks on the Systematical Classification of MSS. adopted by Griesbach, in his edition of the Greek Testament. 8vo. Oxford, 1814. To this pamphlet I must refer the critical reader.

I shall now proceed to give an account of the most ancient manuscripts and versions which have been collated for the four gospels and Acts of the Apostles.

§ III. Account of Manuscripts in uncial characters, referred to by the letters ABCD, &c., in this Work.

A. The Codex Alexandrinus, now in the British Museum, sent, in 1628, from Cyril Lucaris, patriarch of Constantinople, by Sir Thomas Roe, as a present to Charles I. It is one of the most reputable MSS. known to exist; and is stated to have been written so early as the fourth century; though others assign it a much later date, and bring it so low as the seventh. Besides the New Testament, it contains the Septuagint version of the Old, formerly edited by Dr. Græbe. A fac-simile of the New Testament part has been published by Dr. Woide: London, 1764, fol. And lately a fac-simile of the Psalms, by the Rev. H. H. Baber, of the British Museum, fol. 1812, who has since published the Pentateuch, and is now preparing the whole for the press.

It is worthy of remark that this MS. follows in the gospels the Byzantine edition: in the epistles of St. Paul the Alexandrine: and in the Acts, and catholic epistles, the Western edition. With this MS. the Syriac, Coptic, and Ethiopic versions have a remarkable coincidence.

B. The Codex Vaticanus, No. 1209, containing the Greek version of the Septuagint, which was published at Rome by Cardinal Caraffa, fol. 1587. The second volume of this MS. contains the New Testament. It is a most ancient and valuable MS., and is supposed to be older than the Codex Alexandrinus; and to have been written some time in the fourth century, and before the time of St. Jerome: others refer it to the fifth or sixth century. There is a remarkable agreement between this MS. and the Codices D. and L. and it is supposed, as a whole, to be the most correct MS. we have. Michaelis prefers it greatly to the Codex Alexandrinus.

C. The Codex Ephraim. A MS. in the Royal Library in Paris, numbered formerly 1905, at present 9. The first part of it contains some of the smallest Greek works of St. Ephraim Syrus, under which was originally written the whole of the Greek Bible. In the New Testament part, it is mutilated in a great variety of places, which may be seen in Michaelis' Lectures, vol. ii., p. 258. The Greek version of the Bible which occupied the first part of this MS. has been, as far as was possible, wiped out with a sponge, to make way for Ephraim's works: a frequent custom where parchment was scarce and dear. It is supposed by Wetstein to have been written early in the sixth century. It is an invaluable MS., but is, through its great age and bad preservation, almost illegible. See P.

D. The Codex Bezae, or Codex Cantabrigiensis. It contains the Greek text of the four gospels and Acts of the Apostles, with the old Itala, or Antehieronymian Latin version. Wetstein thinks that it is the very copy from which Thomas Charkel, or Heraclius, under the auspices of Philoxenus, formed the later Syriac version, commonly called the Philoxenian; but this is a groundless supposition. This MS. is supposed by Wetstein to be of the fifth century: others think it two centuries earlier. A splendid and correct fac-simile of the MS. has been printed at Cambridge, by Dr. Kipling, 1793, 2 vols. royal fol.

The readings in this MS. frequently agree with the Latin versions before the time of St. Jerome and with the Vulgate. Some have argued that it has been altered from those Latin versions: but Semler, Michaelis, Griesbach, and Dr. Herbert Marsh, have amply refuted all those arguments. It is one of the oldest MSS. extant; many of the readings by which it is distinguished are found in the Syriac, Coptic, Sahidic, and margin of the Philoxenian Syriac version. In the main, this is the most important MS. we have of the gospels and Acts; and though it has been written at different times, by different hands, yet the original parts may be safely supposed to exhibit the genuine readings of the evangelic and apostolic text, in a larger proportion than in any other MS. extant. I have myself examined this MS. in the public library, at Cambridge; and am convinced, not only of its very high antiquity, but of its great excellency. Everywhere in my notes, I have endeavoured to pay particular attention to the readings of this MS. Whiston, in his primitive New Testament, Stamford and London, 8vo. 1745, has translated the four gospels and Acts literally from the Codex Bezae.

(D.) In St. Paul's epistles, signifies the famous Codex Claromontanus; it was written in the sixth or seventh century, and has the Itala version, as well as the Greek text.

E. Codex Basiliensis, Num. B. VI. A MS. of the ninth century. It contains the four gospels

(E.) In the Acts of the Apostles, signifies the famous Laud MS. No. 3, preserved in the Bodleian Library. It has both the Greek and Latin text; the Latin evidently altered to make it correspond to the Greek. This MS. was printed by Hearne, 8vo. Oxon. 1715. Wetstein supposed it to have been written in Sardinia, about the seventh century. The MS. is written in two columns; the Latin text first; each line is composed of one word, very rarely of two; and the Latin and Greek words are always opposite to each other, which shows that it was written for the use of a person little skilled in either language.

F. Codex Boreeli. This MS., which contains the four gospels, formerly belonged to Sir John Boreel, Dutch ambassador at the court of King James I. Where it now is cannot be ascertained.

(F.) Is one of the Coislinian MSS. No. 1. It contains the Septuagint version of the Octateuch; and verses 24 and 25, of Acts, chap. ix. It was written in the eighth century.

F. In the epistles of St. Paul, denotes the Codex Augiensis, written about the ninth century, and now in the library of Trinity College, Cambridge.

G. Codex Wolfius A. This is now one of the Harleian MSS. in the British Museum; and is marked 5684. It contains the four evangelists, and was probably written before the tenth century. It is a correct and valuable MS.

G. Codex Boernerianus, in the Electoral Library at Dresden.—It has the Itala version interlined with the Greek text.

(G.) In the Acts, &c., signifies a MS. in the library of the Augustin friars at Rome. It has been only partially collated by Blanchini and Birch.

H. Codex Wolfius B. This MS. is very similar to the preceding; and was probably written in the same century. It also contains the four evangelists.

H. Codex Coislinianus, No. ccc. consists only of fifteen leaves containing some fragments of St. Paul's epistles. It was written in the fifth or sixth century.

I. Codex Cottonianus. This MS. contains only four leaves, in which a few fragments of Matthew and John are found. It is written on Egyptian paper of a purple colour; and is among the Cotton MSS. in the British Museum, and is marked Titus C. 15.

K. Codex Cyprius, so called because brought from the island of Cyprus. It is at present in the Royal Library at Paris. It contains the four evangelists; agrees in its various readings with A. B. C. D. Montfaucon supposed it to be of the eighth century; Father Simon, of the ninth.

L. Codex Regius, 62. This very valuable MS. was one of those used by R. Stephens, for his edition of the Greek Testament, fol. 1550, in which it is marked η . It is in the Royal Library at Paris, No. 62, and was probably written in the eighth or ninth century. The various readings of this MS. are of great importance; and it is judged by Michaelis to be one of the most valuable MSS. we possess.

M. Codex Regius. This MS. contains the four gospels; belongs to the Royal Library, Paris, numbered 48; and was written in the tenth century.

N. Codex Vindobonensis, 2. One of the Vienna MSS. It contains only fragments of the book of Genesis, and of Luke, chap. xxiv. v. 13–21, 39–49, and was written in the seventh century.

O. A small fragment of some other MS. and contains the parable of the Pharisee and publican

P. Codex Guelpherbytanus, A. One of the duke of Wolfenbuttle's MSS. It is what is called a codex rescriptus, i. e., a book the original writing of which has been spunged out, to make way for some other works; which in this case happen to be the works of Isidorus Hispalensis. It contains fragments of the four evangelists, and was written about the sixth century. See under C.

Q. Codex Guelpherbytanus, B. Another of the Wolfenbüttele MSS., containing fragments of Luke and John, written in the sixth century. It is a codex rescriptus, like the former; the original writing being spunged out, to make way for the works of Isidorus Hispalensis, as in Codex P.

R. Tubingen Fragmentum. This MS., which is preserved at Tübingen, contains only a fragment of the first chapter of John.

S. Codex Vaticanus, No. 354. One of the Vatican MSS. written in the year 949.

T. Fragmentum Borgianum. It consists of about twelve leaves; begins with John vi. 28, and ends with vii. 23. It is divided into two columns: the first contains the Greek text, the second the Coptic or Sahidic; and is supposed, by Georgi, who has published a large quarto volume on it, to have been written in the fourth century. This fragment is a valuable specimen of the Alexandrian edition.

U. Codex Equitii Nani Venetii. This is one of the MSS. collated by Birch for his edition of the Greek Testament. It was written in the tenth or eleventh century.

X. A MS. in the public library of Ingolstadt; this is in uncial characters, and has a commentary in small letters. It appears to have been written in the eleventh century.

These are all the Greek MSS. in square or uncial characters which are referred to in Wetstein and Griesbach; and which are quoted in these notes on the four gospels and Acts. Where any of these letters appear with an asterisk, as C*, it signifies that the reading there quoted exists not in the text, but in the margin of that manuscript. The MSS. marked A. B. C. D. E. F. G. K. and L. are probably, upon the whole, the best, and their readings the most authentic, of all the uncial MSS.

There are many other MSS. written in small letters, and quoted by Griesbach and others, by Arabic numerals, viz., 1, 2, 3, &c., which, though not equally ancient with several of those in uncial characters, are of great value and importance, and exhibit readings of equal worth with those in the preceding MSS. These, however, I have rarely mentioned by name in my notes, and only refer to them in this way: e. g. Acts xvii. 26: "ABDE. and more than forty others." Ib. xx. 24: "ABD. some others," &c., &c. I thought it was unnecessary to be more particular; as those who could profit most by such information would naturally have Griesbach at hand; and by referring to him, would be able to obtain much more satisfaction on the point than the plan on which my notes were constructed could possibly afford. It is necessary just to state, that both Wetstein and Griesbach, by quoting different MSS. by the same letter, in the four parts into which they have divided the New Testament—viz., the four gospels, the Acts and catholic epistles, the epistles of St. Paul, and the Apocalypse, have produced strange and needless confusion: in each of those parts we find a distinct notation of MSS. On this subject Michaelis has justly observed, that "Wetstein has made it very difficult to remember his notation of MSS. by not retaining the same marks throughout the whole work; for his letters and figures have a different meaning in the epistles of St. Paul from that which they have in the four evangelists; a still different meaning in the catholic epistles, and Acts of the Apostles; and, lastly, they are taken in a fourth sense in the book of the Revelation."—Lectures, vol. ii, p. 185, 6. This perplexity may appear evident, even in the uncial MSS., and much more in the others, e. g., D., which means the Codex Bezae in the gospels and Acts, means the Clermont MS. in the epistles of St. Paul; and B. the Codex Vaticanus, 1209. in the gospels, Acts, and epistles, is the Codex Monachorum, Sti. Basilii, No. 105, in the Apocalypse; and so of others.

Farther information on this subject belongs more properly to the editor of a Greek Testament than to the province of a commentator. Those who wish to examine this branch of Biblical criticism at large, must consult Mill, Wetstein, Griesbach, Michaelis, and Dr. Herbert Marsh.

A short account of the different VERSIONS of the New Testament cited in this work—viz. The Ethiopic, Arabic, Armenian, Bohemian, Coptic, Gothic, Itala, Persian, Sahidic, Saxon or Anglo-Saxon, Slavonic or Russian, Syriac, and Vulgate; not in the order of the different ages in which these versions were made, but in the order of the alphabet.

THE ETHIOPIC.

It is generally supposed that the Christian religion was planted in Ethiopia or Abyssinia, so early as the times of the apostles; but when the Scriptures were translated into the Ethiopic language is not certainly known. We have the whole of the New Testament in that language; and it is supposed that this version was made by Frumentius, a Christian bishop in the fourth century. It is, in very many respects, an important version; and seems to have been made immediately from the Greek text. Its various readings agree with the (A.) the Codex Alexandrinus, and with Origen. Several MSS. of this language in the Amharic and Tigra dialects, as well as the Ethiopic itself, existing in the royal library of Paris, the library of the British and Foreign Bible Society of London, with some account of those in the Vatican at Rome, may be seen in the catalogue published by T. Pell Platt, B. A., 4to., London, 1823.

INTRODUCTION TO THE GOSPELS,

THE ARABIC.

There are different Arabic versions of the New Testament, and they were, probably, as Dr. Marsh conjectures, derived from these four sources:—1. Some from the Syriac; 2. some from the Coptic, 3. some from the Greek; 4. and some from the Vulgate. When this version was made cannot be determined; but it is generally allowed that there was no Arabic version of the New Testament before the time of Mohammed, i. e. A. D. 620; and that the oldest versions we have of that language were made between the seventh and tenth centuries. But, if this were really so, how can we well account for the knowledge which Mohammed had of the gospels, which he terms أنجيل Anjeel, from Evangelium, in different parts of the Koran; see particularly surat iii. v. 3, which Anjeel he there mentions as having come down from God, as well as the توراة toorat the law, and his own Koran; and in this same surat, and many others, he makes several quotations from the gospels: and, though he models them, to cause them to suit his own purpose, yet his quotations afford a presumptive evidence that the gospels did exist in Arabic before his time; unless we could suppose he read them in Greek, Syriac, or Latin; and none, even of his own partial followers, have pretended that he understood those languages. As to the story of his having an apostate Christian monk, called Sergius, with him, who might have supplied him with such quotations, it remains yet to be proved. To me, it seems probable, that a version of the gospels, at least, did exist before the time of Mohammed; as Christianity did undoubtedly make its way into Arabia, even in the days of the apostles, as may be gathered from the Acts of the Apostles, chap. ii., and from various other testimonies. Whosoever reads the Koran carefully over, in reference to this point, will probably find reason to draw the same conclusion.

There are three principal editions of the Arabic, to which reference is made by Griesbach, and in these notes: 1. That printed at Rome, fol. 1591, which was probably made from the Greek. 2. The version printed in the Paris and London Polyglotts; but in the latter with additions and corrections. This also was made from the Greek, and not from the Syriac or Coptic, as some have supposed. 3. The edition printed by Erpen, Lugd. Bat. 1616, 4to., taken from two MSS., one of the gospels, written about A. D. 1271, and another of the Acts, Epistles, and Revelation, dated A. D. 1342. See Dr. Marsh's notes to Michaelis, vol. iii. p. 603. This version is supposed to have been formed immediately from the Greek; but interpolated in many places from the Syriac. This of Erpen is the most valuable and genuine edition of the Arabic Testament. These three editions are quoted in Griesbach, and in the following notes. The first Ar. Rom. the Arabic gospels, printed at Rome in 1591. 2. Ar. Pol. the Arabic, printed in the London Polyglott, 1657. 3. Erp. the Arabic New Testament, printed by Erpen in 1616. When all these editions agree in the same reading, Griesbach signifies it by Arr. and I mean the same, in these notes, when I say all the Arabic.

THE ARMENIAN.

This version was probably made in the fifth century, or about the year 410, according to the Armenians themselves. The author is universally allowed to have been Miesrob, the same who invented the Armenian alphabet. It appears to have been first made from the Syriac; but, having been twice translated from that language, it was last of all translated from the Greek. This is allowed by learned men to be a very valuable version; and contains various readings of great importance: but it has not, as yet, been accurately collated.

THE BOHEMIAN.

The sacred writings were translated into the Bohemian language by eight Bohemian doctors, who had been sent to Wittenberg and Basil to study the original languages for this purpose. This translation was printed in Moravia, in the year 1539. I know nothing of the merit of this version: Griesbach has given a few readings from it, which he received from Professor Dobrowsky, of Moscow.

THE COPTIC.

The Coptic was the common language of Egypt before the invasion of the Saracens; it is a mixture of the Old Egyptian and the Greek. Into this language the Scriptures appear to have been translated at a very early period ; probably between the third and fifth centuries. The readings of this version are allowed to have a striking affinity to those of the Latin version ; and sometimes to those of the Codex Beza ; and, according to Wetstein, with Origen, Eusebius, Cyril, and the Alexandrian MS. See SAMIDIC. And let it be noted that the Coptic and Sahidic are two different versions.

THE GOTHIC.

The people to whom the version called Gothic belonged had their ancient habitation to the east of the Borysthenes ; but, wandering westward, they settled in Wallachia. Ulphilas, a Cappadocian by birth, who lived under the Emperors Valens and Valentinian, made this translation immediately from the Greek (though occasionally in reference to the Latin versions) about the middle of the fourth century. Of this version only a mutilated copy of the four gospels, and a few chapters of St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans, remain. This MS., which was all written in silver letters, and hence called Codex Argenteus, was first discovered in the abbey of Werden in Westphalia ; it got afterwards to Sicden, then to the Netherlands, and is now in the university of Upsal. A fine edition of the Gothic gospels was published by Marshall, together with the Anglo-Saxon, at Dort, 1665, 4to., with a glossary, by Junius ; but a better edition was published by Dr. E. Lye, Oxon. 1750, 4to. The fragments of the eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth chapters to the Romans, edited by Knittel, from the Wolfenbuttle MS., may be found at the end of vol. ii. of Dr. Lye's Saxon, Gothic, and Latin dictionary.

THE ITALA, OR ANTEHIERONYMIAN.

Previously to the time of St. Jerome, a great variety of Latin versions, of parts or the whole of both the Old and New Testaments, had been made by different persons for their own use ; and these appear to have been as various as the skill and talents of the translators. As none of these had been received into public use in the Church, so it is not likely that they had any particular name ; but modern times have given the title of Italae, Itala, or Antehieronymian, to all such Latin versions. Though the word Itala be of the most dubious authority, yet all allow that, by it, a very ancient Latin translation is intended ; but how such a translation became thus denominated no person can tell ; if, indeed, it have had any such title in ancient times. This title is supposed to be mentioned by St. Augustin, where, speaking of the great variety of Latin versions in early use, he says : In ipsis autem interpretationibus Itala, ceteris praeferatur ; nam est verborum tenacior cum perspicuitate sententiae. “Among the versions, the Itala is to be preferred, as being more literal, and more perspicuous.” De Doctr. Christ. lib. ii. cap. 11. Dr. Lardner supposes that Itala, here, is a mistake for et illa. and reads the passage thus : “And, among the translations, let that be preferred which is most literal and most perspicuous.” Dr. Bentley, and some others, were nearly of the same mind. Potter thinks that Itala is an early mistake for usitata, which mistake may be accounted for thus : in ancient times, when MSS. were written in uncial characters, without distinction of words or sentences, a copyist having written—

IN IPSIS AUTEM INTERPRETATIONIBUS ITALAE CETERIS PRAEFERATUR NOME EST VERBORUM TENACIOR CUM PERSPICUITATE SENTENTIAE ; took the first syllable of usitata, on returning to his MS., for the last syllable of the word interpretationibus, which he had just written, and of course read the word itala, which he concluded to be an error for itala ; and hence came the present spurious reading. See Dr. Marsh's notes to Michaelis. This is the most likely of all the conjectural emendations of St. Augustin's text yet made. This ancient Latin version, by whatever name it is called, is supposed to be the same which is annexed to the Greek text in the Codex Boernerianus, Claromontanus, and Cantabrigiensis. But, besides these, there are more than twenty others which Griesbach has noted in his Greek Testament, which contain the same version, or rather a version or versions made before the time of St. Jerome. See the catalogue of them in Griesbach's Testament, vol. i. Prolegom. p. xcvii. All these I have quoted under the general name Itala, or Antehieronymian, without specifying the different MSS. in which the reading is contained : e. g. Six copies of the Itala—several copies of the Itala—all the Itala, &c. The principal fragments of this version which still remain have been carefully collected by Sabatier, in his Bibliorum Sacrorum Latinae Versiones Antiquae, fol. Rom. 1743, three vols. ; and by Blanchini, in his Evangeliorum Quadruplex Latinae Versionis Antiqua, seu Italicae, fol. Rom. 1749, four vols. The various readings of these versions, both in the MSS. edited by these learned men, and in the writings of the Latin fathers, are of great utility in ascertaining the readings of the ancient Greek text, from which they were made ; for many excellent readings abound in these versions, which agree not only with the most ancient Greek MSS. but also with the best versions, particularly the Syriac and the Coptic. It was out of these versions that St. Jerome formed the Vulgate. See VULGATE.

THE PERSIAN.

We have no very ancient version of the New Testament in Persian. Hitherto we have had only the four gospels in this language, which are printed with the Latin translation of Dr. Samuel Clarke, in the fifth vol. of the London Polyglot. This translation was finished about the year 1341, by Simon ibn Yuseph ibn Abraheem al Tabreezy; who is said to have taken it immediately from the Syriac. This version was made, most evidently, by a Christian of the Roman Catholic persuasion, who acted under the most predominating influence of his own peculiar creed; for it is not only interpolated with readings from the Vulgate, but with readings from rituals and legends. The Persian gospels do not appear to have been carefully collated by Mill, Wetstein, or Griesbach; scarcely any of the many peculiarities of this version having been noticed. To satisfy myself of its nature and origin, I have read the whole of it over twice; and shall extract from the remarks I then made, such proofs as appeared to me to warrant its Catholic origin; and how little the translator regarded the text on which he formed his version; e. g.

Mitigation of the punishment promised to Tyre and Sidon in the day of judgment.

Now I say unto you, O cities, that in the day of judgment, to Tyre and Sidon سایش باشد there shall be REPOSE, which shall not be to you. Matt. xi. 22.

The supremacy of Peter most formally asserted, and the text corrupted to support it: And I say unto thee, سنکره دین من یعنی سنک و بنیاد کلیسای من بر تو عمارت کرده شود Thou art the ROCK OF MY RELIGION, (that is, a stone,) and the FOUNDATION OF MY CHURCH shall be a building upon thee. Matt. xvi. 18.

To weaken the reproof given by our Lord to Peter, which the translator probably thought too degrading, the offensive epithet Satan is omitted. Matt. xvi. 23.

Jesus turned back, and said unto Peter, Get behind me, بی ایمان O thou unbeliever!

Popish saying about hell, Mark ix. 46, for, where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched, Al Tabreezy translates که رستگاری از اینجا ممکن نیست Because, from thence liberation is impossible.

And in verse 48, he translates the same passage, که هرگز خلاص نیایی From whence thou shalt never find redemption.

In Luke ii. 7, the blessed virgin is called مریم پاک Mareem pak, SAINT Mary.

The title to the paragraph, Luke v. 18, &c., is "The raising of that paralytic person, who had lain thirty-two years, که نامش الیقودی موس whose name was Alekudemus."

Luke vii. 12. Prayer for the dead. And when he approached the gate, he saw a dead man, whom they were carrying out, بنماز وزاری with PRAYER and lamentation.

Doctrine of the merit of good works and repentance, for the purchase of the remission of sins. And I say unto thee, that as a RECOMPENSE (عوض awaz) for what she has done, her sins, which are many, are forgiven; for that very cause, that she was worthy of much, or has much merit. پس بسیار سزاوار شد But little shall be forgiven to him who has little merit. Luke vii. 47. The same doctrine is taught chap. xvi. 9.

The doctrine of supererogation is glanced at, Luke xix. 9. Jesus said to the multitude, and to his disciples, To-day indeed there is a great salvation to this house, because this man is of the sons of Abraham. That is, he is saved through Abraham's merit, and his own almsgiving: so I understand the intention of the original.

There is a remarkable addition, Matt. xxvi. 75, which is found in no other version, nor in any MS., and is not noticed by Griesbach. And he (Peter) went out from thence, and wept bitterly, و گناه او عفو and his sin was forgiven him.

Matthew xxvii. 52, is thus rendered: And the graves were opened, and the rocks rent, که شهید کشته بودند and the bodies of many saints, who had suffered MARTYRDOM, rose from their graves. All these examples (and their number might be easily increased) show the family whence this version sprang; and how little regard, in all these cases, was paid to the Syriac, from which it is said to have been taken; or indeed to any other version: for these, and such like renderings, are evidently made to serve a party, and support a creed. From all this it appears that much dependence cannot be safely placed on this version; and that its various readings, except when they agree with more authentic versions, are worthy of little credit.

There is a second Persian version of the four gospels, which Mr. Abraham Wheeloc, professor of Arabic in the university of Cambridge, translated into Latin, and prepared for the press, and actually began to print in 1652; but dying shortly after, it was patronized by Thomas Adams, lord mayor of London, and finished under the care of Mr. Pierson, at the press of J. Flesher, 1657, fol. It seems that Mr. Wheeloc had designed to affix critical notes to each chapter; and this we find done to the end of the seventeenth chapter of Matthew, about which time it is likely he died; for Mr. Pierson, the continuator of his work, says, Initio operis, præmaturâ morte ereptus: death snatched him away at the commencement of his work. And as the regular comment of Mr. Wheeloc appears to have been prepared no farther than to the seventeenth chapter of Matthew, the notes which the continuator found after the close of that chapter, and which most probably Wheeloc designed to be the foundation of more diffuse observations, are all printed at the conclusion of the work.

It appears that neither Wheeloc nor Walton knew of more than three MSS. of the Persian gospels; one of Oxford, one of Cambridge, and one belonging to Dr. Pocock. It has been supposed, I think without sufficient evidence, that Wheeloc compiled his Persian text from these three MSS. After carefully collating both this and Walton's edition, in many places, I think I may safely state, that Wheeloc printed his edition from the Oxford MS., as Walton printed his from that of Pocock. In a few cases, he introduces in brackets, or with an asterisk, a various reading from the Cambridge MS., rarely from that of Pocock: but in his comment or critical notes, he refers often to both these MSS., giving the most remarkable readings where they differ from the Oxford MS., which he has most evidently followed as his text. That the MS. of Pocock, from which Mr. Wheeloc gives the principal various readings, was the same which Walton printed in the fifth volume of the Polyglott, is demonstrable from a collation of those various readings extracted by Wheeloc from the Pocock MS., which are found to be precisely the same with those in the text and rubrics of that printed in the Polyglott. And that Wheeloc took the Oxford MS. for his text is evident from this, that his various readings are extracted only from the Cambridge and Pocock MSS., collated with that of Oxford. The text therefore of Wheeloc is not a corrupted text, or one made up from different MSS. It is much more simple and much purer than that in the Polyglott, and appears to have been made by one not warped by any religious system, as Al Tabreezy certainly was; and by one who better understood the genius and composition of the Persian language. As far as I have had the opportunity of examining this version, it appears to me to be taken verbatim from the Latin Vulgate; and not from the Greek, as some, or the Syriac, as others, have supposed.

Jeronymo Xavier, missionary to the Indians, was commanded, by the Emperor Akbar, to translate the four gospels into Persian, that he might examine their importance as a system of religion. Xavier drew up what he called a Life or History of our Lord in Portuguese, which was translated into Persian by a Mohammedan, a native of Lahoor, called Moulanee Abdoos Sitar, or Senurin Kesson. This work was under the title of The History of Christ, compiled out of the gospels, and from Popish legends, and was presented to the emperor in 1602, who is said to have smiled at it; and well he might, as the genuine history was disgraced with fables. The MS. formed for the emperor's use is now before me; but such a version can be of no importance in Biblical criticism. The work of Xavier was published with a translation and notes by L. De Dieu.

THE SAHIDIC.

UPPER Egypt, or the part that lies between Cahira and Assuan, had a particular dialect, which in many respects differed from that spoken in Lower Egypt. As this Upper Egypt was called in Arabic السعيد saeed, the dialect has been called Sahidic. See Michaelis. At a very early period, a translation of the New Testament was made into this dialect; but the remains of this venerable version have long been confined to perishing MSS., till Münter published some fragments of the Epistles of Paul to Timothy, 4to., Hafniae, 1789. And Georgius, in the same year, printed at Rome a fragment of the gospel of John in the same dialect; which the reader will find described under Codex T. in the account of the MSS. in uncial characters.

Dr. Woide, late of the British Museum, had prepared an edition of several fragments, containing about one-third of the New Testament, which he did not live to finish: but the task has been ably executed by Dr. Ford, of Oxford, who has printed it at the Clarendon press, 1799. fol. as an Appendix to the Codex Alexandrinus, by Dr. Woide. This work, which is done with elegance and correctness, has three copperplates, on which there are nineteen fac-similes of the MSS. from which Dr. Ford has printed these fragments. In carefully considering this venerable version, there appear to be arguments to prove its very high antiquity, which Dr. Woide refers even to the beginning of the second century! The parts already published exhibit some invaluable readings; and these prove that it has a striking affinity to the Codex Bezae. It is doubtless one of the oldest versions in existence; and it is to be hoped that every fragment of it will be collected and published, till, if possible, we get the whole of the New Testament in this most ancient and valuable version. The Coptic and Sahidic are independent versions, both made from the Greek, and probably at different times; and both contain different readings. The Rev. T. Tattum, M. A., rector of St. Cuthbert's, Bedford, and author of a Grammar of the Egyptian language lately published, has been for a considerable time deeply engaged in collating various MSS. of the Coptic and Sahidic dialects, in reference to a complete edition of the Holy Scriptures, in the ancient Coptic language; and his Egyptian Grammar proves him to be well qualified for the undertaking. For his success every Biblical critic should devoutly pray. See COPTIC.

INTRODUCTION TO THE GOSPELS,

THE SAXON, OR ANGLO-SAXON.

It is said that Alfred the Great translated the greater part of the New Testament into the Anglo-Saxon. The four gospels in this language were published under the direction of Abp. Parker, with a dedication to Queen Elizabeth, by Mr. John Fox, the Martyrologist, 4to., Lond., 1571. William Lisle published fragments of the Old and New Testament, London, 4to., 1638. Mr. T. Marshall published the gospels with the Mæso-Gothic version, Dodrecht, 4to., 1665, which was reprinted at Amsterdam in 1684. See GORNIC. The Saxon version appears to have been made from MSS. of the old Itala version, (see ITALA,) some time in the seventh or eighth century. See the account in the General Preface to the Book of Genesis. From this version I have made many extracts in these notes; as may be seen in different parts of the four gospels. The use I have made of Thwaites' Octateuch may be seen in the notes on the five books of Moses. No part of the New Testament, besides the four gospels, has been published in this language.

THE SLAVONIAN, OR RUSSIAN.

This version, the importance of which, in the criticism of the New Testament, has been but lately known, was made in the ninth century, by two brothers, Methodius and Cyril, natives of Thessalonica, and apostles of the Slavonians. It was taken immediately from the Greek, of which it is a literal version, and first printed in 1581. In the catholic epistles, and in the Apocalypse, it agrees generally with the Codex Alexandrinus. It is remarkable that, of the readings which Griesbach has adopted in his edition of the Greek Testament, the Slavonian version has at least three-fourths. Where the united evidence of ancient MSS. is against a common reading, the Slavonian agrees with these MSS. There is ample proof that it has not been altered from either the Vulgate, or any other version. The learned Dobrowsky has given an excellent description of this version, an extract from which may be seen in Dr. Marsh's notes to Michaelis, vol. iii. p. 634. As it appears that this version has been taken from ancient and valuable Greek MSS., it deserves to be better known, and more carefully collated.

THE SYRIAC.

There are two principal versions which go under this name. 1. The Peshito, which signifies literal or correct, and is the most ancient, and the most important. 2. That which is called Philoxenian, from Philoxenus, bishop of Hicrapolis, or Mabug; who employed Polycarp, his rural bishop, to make this version, which he finished A. D. 508.

The Peshito was first known in Europe by Moses of Mardin; who was sent by Ignatius, Patriarch of the Maronite Christians, in the year 1552, to Pope Julius III. to acknowledge, in the name of the Syrian Church, the supremacy of the Roman pontiff; and to have the New Testament printed in Europe. The emperor Ferdinand I. bore the expense of the impression; and Albert Widmanstad, in conjunction with Moses and Postell, edited the work; which was printed at Vienna, 1555. 4to. This edition, from which all succeeding editions have been taken, contains the four gospels, the Acts, all St. Paul's epistles, the first Epistle of John, the first of Peter, and the Epistle of James. The second and third of John are wanting; the second of Peter, the Epistle of Jude, and the Revelation. None of these is acknowledged by any copy of the ancient Syriac version. This version was made probably between the second and third centuries.

The Philoxenian we have seen was made in the beginning of the sixth century by Polycarp, the rural bishop of Philoxenus, or Xenyas, bishop of Mabug; and we find that Thomas of Charkel, or Heraclea, about the year 616, corrected this version, and compared it with some principal MSS. in the Alexandrian Library, hence it has been called the Heracleian, as well as the Philoxenian version. This version has been printed from Dr. Ridley's MSS., by Dr. White, of Oxford, 4to., 1778, &c. The Philoxenian version contains all the canonical books of the New Testament, even those omitted by the Peshito version; from which it differs, not only in the language, but in many other respects. Those who wish for farther information on this point, must consult Michaelis' Lectures, vol. ii. p. 1, &c., and the notes of his learned annotator, Dr. Herbert Marsh, bp. of Peterborough.

THE VULGATE.

We have already seen, under the article ITALA, that in the earliest ages of Christianity the New Testament had been often translated into Latin. These translations were very numerous; and having been made by a variety of hands, some learned, and others not so, they not only disagreed among themselves, but appeared, in certain cases, to contradict each other. This induced Pope Damasus to employ St. Jerome, one of the most learned of the primitive Latin fathers, to correct the ancient Itala. Though, in the old Testament, he is supposed simply to have collated the Itala with the Hebrew, yet, in the New, he asserts, Norum Testamentum Græcæ fidei reddidi. "I have translated the New Testament according to the original Greek." However, it appears that, in many cases, he altered the Itala for the worse, as the remaining fragments of that version sufficiently testify. This important work, which, in process of time, supplanted the Itala, was finished A. D. 384, and was called Versio Vulgata, the VULGATE, or COMMON version, because received into general use. No version of the sacred writings was more generally received than this; and copies of it were multiplied beyond calculation. And perhaps scarcely any book has been more corrupted, by frequent and careless transcription, than the Vulgate, from the year 384 till the invention of printing, about the middle of the fifteenth century. The first edition of this version was printed by Gutenberg and Fust, at Mayence, in large fol. sine titulo, et sine ullâ notâ, somewhere between 1450 and 1457. By the order of Pope Sixtus Quintus, a complete edition of the Vulgate was printed at Rome in 1588, but not published till 1593. This, though stamped with the infallible authority of the pope, apostolicâ nobis à Domino, tradita auctoritate; to be the authentic Vulgate, which he styles perpetuâ valituram constitutionem, a decree that shall for ever remain in force; yet, on examination, it was found to be so excessively erroneous and self-contradictory, that another edition was undertaken by the authority of Pope Clement VIII., widely differing from that of Sixtus. This is the edition from which all those were formed which are now in common use.

I have already stated that copies of this version have been often corruptly transcribed; and hence the amazing disagreement between different MSS. The version being so much in request, and so many persons being copiers by trade, in order to save time and vellum, they wrote the words in contractions, wherever it was possible; and, by this means, the original reading, in various instances, was lost. All these causes conspired, with the ignorance of the original tongues, which almost universally prevailed in the middle ages, in the Latin Church, to bring this venerable version into a state of great imperfection; from which it has not, as yet, wholly emerged.

I have several MSS. of this work, written from the twelfth to the fifteenth century, which are exceedingly discordant among themselves. Pope Clement VIII. has certainly done much to restore it to primitive purity; but much still remains to be done. The text should be settled by a farther collation of the most ancient MSS. When this is done, the Latin Church may be vindicated in that boasting in the Vulgate, which, at present, is but incautiously applied to this version.

I have often quoted this Version, which I consider to be equal to a MS. of the fourth century. I must, however, add, that with all its imperfections, there is nothing essential to the faith or practice of a genuine Christian that may not be proved by it; but it certainly can never come into competition with the original Greek text; nor indeed with several of the ancient versions.

An account of the versions, as far as they concern the Old Testament, may be seen in the general preface to the Book of Genesis. I have sometimes quoted these versions collectively, with VV., by which I mean the versions in general.

AN ALPHABETICAL LIST OF THE PRIMITIVE FATHERS, AND ECCLESIASTICAL WORKS

REFERRED TO
IN THE VARIOUS READINGS QUOTED OCCASIONALLY IN THESE NOTES

- AMBROSIUS, archbishop of Milan, born A. D. 340; died A. D. 397.
AMBROSIUS, deacon of Alexandria, and intimate friend of Origen, died A. D. 250.
AMBROSIASTER: this writer is supposed to be author of a Commentary on St. Paul's Epistles; and to have flourished about A. D. 354.
ATHANASIUS, was bishop of Alexandria, A. D. 326; died in 375.
ATHENAGORAS, a Christian philosopher of Athens, flourished in A. D. 178.
- BASIL the Great, bishop of Cæsarea, born in Cappadocia, A. D. 329; died 379.
BASIL, bishop of Seleucia, flourished in 450.
BEDE, the Venerable, born at Wearmouth, in the diocess of Durham, A. D. 673.
- CLEMENS ALEXANDRINUS, Clement of Alexandria, the preceptor of Origen, died A. D. 220.
CLEMENS ROMANUS, Clement of Rome, supposed to have been fellow labourer with Peter and Paul, and bishop of Rome, A. D. 91.
CHROMATIUS, bishop of Aquileia, and friend of St. Jerome, flourished about A. D. 370.
CHRONICON PASCALE, the Paschal Chronicle: this Chronicle extends from the creation to the twentieth year of Heraclius, A. D. 630.
CHRYSOSTOM, bishop of Constantinople, born A. D. 344; died 407.
CONSTITUTIONS OF THE APOSTLES, certain canons for the government of the Christian Church, formed at different times, and certainly long posterior to the times of the apostles.
CYPRIAN, Bishop of Carthage, in 248; was martyred, A. D. 258.
CYRILLUS ALEXANDRINUS. This Cyril was patriarch of Alexandria A. D. 412; died 444.
CYRILLUS HIEROSOLYMITANUS, Cyril, bishop of Jerusalem, was born A. D. 315; died 386.
- DAMASCENUS JOANNES, John of Damascus, born about A. D. 676.
DIONYSIUS ALEXANDRINUS, Dionysius, patriarch of Alexandria, flourished in 247.
DIONYSIUS AREOPAGITA, Dionysius the Areopagite, falsely so called, flourished about A. D. 490.
- EPHRAIM SYRUS, Ephraim the Syrian, was deacon of Edessa; and died about A. D. 379.
EPIPHANIUS, bishop of Salamis, born about A. D. 320.
EUSEBIUS, bishop of Antioch, flourished in 331.
EUTHALIUS: this writer flourished about A. D. 458, and wrote a critical work on the Acts of the Apostles. He is supposed to have been bishop of Sulca, in Egypt.
EUTHYMIUS ZIGABENUS, a monk who flourished in the twelfth century.
- GAUDENTIUS, bishop of Brescia, flourished in 410.
GREGORY the Great, bishop of Rome, flourished in 590.
GREGORY THAUMATURGUS, was a disciple of Origen, and bishop of Neocæsarea in 240.
GREGORY NAZIANZEN, born A. D. 328; died 389.
GREGORY NYSSEN, born in Cappadocia A. D. 331; died 396.
- HIERONYMUS. See Jerome.
HILARY PICTAVENSIS, Hilary, bishop of Poitiers, flourished A. D. 350.
HIPPOLYTUS, a Christian bishop, flourished A. D. 230.
- JEROME, one of the most eminent of the Latin fathers; author of the translation of the Scriptures called the Vulgate; born about A. D. 342, and died in 420.
IGNATIUS, bishop of Antioch, was martyred about A. D. 107.
IRENEUS, disciple of Polycarp; born in Greece about A. D. 130; martyred 202.

INTRODUCTION TO THE GOSPELS, ETC.

ISIDORE, of PELUSIUM, flourished in 431.

JUSTIN MARTYR, a Christian philosopher, martyred A. D. 167.

JUVENCUS, one of the first Christian poets, flourished about A. D. 329.

LUCIFER CALARITANUS, Lucifer, bishop of Cagliari, in Sardinia; died A. D. 370.

MACARIUS, an Egyptian monk, born at Alexandria, A. D. 300.

MAXIMUS, a native of Constantinople: he died about A. D. 652.

MAXIMUS TAURINENSIS, Maximus of Tournai, died A. D. 662.

NONNUS, flourished in A. D. 410, and wrote a paraphrase of St. John's gospel in Greek hexameters

OPUS IMPERFECTUM, an ancient unfinished commentary on St. Matthew's gospel, written about A. D. 560.

ORIGEN, one of the most eminent of the Greek fathers, born at Alexandria, A. D. 185.

PACIANUS, bishop of Barcelona, died A. D. 390.

PILEBADIUS, or PILEGADIUS, was of the province of Aquitain, of which he was bishop: he flourished about A. D. 359.

PHOTIUS, patriarch of Constantinople, A. D. 857.

PRUDENTIUS (Clemens Aurelius) of Saragossa, in Spain, flourished about A. D. 405.

RUFINUS, presbyter of Aquileia, an eminent translator of Greek authors into Latin: he died A. D. 410.

SCHOLIA, or SCHOLIASTÆ, marginal notes in some ancient MSS., &c.

TERTULLIAN, a most eminent Latin father, died about A. D. 216.

THEOPHILUS, bishop of Antioch, flourished about A. D. 180.

THEOPHYLACT, archbishop of Acrida, in Bulgaria, died A. D. 1100.

THEOPHANES CERAMEUS, bishop of Tauromine, in Sicily, flourished in the eleventh century.

TITUS BOSTRENSIS: he was bishop of Bostria some time in the fourth century.

VICTOR ANTIOCHENUS, flourished about A. D. 400: he wrote on St. Mark's gospel, and on the catholic epistles.

VICTOR TUNUNENSIS, bishop of Tunis, in Africa, flourished about 555.

VICTORINUS AFRICANUS (C. M.) was an African, and flourished in A. D. 360.

VIGILIUS TAPSSENSIS, bishop of Tapsus, in Africa, flourished about A. D. 484.

For farther information concerning these, and other writers mentioned in the work, see Cave's Historia Literaria, and Dr. Lardner's Works; and see a work entitled "The Succession of Sacred Literature, from the Invention of Alphabetical Characters down to the 15th Century;" brought down to A. D. 345 by myself, and continued to A. D. 1414 by my son, the Rev. J. B. B. Clarke, A. M., of Trinity College, Cambridge: 2 vols. 8vo. London: 1831.

GENERAL OBSERVATIONS.

THE above writers are only referred to for the quotations from the sacred writings found in their works. The Latin fathers, before the time of Jerome, i. e., before the fourth century, quote from the Itala version. Those after his time generally make their quotations from the Vulgate. The Greek fathers quote from the different editions of the Greek text in their respective countries. Ephraim Syrus, and probably some others, from the ancient Syriac version.

Of the fathers in general it may be said, they often quote from memory; not giving the exact words of the sacred writers, but the sense: and often rendering a word by another equivalent to it, in the same language. This sort of quotation has given rise to a vast number of various readings, which should never encumber the margins of our critical editions of the Greek text; though many of them may be of use, as fixing the sense in which the writers understood the original text. Those fathers who comment on the sacred writings are most valuable, such as Origen, Ambrosiaster, Euthalius, Chrysostom, Jerome, Theophylact, &c., because it may be always supposed they had the copies before them from which they quoted; and that these copies were such as were held to be authentic in the Churches to which they respectively belonged. But even here we find the same father inconsistent with himself, in repeated quotations of the same words; which is perhaps not so much to be attributed to quoting from memory, as to mistakes made by succeeding copyists of the works of these authors. The different MSS. of the Greek and Latin fathers stand as much in need of collation as any other works; and some of them need this as much as the Greek text itself.

In quoting the Greek text, I have generally followed the second edition of Griesbach, occasionally consulting Mill, Wetstein, and Bengel: for the different versions, as far as they are extant in it, I have followed the London Polyglott, occasionally consulting both the Complutensian, Antwerp, and Paris editions. The Coptic, Gothic, Sahidic, Philoxenian, Syriac, and Anglo-Saxon, which are not in the Polyglotts, I have consulted in the editions to which they are confined. The Vulgate I have frequently consulted in my own MSS. of that version. The Codex Alexandrinus and the Codex Bezae, I have often quoted from the editions of Woide and Kipling. I have taken a few readings from some fragments of St. Matthew's gospel, engraved and published from a codex rescriptus in Trinity College, Dublin, by the very learned Dr. Barrett, vice provost and librarian of that university. This MS., written in uncial letters, and perhaps one of the oldest extant, I have not mentioned among the MSS. described p. xii. &c., because it has not been quoted by Griesbach, not being published when the first volume of his Testament went to the press. The work in which Dr. Barrett has described this, I have quoted largely in the notes on the genealogy of our Lord, at the end of Luke, chap. iii.

Every Biblical student, in consulting the sacred writings of the New Testament, should have at hand, if possible, the second edition of Griesbach; I mean that printed at Halle, two volumes 8vo. 1796, &c. On the late London edition of that work, equal dependence cannot be placed. A learned American clergyman, the Rev. Samuel F. Jarvis, rector of St. Michael's, &c., New York has published proposals for a new, and, as far as I can learn from the prospectus, &c., an improved edition of Griesbach's work: and in so important and useful an undertaking, it is to be hoped he will meet with due encouragement.*

Those who have not a Polyglott, to refer to the Syriac version, will find Schaaf's edition to answer every purpose: it is generally very correct, and very valuable. A new edition of the Syriac Testament has been lately published at the expense of the British and Foreign Bible Society, first under the direction of the Rev. Dr. Claudius Buchanan, who had made this text his particular study, and had brought from the east some valuable MSS. of this important and ancient version; and has been finished under the superintendence of the Rev. S. Lee, Arabic professor in the university of Cambridge.

While the critical inquirer is availing himself of every help within his reach, let him not forget humbly and fervently to implore the help and teaching of Almighty God; without whom nothing is wise, nothing strong. It is only when He opens our eyes, that we behold wonders in his law. He who does not pray, is not humble; and an unhumbled searcher after truth never yet found it to the salvation of his soul. In such a work, the following inimitable prayer cannot be used in vain. "Blessed Lord, who hast caused all Holy Scriptures to be written for our learning; grant that we may in such wise hear them, read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest them, that, by patience and comfort of thy holy word, we may embrace, and ever hold fast, the blessed hope of everlasting life, which thou hast given us in our Saviour Jesus Christ." Amen.

Collect for the second Sunday of Advent.

London, Nov. 30, 1831.

* It has not yet been published, (1831,) as far as I can learn.—A. C.

Chronological Arrangement of the Books of the New Testament, the Places where written, according to Dr. Lardner; and the enumeration of all the Books, Chapters, and Verses.

| Number of Books, Chapters, and Verses in the New Testament. | | | THE GOSPELS. | | |
|---|-----------|---------|------------------------|-----------------------|--------------------|
| Name and Number of Books. | Chapters. | Verses. | Books. | Places where written. | Time when written. |
| Matthew | 28 | 1071 | Matthew | Judea | A. D. 64 |
| Mark | 16 | 678 | Mark | Rome | 64 |
| Luke | 24 | 1151 | Luke | Greece | 63 or 64 |
| John | 21 | 880 | John | Ephesus | 68 |
| Acts | 28 | 1006 | Acts | Greece | 63 or 64 |
| Romans | 16 | 434 | ST. PAUL'S EPISTLES. | | |
| 1 Corinthians | 16 | 437 | 1 Thessalonians | Corinth | 52 |
| 2 Corinthians | 13 | 256 | 2 Thessalonians | Corinth | 52 |
| Galatians | 6 | 149 | Galatians | Corinth, or Ephesus | 52 or 53 |
| Ephesians | 6 | 155 | 1 Corinthians | Ephesus | beginning of 56 |
| Philippians | 4 | 104 | 1 Timothy | Macedonia | 56 |
| Colossians | 4 | 95 | Titus | Macedonia, or near it | before end of 56 |
| 1 Thessalonians | 5 | 89 | 2 Corinthians | Macedonia | October 57 |
| 2 Thessalonians | 3 | 47 | Romans | Corinth | February 58 |
| 1 Timothy | 6 | 113 | Ephesians | Rome | April 61 |
| 2 Timothy | 4 | 83 | 2 Timothy | Rome | May 61 |
| Titus | 3 | 46 | Philippians | Rome | end of 62 |
| Philemon | 1 | 25 | Colossians | Rome | end of 62 |
| Hebrews | 13 | 303 | Philemon | Rome | end of 62 |
| James | 5 | 108 | Hebrews | Rome, or Italy | spring of 63 |
| 1 Peter | 5 | 105 | THE CATHOLIC EPISTLES. | | |
| 2 Peter | 3 | 61 | James | Judea | 61 or 62 |
| 1 John | 5 | 105 | 1 and 2 Peter | Rome | 64 |
| 2 John | 1 | 13 | 1 John | Ephesus | 80 |
| 3 John | 1 | 15 | 2 and 3 John | Ephesus | between 80 and 90 |
| Jude | 1 | 25 | Jude | Unknown | 64 or 65 |
| Apocalypse | 22 | 405 | Apocalypse | Patmos, or Ephesus | 95 or 96 |
| Total. . . . 27 | 260 | 7959 | | | |

[¶ The reader, who is acquainted with the subject, and attends to the dates of the several Introductions and Parts, as they were penned and published, will readily apply the remarks of the venerable author, where he speaks of a "delay" in the publication of the work, exclusively to the first edition, which was sixteen years in passing through the press; as he will with equal readiness, refer the "mistakes," supposed to exist, notwithstanding the care taken to avoid them, to the same edition—such mistakes supplying, by the way, a standing reason for each succeeding edition, as published from the corrected copy. But the publisher, being aware that the remarks refer only to a matter of fact—that they contain some account of the progressive history of the work, and involve no errors of criticism on the sacred text, and being anxious withal to preserve the work entire, has preferred a seeming incongruity to the altering or expunging any information which the doctor has furnished on the subject of his hopes, his fears, and his labours.—Publisher of SECONDO EDITION.]

PREFACE TO THE GOSPEL

OF

S T. M A T T H E W

THE general title of this latter collection of sacred books, which, as well as the former, all Christians acknowledge to have been given by immediate inspiration from God, is in the Greek Η ΚΑΙΝΗ ΔΙΑΘΗΚΗ, which we translate THE NEW TESTAMENT: but which should rather be translated THE NEW COVENANT; or, if it were lawful to use a periphrasis, the New Covenant, including a Testamentary Declaration and Bequest: for this is precisely the meaning of this system of justice, holiness, goodness, and truth. St. Paul, 2 Cor. iii. 14, calls the sacred books before the time of Christ, Η ΠΑΛΑΙΑ ΔΙΑΘΗΚΗ, THE OLD COVENANT; which is a very proper and descriptive title of the grand subject of those books. This apostle evidently considers the Old Testaments and the New, as two covenants, Gal. iv. 24; and, in comparing these two together, he calls one παλαιαν διαθηκην, the old covenant, the other καινην, the new; one πρωτην, the first, the other νυν, that which is recent; in opposition to the old covenant, which was to terminate in the new, he calls this κρειττονα, better, more excellent, Heb. vii. 22; viii. 6; and αιωνιον, eternal, Heb. xiii. 20, because it is never to be changed, nor terminate in any other; and to endure endlessly itself. The word covenant, from con together, and venio, I come, signifies a contract or agreement made between two parties; to fulfil the conditions of which, they are mutually bound. The old covenant, in its essential parts, was very simple. I WILL BE YOUR GOD. YE SHALL BE MY PEOPLE—the spirit of which was never changed. The people were to take Jehovah as the sole object of their religious worship; put their whole trust and confidence in him; serve him in his own way, according to the prescribed forms which he should lay before them. This was their part. On his side, God was to accept them as his people, give them his Spirit to guide them, his mercy to pardon them, his providence to support them, and his grace to preserve them unto eternal life. But all this was connected with the strict observance of a great variety of rites and ceremonies, at once expressive of the holiness of God, the purity of the Divine justice, and the exceeding sinfulness and utter helpless state of man. A great part of the four latter books of Moses is employed in prescribing and illustrating these rites and ceremonies; and what is called the new covenant is the complement and perfection of the whole.

The word Διαθηκη, from δια and τιθημι, I lay down, signifies not only a covenant agreement, but also that disposal which a man makes of his secular matters during his life, which is to take place after his death. It answers to the Hebrew בְּרִית berith, from בר bar, to purify, because, in making covenants, a sacrifice was usually offered to God, for the purification of the contracting parties; and hence the word בְּרִית berith is frequently used to express not only the covenant itself, but also the sacrifice offered on the occasion. See below under GOSPEL; and see the notes on Gen. vi. 18; xv. 18; Exod. xxix. 45; Lev. xxvi. 15; and Deut. xxix. 12, where every thing relative to this subject is minutely considered.

The term new covenant, as used here, seems to mean that grand plan of agreement or reconciliation which God made between himself and mankind, by the death of Jesus Christ; in consequence of which, all those who truly repent, and unfeignedly believe in the great atoning sacrifice, are purified from their sins, and united to God. Christ is called της Διαθηκης καινης μεσσητης, the Mediator of the new covenant, Heb. ix. 15. And referring to the ratification of this new covenant or agreement, by means of his own death, in the celebration of his last supper, Christ calls the cup, το ποτεριον η καινη Διαθηκη εν τω αιματι μου, this cup is the new covenant in my blood: i. e. an emblem or representation of the new covenant ratified by his blood. See Luke xxii. 20. And from these expressions, and their obvious meaning, the whole Christian Scriptures have obtained this title, THE NEW TESTAMENT, OR COVENANT, OF OUR LORD AND SAVIOUR JESUS CHRIST

Those writings, and the grand subject of them, which, previously to the New Testament times, were termed simply the covenant; were, after the incarnation, called the old covenant, as we have already seen, to distinguish them from the Christian Scriptures, and their grand subject, which were called the new covenant; not so much because it was a new agreement, but rather a renewal of the old, in which the spirit, object, and design of that primitive covenant were more clearly and fully manifested.

The particular title to each of the four following books, in most Greek MSS. and printed editions, is ΕΥΑΓΓΕΛΙΟΝ ΚΑΤΑ ΜΑΤΘΑΙΟΝ—ΜΑΡΚΟΝ—ΛΟΥΚΑΝ—ΙΩΑΝΝΗΝ, which we translate, the Gospel according to Matthew—Mark—Luke—John; i. e. the gospel or history of our blessed Lord, as written and transmitted to posterity by each of these writers. Our word gospel, which should be always written godspel, or godespel, comes from the Anglo-Saxon godspel, and is compounded of god, good, and spel, history, narrative, doctrine, mystery, or secret; and was applied by our ancestors to signify the revelation of that glorious system of truth, which had been, in a great measure, hidden or kept secret from the foundation of the world.

Among Saxon scholars, the word gospel has been variously explained. Mr. Somner, who writes it god-spell, explains it thus, Sermo Dei mysticus; Dei historia. “The mystic word of God; the history of God, or God’s history.” But he supposes that it may be compounded of god, good, and spell, a message; and very properly observes, that godspelian signifies, not only to preach, or proclaim the Gospel; but also to foretell, or predict; to prophecy, to divine: and in this latter sense the word spell was anciently used among us, and still signifies an incantation, or a charm; which implies a peculiar collocation and repetition of certain words, which were supposed to produce supernatural effects by means of spiritual influence or agency; which agency was always attracted and excited by such words, through some supposed correspondency between the words, and the spiritual agency to be employed. The word, in this sense, occurs in King Alfred’s Saxon translation of Boethius, De Consolatione Philosophiæ, chap. 38. Ða ongunnon leare men wýrcan spell, Then deceitful men began to practise incantations. It is possible that our ancestors gave this title to the preaching of Christ crucified, from observing the astonishing effects produced by it, in changing the hearts and lives of sinners. And very innocently might they denominate the pure powerful preaching of the death and resurrection of Christ, God’s charm: that wonderful word, which, accompanied with the demonstration and power of the Holy Ghost, produced such miraculous effects among men.

As the word spelian signifies to teach or instruct, hence our word to spell, i. e. to teach a person, by uniting vowels and consonants, to enunciate words; and thus learn to read. And hence the book out of which the first rudiments of language are learned is termed a spelling book, exactly answering to the spell-boc spell-book of our ancestors, which signified a book of homilies, or philosophical discourses, for the instruction of the common people. We may see (note on Gen. i. 1) that god among our ancestors, not only signified God, the supreme Being; but also good or goodness, which is his nature: godspell godspell, therefore, is not only God’s history, doctrine, or plan of teaching; but also the good history, the good doctrine; and hence spelian, to preach or proclaim this doctrine; spell-boc the sermons that contained the rudiments of it, for the instruction of men; and spell-boda spel-bodu, the orator, messenger, or ambassador, that announced it.

The Greek word Εὐαγγέλιον, from eu good, and aggelia a message, signifies good news, or glad tidings in general; and is evidently intended to point out, in this place, the good message or the glad tidings of great joy which God has sent to all mankind, preaching peace and reconciliation by Christ Jesus, who is Lord of all: proclaiming that he, as the promised Messiah, has, by the grace of God, tasted death for every man—for he has died for their offences, and risen again for their justification; and that, through his grace, every sinner under the whole heaven, may turn to God, and find mercy. This is good news, glad tidings, a joyful message; and it is such to all mankind, as in it every human spirit is interested.

It is used in this sense by Achilles Tatius, lib. v. c. 12, Ταῦτα ἀκούσας ὁ Σατύρος, προστρέχει πρὸς τὴν Μελίτην εὐαγγέλια φέρων. Having heard these things, Satyrus ran to Melitta, bringing the good news.

But, besides this general meaning, the word Εὐαγγέλιον, has other acceptations in the New Testament, and in the Greek writers, which may be consulted here with great propriety and effect.

1. It signifies the reward given to those who brought good news. Thus Homer represents the disguised Ulysses claiming a reward εὐαγγέλιον, a vest and mantle, should he verify to Eumens the glad tidings of his master’s safety. Εὐαγγέλιον δὲ μοι ἐστω. Let me have a reward for my good news. Odys. xiv. v. 152.

To which Eumens, who despaired of his master’s return, replied,—

Ω γερὸν, οὐτ’ ἀρ’ ἐγὼν Εὐαγγέλιον τοδε τισῶ,
Οὐτ’ Οδυσσεὺς ἐτι οἶκον ελευσεται. Ib. v. 266.

Old friend! nor cloak nor vest thy gladsome news
Will ever earn: Ulysses comes no more! COWPER

And on the word, as thus used, Eustathius gives the following comment : Εὐαγγέλιον ; δῶν τι ἀγαθῆς εὐαγγελίας. “ Euangelion signifies the reward given for bringing good news.”

St. Chrysostom, in his sixteenth Homily on the Acts, gives this as a common meaning of the word. “The Gospel is this : Thou shalt receive good things : as men are accustomed in their common conversation to say to each other, τί μοι τῶν εὐαγγελίων ; What reward wilt thou give me for my good news ? &c.” It is used in the same sense by the Septuagint. 2 Sam. iv. 10. When one told me, saying, Behold, Saul is dead, thinking to have brought good tidings, I took him and slew him in Ziklag, who thought ὡς εἴη ἡ δόξα εὐαγγελία, that I would have given him a reward for his tidings. Cicero uses it in the same sense ; see his epistles to Atticus, lib. 2. ep. 3. O suares epistolas tuas uno tempore mihi datas duas : quibus εὐαγγελία quæ reddam nescio, deberi quidem, plane fatcor. “O, how delightful are your epistles ! two of which I have received at one time, for which I know not what recompense to make : but, that I am your debtor, I candidly confess.”

2. It is used also to signify the prayers, thanksgivings, and sacrifices offered on the arrival of good news. So Aristophanes, Μοι δοκεῖ—εὐαγγελία θύειν, εκατόν βους, τῇ θεῳ, I think I should sacrifice a hecatomb to the goddess for this intelligence, Aristoph. in Equit. v. 653.

Isocrates (Areopag. initio) is supposed to use the word in the sense of supplication, Ἐπεὶ ποσάνταις πράξεσιν εὐαγγελία μὲν δις ἡδὴ τεθυκαμεν—“relative to these transactions, we have purposed to make supplication twice.” Xenophon uses it to denote a eucharistic offering made on account of receiving good news. Ἐθνε το εὐαγγελία. See Hist. Gr. i. 6, 27. It seems to be used in a similar sense by the Septuagint in 2 Sam. xviii. 20, 27.

Other examples might be produced in which the word is used in all the above senses ; but these may be deemed sufficient. I would not have been so copious, had not a certain great man denied that the word had the above meanings.

3. However illustrative the above acceptations of Εὐαγγέλιον, among the Greek writers, may be of the word in relation to the great doctrine of the new covenant ; yet, among the sacred writers, it is restricted to express the glad tidings of the coming of the Messiah, for the reasons mentioned above. See Luke ii. 10.

4. The whole doctrine of Jesus Christ, comprised in the history of his incarnation, preaching, miracles, sufferings, death, resurrection, ascension, and the mission of the Holy Spirit, by which salvation was procured for a lost world, is expressed by the word Εὐαγγέλιον, as well as by the general title ; Κατὰ Διὰθηκην. Rom. i. 1. 3, 9 ; Matt. iv. 23 ; ix. 35 ; xxiv. 14 ; Mark i. 14. But the sacred writers use it with a variety of epithets which it may be necessary to mention.

1st, It is sometimes termed, The Gospel of God concerning his Son. Rom. i. 1, 3. 2dly, The Gospel of the Son of God. Rom. i. 9. 3dly, The Gospel of the kingdom of God. Matt. iv. 23 ; ix. 35 ; xxiv. 14 ; Mark i. 14. 4thly, Sometimes it is simply called THE GOSPEL. Mark xiii. 10 ; xvi. 15. 5thly, The word or doctrine (λόγος) of the Gospel. Acts xv. 7. 6thly, The Gospel of peace. Eph. vi. 15. 7thly, The Gospel of glory, το εὐαγγέλιον τῆς δόξης. 1 Tim. i. 11. 8thly, The Gospel of salvation, το εὐαγγέλιον τῆς σωτηρίας. Eph. i. 13.

5. In 1 Cor. ix. 23, it means the blessings and privileges promised in the New Testament.

6. It means the public profession of the doctrine taught by Christ, Mark viii. 35 ; x. 29 ; 2 Tim. i. 8 ; Philem. ver. 13.

7. But in Gal. i. 6, 8, 9, the word Εὐαγγέλιον seems to mean any new doctrine, whether true or false.

Many MSS. have Τὸ κατὰ Ματθαίον ἅγιον Εὐαγγέλιον, which is generally rendered, The Gospel according to SAINT Matthew. But the word ἅγιον, saint, or holy, should be here applied to the Gospel, with which it properly agrees ; and then the title would run, The holy Gospel according to Matthew ; that is, the account of this holy dispensation according to the narrative composed by Matthew, an eye witness of all the transactions he relates. But anciently the word holy was neither applied to the narrative nor to the narrator, the title being simply, The Gospel according to Matthew, and so of the others.

SOME ACCOUNT OF MATTHEW THE EVANGELIST.

MATTHEW, supposed to be the same who is also called Levi, son of Alphaeus, was by birth a Jew. As to his office, he appears to have been a tax-gatherer, under the Romans. He was a native of Galilee, as the rest of Christ's apostles were; but of what city in that country, or of which tribe of the people of Israel, is not known.

As he sat at the custom house, by the seaside, in or near the city of Capernaum, Jesus called him; and as soon as he could make up his accounts with those by whom he had been employed and intrusted, he became a willing, faithful disciple of Christ. After this, St. Mark tells us, he made an entertainment in his own house, where Christ and several of his disciples were present, together with many tax-gatherers, and others, of no very respectable character, in the sight of the Pharisees.

It is probable that Matthew took this occasion of calling together his relatives and acquaintances, that he might take a friendly farewell of them; and give them the opportunity of seeing and hearing that Divine Person, whose words he had already found to be spirit and life to his own soul, and to whose service he had now solemnly dedicated himself.

He was placed by our Lord in the number of his apostles, and continued with him during his life. After the ascension of Christ, he was at Jerusalem, and received the Holy Ghost with the rest of the disciples on the day of pentecost.

Matthew, with Andrew, Peter, and the two sons of Zebedee, are the only disciples whose call is particularly mentioned. It is uncertain when, where, or how he died. There does not appear to be any clear evidence, in the writings of the primitive fathers, that he suffered martyrdom.

St. Matthew's gospel is generally allowed to be the most ancient part of the writings of the New Covenant. Many modern critics contend that it was written about the year of our Lord 61, or between this and 65. Others, that it was written so early as 41, or about the eighth year after the ascension; and this is supported by the subscriptions at the end of this gospel in many MSS.; but it must be observed, that all these MSS. are posterior to the 10th century. Michaelis has adopted a middle way, which carries much of the appearance of probability with it, viz.: that Matthew wrote his gospel in Hebrew about the 8th year after the ascension of our Lord, or A. D. 41; and that the translation of it into Greek was made about A. D. 61, or later.

Whether this gospel were written originally in Hebrew or Greek, is a question by which the most eminent critics have been greatly puzzled and divided. The balance, however, is clearly in favour of a Hebrew original. The present Greek text was doubtless published at a very early period; who the translator was, cannot, at this distance of time, be determined; probably it was the evangelist himself.

As Matthew was one of the twelve disciples, his history is an account of what he heard and saw, being a constant attendant on our blessed Lord. This consideration, of itself, would prove that, allowing him only to be a man of integrity, he would make no mistakes in his narrative. Add to this, the influence and superintendence of the Holy Spirit, under which he constantly acted, and which our Lord had promised to his disciples, to guide them into all truth, and bring whatsoever he had spoken to them, into remembrance, John xiv. 26. These two considerations stamp the narrative with the utmost degree of credibility.

ADVERTISEMENT.

It may be necessary to say a few words in explanation of the different ERAS introduced at the commencement of the gospels. 1. By the Usherian year of the World, the reader is to understand the chronological computation of Archbishop Usher; who supposed that 4000 years exactly had elapsed from the creation of the world till the birth of Christ. 2. The Alexandrian era is that chronological computation which was used by the people of Alexandria; who began their reckoning 5502 before the vulgar year of Christ 1. 3. The Antiochian era is a correction of the preceding, in the 4th century, by Pandorus, an Egyptian monk, and used by the people of Antioch; it differs only from the Alexandrian by subtracting ten years. 4. The Constantinopolitan era is that still in use in the Greek Church, which reckons 5508 before the year 1 of the Incarnation, according to the vulgar era. 5. The Julian Period is a fictitious era, conceived by Joseph Scaliger, to facilitate the reduction of the years of any given epoch to that of another. This Period is the result of the Lunar and Solar Cycles, and the Indictions, multiplied by each other. Thus, multiply 19 the Lunar Cycle, by 28 the Solar Cycle, and the product will be 532; multiply this sum by 15, the Cycle of the Indictions, and you will have 7980 years, which constitute the Julian Period. The first year of the vulgar era is placed in the 4714th year of the Julian Period: whence it follows, that to find any year of our Lord in this period, 4713 years must be added to that year: e. g., to find the year of this period, answering to the present year of our Lord 1812, add 4713, and you will have 6525, which is the year of the Julian Period sought. 6. The era of the Selucidæ, sometimes improperly called the era of Alexander, commenced 12 years after the death of Alexander the Great, 312 before the Incarnation, according to the vulgar reckoning, and was properly the first year of the Syro-Macedonian empire. 7. By the year before the vulgar era of Christ, is meant that correct chronological reckoning which showed that the vulgar or common reckoning of the A. D. or year of our Lord, is deficient not less than four years: so that the present year, 1812, should be, according to strict chronological precision, 1816. 8. The mode of computing by Olympiads derived its origin from the institution of the Olympic Games, which were celebrated every four years, for five successive days, at the time of the first full moon, after the summer's solstice. They were held on the banks of the river Alpheus, near Olympia, a city of Elis, from which they derived their name. The first Olympiad commenced 776 before the Incarnation of our Lord. It need scarcely be added, that each Olympiad consists of four years; hence the first, second, third, or fourth year of any particular Olympiad. 9. The year of the building of Rome is an important era among the Roman historians: it commenced 753 years before the birth of Christ. 10. The year of Augustus, or years after the battle of Actium, is the computation of time from the commencement of the Roman Empire, which took place after the battle of Actium, 27 years before our Lord: from this time Augustus became sole governor. 11. The Cycles introduced require little explanation. The Solar Cycle is a revolution consisting of 28 years; the Lunar Cycle of 19; and the Paschal Cycle or Dionysian Period, is compounded of both, thus: The Solar Cycle of 28, and the Lunar of 19, multiplied by each other, produce 532, which constitutes a third Cycle called the Paschal Cycle, because in that period the Christian Passover, or Easter, a movable feast, has gone through all possible variations, and the Solar and Lunar Cycles, Dominical Letters, Paschal term, Epacts, New Moons, &c., &c., all recommence exactly 532 years before. 12. The Co-sæan era of Antioch was a monument which the city of Antioch erected to the honour of Julius Cæsar, in commemoration of his victory at Pharsalia. This was obtained 48 years before the commencement of the Christian era. 13. The Spanish era: this was kept in commemoration of the entire subduction of Spain, by Augustus Cæsar, which took place in the year of Rome 715, or 39 years before the vulgar era of Christ. 14. The Julian era, or as it is sometimes called, the era of Julius Cæsar: this had for its foundation the reformation of the Roman Calendar by Julius Cæsar: and the change was made 45 years before the birth of Christ. Other eras might have been noticed, but those mentioned above were judged to be the most important.

For farther particulars relative to the history of the gospels, see the GENERAL PREFACE to the NEW TESTAMENT.

Foldout

Here

THE GOSPEL

ACCORDING TO

S T. M A T T H E W

Jewish year of the World, 4000.—Alexandrian year of the World, 5498.—Antiochian year of the World, 5188.—Constantinopolitan Era of the World, 5504.—Year of the Julian Period, 4709.—Era of the Seleucidæ, 308.—Year before the vulgar Era of Christ, 5.—Year of the CXCIII. Olympiad, 4.—Year of the building of Rome, 749.—Year of the Emperor Augustus, i. e. from the battle of Actium, 26.—Consuls, Augustus XII. and Lucius Cornelius Sulla.—Year of the Paschal Cycle or Dionysian Period, 530.—Year of the Solar Cycle, 5.—Year of the Lunar Cycle, 13.—Dominical Letters, B A.

CHAPTER I.

The genealogy of Christ divided into three classes of fourteen generations each: The first fourteen, from Abraham to David, 2-6. The second fourteen, from Solomon to Jeconias, 7-10. The third fourteen, from Jeconias to Christ, 11-16. The sum of these generations, 17. Christ is conceived by the Holy Ghost, and born of the Virgin Mary, when she was espoused to Joseph, 18. Joseph's ancestry and doubts are removed by the ministry of an Angel, 19, 20; by whom the child is named Jesus, 21. The fulfilment of the prophecy of Isaiah relative to this, 22, 23. Joseph takes home his wife, Mary, and Christ is born, 24, 25.

A. M. 4000.
B. C. 5.
An. Olymp.
CXCIII. 4.
THE book of the ^a generation of Jesus Christ, ^b the son of David, ^c the son of Abraham.

2 ^d Abraham begat Isaac; and ^e Isaac begat Jacob; and ^f Jacob begat Judas and his brethren; <sup>A. M. 4000.
B. C. 5.
An. Olymp.
CXCIII. 4.</sup>

Luke iii. 23.—^b Psa. cxxxii. 11; Isa. xi. 1; Jer. xxiii. 5; xxii. 2; John vii. 42; Acts ii. 30, xiii. 23; Rom. i. 3.

^c Gen. xii. 3; xxii. 18; Gal. iii. 16.—^d Gen. xxi. 2, 3.—^e Gen. xxv. 26.—^f Gen. xxix. 35.

NOTES ON CHAP. I.

Verse 1. The book of the generation of Jesus Christ] I suppose these words to have been the original title to this Gospel; and that they signify, according to the Hebrew phraseology, not only the account of the genealogy of Christ, as detailed below, but the history of his birth, acts, sufferings, death, resurrection, and ascension.

The phrase, book of the generation, כִּפְּר הוֹלְדוֹת, sepher toledoth, is frequent in the Jewish writings, and is translated by the Septuagint, βιβλος γενεσως, and so here, by the evangelist; and regularly conveys the meaning given to it above; e. g. This is the book of the generations of Adam, Gen. v. 1. That is, the account of the life of Adam and certain of his immediate descendants. Again. These are the generations of Jacob, Gen. xxxvii. 2. That is, the account or history of Jacob, his son Joseph, and the other remarkable branches of the family. And again. These are the generations of Aaron and Moses, Num. iii. 1. That is, the history of the life and acts of these persons, and some of their immediate descendants. The same form of expression is also used, Gen. ii. 4, when giving the history of the creation of heaven and earth.

Some have translated βιβλος γενεσως, The book of the genealogy; and consider it the title of this chapter only; but the former opinion seems better founded.

Jesus Christ] See on verses 16 and 21.

The son of David, the son of Abraham] No person ever born could boast, in a direct line, a more illustrious ancestry than Jesus Christ. Among his progenitors, the regal, sacerdotal, and prophetic offices, existed in all their glory and splendour. David, the most renowned of sovereigns, was king and prophet: ABRAHAM, the most perfect character in all antiquity whether sacred or profane, was priest and prophet: but the three offices were never united except in the person of Christ; he alone was prophet, priest, and king; and possessed and executed these offices in such a supereminent degree as no human being ever did, or ever could do. As the principal business of the prophet was to make known the will of God to men, according to certain partial communications received from Heaven; so Jesus, who lay in the bosom of the Father, and who was intimately and thoroughly

A. M. 4000.
B. C. 5.
An. Olymp.
CXCIII. 4.

3 And ^ε Judas begat Phares and Zara of Thamar; and ^h Phares begat Esrom; and Esrom begat Aram;

4 And Aram begat Aminadab; and Aminadab begat Naasson; and Naasson begat Salmon;

5 And Salmon begat Booz of Rachab; and Booz begat Obed of Ruth; and Obed begat Jesse;

^ε Gen. xxxviii. 27.—^h Ruth iv. 18, &c.; 1 Chron. ii. 5, 9, &c.

A. M. 4000.
B. C. 5.
An. Olymp.
CXCIII. 4.

6 And ⁱ Jesse begat David the king; and ^k David the king begat Solomon of her that had been the wife of Urias;

7 And ^l Solomon begat Roboam; and Roboam begat Abia; and Abia begat Asa;

8 And Asa begat Josaphat; and Josaphat begat Joram; and Joram begat Ozias, ⁱ 1 Sam. xvi. 1; xvii. 12.—^k 2 Sam. xii. 24.—^l 1 Chron. iii. 10, &c.

acquainted with all the mysteries of the eternal world, come to declare the Divine nature and its counsels to mankind; see John i. 18. As the business of the priest was to offer sacrifices to God, to make atonement for the sins of the people; so Christ was constituted a high priest, to make, by the sacrifice of himself, an atonement for the sins of the whole world; see 1 John ii. 2, and the whole Epistle to the Hebrews. As the office of king was to reign over, protect, and defend the people committed to his care by the Divine Providence; so Christ is set as a king upon Sion, having the heathen for his inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession, Psa. ii. 6, 8, &c. Of the righteousness, peace, and increase of whose government, there shall be no end, Isa. ix. 7. This three-fold office, Christ executes not only in a general sense, in the world at large; but, in a particular sense, in every Christian soul. He is first a prophet, to teach the heart of man the will of God; to convict the conscience of sin, righteousness, and judgment; and fully to illustrate the way of salvation. He is next a priest, to apply that atonement to the guilty conscience, the necessity of which, as a prophet, he had previously made known. And lastly, as a king, he leads captivity captive, binds and casts out the strong man armed, spoils his goods, extends the sway of the sceptre of righteousness, subdues and destroys sin, and reigns Lord over all the powers and faculties of the human soul; so that as sin reigned unto death, even so does grace reign through righteousness unto eternal life, by Jesus Christ our Lord. Rom. v. 21.

It is remarkable, that the evangelist names David before Abraham, though the latter was many generations older: the reason seems to be this, that David was not only the most illustrious of our Lord's predecessors, as being both king and prophet; but because that promise, which at first was given to Abraham, and afterwards, through successive generations, confirmed to the Jewish people, was at last determined and restricted to the family of David. Son of David, was an epithet by which the Messiah was afterwards known among the Jews; and, under this title, they were led to expect him by prophetic authority. See Psa. lxxxix. 3, 4; cxxxii. 10, 11, compared with Acts xiii. 23, and Isa. xi. 1; Jer. xxiii. 5. Christ was prophesied of under the very name of David. See Ezek. xxxiv. 23, 24; xxxvii. 24, 25.

Verse 2. Abraham begat Isaac] In this genealogy, those persons only, among the ancestors of Christ, which formed the direct line, as specified: hence no mention is made of Ishmael, the son of Abraham, nor of Esau, the son of Isaac; and of all the twelve patriarchs, or sons of Jacob, Judah alone is mentioned.

Verse 3. Phares and Zara] The remarkable history of these twins may be seen, Gen. xxxviii. Some of the ancients were of opinion, that the evangelist refers to the mystery of the youngest being preferred to the eldest, as prefiguring the exaltation of the Christian Church over the synagogue. Concerning the women whose names are recorded in this genealogy, see the note at the end of the chapter.

Verse 8. Joram begat Ozias] This is the Uzziah, king of Judah, who was struck with the leprosy for his presumption in entering the temple to offer incense before the Lord. See 2 Chron. xxvi. 16, &c. Ozias was not the immediate son of Joram: there were three kings between them, Ahaziah, Joash, and Ama-ziah, which swell the fourteen generations to seventeen: but it is observed that omissions of this kind are not uncommon in the Jewish genealogies. In Ezra vii. 3, Azariah is called the son of Merajoth, although it is evident, from 1 Chron. vi. 7-9, that there were six descendants between them. This circumstance the evangelist was probably aware of; but did not see it proper to attempt to correct what he found in the public accredited genealogical tables; as he knew it to be of no consequence to his argument, which was merely to show that Jesus Christ surely descended, in an uninterrupted line from David, as David did from Abraham. And this he has done in the most satisfactory manner; nor did any person in those days pretend to detect any inaccuracy in his statement; though the account was published among those very people whose interest it was to expose the fallacy, in vindication of their own obstinate rejection of the Messiah, if any such fallacy could have been proved. But as they were silent, modern and comparatively modern unbelievers may for ever hold their peace. The objections raised on this head are worthy of no regard; yet the following statement deserves notice.

St. Matthew took up the genealogies just as he found them in the public Jewish records, which, though they were in the main correct, yet were deficient in many particulars. The Jews themselves give us sufficient proof of this. The Talmud, title Kiddushim, mentions ten classes of persons who returned from the Babylonish captivity: I. כהנני COHANEV, priests. II. לוי LEVEV, Levites. III. ישראל YISHRAEL, Israelites

A. M. 4000.
B. C. 5.
An. Olymp.
CXCIII. 4.
9 And Ozias begat Joatham; and Joatham begat Achaz; and Achaz begat Ezekias;

10 And ^mEzekias begat Manasses; and Manasses begat Amon; and Amon begat Josias;

^m 2 Kings xx. 21; 1 Chron. iii. 13.—^a Some read Josias begat Jakim, and Jakim begat Jechonias.—^o See 1 Chron. iii. 15, 16.—^p 2 Kings xxiv. 1-4, 15, 16; xxv. 11; 2 Chron. xxxvi.

IV. חִלּוּלֵי CHULULEY, common persons, as to the priesthood; such whose fathers were priests, but their mothers were such as the priests should not marry. V. גֵּרִים GIREY, proselytes. VI. חֲרֻרִים CHARUREY, freed-men, or servants who had been liberated by their masters. VII. כְּמוֹזִיִּם MAMZIREY, spurious, such as were born in unlawful wedlock. VIII. נֶתִינִים NETHINEY, Nethimim. IX. שֶׁתֻּקִּים SHETUKEY, bastards, persons whose mothers, though well known, could not ascertain the fathers of their children, because of their connections with disreputable men. X. אֲסֻפֵּי ASUPHEY, such as were gathered up out of the streets, whose fathers and mothers were utterly unknown. Such was the heterogeneous mass brought up from Babylon to Jerusalem; and although we learn from the Jews, that great care was taken to separate the spurious from the true-born Israelites, and canons were made for that purpose, yet it so happened, that sometimes a spurious family had got into high authority, and therefore must not be meddled with. See several cases in Lightfoot. On this account, a faithful genealogist would insert in his roll such only as were indisputable. "It is therefore easy to guess," says Dr. Lightfoot, "whence Matthew took the last fourteen generations of this genealogy, and Luke the first forty names of his: namely, from the genealogical rolls, at that time well known, and laid up in the public κειμηλια, repositories, and in the private also. And it was necessary indeed, in so noble and sublime a subject, and a thing that would be so much inquired into by the Jewish people, as the lineage of the Messiah would be, that the evangelists should deliver a truth, not only that could not be gainsayed, but also might be proved and established from certain and undoubted rolls of ancestors." See Hora Talmudica.

Verse 11. Josias begat Jechonias, &c.] There are three considerable difficulties in this verse. 1. Josias was not the father of Jechonias; he was only the grandfather of that prince: 1 Chron. iii. 14-16. 2. Jechonias had no brethren; at least, none are on record. 3. Josias died 20 years before the Babylonish captivity took place, and therefore Jechonias and his brethren could not have been begotten about the time they were carried away to Babylon. To this may be added a fourth difficulty, viz. there are only thirteen in this 2d class of generations; or forty-one, instead of forty-two, in the whole. But all these difficulties disappear, by adopting a reading found in many MSS. Ἰωσίας δὲ ἐγεννησεν τὸν Ἰωακείμ· Ἰωακείμ δὲ ἐγεννησεν τὸν λεχονίαν. And Josias begat JEHOIAKIM, or Joakim, and JOAKIM begat Jechonias. For this reading, see the authorities in Griesbach. Josiah was the immediate father of Jehoiakim (called also Eliakim and Joakim) and his brethren, who were Johanan, Zede-

11 And ⁿJosias ^obegat Jechonias and his brethren, about the time they were ^pcarried away to Babylon:

12 And after they were brought to Babylon, ^qJechonias begat Salathiel; and Salathiel begat ^rZorobabel;

10, 20; Jer. xxvii. 20; xxxix. 9; Eze. 11, 15, 28, 29, 30; Dan. i. 2.—^q 1 Chron. iii. 17, 19.—Ezra iii. 2; v. 2; Neh. xii. 1; Hag. i. 1 kiah, and Shallum: see 1 Chron. iii. 15. Joakim was the father of Joachin or Jechonias, about the time of the first Babylonish captivity: for we may reckon three Babylonish captivities. The first happened in the fourth year of Joakim, son of Josiah, about A. M. 3398. In this year, Nebuchadnezzar, having taken Jerusalem, led a great number of captives to Babylon. The second captivity happened under Jechoniah, son of Joakim; who, having reigned three months, was taken prisoner in 3405, and was carried to Babylon, with a great number of the Jewish nobility. The third captivity took place under Zedekiah, A. M. 3416. And thus, says Calmet, the 11th verse should be read: Josias begat Joakim and his brethren: and Joakim begat Jechonias about the time of the first Babylonish captivity; and Jechonias begat Salathiel, after they were brought to Babylon. Thus, with the necessary addition of Joakim, the three classes, each containing fourteen generations, are complete. And to make this the more evident, I shall set down each of these three generations in a separate column, with the additional Joakim, that the reader may have them all at one view.

| | | |
|------------|-------------|-------------|
| 1 Abraham | 1 Solomon | 1 Jechonias |
| 2 Isaac | 2 Rehoboam | 2 Salathiel |
| 3 Jacob | 3 Abia | 3 Zorobabel |
| 4 Judah | 4 Asa | 4 Abiud |
| 5 Pharez | 5 Josaphat | 5 Eliakim |
| 6 Esrom | 6 Joram | 6 Azor |
| 7 Aram | 7 Ozias | 7 Sadoc |
| 8 Aminadab | 8 Joatham | 8 Achim |
| 9 Naason | 9 Achaz | 9 Eliud |
| 10 Salmon | 10 Ezekias | 10 Eleazar |
| 11 Booz | 11 Manasses | 11 Matthan |
| 12 Obed | 12 Amon | 12 Jacob |
| 13 Jesse | 13 Josias | 13 Joseph |
| 14 David | 14 Joachim | 14 JESUS |

In all forty-two generations.

Verse 12. Jechonias begat Salathiel] After Jechonias was brought to Babylon, he was put in prison by Nebuchadnezzar, where he continued till the death of this prince, and the accession of Evilmerodach, who brought him out of prison, in which he had been detained thirty-seven years, and restored him to such favour that his throne (seat) was exalted above all the kings which were with him in Babylon: Jer. lii. 31, 32. But though he thus became a royal favourite, he was never restored to his kingdom. And, according to the prophecy of Jeremiah xxii. 30, no man of his seed sat upon the throne of David; yet the regal line was continued through his son Salathiel, who died in Babylon: but Zorobabel, his son, returned from cap-

A. M. 4000. 13 And Zorobabel begat Abiud ;
B. C. 5. and Abiud begat Eliakim ; and Elia-
An. Olymp. CXCIIL. 4. kim begat Azor ;

14 And Azor begat Sadoc ; and Sadoc begat Achim ; and Achim begat Eliud ;

15 And Eliud begat Eleazar ; ^s and Eleazar begat Matthan ; and Matthan begat Jacob ;

16 And ^t Jacob begat Joseph, the husband of Mary, of whom was born Jesus, who is called Christ.

17 So all the generations from Abraham,

^s Luke iii. 24.—^t Ver. 21 ; chap. xiii. 55 ; xxvii. 56.

tivity, and by him the race of David was continued, according to Matthew, by Abiud ; and, according to Luke, by Rhesa. See on Luke iii. 23, &c.

The term carrying away to Babylon, μετακείσθαι, from μετακείναι, to change a habitation, or place of residence, would be more properly translated by the word transportation, which is here peculiarly appropriate : the change was not voluntary ; they were forced away.

Verse 16. Jesus, who is called Christ.] As the word Χριστός Christ, signifies the anointed or anointer, from χρίω, to anoint, it answers exactly to the Hebrew משיח mashiach, which we pronounce Messiah or Messias ; this word comes from the root משה mashac, signifying the same thing. As the same person is intended by both the Hebrew and Greek appellation, it should be regularly translated The Messiah, or The Christ ; whichever is preferred, the demonstrative article should never be omitted.

Priests, prophets, and kings, among the Jews, were anointed in order to the legitimate exercise of their respective offices. Hence the word Χριστός Christ, or משיח Mashiach, became a name of dignity, and often signified the same as king. See Isa. xlv. 1 ; Psal. cv. 15 ; Lev. iv. 3 ; vi. 20 ; 1 Sam. ii. 10. The words משיח Mashiach and מלך melec, Χριστός and βασιλεύς, Christ and king, are frequently interchanged. 1 Sam. ii. 10 ; Psal. ii. 2, 6 ; Luke xxiii. 2 ; and see the Scholia of Rosenmüller on this place. The reason of this may be seen in the following note, which I extract from the comment on Exod. xxix. 7.

"It appears from Isa. lxi. 1, that anointing with oil, in consecrating a person to any important office, whether civil or religious, was considered as an emblem of the communication of the gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit. This ceremony was used on three occasions, viz. the installation of prophets, priests, and kings, into their respective offices. But why should such an anointing be deemed necessary ? Because the common sense of men taught them that all good, whether spiritual or secular, must come from God, its origin and cause. Hence it was taken for granted, 1. That no man could foretell events, unless inspired by the Spirit of God. And therefore the prophet was anointed, to signify the communication of the Spirit of wisdom and knowledge. 2. That no person could offer an acceptable sacrifice to God for the sins of men, or profitably minister in holy things, unless enlightened, influenced, and directed, by the Spirit of grace and to David, are fourteen generations ; A. M. 4000

B. C. 5. and from David until the carrying An. Olymp. CXCIIL. 4. away into Babylon, are fourteen generations ; and from the carrying away into Babylon unto Christ, are fourteen generations.

18 ¶ Now the ^u birth of Jesus Christ was on this wise : When as his mother Mary was espoused to Joseph, before they came together, she was found with child ^v of the Holy Ghost.

^u Luke i. 27.—^v Luke i. 35.

holiness. Hence the priest was anointed, to signify his being divinely qualified for the due performance of his sacred functions. 3. That no man could enact just and equitable laws, which should have the prosperity of the community and the welfare of the individual continually in view, or could use the power confided to him only for the suppression of vice and the encouragement of virtue, but that man who was ever under the inspiration of the Almighty. Hence kings were inaugurated by anointing with oil. Two of these offices only exist in all civilized nations, the sacerdotal and regal ; and, in some countries, the priest and king are still consecrated by anointing. In the Hebrew language משה mashach signifies to anoint ; and משיח mashiach, the anointed person. But as no man was ever dignified by holding the three offices, so no person ever had the title Mashiach, the anointed one, but Jesus, The Christ. He alone is King of kings, and Lord of lords : the king who governs the universe, and rules in the hearts of his followers ; the prophet, to instruct men in the way wherein they should go ; and the great high priest, to make atonement for their sins. Hence he is called the Messias, a corruption of the word משיח ha-mashiach, THE ANOINTED ONE, in Hebrew ; which gave birth to ὁ Χριστός ho Christos, which has precisely the same signification in Greek : of him, Melchisedeck, Abraham, Aaron, David, and others, were illustrious types. But none of these had the title of THE MESSIAH, OR THE ANOINTED OF GOD. This does, and ever will, belong exclusively to Jesus, The Christ."

¶ Verse 17. Fourteen generations] See the note on ver. 11. The Jews had a sort of technical method of summing up generations in this way. In Synopsis Schar, p. 132, n. 18, we have the following words : "From Abraham to Solomon were fifteen generations ; and then the moon was at the full. From Solomon to Zedekiah were other fifteen generations ; the moon was then in the wane, and Zedekiah's eyes were put out." That is, the regal state came to its zenith of light and glory in the time of Solomon ; but decreased gradually, till it became nearly extinct in the days of Zedekiah. See Schoetgen.

Verse 18. Espoused to Joseph] The word μνηστεύειν, from μνηστῆρ, to contract, or betroth, refers to the previous marriage agreement, in which the parties mutually bound themselves to each other ; without which, no woman was ever married among the Jews.

A. M. 4000.

B. C. 5.

An. Olymp.

CXCIII. 4.

19 Then Joseph, her husband, being a just man, and not willing to make her a public example, was minded to put her away privily.

20 But while he thought on these things, behold, the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a dream, saying, Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife: ^a for that which is ^z conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost.

21 ^a And she shall bring forth a son, and

^a Deut. xxiv. 1. — ^z Luke i. 35 — ^γ Gr. begotten. — ^z Luke i. 31. — ^a That is, Saviour, Heb.

Among the Hindoos, a woman is espoused often a whole year, and even longer before the marriage takes place.

Before they came together] The woman was espoused at her own, or her father's house; and, generally, some time elapsed before she was taken home to the house of her husband: Deut. xx. 7; Judg. xiv. 7, 8. This custom has been immemorially observed among the inhabitants of Ireland, who have not only this, but many Asiatic customs, which, added to various authentic historic proofs, are collateral evidences that they received the Christian religion, not from the popes of Rome, but through the means of Asiatic missionaries.

Among the Jews, the espousal, though the marriage had not been consummated, was considered as perfectly legal and binding on both sides; and hence a breach of this contract was considered as a case of adultery, and punished exactly in the same way. See Deut. xxii. 25, 28. Nor could a contract of this kind, though there was no cohabitation, be broken but by a regular divorce, as Mr. Selden, in his Uxor Hebraica, has proved at large from the Jewish rabbins.

She was found with child] Her situation was the most distressing and humiliating that can be conceived. Nothing but the fullest consciousness of her own integrity, and the strongest confidence in God, could have supported her in such trying circumstances, where her reputation, her honour, and her life were at stake. What conversation passed between her and Joseph, on this discovery, we are not informed; but the issue proves that it was not satisfactory to him: nor could he resolve to consider her as his wife, till God had sent his angel to bear the most unequivocal testimony to the virgin's innocence. His whole conduct, on this occasion, was exceedingly benevolent and humane. He might at once have taken the advantage of the law, Deut. xxii. 23, 24, and had her stoned to death.

Verse 19. To make her a public example] Ἰπαρξεν, to expose her to public infamy; from παρὰ, near, and δεικνύειν, I show, or expose; what is oddly, though emphatically, called in England, showing up—exposing a character to public view. Though Joseph was a righteous man, δικαιος, and knew that the law required that such persons as he supposed his wife to be should be put to death, yet, as righteousness is ever directed by mercy, he determined to put her away or thou shalt call his name ^a JESUS: ^a M. 4000 for ^b he shall save his people from ^b C. 5.

their sins. ^a An. Olymp.
CXCIII. 4.

22 Now all this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying,

23 ^c Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and ^d they shall call his name Emmanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us.

24 Then Joseph, being raised from sleep, did

^b Acts iv. 12; v. 31; xiii. 23, 34 — ^c Isa. vii. 14. — ^d Or a name shall be called.

divorce her privately, i. e. without assigning any cause, that her life might be saved; and, as the offence was against himself, he had a right to pass it by if he chose. Some have supposed that the term δικαιος should be translated merciful, and it certainly often has this signification; but here it is not necessary.

Verse 20. That which is conceived (or formed) in her] So I think γεννηθεν should be translated in this place: as it appears that the human nature of Jesus Christ was a real creation in the womb of the virgin, by the power of the Holy Spirit. The angel of the Lord mentioned here was probably the angel Gabriel, who, six months before, had been sent to Zacharias and Elisabeth, to announce the birth of Christ's forerunner, John the Baptist. See Luke i. 36.

Verse 21. JESUS] The same as Joshua, יהושע Yehoshuá, from יָשָׁע yashá, he saved, delivered, put in a state of safety. See on Exod. xiii. 9; Num. xiii. 16, and in the preface to Joshua.

He shall save his people from their sins.] This shall be his great business in the world: the great errand on which he is come, viz. to make an atonement for, and to destroy, sin: deliverance from all the power, guilt, and pollution of sin, is the privilege of every believer in Christ Jesus. Less than this is not spoken of in the Gospel; and less than this would be unbecoming the Gospel. The perfection of the Gospel system is not that it makes allowances for sin, but that it makes an atonement for it: not that it tolerates sin, but that it destroys it. In ver. 1, he is called Jesus Christ, on which Dr. Lightfoot properly remarks, "That the name of Jesus, so often added to the name of Christ in the New Testament, is not only that Christ might be thereby pointed out as the Saviour, but also that Jesus might be pointed out as the true Christ or Messiah, against the unbelief of the Jews." This observation will be of great use in numberless places of the New Testament. See Acts ii. 36; viii. 35; 1 Cor. vi. 22; 1 John ii. 22; iv. 15, &c.

Verse 22. By the prophet] ISAIAH is added here by several MSS., versions, and fathers. The prophecy is taken from Isaiah vii. 14.

Verse 23. Behold, a virgin shall be with child] We have already seen, from the preceding verse, that this prophecy is taken from Isaiah vii. 14; but it may be necessary to consider the circumstances of the original promise more particularly. At the time referred to,

A. M. 4000. as the angel of the Lord had bid-
B. C. 5. den him, and took unto him his
An. Olymp. wife :
CXIII. 4.

25 And knew her not till she had A. M. 4000.
brought forth * her first-born son : B. C. 5.
and he called his name JESUS. An. Olymp.
CXIII. 4.

* Exod. xiii. 2;

Luke ii. 7, 21.

the kingdom of Judah, under the government of Ahaz, was reduced very low. Pekah, king of Israel, had slain in Judea 120,000 persons in one day, and carried away captives 200,000, including women and children, together with much spoil. To add to their distress, Rezin, king of Syria, being confederate with Pekah, had taken Elath, a fortified city of Judah, and carried the inhabitants away captive to Damascus. In this critical conjuncture, need we wonder that Ahaz was afraid that the enemies who were now united against him must prevail, destroy Jerusalem, and the kingdom of Judah, and annihilate the family of David? To meet and remove this fear, apparently well grounded, Isaiah is sent from the Lord to Ahaz, swallowed up now both by sorrow and by unbelief, in order to assure him that the counsels of his enemies should not stand; and that they should be utterly discomfited. To encourage Ahaz, he commands him to ask a sign or miracle, which should be a pledge in hand, that God should, in due time, fulfil the predictions of his servant, as related in the context. On Ahaz humbly refusing to ask any sign, it is immediately added, Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign: Behold a virgin shall conceive and bear a son; and shall call his name Immanuel. Butter and honey shall he eat, &c. Both the Divine and human nature of our Lord, as well as the miraculous conception, appear to be pointed out in the prophecy quoted here by the evangelist:—He shall be called עִמְנוּאֵל IM-MENU-EL; literally, The strong God with us: similar to those words in the New Testament:—The Word which was God—was made flesh, and dwelt among us, full of grace and truth: John i. 1, 14. And, God was manifested in the flesh: 1 Tim. iii. 16. So that we are to understand, God with us, to imply God incarnated—God in human nature. This seems farther evident from the words of the prophet, ver. 15. Butter and honey shall he eat—he shall be truly man, grow up and be nourished in a human, natural way; which refers to his being WITH US, i. e. incarnated. To which the prophet adds, That he may know to refuse the evil and choose the good:—or rather, According to his knowledge, לְדַאֲוֹ le-da'ato, reprobating the evil, and choosing the good. This refers to him as God; and is the same idea given by this prophet, chap. liii. 11: By (or in) his knowledge (the knowledge of Christ crucified, בְּדַאֲוֹ be-da'ato) shall my righteous servant justify many; for he shall bear their offences. Now this union of the Divine and human nature is termed a sign or miracle, אֵימֹת oth, i. e. something which exceeds the power of nature to produce. And this miraculous union was to be brought about in a miraculous way: Behold a virgin shall conceive: the word is very emphatic, הַעַלְמָה ha-almah, the virgin; the only one that ever was, or ever shall be, a mother in this way. But the Jews, and some called Christians, who have espoused their desperate cause, assert, that "the word עַלְמָה almah does not signify a virgin only; for it is applied, Prov. xxx. 19, to signify a young married woman." I answer, that this latter text is no proof of the contrary doctrine: the words דֶּרֶךְ נָכַר בְּעַלְמָה derec geber be-almah, the way of a man with a maid, cannot be proved to mean that for which it is produced: beside, one of De Rossi's MSS. reads בְּעַלְמַי be-almair, the way of a strong, or stout, man (גֶּבֶר geber) in his youth; and in this reading the Syriac, Septuagint, Vulgate, and Arabic agree, which are followed by the first version in the English language, as it stands in a MS. in my own possession—the wife of a man in his waxing youth: so that this place, the only one that can with any probability of success be produced, were the interpretation contended for correct, which I am by no means disposed to admit, proves nothing. Beside, the consent of so many versions in the opposite meaning deprives it of much of its influence in this question.

The word עַלְמָה almah, comes from עָלַם alam, to lie hid, be concealed; and we are told that "virgins were so called, because they were concealed or closely kept up in their fathers' houses, till the time of their marriage." This is not correct: see the case of Rebecca, Gen. xxiv. 43, and my note there: that of Rachel, Gen. xxix. 6, 9, and the note there also: and see the case of Miriam, the sister of Moses, Exod. ii. 8, and also the Chaldee paraphrase on Jam. i. 4, where the virgins are represented as going out in the dance. And see also the whole history of Ruth. This being concealed, or kept at home, on which so much stress is laid, is purely fanciful; for we find that young unmarried women drew water, kept sheep, gleaned publicly in the fields, &c., &c., and the same works they perform among the Turcomans to the present day. This reason, therefore, does not account for the radical meaning of the word; and we must seek it elsewhere. Another well known and often used root in the Hebrew tongue will cast light on this subject. This is גָּלַה galah, which signifies to reveal, make manifest, or uncover, and is often applied to matrimonial connections, in different parts of the Mosaic law: עָלַם alam, therefore, may be considered as implying the concealment of the virgin, as such, till lawful marriage had taken place. A virgin was not called עַלְמָה almah, because she was concealed by being kept at home in her father's house, which is not true, but literally and physically, because, as a woman, she had not been uncovered—she had not known man. This fully applies to the blessed virgin: see Luke i. 34. "How can this be, seeing I know no man?" and this text throws much light on the subject before us. This also is in perfect agreement with the ancient prophecy, "The seed of the woman shall bruise the head of the serpent," Gen. iii. 15: for the person who was to destroy the work of the devil was to be the progeny of the woman, without any concurrence of the man. And, hence, the text in Genesis speaks as fully of the virgin state of the person, from whom Christ, according to the flesh, should come, as that in the prophet, or this in the evangelist. According to the original promise, there was to be a seed, a human being, who should destroy sin; but this seed or human being must come from the woman ALONE; and no woman ALONE, could produce such a human being, without being a virgin. Hence, A virgin shall bear a son, is the very spirit and meaning of the original text, independently of the illustration given by the prophet; and the fact recorded by the evangelist is the proof of the whole. But how could that be a sign to Ahaz, which was to take place so many hundreds of years after? I answer, the meaning of the prophet is plain: not only Rezin and Pekah should be unsuccessful against Jerusalem at that time, which was the fact; but Jerusalem, Judea, and the house of David, should be both preserved, notwithstanding their depressed state, and the multitude of their adversaries, till the time should come when a VIRGIN should bear a son. This is a most remarkable circumstance—the house of David could never fail, till a virgin should conceive and bear a son—nor did it: but when that incredible and miraculous fact did take place, the kingdom and house of David became extinct! This is an irrefragable confutation of every argument a Jew can offer in vindication of his opposition to the Gospel of Christ. Either the prophecy in Isaiah has been fulfilled, or the kingdom and house of David are yet standing. But the kingdom of David, we know, is destroyed: and where is the man, Jew or Gentile, that can show us a single descendant of David on the face of the earth! The prophecy could not fail—the kingdom and house of David have failed: the virgin, therefore, must have brought forth her son—and this son is Jesus, the Christ. Thus Moses, Isaiah, and Matthew concur; and facts, the most unequivocal, have confirmed the whole! Behold the wisdom and providence of God!

Notwithstanding what has been said above, it may be asked, In what sense could this name Immanuel be applied to Jesus Christ, if he be not truly and properly GOD! Could the Spirit of truth ever design that Christians should receive him as an angel or a mere man, and yet, in the very beginning of the Gospel history, apply a character to him which belongs only to the most high God! Surely no. In what sense, then, is Christ God with us? Jesus is called Immanuel, or God with us, in his incarnation.—God united to our nature—God with man—God in man.—God with us, by his continual protection.—God with us, by the influences of his Holy Spirit—in the holy sacrament—in the preaching of his word—in private prayer. And God with us, through every action of our life, that we begin, continue, and end in his name. He is God with us, to comfort, enlighten, protect, and defend us in every time of temptation and trial, in the hour of death, in the day of judgment; and God with us, and in us, and we with and in him, to all eternity.

Verse 25. Her first-born son] Τοῦ υἱοῦ αὐτῆς τοῦ πρωτοτοκου. Literally, That son of hers, the first-born one. That Mary might have had other children, any person may reasonably and piously believe; that she had others, many think exceedingly probable, and that this text is at least an indirect proof of it. However this may be, the perpetual virginity of Mary should not be made an article of faith. God has not made it one: indeed it can hardly bear the light of several texts in the Gospels.

He knew her not] Had no matrimonial intercourse with her—TILL she had brought forth that son of hers, of whom the evangelist had been just speaking, the first-born, the eldest of the family, to whom the birthright belonged, and who was miraculously born before she knew any man, being yet in a state of virginity. See on chap. xiii. 55. The virginity of Mary, previously to the birth of Christ, is an article of the utmost consequence to the Christian system; and therefore it is an article of faith: her perpetual virginity is of no consequence; and the learned labour spent to prove it has produced a mere castle in the air. The thing is possible; but it never has been, and never can be proved.

He called his name JESUS.] This name was given by the command of God, see ver. 16, and was imposed on Christ when eight days old; for then, according to the Jewish law, he was circumcised: thus he had the name of Saviour given when he first began to shed that blood without which there could be no remission of sins.

The goodness of God is manifested, not only in his giving his Son to save a lost world, but also in the choice of the persons who were his progenitors: among whom we find, First, SAINTS, to excite our courage: Abraham, remarkable for his faith; Isaac, for his obedience; and Jacob, for his ferour and constancy.

Secondly, Penitent SINNERS, to excite our confidence: such as David, Manasses, &c.

Thirdly, SINNERS, of whose repentance and salvation we hear nothing; to put us on our guard. Who can read the account of idolatrous Solomon, who, from the whole evidence of the sacred history, died in his sins, without trembling?

Four WOMEN are mentioned in this genealogy: two of these were adulteresses, Tamar and Bathsheba; and two were Gentiles, Rahab and Ruth, and strangers to the covenant of promise; to teach us that Jesus Christ came to save sINNERS, and that, though strangers to his people, we are not on that account excluded from a salvation which God has designed for all men. He is not the God of the Jews only; he is also the God of the Gentiles.

The state of the royal family of David, the circumstances of the holy virgin and her spouse Joseph, the very remarkable prophecy of Isaiah, the literal and circumstantial fulfilment of it, the names given to our blessed Lord, the genealogical scroll of the family, &c., &c., are all so many proofs of the wisdom, goodness, and providence of God. Every occurrence seems, at first view, to be abandoned to fortuitous influence, and yet the result of each shows that God managed the whole. These circumstances are of the greatest importance; nor can the Christian reader reflect on them without an increase of his faith and his piety.

CHAPTER II.

Wise men come from the east to worship Christ, 1, 2. Herod, hearing of the birth of our Lord, is greatly troubled, 3; and makes inquiry of the chief priests and scribes, where the Christ should be born, 4. They inform him of the prophecy relative to Bethlehem, 5, 6. The wise men, going to Bethlehem, are desired by Herod to bring him word when they have found the child, pretending that he wished to do him homage, 7, 8. The wise men are directed by a star to the place where the young child lay, adore him, and offer him gifts, 9-11. Being warned of God not to return to Herod, they depart into their own country another way, 12. Joseph and Mary are divinely warned to escape into Egypt, because Herod sought to destroy Jesus, 13, 14. They obey, and continue in Egypt till the death of Herod, 15. Herod, finding that the wise men did not return, is enraged, and orders all the young children in Bethlehem, under two years of age, to be massacred, 16-18. Herod dies, and Joseph is divinely warned to return to the land of Israel, 19-21. Finding that Archelaus reigned in Judea in place of his father Herod, he goes to Galilee, and takes up his residence at Nazareth, 22, 23.

A. M. 4001.
B. C. 4.
An. Olymp.
CXCIV. 1.

NOW when ^a Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea, in the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men ^b from the east to Jerusalem,

2 Saying, ^c Where is he that is

A. M. 4001
B. C. 4.
An. Olymp.
CXCIV. 1.

^a Luke ii. 4, 6, 7.

^b Gen. x. 30; xxv. 6; 1 Kings iv. 30.—^c Luke ii. 11.

NOTES ON CHAP. II.

Verse 1. Bethlehem of Judca] This city is mentioned in Judges xvii. 7, and must be distinguished from another of the same name in the tribe of Zebulun, Josh. xix. 15. It is likewise called Ephrath, Gen. xlviii. 7, or Ephratah, Mic. v. 2, and its inhabitants Ephrathites, Ruth i. 2; 1 Sam. xvii. 12. It is situated on the declivity of a hill, about six miles from Jerusalem. בֵּית לֶחֶם Beth-lechem, in Hebrew, signifies the house of bread. And the name may be considered as very properly applied to that place where Jesus, the Messiah, the true bread that came down from heaven, was manifested, to give life to the world. But לֶחֶם lechem also signifies flesh, and is applied to that part of the sacrifice which was burnt upon the altar. See Lev. iii. 11-16; xxi. 6. The word is also used to signify a carcass, Zeph. i. 17. The Arabic version has بیت لحم Beet lehem, and the Persic بیت اللحم Beet allehem: but لحم lehem, in Arabic, never signifies bread, but always means flesh. Hence it is more proper to consider the name as signifying the house of flesh, or, as some might suppose, the house of the incarnation, i. e. the place where God was manifested in the flesh for the salvation of a lost world.

In the days of Herod the king] This was HEROD, improperly denominated the GREAT, the son of Antipater, an Idumean: he reigned 37 years in Judea, reckoning from the time he was created king of that country by the Romans. Our blessed Lord was born in the last year of his reign; and, at this time, the sceptre had literally departed from Judah, a foreigner being now upon the throne.

As there are several princes of this name mentioned in the New Testament, it may be well to give a list of them here, together with their genealogy.

Herod, the Great, married ten wives, by whom he had several children, Euseb. l. i. c. 9. p. 27. The first was Doris, thought to be an Idumean, whom he married when but a private individual; by her he had Antipater, the eldest of all his sons, whom he caused to be executed five days before his own death.

His second wife was Mariamne, daughter to Hircanus, the sole surviving person of the Asmonean, or Maccabean, race. Herod put her to death. She was the mother of Alexander and Aristobulus, whom Herod had executed at Sebastia, (Joseph. Antiq. l. xvi. c. 13.—De Bello, l. i. c. 17,) on an accusation of having entered into a conspiracy against him. Aristobulus left three children, whom I shall notice hereafter.

His third wife was Mariamne, the daughter of Simon, a person of some note in Jerusalem, whom Herod made high priest, in order to obtain his daughter. She was the mother of Herod Philippus, or Herod Philip, and Salome. Herod or Philip married Herodias, mother to Salome, the famous dancer, who demanded the head of John the Baptist, Mark vi. 22. Salome had been placed, in the will of Herod the Great, as second heir after Antipater; but her name was erased, when it was discovered that Mariamne, her mother, was an accomplice in the crimes of Antipater, son of Herod the Great. Joseph. de Bello, lib. i. c. 18, 19, 20.

His fourth wife was Malthaké, a Samaritan, whose sons were Archelaus and Philip. The first enjoyed half his father's kingdom under the name of tetrarch, viz. Idumea, Judea, and Samaria: Joseph. Antiq. l. xvii. c. 11. He reigned nine years; but, being accused and arraigned before the Emperor Augustus, he was banished to Vienna, where he died: Joseph. Antiq. l. xvii. c. 15. This is the Archelaus mentioned in ver. 22.

His brother Philip married Salome, the famous dancer, the daughter of Herodias; he died without children, and she was afterwards married to Aristobulus.

The fifth wife of Herod the Great was Cleopatra of Jerusalem. She was the mother of Herod surnamed Antipas, who married Herodias, the wife of his brother Philip, while he was still living. Being reproved for this act by John the Baptist, Matt. xiv. 3; Mark vi. 17; Luke iii. 19, and having imprisoned this holy man, he caused him to be beheaded, agreeable to the promise he had rashly made to the daughter of his wife Herodias, who had pleased him with her dancing. He attempted to seize the person of Jesus Christ, and to put him to death. It was to this prince that Pilate

A. M. 4001.
B. C. 4.
An. Olymp.
CXCIV. 1.
born King of the Jews? for we have seen ^dhis star in the east, and are come to worship him.

^d Num. xxiv. 17; Isa. lx. 3.

sent our Lord, Luke xiii. 31, 32. He was banished to Lyons, and then to Spain, where both he and his wife Herodias died. Joseph. Antiq. l. xv. c. 11.—De Bello, l. ii. c. 8.

The sixth wife of Herod the Great was Pallas, by whom he had Phasaelus: his history is no ways connected with the New Testament.

The seventh was named Phadra, the mother of Roxana, who married the son of Pheroras.

The eighth was Elpida, mother of Salome, who married another son of Pheroras.

With the names of two other wives of Herod we are not acquainted; but they are not connected with our history, any more than are Pallas, Phadra, and Elpida, whose names I merely notice to avoid the accusation of inaccuracy.

ARISTOBULUS, the son of Herod the Great by Mariamne, a descendant of the Asmoneans, left two sons and a daughter, viz. Agrippa, Herod, and Herodias, so famous for her incestuous marriage with Antipas, in the life-time of his brother Philip.

AGRIPPA, otherwise named Herod, who was imprisoned by Tiberius for something he had inconsiderately said against him, was released from prison by Caligula, who made him king of Judea: Joseph. Antiq. l. xviii. c. 8. It was this prince who put St. James to death, and imprisoned Peter, as mentioned in xii. of Acts. He died at Cæsarea, in the way mentioned in the Acts, as well as by Josephus, Antiq. l. xix. c. 7. He left a son named Agrippa, who is mentioned below.

HEROD, the second son of Aristobulus, was king of Chalcis, and, after the death of his brother, obtained permission of the emperor to keep the ornaments belonging to the high priest, and to nominate whom he pleased to that office: Joseph. Antiq. l. xx. c. 1. He had a son named Aristobulus, to whom Nero gave Armenia the lesser, and who married Salome, the famous dancer, daughter to Herodias.

AGRIPPA, son of Herod Agrippa, king of Judea, and grandson to Aristobulus and Mariamne; he was at first king of Chalcis, and afterwards tetrarch of Galilee, in the room of his uncle Philip: Joseph. Antiq. l. xx. c. 5. It was before him, his sister Berenice, and Felix, who had married Drusilla, Agrippa's second daughter, that St. Paul pleaded his cause, as mentioned Acts xxvi.

HERODIAS, the daughter of Mariamne and Aristobulus, is the person of whom we have already spoken, who married successively the two brothers Philip and Antipas, her uncles, and who occasioned the death of John the Baptist. By her first husband she had Salome, the dancer, who was married to Philip, tetrarch of the Trachonitis, the son of Herod the Great. Salome having had no children by him, she was married to Aristobulus, her cousin-german, son of Herod, king of Chalcis, and brother to Agrippa and Herodias: she had by this husband several children.

This is nearly all that is necessary to be known relative to the race of the Herods, in order to distinguish 3 ¶ When Herod the king had A. M. 4001.

B. C. 4.
An. Olymp.
CXCIV. 1.
heard these things, ^e he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him.

^e Prov. xxi. 1, 2.

the particular persons of this family mentioned in the New Testament. See Basnage, Calmet, and Josephus.

There came wise men from the east] Or, Magi came from the eastern countries. "The Jews believed that there were prophets in the kingdom of Saba and Arabia, who were of the posterity of Abraham by Keturah; and that they taught in the name of God, what they had received in tradition from the mouth of Abraham."—WHITNEY. That many Jews were mixed with this people there is little doubt; and that these eastern magi, or philosophers, astrologers, or whatever else they were, might have been originally of that class, there is room to believe. These, knowing the promise of the Messiah, were now, probably, like other believing Jews, waiting for the consolation of Israel. The Persian translator renders the Greek Μαγοι by مَجُوسیان mejoosecan, which properly signifies a worshipper of fire; and from which we have our word magician. It is very probable that the ancient Persians, who were considered as worshippers of fire, only honoured it as the symbolical representation of the Deity; and, seeing this unusual appearance, might consider it as a sign that the God they worshipped was about to manifest himself among men. Therefore they say, We have seen his star—and are come to worship him; but it is most likely that the Greeks made their Μαγοι magi, which we translate wise men, from the Persian مَغ mogh, and مَغَان moghan, which the Kushul Loghat, a very eminent Persian lexicon, explains by آتشی پرست atush perest, a worshipper of fire; which the Persians suppose all the inhabitants of Ur in Chaldea were, among whom the Prophet Abraham was brought up. The Mohammedans apply this title by way of derision to Christian monks in their associate capacity; and by a yet stronger catachresis, they apply it to a tavern, and the people that frequent it. Also, to ridicule in the most forcible manner the Christian priesthood, they call the tavern-keeper پیر مغان peeri Mughan, the priest, or chief of the idolaters. It is very probable that the persons mentioned by the evangelist were a sort of astrologers, probably of Jewish extraction, that they lived in Arabia Felix, and, for the reasons above given, came to worship their new-born sovereign. It is worthy of remark, that the Anglo-saxon translates the word Μαγοι by cungel-pitegan, which signifies astrologers, from cungol, a star or planet, and piten, to know or understand.

Verse 2. We have seen his star] Having discovered an unusual luminous appearance or meteor in the heavens, supposing these persons to have been Jews, and knowing the prophecies relative to the redemption of Israel, they probably considered this to be the star mentioned by Balaam. Num. xxiv. 17. See the note there.

In the east] Εν τῇ ἀνατολῇ, At its rise. ἀνατολῇ and δυσμῇ are used in the New Testament for east and west.

A. M. 4001. 4 And when he had gathered all
B. C. 4. the chief priests and scribes of
An. Olymp. the people together, he demanded
CXCIV. 1. of them where Christ should be born.

† 2 Chron. xxxvi. 14.

To worship him.] Or, To do him homage; προσκυνῆσαι αὐτῷ. The word προσκυνέω, which is compounded of πρὸς, to, and κυν, a dog, signifies to crouch and fawn like a dog at his master's feet. It means, to prostrate oneself to another, according to the eastern custom, which is still in use. In this act, the person kneels, and puts his head between his knees, his forehead at the same time touching the ground. It was used to express both civil and religious reverence. In Hindostan, religious homage is paid by prostrating the body at full length, so that the two knees, the two hands, forehead, nose, and cheeks all touch the earth at the same time. This kind of homage is paid also to great men. AYEN AKBERY, vol. iii. p. 227.

As to what is here called a star, some make it a meteor, others a luminous appearance like an Aurora Borealis; others a comet! There is no doubt, the appearance was very striking: but it seems to have been a simple meteor provided for the occasion. See on ver. 9.

Verse 3. When Herod—heard these things, he was troubled] Herod's consternation was probably occasioned by the agreement of the account of the magi, with an opinion predominant throughout the east, and particularly in Judea, that some great personage would soon make his appearance, for the deliverance of Israel from their enemies; and would take upon himself universal empire.

SUETONIUS and TACITUS, two Roman historians, mention this. Their words are very remarkable:—

Percrebuerat Oriente toto, vetus et constans opinio, esse in fatis, ut eo tempore Judæa profecti rerum potirentur. Id de imperatore Romano, quantum eventu postea predictum patuit, Judæi ad se trahentes, rebelârunt. SUTON. VESP. "An ancient and settled persuasion prevailed throughout the east, that the fates had decreed some to proceed from Judea, who should attain universal empire. This persuasion, which the event proved to respect the Roman emperor, the Jews applied to themselves, and therefore rebelled."

The words of Tacitus are nearly similar:—

Pluribus persuasio inerat, antiquis sacerdotum literis contineri, eo ipso tempore fore, ut valesceret Oriens, profectique Judæa rerum potirentur. Quæ ambages Vespasianum ac Titum prædixerant.

"Many were persuaded, that it was contained in the ancient books of their priests, that at that very time the east should prevail: and that some should proceed from Judea and possess the dominion. It was Vespasian and Titus that these ambiguous prophecies predicted." Histor. v.

Verse 1. The chief priests] Not only the high priest for the time being, called כהן הראש cohen ha-rosh, 2 Kings xxv. 18, and his deputy, called כהן כשנה cohen mishneh, with those who had formerly borne the high priest's office; but also, the chiefs or heads of the 5 And they said unto him, A. M. 4001.

B. C. 4.
An. Olymp. In Bethlehem of Judea: for CXCIV. 1. thus it is written by the prophet,

‡ 2 Chron. xxxiv. 13; 1 Mac. v. 42; vii. 12.—^b Mal. ii. 7.

twenty-four sacerdotal families, which David distributed into so many courses, 1 Chron. xxiv. These latter are styled הכהנים שרי sarey ha-cohanim, chief of the priests, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 14; Ezra viii. 24; and ראשי הכהנים roshey ha-cohanim, heads of the priests, Neh. xii. 7. Josephus calls them by the same name as the writers of the New Testament. In his Life, sect. 8, he mentions πολλους—των Αρχιερεων, many of the chief priests. The word is used in the singular in this last sense, for a chief of the priests, Acts xix. 14.

Scribes] The word Γραμματεως, in the Septuagint, is used for a political officer, whose business it was to assist kings and civil magistrates, and to keep an account in writing of public acts and occurrences. Such an officer is called in Hebrew ספר הכתר seper ha-melech, ὁ γραμματεὺς τοῦ βασιλεως, the king's scribe, or secretary. See LXX. 2 Kings xii. 10.

The word is often used by the LXX. for a man of learning, especially for one skilled in the Mosaic law: and, in the same sense, it is used by the New Testament writers. Γραμματεως is therefore to be understood as always implying a man of letters, or learning, capable of instructing the people. The derivation of the names proves this to be the genuine meaning of the word γραμμα: a letter, or character, in writing: or γραμματα, letters, learning, erudition, and especially that gained from books. The Hebrew שופר or שופר sopher, from saphar, to tell, count, cypher, signifies both a book, volume, roll, &c., and a notary, recorder, or historian; and always signifies a man of learning. We often term such a person a man of letters.

The word is used Acts xix. 35, for a civil magistrate at Ephesus, probably such a one as we would term recorder. It appears that Herod at this time gathered the whole Sanhedrin, in order to get the fullest information on a subject by which all his jealous fears had been alarmed.

Verse 5. In Bethlehem of Judea: for thus it is written by the prophet] As there have been several confused notions among the Jews, relative not only to the Messiah, and his character, but also to the time of his birth, it may be necessary to add, to what has already been said on this subject, the following extracts from the Talmudists and Gemarists, quoted by LIGHTFOOT. At the close of a long dissertation on the year of our Lord's birth, (which he places in the 35th of the reign of Herod, not the last or 37th as above,) he says: "It will not be improper here to produce the Gemarists themselves openly confessing that the Messiah had been born, a good while ago before their times. For so they write: After this the children of Israel shall be converted, and shall inquire after the Lord their God, and David their king: Hos. iii. 5. Our rabbins say, That is King Messiah. If he be among the living, his name is David, or if dead, David is his name. R. Tanchum said, Thus I prove it: He sheweth מעשה

A. M. 4001.
B. C. 4.
An. Olymp.
CXCIV. 1. 6 And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Juda, art not the least among the princes of Juda: for out of thee shall come a Governor, that shall rule my people Israel. 7 Then Herod, when he had

A. M. 4001.
B. C. 4.
An. Olymp.
CXCIV. 1.

¹ Mic. v. 2. John vii. 42; Luke ii. 4. — ² Rev. ii. 27.

¹ Or, Jed. — ² Psa. ii. 1, &c., Acts iv. 25, &c.

to David his Messiah. (Psalm xlviii. 50.) R. Joshua ben Levi saith, His name is צמח tsemach, a Branch. (Zech. iii. 8.) R. Juban bar Arbu saith, His name is Menahem. (That is, παρακλητος, the Comforter.) And that which happened to a certain Jew, as he was ploughing, agreeeth with this business. A certain Arabian travelling, and hearing the ox bellow, said to the Jew at plough, O Jew, loose thy oxen, and loose thy ploughs, for behold! the temple is laid waste. The ox belloweth the second time; the Arabian saith to him, O Jew, Jew, yoke thy oxen, and sit thy ploughs: והוא ילד כלבא כשוחא For behold! King Messiah is born. But, saith the Jew, What is his name? Menahem, saith he (i. e. the Comforter.) And what is the name of his Father? Hezekiah, saith the Arabian. To whom the Jew, But whence is He? The other answered, From the palace of the king of Bethlehem Judah. Away he went, and sold his oxen and his ploughs, and became a seller of infants' swaddling clothes, going about from town to town. When he came to that city, (Bethlehem,) all the women bought of him, but the mother of Menahem bought nothing. He heard the voice of the women saying, O thou mother of Menahem, thou mother of Menahem, carry thy son the things that are here sold. But she replied, May the enemies of Israel be strangled, because on the day that he was born, the temple was laid waste. To whom he said, But we hoped, that as it was laid waste at his feet, so at his feet it would be built again. She saith, I have no money. To whom he replied, But why should this be prejudicial to him? Carry him what you buy here, and if you have no money to-day, after some days I will come back and receive it. After some days, he returned to that city, and saith to her, How does the little infant? And she said, From the time you saw me last, spirits and tempests came, and snatched him away out of my hands. R. Bon saith, What need have we to learn from an Arabian? Is it not plainly written, And Lebanon shall fall before the powerful one? (Isa. x. 34.) And what follows after? A branch shall come out of the root of Jesse. (Isa. xi. 1.)

"The Babylonian doctors yield us a confession not very unlike the former. R. Charinah saith: After four hundred years are passed from the destruction of the temple, if any one shall say to you, Take to thyself for one penny a field worth a thousand pence, do not take it. And again, After four thousand two hundred thirty and one years from the creation of the world, if any shall say to you, Take for a penny a field worth a thousand pence, take it not. The gloss is, For that is the time of redemption, and you shall be brought back to the holy mountain, to the inheritance of your fathers; why, therefore, should you misspend your penny?

"You may fetch the reason of this calculation, if you have leisure, out of the tract Sanhedrin. The tradition of the school of Elias, the world is to last six thousand years, &c. And a little after, Elias said to Rabb Judah, The world shall last not less than eighty-five jubilees: and in the last jubilee shall the Son of David come. He saith to him, Whether in the beginning of it, or in the end? He answered him, I know not. Whether is this whole time to be finished first, or not? He answered him, I know not. But Rabb Asher asserts, that he answered thus, Until then, expect him not, but from thence expect him. Hear your own countrymen, O Jew! How many centuries of years are passed by and gone from the eighty-fifth jubilee of the world, that is, the year MMMCCL, and yet the Messiah of your expectation is not yet come!

"Daniel's weeks had so clearly defined the time of the true Messiah, his coming, that the minds of the whole nation were raised into the expectation of him. Hence, it was doubted of the Baptist, whether he were not the Messiah, Luke iii. 15. Hence it was, that the Jews are gathered together from all countries unto Jerusalem, Acts ii., expecting and coming to see, because at that time the term of revealing the Messiah, that had been prefixed by Daniel, was come. Hence it was that there was so great a number of false Christs. Matt. xxiv. 5, &c., taking the occasion of their impostures hence, that now the time of that great expectation was at hand, and fulfilled: and in one word. They thought the kingdom of God should presently appear, Luke xix. 11.

"But when those times of expectation were past, nor did such a Messiah appear as they expected, (for when they saw the true Messiah, they would not see him,) they first broke out into various, and those wild, conjectures of the time; and at length, all those conjectures coming to nothing, all ended in this curse (the just cause of their eternal blindness) הפח רוחן של כחשבי קצין, May their soul be confounded who compute the times!" They were fully aware that the time foretold by the prophets must be long since fulfilled; and that their obstinacy must be confounded by their own history, and the chronology of their own Scriptures; and therefore they have pronounced an anathema on those who shall attempt to examine, by chronological computations, the prophecies that predict his coming. Who can conceive a state of wilful blindness or determined obstinacy superior to this!

Verse 6. And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Juda] To distinguish it from Bethlehem, in the tribe of Zebulun. Josh. xix. 15. See on ver. 1.

Art not the least] In Micah v. 2, it is read, Though thou be little—צער להיות tsair lehayoth, little to be. Houbigant, struck with the oddness of the construction of the Hebrew, by dividing the last word, and making a small change in two of the letters, makes the prophet agree with the evangelist, צער לא היות tsair lo hayita, thou art not the least. Several learned men are of opinion, that the copy from which St. Matthew quoted had the text in this way. However, some MSS. of very good note, among which is the

A. M. 4001.
B. C. 4.
An. Olymp.
CXCIV. 1.

privily called the wise men, inquired of them diligently, what time the star appeared.

8 And he sent them to Bethlehem, and said, Go and search diligently for the young child; and when ye have found him, bring me word again, that I may come and worship him also.

9 ¶ When they had heard the king, they departed; and, lo, the star, which they saw in the east, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was.

10 When they saw the star, they rejoiced with exceeding great joy.

11 ¶ And when they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary

¶ 1 Kings xix. 2; chap. xxi. 19; Job v. 12. Isa. xlv. 25.

Codex Beza, have μη ελαχιστη ει, for ουδαμως ελαχιστη α, Art thou not the least? This reconciles the prophet and evangelist without farther trouble. See the authorities for this reading in Griesbach and Wetstein.

Among the princes of Juda] In Micah v. 2, it is, the thousands of Judah. There is much reason to believe that each tribe was divided into small portions called thousands, as in England certain small divisions of counties are called hundreds. For the proof of the first, the reader is referred to Judg. vi. 15, where, instead of my family is poor in Manasseh, the Hebrew is, my THOUSAND (אלפ) is the meanest in Manasseh: and to 1 Sam. x. 19, Present yourselves before the Lord by your TRIBES and by your THOUSANDS: and to 1 Chron. xii. 20, Captains of the THOUSANDS of Manasseh. Now these THOUSANDS being petty governments, Matthew renders them by the word ηγεμονου, because the word princes or governors was more intelligible in the Greek tongue than thousands, though, in this case, they both signify the same. See Wakefield.

That shall rule my people Israel.] Οστις ποιμανει, Who shall FEED my people. That is as a shepherd feeds his flock. Among the Greeks, kings are called, by Homer, λαων ποιμενec, shepherds of the people. This appellation probably originated from the pastoral employment, which kings and patriarchs did not blush to exercise in the times of primitive simplicity; and it might particularly refer to the case of David, the great type of Christ, who was a keeper of his father's sheep, before he was raised to the throne of Israel. As the government of a good king was similar to the care a good shepherd has of his flock, hence ποιμην signified both shepherd and king; and ποιμανω, to feed and to rule among the ancient Greeks.

Verse 8. That I may come and worship him also.] See ver. 2, and on Gen. xvii. 3, and Exod. iv. 31. What exquisite hypocrisy was here! He only wished to find out the child that he might murder him; but see how that God who searches the heart prevents the designs of wicked men from being accomplished!

Verse 9. In the east] Or, at its rise. See ver. 2.

his mother, and fell down, and worshipped him: and when they had opened their treasures, ^a they ^o presented unto him gifts; gold, and frankincense, and myrrh.

12 And being warned of God ^p in a dream, that they should not return to Herod, they departed into their own country another way.

13 And when they were departed, behold, the angel of the Lord appeareth to Joseph in a dream, saying, Arise, and take the young child and his mother, and flee into Egypt; and be thou there until I bring thee word: for Herod will seek the young child to destroy him.

^a Or, offered; Psa. lxxii. 10; Isa. lx. 6.—^p Chap. i. 20.

Stood over where the young child was.] Super caput pueri, Over the head of the child, as the OPUS IMPERFECTUM, on this place, has it. See Griesbach's Var. Lect. So it appears to have been a simple luminous meteor in a star-like form, and at a very short distance from the ground, otherwise it could not have ascertained the place where the child lay. But the last quoted reading, from the Opus Imperfectum, justifies the opinion that the luminous appearance which had hitherto directed them now encompassed the head of the child; and probably this gave the first idea to the ancient painters, of representing Christ in the manger, with a glory surrounding his head. This glory, or nimbus, is usually given also to saints and eminent persons, especially in the Roman Church, by all Roman Catholic painters.

Verse 11. They presented unto him gifts] The people of the east never approach the presence of kings and great personages, without a present in their hands. This custom is often noticed in the Old Testament, and still prevails in the east, and in some of the newly discovered South Sea Islands.

Gold, and frankincense, and myrrh.] Some will have these gifts to be emblematic of the Divinity, regal office, and manhood of Christ. "They offered him incense as their God; gold as their king; and myrrh, as united to a human body, subject to suffering and death." Aurum, thus, myrrham, requique, DEO, HOMINIQUE, dona ferunt. JUVENIS. Rather, they offered him the things which were in most esteem among themselves; and which were productions of their own country. The gold was probably a very providential supply, as on it, it is likely, they subsisted while in Egypt.

Verse 13. Flee into Egypt] Many Jews had settled in Egypt; not only those who had fled thither in the time of Jeremiah, see chap. xlviii.: but many others who had settled there also, on account of the temple which Onias IV. had built at Heliopolis. Those who could speak the Greek tongue enjoyed many advantages in that country: besides, they had the Greek version of the Septuagint, which had been translated nearly 300 years before this time. Egypt

A. M. 4001.
B. C. 4.
An. Olymp.
CXCIV. 1. 14 When he arose, he took the young child and his mother by night, and departed into Egypt;

15 And was there until the death of Herod : that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, ^a Out of Egypt have I called my son.

16 ¶ Then Herod, when he saw that he was mocked of the wise men, was exceeding wroth, and sent forth, and slew all the children that were in Bethlehem, and in all the coasts thereof, from two years old and under, according to the time which he had diligently inquired of the wise men.

17 Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by ^r Jeremy the prophet, saying,

18 In Rama was there a voice heard, lamen-

^a Hos. xi. 1.

was now a Roman province, and the rage of Herod could not pursue the holy family to this place. There is an apocryphal work in Arabic, called the Gospel of the infancy, which pretends to relate all the acts of Jesus and Mary while in Egypt. I have taken the pains to read this through, and have found it to be a piece of gross superstition, having nothing to entitle it to a shadow of credibility.

Verse 15. Out of Egypt have I called my son.] This is quoted from Hos. xi. 1, where the deliverance of Israel, and that only, is referred to. But as that deliverance was extraordinary, it is very likely that it had passed into a proverb, so that "Out of Egypt have I called my son," might have been used to express any signal deliverance. I confess, I can see no other reference it can have to the case in hand, unless we suppose, which is possible, that God might have referred to this future bringing up of his son Jesus from Egypt, and r the type of the past deliverance of Israel from the same land. Midrash Tehillin, on Psalm ii. 7. has these remarkable words: I will publish a decree: this decree has been published in the Law, in the Prophets, and in the Hagiographia. In the Law, Israel is my first-born son: Exod. iv. 22. In the Prophets, Behold, my servant shall deal prudently: Isa. lii. 13. In the Hagiographia, The Lord said unto my lord: Psal. cx. 1. All these passages the Jews refer to the Messiah. See Schoettgen.

Verse 16. Slew all the children] This cruelty of Herod seems alluded to in very decisive terms by Macrobius, who flourished toward the conclusion of the fourth century. In his chapter De jociis Augusti in alios, et aliorum rursus in ipsum, he says, Cum audisset ut r pueros, quos in Syria Herodes, rex Judæorum, intra bi. utum jussit interfici, filium quoque ejus occisum, ait. Melius est Herodis porcum esse, quam filium. "When he heard that among those male infants about two years old, which Herod, the king of the Jews, ordered to be slain in Syria, one of his sons was also murdered, he said: 'It is better to be Herod's hog than his son.'" Saturn. lib. ii. c. 4. The point tation, and weeping, and great mourning, Rachel weeping for her children, and would not be comforted, because they are not.

19 ¶ But when Herod was dead, behold, an angel of the Lord appeareth in a dream to Joseph in Egypt, 20 Saying, Arise, and take the young child and his mother, and go into the land of Israel: for they are dead, which sought the young child's life.

21 And he arose, and took the young child and his mother, and came into the land of Israel.

22 But when he heard that Archelaus did reign in Judea, in the room of his father of this saying consists in this, that Herod, professing Judaism, his religion forbade his killing swine, or having any thing to do with their flesh; therefore his hog would have been safe, where his son lost his life.

^r Jer. xxxi. 15.

Verse 18. In Rama was there a voice heard] These words, quoted from Jer. xxxi. 15, were originally spoken concerning the captivity of the ten tribes; but are here elegantly applied to the murder of the innocents at Bethlehem. As if he had said, Bethlehem at this time resembled Rama: for as Rachel might be said to weep over her children, which were slaughtered or gone into captivity; so in Bethlehem, the mothers lamented bitterly their children, because they were slain. The word ἰσχυρός, lamentation is omitted by the Codd. Vatic. Cypr. one of Selden's MSS. the Syriac, Arabic, Persic, Ethiopic, all the Itala, (except that in the Cod. Beza;) Vulgate, and Saxon, several of the fathers, and above all Jeremiah, chap. xxxi. 15, from which it is quoted. Griesbach leaves it in the text with a note of doubtfulness. This mourning may refer to cases far from uncommon in the east, where all the children have been massacred. The lamentations of a Hindoo mother for her child are loud and piercing: and it is almost impossible to conceive of a scene more truly heart-rending than that of a whole town of such mothers wailing over their massacred children. See WARD.

Verse 20. They are dead] Both Herod and Antipater his son; though some think the plural is here used for the singular, and that the death of Herod alone is here intended. But as Herod's son Antipater was at this time heir apparent to the throne, and he had cleared his way to it by procuring the death of both his elder brothers, he is probably alluded to here, as doubtless he entered into his father's designs. THEY are dead—Antipater was put to death by his father's command, five days before this execrable tyrant went to his own place. See Josephus. Antiq. xvi. 11: xvii. 9.

Verse 22. When he heard that Archelaus did reign] Herod, having put Antipater his eldest son to death,

A. M. cir. 4003.
B. C. cir. 2.
An. Olymp.
CXCIV. 2.

Herod, he was afraid to go thither: notwithstanding, being warned of God in a dream, he turned aside ^s into the parts of Galilee:

^s Chap. iii. 13; Luke ii. 39.

altered his will, and thus disposed of his dominions: he gave the tetrarchy of Galilee and Petrea to his son Antipas; the tetrarchy of Gaulonitis, Trachonitis, Batanea, and Paneadis, to his son Philip; and left the kingdom of Judea to his eldest remaining son, Archelaus. This son partook of the cruel and blood-thirsty disposition of his father: at one of the passovers, he caused three thousand of the people to be put to death in the temple and city. For his tyranny and cruelty, Augustus deprived him of the government, and banished him. His character considered, Joseph, with great propriety, forbore to settle under his jurisdiction.

He turned aside into the parts of Galilee] Here Antipas governed, who is allowed to have been of a comparatively mild disposition; and, being intent on building two cities, Julias and Tiberias, he endeavoured, by a mild carriage and promises of considerable immunities, to entice people from other provinces to come and settle in them. He was besides in a state of enmity with his brother Archelaus: this was a most favourable circumstance to the holy family; and though God did not permit them to go to any of the new cities, yet they dwelt in peace, safety, and comfort at Nazareth.

Verse 23. That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophets] It is difficult to ascertain by what prophets this was spoken. The margin usually refers to Judg. xiii. 5, where the angel, foretelling the birth of Samson, says, No razor shall come upon his head; for the child shall be a NAZARITE (נָזִיר) unto God from the womb. The second passage usually referred to is Isa. xi. 1: There shall come forth a rod from the stem of Jesse, and a BRANCH (נֶצֶר) shall grow out of his roots. That this refers to Christ, there is no doubt. Jeremiah, chap. xxiii. 5, is supposed to speak in the same language—I will raise unto David a righteous BRANCH: but here the word is צֶמַח tsemach, not נֶצֶר netser; and it is the same in the parallel place, Zech. iii. 8; vi. 12; therefore, these two prophets cannot be referred to; but the passages in Judges and Isaiah may have been in the eye of the evangelist, as well as the whole institution relative to the Nazari'e (נָזִיר nezir) delivered at large, Num. vi., where see the notes. As the Nazarite was the most pure and perfect institution under the law, it is possible that God intended to point out by it, not only the perfection of our Lord, but also the purity of his followers. And it is likely that, before St. Matthew wrote this Gospel, those afterwards called Christians bore the appellation of Nazarites, or Nazoreans, for so the Greek word, Ναζωραῖος, should be written. Leaving the spiritual reference out of the question, the Nazarene or Nazorean here may mean simply an inhabitant or person of Nazareth; as Galilean does a person or inhabitant of Galilee. The 23 And he came and dwelt in a city called 'Nazareth; that it might be fulfilled ^a which was spoken by the prophets, He shall be called a Nazarene.

A. M. cir. 4003.
B. C. cir. 2.
An. Olymp.
CXCIV. 2.

^a John i. 45.—^a Judg. xiii. 5; 1 Sam. i. 11.

evangelist evidently designed to state, that neither the sojourning at Nazareth, nor our Lord being called a Nazarene, were fortuitous events, but were wisely determined and provided for in the providence of God; and therefore foretold by inspired men, or fore-represented by significant institutions.

But how shall we account for the manner in which St. Matthew and others apply this, and various other circumstances, to the fulfilment of ancient traditions? This question has greatly agitated divines and critics for more than a century. Surenhusius, Hebrew professor at Amsterdam, and editor of a very splendid and useful edition of the Mishna, in six vols. fol. published an express treatise on this subject, in 1713, full of deep research and sound criticism. He remarks great difference in the mode of quoting used in the Sacred Writings: as, It hath been said—it is written—that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophets—the Scripture says—see what is said—the Scripture foreseeing—he saith—is it not written?—the saying that is written, &c., &c. With great pains and industry, he has collected ten rules out of the Talmud and the rabbins, to explain and justify all the quotations made from the Old Testament in the New.

RULE I. Reading the words, not according to the regular vowel points, but to others substituted for them. He thinks this is done by Peter, Acts iii. 22, 23; by Stephen, Acts vii. 42, &c.; and by Paul, 1 Cor. xv. 54; 2 Cor. viii. 15.

RULE II. Changing the letters, as done by St. Paul, Rom. ix. 33; 1 Cor. ix. 9, &c.; Heb. viii. 9, &c.; Heb. x. 5.

RULE III. Changing both letters and vowel points, as he supposes is done by St. Paul, Acts xiii. 40, 41; 2 Cor. viii. 15.

RULE IV. Adding some letters, and retrenching others.

RULE V. Transposing words and letters.

RULE VI. Dividing one word into two.

RULE VII. Adding other words to make the sense more clear.

RULE VIII. Changing the original order of the words.

RULE IX. Changing the original order, and adding other words.

RULE X. Changing the original order, and adding and retrenching words, which he maintains is a method often used by St. Paul.

Let it be observed, that although all these rules are used by the rabbins, yet, as far as they are employed by the sacred writers of the New Testament, they never, in any ease, contradict what they quote from the Old, which cannot be said of the rabbins: they only explain what they quote, or accommodate the passage to the facts then in question. And who will venture to say that the Holy Spirit has not a right, in any subsequent period, to explain and illustrate his own meaning, by showing that it had a greater extension in the Divine mind than could have been then perceived by men! And has He not a right to add to what he has formerly said, if it seem right in his own sight? Is not the whole of the New Testament, an addition to the Old, as the apostolic epistles are to the narrative of our Lord's life and acts, as given by the evangelists?

Gusset, Wolf, Rosenmüller, and others, give four rules, according to which, the phrase, that it might be fulfilled, may be applied in the New Testament.

RULE I. When the thing predicted is literally accomplished.

RULE II. When that is done, of which the Scripture has spoken, not in a literal sense, but in a spiritual sense.

RULE III. When a thing is done neither in a literal nor spiritual sense, according to the fact referred to in the Scripture; but is similar to that fact.

RULE IV. When that which has been mentioned in the Old Testament as formerly done, is accomplished in a larger and more extensive sense in the New Testament.

St. Matthew seems to quote according to all these rules; and it will be useful to the reader to keep them constantly in view. I may add here, that the writers of the New Testament seem often to differ from those of the Old, because they appear uniformly to quote from some copy of the Septuagint version; and most of their quotations agree verbally, and often even literally, with one or other of the copies of that version which subsist to the present day. Want of attention to the difference of copies, in the Septuagint version, has led some divines and critics into strange and even ridiculous mistakes, as they have taken that for the SEPTUAGINT which existed in the printed copy before them; which sometimes happened not to be the most correct.

On the birth-place of our Lord, a pious and sensible man has made the following observations:—

“At the first sight, it seems of little consequence to know the place of Christ's nativity: for we should consider him as our Redeemer, whatever the circumstances might be which attended his mortal life. But, seeing it has pleased God to announce, beforehand, the place where the Saviour of the world should be born, it became necessary that it should happen precisely in that place; and that this should be one of the characteristics whereby Jesus Christ should be known to be the true Messiah.

“It is also a matter of small importance to us where we may live, provided we find genuine happiness.—There is no place on earth, however poor and despicable, but may have better and more happy inhabitants than many of those are who dwell in the largest and most celebrated cities. Do we know a single place on the whole globe where the works of God do not appear under a thousand different forms, and where a person may not feel that blessed satisfaction which arises from a holy and Christian life! For an individual, that place is preferable to all others where he can get and do most good. For a number of people, that place is best where they can find the greatest number of wise and pious men. Every nation declines, in proportion as virtue and religion lose their influence on the minds of the inhabitants. The place where a young man first beheld the dawn and the beauty of renewed nature, and with most lively sensations of joy and gratitude adored his God, with all the veneration and love his heart was capable of; the place where a virtuous couple first met, and got acquainted; or where two friends gave each other the noblest proofs of their most tender affection; the village where one may have given, or seen, the most remarkable example of goodness, uprightness, and patience; such places, I say, must be dear to their hearts.

“Bethlehem was, according to this rule, notwithstanding its smallness, a most venerable place; seeing that there so many pious people had their abode, and that acts of peculiar piety had often been performed in it. First, the patriarch Jacob stopped some time in it, to erect a monument to his well-beloved Rachel. It was at Bethlehem that honest Naomi, and her modest daughter-in-law, Ruth, gave such proofs of their faith and holiness; and in it Boaz, the generous benefactor, had his abode and his possessions. At Bethlehem the humble Jesse sojourned, the happy father of so many sons; the youngest of whom rose from the pastoral life to the throne of Israel. It was in this country that David formed the resolution of building a house for the Lord, and in which he showed himself the true shepherd and father of his subjects, when, at the sight of the destroying angel, whose sword spread consternation and death on all hands, he made intercession for his people. It was in Bethlehem that Zerubbabel the prince was born, this descendant of David, who was the type of that Ruler and Shepherd under whose empire Israel is one day to assemble, in order to enjoy uninterrupted happiness. Lastly, in this city the Son of God appeared; who, by his birth, laid the foundation of that salvation, which, as Redeemer, he was to purchase by his death for the whole world.—Thus, in places which from their smallness are entitled to little notice, men sometimes spring, who become the benefactors of the human race. Often, an inconsiderable village has given birth to a man, who, by his wisdom, uprightness, and heroism, has been a blessing to whole kingdoms.”

Sturm's Reflections, translated by A. C. vol iv

CHAPTER III.

John the Baptist begins to preach, 1. The subject of his preaching, 2, 3. Description of his clothing and food, 4. The success of his ministry, 5, 6. His exhortation to the Pharisees, 7-9. He denounces the judgments of God against the impenitent, 10. The design of his baptism, and that of Christ, 11, 12. He baptizes Christ in Jordan, 13-15; who is attested to be the Messiah by the Holy Spirit, and a voice from heaven, 16, 17.

A. M. 4030.
A. D. 26.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 2.

IN those days came ^a John the Baptist, preaching ^b in the wilderness of Judea, ^a Mark i. 4, 15; Luke iii. 2, 3; John i. 28.—^b Josh. xiv. 10.

NOTES ON CHAP. III.

Verse 1. John the Baptist] John, surnamed The Baptist, because he required those to be baptized who professed to be contrite because of their sins, was the son of a priest named Zacharias, and his wife Elisabeth, and was born about A. M. 3999, and about six months before our blessed Lord. Of his almost miraculous conception and birth, we have a circumstantial account in the Gospel of Luke, chap. i. to which, and the notes there, the reader is requested to refer. For his fidelity in reproving Herod for his incest with his brother Philip's wife, he was cast into prison, no doubt at the suggestion of Herodias, the profligate woman in question. He was at last beheaded at her instigation, and his head given as a present to Salome, her daughter, who, by her elegant dancing, had highly gratified Herod, the paramour of her incestuous mother. His ministry was short; for he appears to have been put to death in the 27th or 28th year of the Christian æra.

Came—preaching] κηρυσσων, proclaiming, as a herald, a matter of great and solemn importance to men; the subject not his own, nor of himself, but from that God from whom alone he had received his commission. See on the nature and importance of the herald's office, at the end of this chapter. κηρυσσειν, says Rosenmüller, de iis dicitur, qui in PLATEIS, in CAMPIS, in AERE aperto, ut a multis audiantur, vocem tollunt, &c. "The verb κηρυσσειν is applied to those who, in the streets, fields, and open air, lift up their voice, that they may be heard by many, and proclaim what has been committed to them by regal or public authority; as the KERYKES among the Greeks, and the PRECONES among the Romans."

The wilderness of Judea] That is, the country parts, as distinguished from the city; for in this sense the word wilderness, מדבר midbar or מדבריות midbari'oth, is used among the rabbins. John's manner of life gives no countenance to the eremite or hermit's life, so strongly recommended and applauded by the Roman Church.

Verse 2. Repent] μετανοεω. This was the matter of the preaching. The verb μετανοεω is either compounded of μετα, after, and νοειν to understand, which signifies that, after hearing such preaching, the sinner is led to understand, that the way he has walked in was the way of misery, death, and hell. Or the word may be derived from μετα after, and ανοια, madness, which intimates that the whole life of a sinner is no

2 And saying, Repent ye: for ^{A. M. 4030.}
^{A. D. 26.} the kingdom of heaven is at ^{An Olymp.}
^{CCI. 2.} hand.

^c Dan. ii. 44; chap. iv. 17; x. 7.

other than a continued course of madness and folly: and if to live in a constant opposition to all the dictates of true wisdom; to wage war with his own best interests in time and eternity; to provoke and insult the living God; and, by habitual sin, to prepare himself only for a state of misery, he evidences of insanity, every sinner exhibits them plentifully. It was from this notion of the word, that the Latins termed repentance resipiscētia, a growing wise again, from re and sapere; or, according to Tertullian, Resipiscētia, quasi receptio mentis ad se, restoring the mind to itself: Contra Marcion, lib. ii. Repentance, then, implies that a measure of Divine wisdom is communicated to the sinner, and that he thereby becomes wise to salvation. That his mind, purposes, opinions, and inclinations, are changed; and that, in consequence, there is a total change in his conduct. It need scarcely be remarked, that, in this state, a man feels deep anguish of soul, because he has sinned against God, unfitted himself for heaven, and exposed his soul to hell. Hence, a true penitent has that sorrow, whereby he forsakes sin, not only because it has been ruinous to his own soul, but because it has been offensive to God.

The kingdom of heaven is at hand] Referring to the prophecy of Daniel, chap. vii. 13, 14, where the reign of Christ among men is expressly foretold. This phrase, and the kingdom of God, mean the same thing, viz. the dispensation of infinite mercy, and manifestation of eternal truth, by Christ Jesus, producing the true knowledge of God, accompanied with that worship which is pure and holy, worthy of that God who is its institutor and its object. But why is this called a kingdom? Because it has its laws, all the moral precepts of the Gospel: its subjects, all who believe in Christ Jesus: and its king, the Sovereign of heaven and earth. N. B. Jesus Christ never saved a soul which he did not govern; nor is this Christ precious or estimable to any man who does not feel a spirit of subjection to the Divine will.

But why is it called the kingdom of HEAVEN? Because God designed that his kingdom of grace here should resemble the kingdom of glory above. And hence our Lord teaches us to pray, Thy will be done on earth, as it is in heaven. The kingdom of heaven is not meat and drink, says St. Paul. Rom. xiv. 17; does not consist in the gratification of sensual passions, or worldly ambition; but is righteousness, peace, and joy, in the Holy Ghost. Now what can there be more than this in glory! Righteousness, without mixture of

A. M. 4030.
A. D. 26.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 2.
3 For this is he that was spoken of by the prophet Esaias, saying, ^dThe voice of one crying in the wilderness, ^ePrepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.

4 And ^fthe same John ^ghad his raiment of camel's hair, and a leathern girdle about his ^d Isa. xl. 3; Mark i. 3; Luke iii. 4; John i. 23. — ^e Luke i. 76.

^f Mark i. 6. — ^g 2 Kings i. 8; Zech. xiii. 4.

sin; peace, without strife or contention; joy, in the Holy Ghost, spiritual joy, without mixture of misery! And all this, it is possible, by the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, to enjoy here below. How then does heaven itself differ from this state? Answer. It makes the righteousness eternal, the peace eternal, and the joy eternal. This is the heaven of heavens! The phrase, kingdom of heaven, מַלְכוּת שָׁמַיִם maleuth shamayim, is frequently used by the rabbinical writers, and always means, the purity of the Divine worship, and the blessedness which a righteous man feels when employed in it.

It is farther added, This kingdom is at hand. The dispensation of the glorious Gospel was now about to be fully opened, and the Jews were to have the first offers of salvation. This kingdom is also at hand to us; and wherever Christ crucified is preached, there is salvation to be found. JESUS is proclaimed to thee, O man! as infinitely able and willing to save. Believe in his name—cast thy soul upon his atonement, and enter into rest!

Verse 3. The voice of one crying in the wilderness] Or, A voice of a crier in the wilderness. This is quoted from Isa. xl. 3, which clearly proves that John the Baptist was the person of whom the prophet spoke.

The idea is taken from the practice of eastern monarchs, who, whenever they entered upon an expedition, or took a journey through a desert country, sent harbingers before them, to prepare all things for their passage; and pioneers to open the passes, to level the ways, and to remove all impediments. The officers appointed to superintend such preparations were called by the Latins, stratores.

Diodorus's account of the march of Semiramis into Media and Persia, will give us a clear notion of the preparation of the way for a royal expedition. "In her march to Ecbatane, she came to the Zarcean mountain, which, extending many furlongs, and being full of craggy precipices and deep hollows, could not be passed without making a great compass about. Being therefore desirous of leaving an everlasting memorial of herself, as well as shortening the way, she ordered the precipices to be digged down, and the hollows to be filled up; and, at a great expense, she made a shorter and more expeditious road, which, to this day, is called from her, The road of Semiramis. Afterwards she went into Persia, and all the other countries of Asia, subject to her dominion; and, wherever she went, she ordered the mountains and precipices to be levelled, raised causeways in the plain country, and, at a great expense, made the ways passable." Diod. Sic. lib. ii. and Bp. Lowth.

loins; and his meat was ^hlocusts and ⁱwild honey.

5 ¶ ^kThen went out to him Jerusalem, and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan,

6 ^lAnd were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins.

^h Lev. xi. 22. — ⁱ 1 Sam. xiv. 25, 26. — ^k Mark i. 5; Luke iii. 7. — ^l Acts xix. 4, 14.

The Jewish Church was that desert country, to which John was sent, to announce the coming of the Messiah. It was destitute at that time of all religious cultivation, and of the spirit and practice of piety; and John was sent to prepare the way of the Lord, by preaching the doctrine of repentance. The desert is therefore to be considered as affording a proper emblem of the rude state of the Jewish Church, which is the true wilderness meant by the prophet, and in which John was to prepare the way of the promised Messiah. The awful importance of the matter, and the vehemence of the manner of the Baptist's preaching, probably acquired him the character of the crier, Boww.

For the meaning of the word John, see the note on Mark i. 4.

Verse 4. His raiment of camel's hair] A sort of coarse or rough covering, which, it appears, was common to the prophets, Zech. xiii. 4. In such a garment we find Elijah clothed, 2 Kings i. 8. And as John had been designed under the name of this prophet, Mal. iv. 5, whose spirit and qualifications he was to possess, Luke i. 17, he took the same habit, and lived in the same state of self-denial.

His meat was locusts] Ἀκρίδες. Ἀκρίς may either signify the insect called the locust, which still makes a part of the food in the land of Judea; or the top of a plant. Many eminent commentators are of the latter opinion; but the first is the most likely. The Saxon translator has gærreapan grasshoppers.

Wild honey.] Such as he got in the rocks and hollows of trees, and which abounded in Judea: see 1 Sam. xiv. 26. It is most likely that the dried locusts, which are an article of food in Asiatic countries to the present day, were fried in the honey, or compounded in some manner with it. The Gospel according to the Hebrews, as quoted by Epiphanius, seems to have taken a similar view of the subject, as it adds here to the text, Ὁν ἡ γένεσις ἦν τοῦ μαρῆ, ὡς ἐκκρίς ἐν ἐλαῷ. And its taste was like manna, as a sweet cake baked in oil.

Verse 5. Jordan] Many of the best MSS. and versions, with Mark i. 5, add ποταμῷ, the river Jordan; but the definitive article, with which the word is generally accompanied, both in the Hebrew and the Greek, is sufficient; and our article the, which should ever be used in the translation, expresses the force of the other.

Verse 6. Were baptized] In what form baptism was originally administered, has been deemed a subject worthy of serious dispute. Were the people dipped or sprinkled? for it is certain βαπτω and βαπτίζω mean both. They were all dipped, say some

A. M. 4030. 7 ¶ But when he saw many of
A. D. 26. the Pharisees and Sadducees come
An. Olymp. to his baptism, he said unto them,
CCL. 2.

¶ O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from ¶ the wrath to come?

A. M. 4030.
A. D. 26.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 2.

¶ Chap. xii. 31; xxiii. 33; Luke iii. 7, 8, 9.

¶ Rom. v. 9; 1 Thess. i. 10.

Can any man suppose that it was possible for John to dip all the inhabitants of Jerusalem and Judea, and of all the country round about the Jordan? Were both men and women dipped, for certainly both came to his baptism? This could never have comported either with safety or with decency. Were they dipped in their clothes? This would have endangered their lives, if they had not with them change of raiment: and as such a baptism as John's (however administered) was, in several respects, a new thing in Judea, it is not at all likely that the people would come thus provided. But suppose these were dipped, which I think it would be impossible to prove, does it follow that, in all regions of the world, men and women must be dipped, in order to be evangelically baptized? In the eastern countries, bathings were frequent, because of the heat of the climate, it being there so necessary to cleanliness and health; but could our climate, or a more northerly one, admit of this with safety, for at least three-fourths of the year? We may rest assured that it could not. And may we not presume, that if John had opened his commission in the north of Great Britain, for many months of the year, he would have dipped neither man nor woman, unless he could have procured a tepid bath? Those who are dipped or immersed in water, in the name of the Holy Trinity, I believe to be evangelically baptized—those who are washed or sprinkled with water in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, I believe to be equally so; and the repetition of such a baptism I believe to be profane. Others have a right to believe the contrary, if they see good. After all, it is the thing signified, and not the made, which is the essential part of the sacrament. See the note on Mark x. 16.

Confessing their sins.] Εξομολογουμενοι, carneſtly acknowledging that their sins were their own. And thus taking the whole blame upon themselves, and laying nothing to the charge of God or man. This is essential to true repentance; and, till a man take the whole blame on himself, he cannot feel the absolute need he has of casting his soul on the mercy of God, that he may be saved.

Verse 7. Pharisees] A very numerous sect among the Jews, who, in their origin, were, very probably, a pure and holy people. It is likely that they got the name of Pharisees, i. e. Separatists, (from פָּרַשׁ pharash, to separate,) from their separating themselves from the pollution of the Jewish national worship; and hence, the word in the Anglo-saxon version is rundon-halgan, holy persons who stand apart, or by themselves: but, in process of time, like all religious sects and parties, they degenerated: they lost the spirit of their institution, they ceased to recur to first principles, and had only the form of godliness, when Jesus Christ preached in Judea; for he bore witness, that they did make the outside of the cup and platter clean—they observed the rules of their institution, but the spirit was gone.

Sadducees] A sect who denied the existence of angels and spirits, consequently all Divine influence and inspiration, and also the resurrection of the dead. The Sadducees of that time were the Materialists and Deists of the Jewish nation. When the sect of the Pharisees arose cannot be distinctly ascertained; but it is supposed to have been some time after the Babylonish captivity. The sect of the Sadducees were the followers of one Sadok, a disciple of Antigonus Sochæus, who flourished about three centuries before Christ. There was a third sect among the Jews, called the Essenes or Essenians, of whom I shall have occasion to speak on chap. xix. 12.

Come to his baptism] The Æthiopic version adds the word privately here, the translator probably having read λαθρα in his copy, which gives a very remarkable turn to the passage. The multitudes, who had no worldly interest to support, no character to maintain by living in their usual way, came publicly, and openly acknowledged that they were SINNERS; and stood in need of mercy. The others, who endeavoured to secure their worldly interests by making a fair show in the flesh, are supposed to have come privately, that they might not be exposed to reproach; and that they might not lose their reputation for wisdom and sanctity, which their consciences, under the preaching of the Baptist, told them they had no right to. See below.

O generation of vipers] Γεννηματα ἐχιδνών. A terribly expressive speech. A serpentine brood, from a serpentine stock. As their fathers were, so were they, children of the wicked one. This is God's estimate of a SINNER, whether he wade in wealth, or soar in fame. The Jews were the seed of the serpent, who should bruise the heel of the woman's seed, and whose head should be bruised by him.

Who hath warned you] Or, privately shown you. Τις υπεδειξεν—from υπο, under, and δεικνυμαι, to show. Does not this seem to allude to the reading of the Æthiopic noticed above? They came privately. and John may be supposed to address them thus: "Did any person give you a private warning? No you received your convictions under the public ministry of the word. The multitudes of the poor and wretched, who have been convinced of sin, have publicly acknowledged their crimes, and sought mercy—God will unmask you—you have deceived the people—you have deceived yourselves—you must appear just what you are; and, if you expect mercy from God act like the penitent multitude, and bring forth FRUIT worthy of repentance. Do not begin to trifle with your convictions, by thinking, that because you are descendants of Abraham, therefore you are entitled to God's favour; God can, out of these stones (pointing probably to those scattered about in the desert

A. M. 4030. 8 Bring forth therefore fruits
A. D. 26. meet for repentance:
An. Olymp. CCL. 2.

9 And think not to say within yourselves, ^pWe have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, that God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham.

10 And now also the axe is laid unto the root of the trees; ^atherefore every tree which which he appears to have considered as an emblem of the Gentiles) raise up a faithful seed, who, though not natural descendants of your excellent patriarch, yet shall be his worthy children, as being partakers of his faith, and friends of his God." It should be added, that the Greek word also signifies plain or ample information. See on Luke vi. 47.

^o Or, answerable to amendment of life.—^p John viii. 33, 39: Acts xiii. 26; Rom. iv. 1, 11, 16.—^a Chap. vii. 19; Luke xiii. 7, 9; John xv. 6.

The wrath to come?] The desolation which was about to fall on the Jewish nation for their wickedness, and threatened in the last words of their own Scriptures. See Mal. iv. 6. Lest I come and smite the earth את הארץ (et ha-arets, this very land) with a curse. This wrath or curse was coming: they did not prevent it by turning to God, and receiving the Messiah, and therefore the wrath of God came upon them to the uttermost. Let him that readeth understand.

Verse 10. And now also the axe is laid] Or, Even now the axe lieth. As if he had said, There is not a moment to spare—God is about to cut off every impenitent soul—you must therefore either turn to God immediately, or be utterly and finally ruined. It was customary with the prophets to represent the kingdoms, nations, and individuals, whose ruin they predicted, under the notion of forests and trees, doomed to be cut down. See Jer. xvi. 22, 23; Ezek. xxxi. 3, 11, 12. The Baptist follows the same metaphor: the Jewish nation is the tree, and the Romans the axe, which, by the just judgment of God, was speedily to cut it down. It has been well observed, that there is an allusion here to a woodman, who, having marked a tree for excision, lays his axe at its root, and strips off his outer garment, that he may wield his blows more powerfully, and that his work may be quickly performed. For about sixty years before the coming of Christ, this axe had been lying at the root of the Jewish tree, Judea having been made a province to the Roman empire, from the time that Pompey took the city of Jerusalem, during the contentions of the two brothers Hyrcanus and Aristobulus, which was about sixty-three years before the coming of Christ. See Joseph. Antiq. l. xiv. c. 1–5. But as the country might be still considered as in the hands of the Jews, though subject to the Romans, and God had waited on them now nearly ninety years from the above time, expecting them to bring forth fruit, and none was yet produced; he kept the Romans as an axe, lying at the root of this tree, who were ready to cut it down the moment God gave them the commission.

bringeth not forth good fruit is ^{A. M. 4030.}
hewn down, and cast into the fire. ^{A. D. 26.}
^{An. Olymp. CCL. 2.}

11 ^rI indeed baptize you with water unto repentance: but he that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear: ^she shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost, and with fire:

^r Mark i. 8; Luke iii. 16; John i. 15, 26, 33; Acts i. 5; xi. 16; xix. 4.—^s Isa. iv. 4; xlv. 3; Mal. iii. 2; Acts ii. 3, 4; 1 Cor. xii. 13.

Verse 11. But he that cometh after me] Or, I coming after me, who is now on his way, and will shortly make his appearance. Jesus (Christ began his ministry when he was thirty years of age, Luke iii. 23, which was the age appointed by the law, Num. iv. 3. John the Baptist was born about six months before Christ; and, as he began his public ministry when thirty years of age, then this coming after refers to six months after the commencement of John's public preaching, at which time Christ entered upon his.

Whose shoes I am not worthy to bear] This saying is expressive of the most profound humility and reverence. To put on, take off, and carry the shoes of their masters, was, not only among the Jews, but also among the Greeks and Romans, the work of the vilest slaves. This is amply proved by Kypke, from Arrian, Plutarch, and the Babylonian Talmud.

With the Holy Ghost, and with fire] That the influences of the Spirit of God are here designed, needs but little proof. Christ's religion was to be a spiritual religion, and was to have its seat in the heart. Outward precepts, however well they might describe, could not produce inward spirituality. This was the province of the Spirit of God, and of it alone; therefore he is represented here under the similitude of fire, because he was to illuminate and invigorate the soul, penetrate every part, and assimilate the whole to the image of the God of glory. See on John iii. 5.

With fire] Κατὰ πυρ. This is wanting in E. S. (two MSS. one of the ninth, the other of the tenth century) eight others, and many Evangelistaria, and in some versions and printed editions; but it is found in the parallel place, Luke iii. 16, and in the most authentic MSS. and versions. It was probably the different interpretations given of it by the fathers that caused some transcribers to leave it out of their copies.

The baptism of fire has been differently understood among the primitive fathers. Some say, it means the tribulations, crosses, and afflictions, which believers in Christ are called to pass through. Hence the author of the Opus Imperfectum, on Matthew, says, that there are three sorts of baptism, 1. that of water; 2. that of the Holy Ghost; and, 3. that of tribulations and afflictions, represented under the notion of fire. He observes farther, that our blessed Lord went through these three baptisms: 1. That of water, he received from the hands of John. 2. That of the Holy Spirit, he received from the Father. And, 3. That of fire, he had in his contest with Satan in the desert. St. Chrysostom says, it means the superabundant graces

A. M. 4030.
A. D. 26.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 2.

12 † Whose fan is in his hand, and he will thoroughly purge his floor, and gather his wheat into the garner; but he will † burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire.

13 ¶ Then cometh Jesus † from Galilee

† Mal. iii. 3.—† Mal. iv. 1; chap. xiii. 30.

of the Spirit. Basil and Theophilus explain it of the fire of hell. Cyril, Jerome, and others, understand by it the descent of the Holy Spirit, on the day of pentecost.

Hilary says, it means a fire that the righteous must pass through in the day of judgment, to purify them from such defilements as necessarily cleaved to them here, and with which they could not be admitted into glory.

Ambrose says, this baptism shall be administered at the gate of paradise, by John Baptist; and he thinks that this is what is meant by the flaming sword, Gen. iii. 24.

Origen and Lactantius conceive it to be a river of fire, at the gate of heaven, something similar to the Phlegethon of the heathens; but they observe, that when the righteous come to pass over, the liquid flames shall divide, and give them a free passage: that Christ shall stand on the brink of it, and receive through the flames all those, and none but those, who have received in this world the baptism of water in his name: and that this baptism is for those who, having received the faith of Christ, have not, in every respect, lived conformably to it; for, though they laid the good foundation, yet they built hay, straw, and stubble upon it, and this work of theirs must be tried, and destroyed by this fire. This, they think, is St. Paul's meaning, 1 Cor. iii. 13–15. If any man build on this foundation (viz. Jesus Christ) gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble; every man's work shall be made manifest: and the fire shall try every man's work, of what sort it is.—If any man's work be burnt, he shall suffer loss: but he himself shall be saved; yet so as BY FIRE. From this fire, understood in this way, the fathers of the following ages, and the schoolmen, formed the famous and lucrative doctrine of PURGATORY. Some in the primitive Church thought that fire should be, in some way or other, joined to the water in baptism; and it is supposed that they administered it by causing the person to pass between two fires, or to leap through the flame; or by having a torch, or lighted candle, present. Thus have those called Doctors of the Church trifled. The exposition which I have given, I believe to be the only genuine one.

Verse 12. Whose fan is in his hand] The Romans are here termed God's fan, as, in ver. 10, they were called his are, and, in chap. xxii. 7, they are termed his troops or ornies.

The winnowing fan of the Hindoos is square, made of split bamboo; and the corn is winnowed by waving the fan backwards with both hands—"Whose fan is in his hand."

His floor] Does not this mean the land of Judea, which had been long, as it were, the threshing-floor of to Jordan unto John, to be baptized of him.

A. M. 4030.
A. D. 26.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 2.

14 But John forbad him, saying, I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me?

15 And Jesus answering said unto him,

† Mark i. 9; Luke iii. 21.—† Chap. ii. 22.

the Lord? God says, he will now, by the winnowing fan (viz. the Romans) thoroughly cleanse this floor—the wheat, those who believe in the Lord Jesus, he will gather into his garner, either take to heaven from the evil to come, or put in a place of safety, as he did the Christians, by sending them to Pella, in Cælosyria, previously to the destruction of Jerusalem. But he will burn up the chaff—the disobedient and rebellious Jews, who would not come unto Christ, that they might have life.

Unquenchable fire.] That cannot be extinguished by man.

Verse 14. John forbad him] Earnestly and pressingly opposed him: this is the proper import of the words διεκώλεεν αυτον. I have observed that δια, in composition, most frequently, if not always, strengthens the signification in classic authors.—Wakefield.

Verse 15. To fulfil all righteousness.] That is, Every righteous ordinance: so I think the words παραν δικαιοσυνην should be translated; and so our common version renders a similar word, Luke i. 6. The following passage, quoted from Justin Martyr, will doubtless appear a strong vindication of this translation. "Christ was circumcised, and observed all the other ordinances of the law of Moses, not with a view to his own justification; but to fulfil the dispensation committed to him by the Lord, the God and Creator of all things."—Wakefield.

How remarkable are the following words of Crceshna (an Incarnation of the Supreme God, according to the Hindoo theology) related in the Bhagvat Geeta, p. 47. Addressing his disciple Arjoon, he says, "I myself, Arjoon, have not, in the three regions of the universe, any thing which is necessary for me to perform; nor any thing to obtain, which is not obtained; and yet I live in the exercise of the moral duties. If I were not vigilantly to attend to those duties, all men would presently follow my example. If I were not to perform the moral actions, this world would fail in their duties: I should be the cause of spurious births, and should drive the people from the right way. As the ignorant perform the duties of life from a hope of reward, so the wise man, out of respect to the opinions and prejudices of mankind, should perform the same without motives of interest. The wise man, by industriously performing all the duties of life, should induce the vulgar to attend to them."

The Septuagint use this word often for the Hebrew משפט mishpat, judgment, appointment. And in Ezek. xviii. 19, 21, the person who δικαιοσυνην και ελεος ποιηκε—hath done righteousness and mercy, is he who sacredly attended to the performance of all the religious ordinances mentioned in that chapter, and performed them in the genuine spirit of mercy. Δικαιω-

A. M. 4030.
A. D. 26.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 2. Suffer it to be so now: for thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness. Then he suffered him.

16 * And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water: and, lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw para is used 1 Mac. i. 13, 49; ii. 21, and in Heb. x. 1, 10, to denote religious ceremonies. Michaelis supposes, that כֹּל kol chok, all religious statutes or ordinances, were the words used in the Hebrew original of this Gospel.

* Mark i. 10.—† Isa. xi. 2; xlii. 1; Luke iii. 22; John i. 32, 33.—‡ John xii. 29.

But was this an ordinance? Undoubtedly: it was the initiatory ordinance of the Baptist's dispensation. Now, as Christ had submitted to circumcision, which was the initiatory ordinance of the Mosaic dispensation, it was necessary that he should submit to this, which was instituted by no less an authority, and was the introduction to his own dispensation of eternal mercy and truth. But it was necessary on another account: Our Lord represented the high priest, and was to be the high priest over the house of God:—now, as the high priest was initiated into his office by washing and anointing, so must Christ: and hence he was baptized, washed, and anointed by the Holy Ghost. Thus he fulfilled the righteous ordinance of his initiation into the office of high priest, and thus was prepared to make an atonement for the sins of mankind.

[Then he suffered him.] In the Opus Imperfectum, quoted by Griesbach, there is the following addition, which, at least, may serve to show the opinion of its author: Et Johannes quidem baptizavit illum in aqua, ille autem Johannem cum Spiritu. "Then John baptized him with water, and he baptized John with the Spirit."

Verse 16. The heavens were opened unto him] That is, to John the Baptist—and he, John, saw the Spirit of God—lighting upon him, i. e. Jesus. There has been some controversy about the manner and form in which the Spirit of God rendered itself visible on this occasion. St. Luke, iii. 22, says it was in a bodily shape like to a dove: and this likeness to a dove some refer to a hovering motion, like to that of a dove, and not to the form of the dove itself: but the terms of the text are too precise to admit of this far-fetched interpretation.

This passage affords no mean proof of the doctrine of the Trinity. That three distinct persons are here represented, there can be no dispute. 1. The person of Jesus Christ, baptized by John in Jordan. 2. The person of the Holy Ghost in a bodily shape (σωματικῶς Luke iii. 22) like a dove. 3. The person of the Father; a voice came out of heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, &c. The voice is here represented as proceeding from a different place to that in which the persons of the Son and Holy Spirit were manifested: and merely, I think, more forcibly to mark this Divine personality.

Verse 17. In whom I am well pleased.] Ev ω εὐδοκῆσα, in whom I have delighted—though it is supthe Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him: A. M. 4030.

A. D. 26.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 2.

17 * And, lo, a voice from heaven, saying, † This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

* Psal. ii. 7; Isa. xlii. 1; chap. xii. 18; xvii. 5; Mark i. 11. Luke ix. 35; Eph. i. 6; Col. i. 13; 2 Pet. i. 17.

posed that the past tense is here used for the present: but see the note on chap. xvii. 5. By this voice, and overshadowing of the Spirit, the mission of the Lord Jesus was publicly and solemnly accredited; God intimating that he had before delighted in him: the law, in all its ordinances, having pointed him out, for they could not be pleasing to God, but as they were fulfilled in, and showed forth, the Son of man, till he came.

As the office of a herald is frequently alluded to in this chapter, and also in various other parts of the New Testament, I think it best to give a full account of it here, especially as the office of the ministers of the Gospel is represented by it. Such persons can best apply the different correspondences between their own and the herald's office.

At the Olympic and Isthmian games, heralds were persons of the utmost consequence and importance. Their office was:—

1. To proclaim from a scaffold, or elevated place, the combat that was to be entered on.

2. To summon the Agonistæ, or contenders, to make their appearance, and to announce their names.

3. To specify the prize for which they were to contend.

4. To admonish and animate, with appropriate discourses, the athletæ, or combatants.

5. To set before them, and explain, the laws of the agones, or contenders; that they might see that even the conqueror could not receive the crown or prize, unless he had strove lawfully.

6. After the conflict was ended, to bring the business before the judges, and, according to their determination, to proclaim the victor.

7. To deliver the prize to the conqueror, and to put the crown on his head, in the presence of the assembly.

8. They were the persons who convoked all salenni and religious assemblies, and brought forth, and often slew, the sacrifices offered on those occasions.

9. They frequently called the attention of the people, during the sacrifices, to the subject of devotion. with hoc age! τὸντο παρτε: mind what you are about, don't be idle; think of nothing else. See PLUTARCH in Coriolanus.

The office, and nearly the word itself, was in use among the ancient Babylonians, as appears from Dan. iii. 4, where the Chaldee word כְּרוּזָא carozā, is rendered by the Septuagint κηρυξ kerux, and by our translation, very properly, herald. His business in the above place was to call an assembly of the people, for the purpose of public worship; to describe the object and nature of that worship, and the punishment to be inflicted on those who did not join in the worship, and properly assist in the solemnities of the occasion.

Dan. iii. 4, is the only place in our translation, in which the word herald is used: but the word κηρυξ, used by St. Paul, 1 Tim. ii. 7; 2 Tim. i. 11, and by St. Peter, 2 Epist. ii. 5, is found in the Septuagint, Gen. xli. 43, as well as in Dan. iii. 4, and the verb κηρυσσω is found in different places of that version, and in a great number of places in the New Testament.

It is worthy of remark, that the office of the κηρυξ, kerux, or herald, must have been anciently known, and indeed established, among the Egyptians: for in Gen. xli. 43, where an account is given of the promotion of Joseph to the second place in the kingdom, where we say, And they cried before him, saying, Bow the knee; the Septuagint has καὶ ἐκηρυξεν ἐμπροσθεν αὐτοῦ κηρυξ. And a HERALD made proclamation before him. As the Septuagint translated this for Ptolemy Philadelphus, the Egyptian king, and were in Egypt when they translated the law, we may safely infer that the office was not only known, but in use among the Egyptians, being denominated in their language אברק abrek, which our translators, following the Vulgate, have rendered, Bow the knee; but which the Septuagint understood to be the title of an officer, who was the same among the Egyptians as the κηρυξ among the Greeks. This is a probable meaning of the word, which escaped me when I wrote the note on Gen. xli. 43.

As every kind of office had some peculiar badge, or ensign, by which it was known among the ancients, so the heralds were known by generally carrying a caduceus. This was a rod with two spread wings at the top, and about which two serpents were entwined. The poets fabled that this rod was given by Apollo, the god of wisdom and music, to Mercury, the god of eloquence, and the messenger of the gods. To it wonderful properties are ascribed—especially that it produces sleep, and that it raises the dead. Who does not at once see, that the caduceus and its properties clearly point out the office, honour, and influence of the herald? As persons of strong voice, and ready speech, and copious eloquence, were always chosen for heralds, they were represented as endued with wisdom and eloquence from above. They lulled men to sleep, i. e. by their persuasive powers of speech, they calmed the turbulent dispositions of an inflamed populace, when proceeding to acts of rebellion and anarchy; or they roused the dormant zeal of the community, who, through long oppression, despairing of succour or relief, seemed careless about their best interests being stupidly resolved to sink under their burdens, and expect release only in death.

As to the caduceus itself, it was ever the emblem of peace among the ancients: the rod was the emblem of power; the two serpents, of wisdom and prudence; and the two wings, of diligence and despatch. The first idea of this wonderful rod seems to have been borrowed from the rod of Moses. See the note on Exod. iv. 17.

The word κηρυξ kerux, or herald, here used, is evidently derived from κηρυσσειν, to proclaim, call aloud; and this from γηρυς, the voice: because these persons were never employed in any business, but such only as could not be transacted but by the powers of speech, and the energy of ratiocination.

For the derivation of the word herald, we must look to the northern languages. Its meaning in Junius, Skinner, and Minshieu, are various, but not essentially different; they all seem to point out different parts of the herald's office. 1. In the Belgic, heer signifies army. Hence heer-alt, a senior officer, or general, in the army. 2. Or heer-held, the hero of the army: he who had distinguished himself most in his country's behalf. 3. Or from the Gallo-teutonic herr-haut, the high lord, because their persons were so universally respected, as we have already seen. 4. Or from the simple Teutonic herr-hold, he who is faithful to his lord. And, lastly, according to Minshieu, from the verb hier-holden, stop here; because, in proclaiming peace, they arrested bloodshed and death, and prevented the farther progress of war.

These officers act an important part in all heroic history, and particularly in the Iliad and Odyssey, from which, as the subject is of so much importance, I shall make a few extracts.

I. Their character was sacred. Homer gives them the epithet of divine, θειοι.

—Δολων, Εὐμηδεος νιος, Κηρυκας θειαια.

Iliad x. 315.

"Dolon, son of Eumedes, the divine herald." They were also termed inviolable, αὐτοί; also, great, admirable, &c. In the first book of the Iliad, we have a proof of the respect paid to heralds, and the inviolability of their persons. Agamemnon commands the heralds, Talthybius and Eurybates, his faithful ministers, to go to the tent of Achilles, seize the young Briseis, and bring her to him. They reluctantly obey; but, when they come into the presence of Achilles, knowing the injustice of their master's cause, they are afraid to announce their mission. Achilles, guessing their errand, thus addresses them:—

Χαιρετε, κηρυκες, Διος ἀγγελοι, ἧδε καὶ ἀνδρῶν. κ. τ. λ.

"Hail, O ye heralds, messengers of God and of men! come forward. I cannot blame you—Agamemnon only is culpable, who has sent you for the beautiful Briseis. But come, O godlike Patroclus, bring forth the damsel, and deliver her to them, that they may lead her away," &c. Iliad i. 334, &c.

II. Their functions were numerous; they might enter without danger into besieged cities, or even into battles.

III. They convoked the assemblies of the leaders according to the orders they received from the general or king.

IV. They commanded silence, when kings were to address the assembly, (Iliad xviii. 503. Κηρυκες δ' ἀρὰ λαῶν ἐρητιον. See also Iliad ii. 280,) and delivered the sceptre into their hands, before they began their harangue.

Ὦν δ' ἀρὰ κηρυξ
Σεραι σκηπτρον εἴηκε. σιωπῆσαι τ' ἐκέλευσεν.

Iliad xxiü. 567.

V. They were the carriers and executors of the royal commands, (Iliad i. 320,) and went in search of those who were summoned to appear, or whose presence was desired.

VI. They were entrusted with the most important missions; and accompanied princes in the most difficult circumstances. Priam, when he went to Achilles, took no person besides a herald with him. (Iliad xxiv. 674, 689.) When Ulysses sent two of his companions to treat with the Lestrygons, he sent a herald at the same time. (Odys. x. 102.) Agamemnon, when he wished to soften Achilles, joined Eurybates and Hodius, his heralds, to the deputation of the princes. (Iliad ix. 170.)

VII. Heralds were employed to proclaim and publish whatever was to be known by the people. (Odys. xx. 276.)

VIII. They declared war and proclaimed peace. (Odys. xviii. 334.)

IX. They took part in all sacred ceremonies: they mingled the wine and water in the large bowls for the libations, which were made at the conclusion of treaties. They were the priests of the people in many cases; they led forth the victims, cut them in pieces, and divided them among those engaged in the sacrifices. (Odys. i. 109, &c.)

X. In Odyssey lib. xvii., a herald presents a piece of flesh to Telemachus, and pours out his wine.

XI. They sometimes waited on princes at table, and rendered them many other personal services. (Iliad ii. 280; Odys. i. 143, &c., 146, 153; ii. 6, 38.) In the Iliad, lib. x. 3, Eurybates carries the clothes to Ulysses. And a herald of Aleibous conducts Demo-docus, the singer, into the festive hall. (Odys. viii. 470.) Many others of their functions, services, and privileges, the reader may see, by consulting DAMIA's Homeric Lexicon, under Κρω.

CHAPTER IV.

Jesus, in the wilderness, is tempted by Satan, 1-11. He goes into Galilee, 12; and Capernaum, 13. The prophecy which was thus fulfilled, 14-16. He begins to preach publicly, 17. Calls Simon Peter, and his brother Andrew, 18-20. Calls also James and John, the sons of Zebedee, 21, 22. Preaches and works miracles throughout Galilee, 23. Becomes famous in Syria, and is followed by multitudes from various quarters, among whom he works a great variety of miracles, 24, 25.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3.

THEN was ^a Jesus led up of ^b the Spirit into the wilderness, to be tempted of the devil.

2 And when he had fasted forty days and

^a Mark i. 12, &c.; Luke iv. 1, &c.—^b See 1 Kings xviii. 12;

NOTES ON CHAP. IV.

Verse 1. Then was Jesus led up of the Spirit] This transaction appears to have taken place immediately after Christ's baptism; and this bringing up of Christ was through the influence of the Spirit of God; that Spirit which had rested upon him in his baptism.

To be tempted] The first act of the ministry of Jesus Christ was a combat with Satan. Does not this receive light from Gen. iii. 17. I will put enmity between the woman's seed and thy seed: it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel.

Verse 2. And when he had fasted forty days] It is remarkable that Moses, the great lawgiver of the Jews, previously to his receiving the law from God, fasted forty days in the mount; that Elijah, the chief of the prophets, fasted also forty days; and that Christ, the giver of the New Covenant, should act in the same way. Was not all this intended to show, that God's kingdom on earth was to be spiritual and Divine?—that it should not consist in meat and drink, but in righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost? Rom. xiv. 17. Relative to the forty days' fast of Moses, there is a beautiful saying in the Talmudists. "Is it possible that any man can fast forty days and forty nights? To which Rabbi Meir answered, When thou takest up thy abode in any particular city, thou must live according to its customs. Moses ascended to heaven, where they neither eat nor drink; therefore forty nights, he was afterward an ^a hungry.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3.

3 And when the tempter came to him, he said, If thou be the Son of God, com-

Ezek. vi. 14; viii. 3; xi. 1, 24; xl. 2; xliii. 5; Acts viii. 39.

he became assimilated to them. We are accustomed to eat and drink; and, when angels descend to us, they eat and drink also." Moses, Elijah, and our blessed Lord could fast forty days and forty nights, because they were in communion with God, and living a heavenly life.

Verse 3. And when the tempter] This onset of Satan was made (speaking after the manner of men) judiciously: he came when Jesus, after having fasted forty days and forty nights, was hungry: now, as hunger naturally diminishes the strength of the body, the mind gets enfeebled, and becomes easily irritated; and if much watching and prayer be not employed, the uneasiness which is occasioned by a lack of food may soon produce impatience, and in this state of mind the tempter has great advantages. The following advice of an Arabian philosopher to his son is worthy of attention. "My son, never go out of the house in the morning, till thou hast eaten something: by so doing, thy mind will be more firm; and, shouldst thou be insulted by any person, thou wilt find thyself more disposed to suffer patiently: for hunger dries up and disorders the brain." Bibliot. Orient. Suppl. p. 449. The state of our bodily health and worldly circumstances may afford our adversary many opportunities of doing us immense mischief. In such cases, the sin to which we are tempted may be justly termed, as in 1 Heb. xii. 1, την ἐνπεριστατον ἀμαρτιαν, the well-

A. M. 4031. mand that these stones be made
A. D. 27. bread.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

4 But he answered and said, It is written, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

5 Then the devil taketh him up ^dinto the holy city, and setteth him on a pinnacle of the temple,

6 And saith unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down: for it is written, circumstanced sin, because all the circumstances of time, place, and state of body and mind, are favourable to it.

^c Deut. viii. 3.—^d Neh. xi. 1, 18, Isa. xlviii. 2; li. 1; chap.

If thou be the Son of God] Or, a son of God, υἱος τοῦ Θεοῦ. υἱος is here, and in Luke iv. 3, written without the article; and therefore should not be translated THE Son, as if it were ὁ υἱος, which is a phrase that is applicable to Christ as the Messiah: but it is certain, whatever Satan might suspect, he did not fully know that the person he tempted was the true Messiah. Perhaps one grand object of his temptation was to find this out.

Command that these stones] The meaning of this temptation is: "Distrust the Divine providence and support, and make use of illicit means to supply thy necessities."

Verse 4. But by (or, upon, ἐν) every word] Πᾶσα, in Greek, answers to דָּבָר dabar in Hebrew, which means not only a word spoken, but also thing, purpose, appointment, &c. Our Lord's meaning seems to be this: God purposes the welfare of his creatures—all his appointments are calculated to promote this end. Some of them may appear to man to have a contrary tendency; but even fasting itself, when used in consequence of a Divine injunction, becomes a mean of supporting that life which it seems naturally calculated to impair or destroy.

Verse 5. Pinnacle of the temple] It is very likely that this was what was called the στοὰ βασιλική, the king's gallery; which, as Josephus says, "deserves to be mentioned among the most magnificent things under the sun: for upon a stupendous depth of a valley, scarcely to be fathomed by the eye of him that stands above, Herod erected a gallery of a vast height, from the top of which if any looked down, he would grow dizzy, his eyes not being able to reach so vast a depth."—Ant. l. xv. c. 11. See Dr. Lightfoot on this place.

Verse 6. Cast thyself down] Our Lord had repelled the first temptation by an act of confidence in the power and goodness of God; and now Satan solicits him to make trial of it. Through the unparalleled subtlety of Satan, the very means we make use of to repel one temptation may be used by him as the groundwork of another. This method he often uses, in order to confound us in our confidence.

He shall give his angels charge, &c.] This is a mutilated quotation of Psal. xci. 11. The clause, to

A. M. 4031. He shall give his angels charge
A. D. 27. concerning thee: and in their
An. Olymp. hands they shall bear thee up,
CCL. 3. lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone.

7 Jesus said unto him, It is written again, "Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God."

8 Again, the devil taketh him up into an exceeding high mountain, and showeth him all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them:

xxvii. 53; Rev. xi. 2.—^e Psal. xci. 11, 12.—^f Deut. vi. 16.

keep thee in all thy ways, Satan chose to leave out, as quite unsuitable to his design. That God has promised to protect and support his servants, admits of no dispute; but, as the path of duty is the way of safety, they are entitled to no good when they walk out of it.

In their hands they shall bear thee up] This quotation from Psal. xci. 11, is a metaphor taken from a nurse's management of her child: in teaching it to walk, she guides it along plain ground; but, when stones or other obstacles occur, she lifts up the child, and carries it over them, and then sets it down to walk again. Thus she keeps it in all its ways, watching over, and guarding every step it takes. To this St. Paul seems also to allude, 1 Thess. ii. 7. We were gentle among you, even as a nurse cherisheth her children. Thus the most merciful God deals with the children of men, ever guarding them by his eye, and defending them by his power.

Verse 7. Thou shalt not tempt] To expose myself to any danger naturally destructive, with the vain presumption that God will protect and defend me from the ruinous consequences of my imprudent conduct, is to tempt God.

Verse 8. An exceeding high mountain, and showeth him] If the words, all the kingdoms of the world, be taken in a literal sense, then this must have been a visionary representation, as the highest mountain on the face of the globe could not suffice to make evident even one hemisphere of the earth, and the other must of necessity be in darkness.

But if we take the world to mean only the land of Judea, and some of the surrounding nations, as it appears sometimes to signify, (see on Luke ii. 1,) then the mountain described by the Abbé Mariti (Travels through Cyprus, &c.) could have afforded the prospect in question. Speaking of it, he says, "Here we enjoyed the most beautiful prospect imaginable. This part of the mountain overlooks the mountains of Arabia, the country of Gilead, the country of the Amorites, the plains of Moab, the plains of Jericho, the river Jordan, and the whole extent of the Dead Sea. It was here that the devil said to the Son of God, All these kingdoms will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me." Probably St. Matthew, in the Hebrew original, wrote הארץ haarets, which signifies the world, the earth, and often the land of Judea only. What renders this more probable is, that at this time Judea was divided into several kingdoms,

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

9 And saith unto him, All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me.

10 Then saith Jesus unto him, Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, *Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.

11 Then the devil leaveth him, and, behold, ^hangels came and ministered unto him.

* Deut. vi. 13; & 20, Josh. xiv. 14, 1 Sam. vii. 3. — ^h Heb. i. 14.

or governments, under the three sons of Herod the Great, viz. Archelaus, Antipas, and Philip; which are not only called ethnarchs and tetrarchs in the Gospels, but also βασιλεις, kings, and are said βασιλευν, to reign, as Rosenmüller has properly remarked. See chap. ii. 22; xiv. 9.

Verse 9. If thou wilt fall down and worship me] As if he had said, "The whole of this land is now under my government; do me homage for it, and I will deliver it into thy hand."

Verse 10. Get thee hence] Or, behind me, οπισω μου. This is added by a multitude of the best MSS., versions, and fathers. This temptation savouring of nothing but diabolical impudence, Jesus did not treat it as the others; but, with Divine authority, commanded the tempter to return to his own place.

In the course of this trial, it appears that our blessed Lord was tempted, 1st. To DISTRUST. Command these stones to become bread. 2dly. To PRESUMPTION. Cast thyself down. 3dly. To worldly AMBITION. All these will I give. 4thly. To IDOLATRY. Fall down and worship me, or do me homage. There is probably not a temptation of Satan, but is reducible to one or other of these four articles.

From the whole we may learn:

First. No man, howsoever holy, is exempted from temptation: for God manifested in the flesh was tempted by the devil.

Secondly. That the best way to foil the adversary, is by the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God, Eph. vi. 17.

Thirdly. That to be tempted even to the greatest abominations (while a person resists) is not sin: for Christ was tempted to worship the devil.

Fourthly. That there is no temptation which is from its own nature, or favouring circumstances, irresistible. God has promised to bruise even Satan under our feet.

As I wish to speak what I think most necessary on every subject, when I first meet it, and once for all, I would observe, first, That the fear of being tempted may become a most dangerous snare.

Secondly, That when God permits a temptation or trial to come he will give grace to bear or overcome it.

Thirdly, That our spiritual interests shall be always advanced, in proportion to our trials and faithful resistance.

Fourthly, That a more than ordinary measure of

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

12 ¶ Now when Jesus had heard that John was ^kcast into prison, he departed into Galilee;

13 And leaving Nazareth, he came and dwelt in Capernaum, which is upon the sea coast, in the borders of Zabulon and Nephthalim:

14 That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying,

* Mark i. 14; Luke iii. 20; iv. 14, 31; John iv. 43 — ^k Or delivered up.

Divine consolation shall be the consequence of every victory.

Verse 11. Behold, angels came and ministered unto him.] That is, brought that food which was necessary to support nature.

The name given to Satan in the third verse is very emphatic, ο περαζων, the templer, or trier, from περαω, to pierce through. To this import of the name there seems to be an allusion, Eph. vi. 16: The fiery darts of the wicked one. This is the precise idea of the word in Deut. viii. 2. To humble thee, and to prove thee, to know what was in thy heart: לנסתה lin-esteca, περαση σε, LXX. that he might bore thee through. The quality and goodness of many things are proved by piercing or boring through; for this shows what is in the heart. Perhaps nothing tends so much to discover what we are, as trials either from men or devils.

Shalt thou serve, or pay religious veneration, λατρεύσεις. This is Mr. Wakefield's translation, and I think cannot be mended. λατρεία comes from λα, very much, and τρεω, I tremble. When a sinner approaches the presence of God, conscious of his infinite holiness and justice, and of his own vileness, he will then fully comprehend what this word means. See this religious reverence exemplified in the case of Moses, when in the presence of God; I exceedingly fear, said he, and tremble, Heb. xii. 21. And yet this fear of God is the beginning of wisdom. See the observations at the end of the chapter.

Verse 13. And leaving Nazareth] Or, entirely leaving Nazareth, και καταλιπων την Ναζαρετ, from κατα, intensive, and Δειπω, I leave. It seems that, from this time, our blessed Lord made Capernaum his ordinary place of residence; and utterly forsook Nazareth, because they had wholly rejected his word, and even attempted to take away his life. See Luke iv. 29.

Galilee was bounded by mount Lebanon on the north, by the river Jordan and the sea of Galilee on the east, by Chison on the south, and by the Mediterranean on the west.

Nazareth, a little city in the tribe of Zebulon, in lower Galilee, with Tabor on the east, and Ptolemais on the west. It is supposed that this city was the usual residence of our Lord for the first thirty years of his life. It was here he became incarnate, lived in subjection to Joseph and Mary, and from which he took the name of a Nazorean.

Capernaum, a city famous in the New Testament,

A. M. 4031. 15 ¹The land of Zabulon, and
A. D. 27. the land of Nephtholim, by the way
An. Olymp. of the sea, beyond Jordan, Galilee
CCI. 3. of the Gentiles :

16 ^mThe people which sat in darkness saw great light; and to them which sat in the region and shadow of death, light is sprung up.

¹Isa. ix. 1, 2.—^mIsa. xlii. 7; Luke ii. 32.—ⁿMark i. 14, 15.

but never mentioned in the Old. Probably it was one of those cities which the Jews built after their return from Babylon. It stood on the sea-coast of Galilee, on the borders of Zabulon and Nephtholim, as mentioned in the text. This was called his own city, chap. ix. 1, &c., and here, as a citizen, he paid the half shekel, chap. xvii. 24. Among the Jews, if a man became a resident in any city for twelve months, he thereby became a citizen, and paid his proportion of dues and taxes. See Lightfoot. Capernaum is well known to have been the principal scene of our Lord's miracles during the three years of his public ministry.

Zabulon, the country of this tribe, in which Nazareth and Capernaum were situated, bordered on the lake of Gennesareth, stretching to the frontiers of Sidon, Gen. xlix. 13. Nephtholim was contiguous to it, and both were on the east side of Jordan, Josh. xix. 34.

Verse 15. Galilee of the Gentiles] Or of the nations. So called, because it was inhabited by Egyptians, Arabians, and Phœnicians, according to the testimony of Strabo and others. The Hebrew גוֹיִם goyim, and the Greek ἔθνη, signify nations; and, in the Old and New Testaments, mean those people who were not descendants of any of the twelve tribes. The word Gentiles, from gens, a nation, signifies the same. It is worthy of remark, that it was a regular tradition among the ancient Jews, that the Messiah should begin his ministry in Galilee. See the proofs in Schoettgen.

Verse 16. The people which sat in darkness] This is quoted from Isa. ix. 2, where, instead of sitting, the prophet used the word walked. The evangelist might on purpose change the term, to point out the increased misery of the state of these persons. Sitting in darkness expresses a greater degree of intellectual blindness, than walking in darkness does. In the time of Christ's appearing, the people were in a much worse state than in the time of the prophet, which was nearly 700 years before; as, during all this period, they were growing more ignorant and sinful.

The region and shadow of death] These words are amazingly descriptive. A region of death—DEATH'S country, where, in a peculiar manner, Death lived, reigned, and triumphed, subjecting all the people to his sway.

Shadow of death] Σκία θανάτου, used only here and in Luke i. 79, but often in the Old Covenant, where the Hebrew is צל מַוֶּת tsal maveth. It is not easy to enter fully into the ideal meaning of this term. As in the former clause, death is personified, so here. A shadow is that darkness cast upon a place by a body raised between it and the light or sun. Death

17 ¶ ⁿFrom that time Jesus ^{A. M. 4031.} began to preach, and to say, °Re- ^{A. D. 27.}
pent: for the kingdom of heaven is ^{An. Olymp.}
at hand. ^{CCI. 3.}

18 ¶ ^pAnd Jesus, walking by the sea of Galilee, saw two brethren, Simon ^qcalled Peter, and Andrew his brother, casting a net into the sea: for they were fishers.

°Chap. iii. 2; x. 7.—^pMark i. 16, 17, 18; Luke v. 2.
^qJohn i. 42.

is here represented as standing between the land above mentioned, and the light of life, or Sun of righteousness; in consequence of which, all the inhabitants were involved in a continual cloud of intellectual darkness, misery, and sin. The heavenly sun was continually eclipsed to them, till this glorious time, when Jesus Christ, the true light, shone forth in the beauty of holiness and truth. Christ began his ministry in Galilee, and frequented this uncultivated place more than he did Jerusalem and other parts of Judea: here his preaching was peculiarly needful; and by this was the prophecy fulfilled.

Verse 17. Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent] See on chap. iii. 1, 2. Every preacher commissioned by God to proclaim salvation to a lost world, begins his work with preaching the doctrine of repentance. This was the case with all the prophets, John the Baptist, Jesus Christ, all the apostles, and all their genuine successors in the Christian ministry. The reasons are evident in the notes already referred to; and for the explanation of the word κηρύσσειν, preaching or proclaiming as a herald, see at the end of chap. iii.

Verse 18. Simon called Peter, and Andrew his brother] Why did not Jesus Christ call some of the eminent Scribes or Pharisees to publish his Gospel, and not poor unlearned fishermen, without credit or authority? Because it was the kingdom of heaven they were to preach, and their teaching must come from above: besides, the conversion of sinners, though it be effected instrumentally by the preaching of the Gospel, yet the grand agent in it is the Spirit of God. As the instruments were comparatively mean, and the work which was accomplished by them was grand and glorious, the excellency of the power at once appeared to be of God, and not of man; and thus the glory, due alone to his name, was secured, and the great Operator of all good had the deserved praise. Seminaries of learning, in the order of God's providence and grace, have great and important uses; and, in reference to such uses, they should be treated with great respect: but to make preachers of the Gospel is a matter to which they are utterly inadequate; it is a prerogative that God never did, and never will, delegate to man.

Where the seed of the kingdom of God is sowed, and a dispensation of the Gospel is committed to a man, a good education may be of great and general use: but it no more follows, because a man has had a good education, that therefore he is qualified to preach the Gospel, than it does, that because he has not had that, therefore he is unqualified; for there may be much

A. M. 4031. 19 And he saith unto them, Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men.

20 And they straightway left their nets, and followed him.

21 And going on from thence, he saw other two brethren, James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother, in a ship with Zebedee their father, mending their nets : and he called them.

22 And they immediately left the ship and their father, and followed him.

23 And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all

Luke v. 10, 11.—Mark x. 28; Luke xviii. 28.—Mark i. 19, 20; Luke v. 10.

Chap. ix. 35; Mark i. 21, 39; Luke iv. 15, 41.—Chap. xxiv 14; Mark i. 11.—Mark i. 31.

ignorance of Divine things where there is much human learning; and a man may be well taught in the things of God, and be able to teach others, who has not had the advantages of a liberal education.

Men-made ministers have almost ruined the heritage of God. To prevent this, our Church requires that a man be inwardly moved to take upon himself this ministry, before he can be ordained to it. And he who cannot say, that he trusts (has rational and Scriptural conviction) that he is moved by the Holy Ghost to take upon himself this office, is an intruder into the heritage of God, and his ordination, ipso facto, vitiated and of none effect. See the truly apostolic Ordination Service of the Church of England.

Fishers.] Persons employed in a lawful and profitable avocation, and faithfully discharging their duty in it. It was a tradition of the elders, that one of Joshua's ten precepts was, that all men should have an equal right to spread their nets and fish in the sea of Tiberias, or Galilee. The persons mentioned here were doubtless men of pure morals; for the minister of God should have a good report from them that are without.

Verse 19. Follow me] Come after me, δευτε οπισω μου. Receive my doctrines, imitate me in my conduct—in every respect be my disciples. We may observe that most of the calls of God to man are expressed in a few solemn words, which alarm the conscience, and deeply impress the heart.

I will make you fishers of men.] Ezek. chap. xlvii. 8–10, casts much light on this place; and to this prophet our Lord probably alludes. To follow Christ, and be admitted into a partnership of his ministry, is a great honour; but those only who are by himself fitted for it, God calls. Miserable are those who do not wait for this call—who presume to take the name of fishers of men, and know not how to cast the net of the Divine word, because not brought to an acquaintance with the saving power of the God who bought them. Such persons, having only their secular interest in view, study not to catch men, but to catch money; and though, for charity's sake, it may be said of a pastor of this spirit, he does not enter the sheepfold as a thief, yet he certainly lives as a hireling. See Quesnel.

Some teach to work, but have no hands to row;
Some will be eyes, but have no light to see;
Some will be guides, but have no feet to go;
Some deaf, yet ears, some dumb, yet tongues will be;

Dumb, deaf, lame, blind, and maimed, yet fishers all!

Fit for no use but store an hospital.

Fletcher's Piscatory Eclogues. Ec. iv. 5, 18

Following a person, in the Jewish phrase, signifies being his disciple or scholar. See a similar mode of speech, 2 Kings vi. 19.

Verse 20. They straightway left their nets] A change, as far as it respected secular things, every way to their disadvantage. The proud and the profane may exult and say, "Such preachers as these cannot be much injured by their sacrifices of secular property—they have nothing but nets, &c., to leave." Let such carpers at the institution of Christ know, that he who has nothing but a net, and leaves that for the sake of doing good to the souls of men, leaves his ALL: besides, he lived comfortably by his net before; but, in becoming the servant of all for Christ's sake, he exposes himself to the want of even a morsel of bread. See on chap. xix. 27.

Verse 22. Left the ship and their father] By the ship, το πλοιον, we are to understand the mere fishing-boat, used for extending their nets in the water and bringing the hawser or rope of the farther end to shore, by which the net was pulled to land. But why should these be called to leave their employment and their father, probably now aged? To this I answer, that to be obedient to, provide for, and comfort our parents, is the highest duty we owe or can discharge, except that to God. But, when God calls to the work of the ministry, father and mother and all must be left. Were we necessary to their comfort and support before? Then God, if he call us into another work or state will take care to supply to them our lack of service some other way; and, if this be not done, it is a proof we have mistaken our call. Again, were our parents necessary to us, and in leaving them for the sake of the Gospel, or in obedience to a Divine command, do we deprive ourselves of the comforts of life? No matter: we should prefer the honour of serving the Most High, even in poverty and humility, to all the comforts of a father's house. But what an honour was the vocation of James and John, to old Zebedee their father! His sons are called to be heralds of the God of heaven! Allowing him to have been a pious man, this must have given him unutterable delight.

Verse 23. Teaching in their synagogues] Synagogue, συναγωγη, from συν, together, and αγω, I bring, a public assembly of persons, or the place where such persons publicly assembled. Synagogues, among the

A. M. 4031. manner of sickness and all man-
A. D. 27. ner of disease among the peo-
An. Olymp. CCI. 3. ple.

24 And his fame went throughout all Syria: and they brought unto him all sick people that were taken

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3.

Jews, were not probably older than the return from the Babylonish captivity. They were erected not only in cities and towns, but in the country, and especially by rivers, that they might have water for the convenience of their frequent washings.

Not less than ten persons of respectability composed a synagogue; as the rabbins supposed that this number of persons, of independent property, and well skilled in the law, were necessary to conduct the affairs of the place, and keep up the Divine worship. See Light-foot. Therefore, where this number could not be found, no synagogue was built; but there might be many synagogues in one city or town, provided it were populous. Jerusalem is said to have contained 480. This need not be wondered at, when it is considered that every Jew was obliged to worship God in public, either in a synagogue or in the temple.

The chief things belonging to a synagogue were:

1st. The ark or chest, made after the mode of the ark of the covenant, containing the Pentateuch.

2dly. The pulpit and desk, in the middle of the synagogue, on which he stood who read or expounded the law.

3dly. The seats or pews for the men below, and the galleries for the women above.

4thly. The lamps to give light in the evening service, and at the frast of the dedication. And, 5thly. *Apartment*s for the utensils and alms-chests.

The synagogue was governed by a council or assembly, over whom was a president, called in the Gospels, the ruler of the synagogue. These are sometimes called chiefs of the Jews, the rulers, the priests or elders, the governors, the overscers, the fathers of the synagogue. Service was performed in them three times a day—morning, afternoon, and night. Synagogue, among the Jews, had often the same meaning as congregation among us, or place of judicature, see James ii. 2.

Preaching the Gospel of the kingdom] Or, proclaiming the glad tidings of the kingdom. See the preceding notes. Behold here the perfect pattern of an evangelical preacher: 1. He goes about seeking sinners on every side, that he may show them the way to heaven. 2. He proclaims the glad tidings of the kingdom, with a freedom worthy of the King whom he serves. 3. He makes his reputation and the confidence of the people subservient not to his own interest, but to the salvation of souls. 4. To his preaching he joins, as far as he has ability, all works of mercy, and temporal assistance to the bodies of men. 5. He takes care to inform men that diseases, and all kinds of temporal evils, are the effects of sin, and that their hatred to iniquity should increase in proportion to the evils they endure through it. 6. And that nothing but the power of God can save them from sin and its consequences.

For glad tidings, or Gospel, see chap. i. title. Proclaiming, see chap. iii. 1, and end; and for the meaning of kingdom, see chap. iii. 2.

All manner of sickness, and all manner of disease] There is a difference between νσος, translated here sickness, and μαλακία, translated disease. The first is thus defined: νσος, την χρονίαν κακοπαθειαν, a disease of some standing, a chronic disorder.

Infirmity, μαλακία, την προσωρινον ανωμαλιαν του σωματος, a temporary disorder of the body. Theophylact. This is a proper distinction, and is necessary to be observed.

Verse 24. Sick people] Τους, κακως εχοντας, those who felt ill—were afflicted with any species of malady.

And torments] βασανους, from βασανιζω, to examine by torture, such as cholies, gouts, and rheumatisms, which racked every joint.

Possessed with devils] Demoniacs. Persons possessed by evil spirits. This is certainly the plain obvious meaning of demoniac in the Gospels.

Many eminent men think that the sacred writers accommodated themselves to the unfounded prejudices of the common people, in attributing certain diseases to the influence of evil spirits, which were merely the effects of natural causes; but that this explanation can never comport with the accounts given of these persons shall be proved as the places occur.

Our common version, which renders the word, those possessed by devils, is not strictly correct; as the word devil, ου δολος, is not found in the plural in any part of the Sacred Writings, when speaking of evil spirits: for though there are multitudes of demons, Mark v. 9, yet it appears there is but one devil, who seems to be supreme, or head, over all the rest. Διοβολος signifies an accuser or slanderer, 1 Tim. iii. 11, 2 Tim. iii. 3; Tit. ii. 3. Perhaps Satan was called so, 1st. because he accused or slandered God in paradise, as averse from the increase of man's knowledge and happiness, Gen. iii. 5; John viii. 44; and 2dly. because he is the accuser of men, Rev. xii. 9, 10. See also Job i. 2. The word comes from δια, through, and βαλιν, to cast, or shoot, because of the influence of his evil suggestions; compared, Eph. vi. 16, to fiery darts; and thus it is nearly of the same meaning with ο περιπαων, he who pierces through. See on ver. 3.

Lunatic] Persons afflicted with epileptic or other disorders, which are always known to have a singular increase at the change and full of the moon. This undoubtedly proceeds from the superadded attractive influence of the sun and moon upon the earth's atmosphere, as, in the periods mentioned above, these two luminaries are both in conjunction; and their united attractive power being exerted on the earth at the same time, not only causes the flux and reflux of the ocean, but occasions a variety of important changes in the bodies of infirm persons, of animals in general, but more particularly in those who are more sensible of these variations. And is this any wonder, when it is well known, that a very slight alteration in the atmosphere causes the most uncomfortable sensations to a number of invalids? But sometimes even these

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL.3. with divers diseases, and torments, and those which were possessed with devils, and those which were lunatic, and those that had the palsy; and he healed them.

* Mark iii. 7; vii. 31; Luke v. 15.

diseases were caused by demons. See on chap. viii. 16, 34, and xvii. 15.

Palsy] Palsy is defined, a sudden loss of tone and vital power in a certain part of the human body. This may affect a limb, the whole side, the tongue, or the whole body. This disorder is in general incurable, except by the miraculous power of God, unless in its slighter stages.

He healed them.] Either with a word or a touch; and thus proved that all nature was under his control.

Verse 25. This verse is immediately connected with the fifth chapter, and should not be separated from it.

Great multitudes] This, even according to the Jews, was one proof of the days of the Messiah: for they acknowledged that in his time there should be a great famine of the word of God: and thus they understood Amos viii. 11. Behold, the days come—that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread—but of hearing the words of the Lord. And as the Messiah was to dispense this word, the bread of life, hence they believed that vast multitudes from all parts should be gathered together to him. See Schoettgenus on this place.

Decapolis] A small country, situated between Syria and Galilee of the nations. It was called Decapolis, Δεκαπολις, from δεκα, ten, and πολις, a city, because it contained only ten cities; the metropolis, and most ancient of which, was Damascus.

From beyond Jordan.] Or, from the side of Jordan. Probably this was the country which was occupied anciently by the two tribes of Reuben and Gad, and the half tribe of Manassah; for the country of Decapolis lay on both sides of the river Jordan. See Num. xxxii. 5, 33.

THE account of our Lord's temptation, as given by the evangelist, is acknowledged on all hands to be extremely difficult. Two modes of interpretation have been generally resorted to, in order to make the whole plain and intelligible: viz. the literal and allegorical. In all cases, where it can possibly apply, I prefer the first: the latter should never be used, unless obviously indicated in the text itself; or so imperiously necessary that no other mode of interpretation can possibly apply. In the preceding observations, I have taken up the subject in a literal point of view; and it is hoped that most of the difficulties in the relation have been removed, or obviated, by this plan. An ingenious correspondent has favoured me with some observations on the subject, which have much more than the merit of novelty to recommend them. I shall give an abstract of some of the most striking; and leave the whole to the reader's farther consideration.

25 * And there followed him great A. M. 4031 multitudes of people from Galilee, A. D. 27.
and from Decapolis, and from Jeru- An. Olymp.
salem, and from Judea, and from beyond CCL.3. — Jordan.

* Num. xxxii. 33; Luke vi. 17; Mark v. 20.

The thoughts in this communication proceed on this ground: "These temptations were addressed to Christ as a public person, and respected his conduct in the execution of his ministry; and are reported to his Church as a forcible and practical instruction, concerning the proper method of promoting the kingdom of God upon earth. They are warnings against those Satanic illusions, by which the servants of Christ are liable to be hindered in their great work, and even stopped in the prosecution of it.

"As our Lord had, at his baptism, been declared to be the Son of God, i. e. the promised Messiah, this was probably well known to Satan, who did not mean to insinuate any thing to the contrary, when he endeavoured to engage him to put forth an act of that power which he possessed as the Messiah. The mysterious union of the Divine with the human nature, in our Lord's state of humiliation, Satan might think possible to be broken; and therefore endeavoured, in the first temptation, Command these stones to be made bread, to induce our Lord to put forth a separate, independent act of power; which our Lord repelled, by showing his intimate union with the Divine will, which he was come to fulfil—Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. Thus showing, as he did on another occasion, that it was his meat and drink to do the will of his Father.

"2. The ground of the temptation was then changed; and the fulfilment of the Divine will, in the completion of a prophetic promise, was made the ostensible object of the next attack. Cast thyself down—for it is WRITTEN, He will give his angels charge concerning thee, and in their hands shall they bear thee up, &c. Thus our Lord repelled with—Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God—as Satan had designed to induce him to seek this public miraculous confirmation of God's peculiar care over him, as the promised Messiah; of his being which, according to the hypothesis above, Satan had no doubt. Moses, being appointed to a great and important work, needed miraculous signs to strengthen his faith: but the social humanity of our blessed Lord needed them not, nor did his wisdom judge that such a sign from heaven was essential to the instruction of the people.

"3. The last temptation was the most subtle and the most powerful—All these will I give unto thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me. To inherit all nations, had been repeatedly declared to be the birth-right of the Messiah. His right to a universal empire could not be controverted; nor could Satan presume to make the investiture. What, then, was his purpose? Satan had hitherto opposed, and that with considerable success, the kingdom of God upon earth; and what he appears to propose here, were, terms of peace, and an honourable retreat. The worship which he exacted was an act of homage, in return for his cession of that ascendancy which, through the sin of man, he had obtained in the world. Having long established his rule among men, it was not at first to be expected that he would resign it without a combat: but the purpose of this last temptation appears to be an offer to decline any farther contest; and, yet more, if his terms were accepted, apparently to engage his influence to promote the kingdom of the Messiah. And as the condition of this proposed alliance, he required, not Divine worship, but such an act of homage as implied amity and obligation; and if this construction be allowed, he may be supposed to have enforced the necessity of the measure, by every suggestion of the consequences of a refusal. The sufferings which would inevitably result from a provoked opposition, which would render the victory, though certain to Christ himself, dearly bought; added to which, the conflict he was prepared to carry on through succeeding ages, in which all his subtlety and powers should be employed to hinder the progress of Christ's cause in the earth, and that with a considerable degree of anticipated success. Here the devil seems to propose to make over to Christ the power and influence he possessed in this world, on condition that he would enter into terms of peace with him; and the inducement offered was, that thereby our Lord should escape those sufferings, both in his own person, and in that of his adherents, which a provoked contest would ensure. And we may suppose that a similar temptation lies hid in the desires excited even in some of the servants of Christ, who may feel themselves often induced to employ worldly influence and power for the promotion of his kingdom, even though, in so doing, an apparent communion of Christ and Belial is the result: for it will be found that neither worldly riches, nor power, can be employed in the service of Christ, till, like the spoils taken in war, Deut. xxxi. 21-23, they have passed through the fire and water, as, without a Divine purification, they are not fit to be employed in the service of God and his Church.

"Hence we may conclude, that the first temptation had for its professed object, 1st, our Lord's personal relief and comfort, through the inducement of performing a separate and independent act of power.—The second temptation professed to have in view his public acknowledgment by the people, as the MESSIAH: for, should they see him work such a miracle as throwing himself down from the pinnacle of the temple without receiving any hurt, they would be led instantly to acknowledge his Divine mission; and the evil of this temptation may be explained, as seeking to secure the success of his mission by other means than those which, as the Messiah, he had received from the Father. Compare John xiv. 31. The third temptation was a subtle attempt to induce Christ to acknowledge Satan as an ally, in the establishment of his kingdom." E. M. B.

The above is the substance of the ingenious theory of my correspondent, which may be considered as a third mode of interpretation, partaking equally of the allegoric and literal. I still, however, think, that the nearer we keep to the letter in all such difficult cases, the more tenable is our ground, especially where the subject itself does not obviously require the allegorical mode of interpretation. Among many things worthy of remark in the preceding theory, the following deserves most attention: That Satan is ever ready to tempt the governors and ministers of the Christian Church to suppose that worldly means, human policy, secular interest and influence, are all essentially necessary for the support and extension of that kingdom which is not of this world! Such persons can never long preserve hallowed hands: they bring the world into the Church; endeavour to sanctify the bad means they use, by the good end they aim at; and often, in the prosecution of their object, by means which are not of God's devising, are driven into straits and difficulties, and to extricate themselves, tell lies for God's sake. This human policy is from beneath—God will neither sanction nor bless it. It has been the bane of true religion in all ages of the world; and, in every country where the cause of Christianity has been established, such schemers and plotters in the Church of God are as dangerous to its interests as a plague is to the health of society. The governors and ministers of the Christian Church should keep themselves pure, and ever do God's work in his own way. If the slothful servant should be cast out of the vineyard, he that corrupts the good seed of the Divine field, or sows tares among the wheat, should be considered as an enemy to righteousness, and be expelled from the sacred pale as one who closes in with the temptation—"All these things (the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them) will I give unto THEE, if thou wilt fall down and worship ME." However necessary the Church may be to the state, and the state to the Church, as some people argue, yet the latter is never in so much danger as when the former smiles upon it.

CHAPTER V.

Christ begins his sermon on the mount, 1, 2. The beatitudes, 3-12. The disciples the salt of the earth, and light of the world, 13-16. Christ is not come to destroy, but confirm and fulfil, the Law and the Prophets, 17-19. Of the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, 20. Interpretation of the precepts relative to murder, anger, and injurious speaking, 21, 22. Of reconciliation, 23-26. Of impure act and propensities, and the necessity of mortification, 27-30. Of divorce, 31, 32. Of oaths and profane swearing, 33-37. Of bearing injuries and persecution, 38-41. Of borrowing and lending, 42. Of love and hatred, 43-46. Of civil respect, 47. Christ's disciples must resemble their heavenly Father, 48

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3.

AND seeing the multitudes, ^ahe went up into a mountain; and when he was set, his disciples came unto him:

2 And he opened his mouth, and taught them, saying,

^a Mark iii. 13, 20.—^b Luke vi. 20; see Psa. li. 17; Prov. xvi.
19; xxix. 23; Isa. lvii. 15; lxvi. 2.

NOTES ON CHAP. V.

Verse 1. And seeing the multitudes] Τους οχλους, these multitudes, viz. those mentioned in the preceding verse, which should make the first verse of this chapter.

He went up into a mountain] That he might have the greater advantage of speaking, so as to be heard by that great concourse of people which followed him. It is very probable that nothing more is meant here than a small hill or eminence. Had he been on a high mountain they could not have heard; and, had he been at a great distance, he would not have sat down. See the note on ver. 14.

And when he was set] The usual posture of public teachers among the Jews, and among many other people. Hence sitting was a synonymous term for teaching among the rabbins.

His disciples] The word μαθητης signifies literally a scholar. Those who originally followed Christ, considered him in the light of a Divine teacher; and conscious of their ignorance, and the importance of his teaching, they put themselves under his tuition, that they might be instructed in heavenly things. Having been taught the mysteries of the kingdom of God, they became closely attached to their Divine Master, imitating his life and manners; and recommending his salvation to all the circle of their acquaintance. This is still the characteristic of a genuine disciple of Christ.

Verse 3. Blessed are the poor in spirit, &c.] Or, happy, μακαριοι from μα or μη, not, and κηρ, fate, or death: intimating, that such persons were endued with immortality, and consequently were not liable to the caprices of fate. Homer, Iliad i, 339, calls the supreme gods, Θεων μακαρων, the ever happy and immortal gods, and opposes them to θνητων ανθρωπων, mortal men.

Τω δ' αυτω μαρτυροι εστων

Προς τε Θεων μακαρων, προς τε θνητων ανθρωπων.

"Be ye witnesses before the immortal gods, and before mortal men." From this definition we may learn, that the person whom Christ terms happy is one who is not under the influence of fate or chance, but is governed by an all-wise providence, having every step directed to the attainment of immortal glory, being transformed by the power into the likeness of the ever-blessed God. Though some of the persons, whose states are mentioned in these verses, cannot be said to be as yet blessed or happy, in being made partakers of the Divine nature; yet they are termed happy by our Lord, because they are on the straight way to this blessedness.

Taken in this light the meaning is similar to that expressed by the poet when describing a happy man.

3 ^b Blessed are the poor in spirit: ^afor theirs is the kingdom of heaven. A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3.

4 ^c Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted.

^c Isa. lxi. 2, 3; Luke vi. 21; John xvi. 20; 2 Cor. i. 7; Rev
xxi. 4.

FELIX, qui potuit rerum cognoscere causas:

Atque metus omnes et inexorabile fatum

Subjecit pedibus; strepitumque Acherontis arari!

Virg. Geor. ii. v. 490.

Which may be thus paraphrased:—

"Happy is he who gains the knowledge of the first cause of all things; who can trample on every fear, and the doctrine of inexorable fate; and who is not terrified by death, nor by the threatened torments of the invisible world!"

Poor in spirit] One who is deeply sensible of his spiritual poverty and wretchedness. Πτωχος, a poor man, comes from πτωσσω, to tremble, or shrink with fear. Being destitute of the true riches, he is tremblingly alive to the necessities of his soul, shrinking with fear lest he should perish without the salvation of God. Such Christ pronounces happy, because there is but a step between them and that kingdom which is here promised. Some contend, that μακαριοι should be referred to πνευματι, and the verse translated thus: Happy, or blessed in spirit are the poor. But our Lord seems to have the humiliation of the spirit particularly in view.

Kingdom of heaven.] Or, των ουρανων, of the heavens. A participation of all the blessings of the new covenant here, and the blessings of glory above. See this phrase explained, chap. iii. 2. Blessed are the poor! this is God's word; but who believes it? Do we not say, Yea, rather, Blessed is the rich?

The Jewish rabbins have many good sayings relative to that poverty and humility of spirit which Christ recommends in this verse. In the treatise called Bamidbar Rabbi, s. 20, we have these words. There were three (evils) in Balaam: the evil eye, (envy,) the towering spirit, (pride,) and the extensive mind (avarice.)

Tanchum, fol. 84. The law does not abide with those who have the extensive mind, (avarice,) but with him only who has a contrite heart.

Rabbi Chanina said, "Why are the words of the law compared to water? Because as waters flow from heights, and settle in low places, so the words of the law rest only with him who is of an humble heart." See Schoettgen.

Verse 4. Blessed are they that mourn] That is, those who, feeling their spiritual poverty, mourn after God, lamenting the iniquity that separated them from the fountain of blessedness. Every one flies from sorrow, and seeks after joy, and yet true joy must necessarily be the fruit of sorrow. The whole need not (do not feel the need of) the physician, but they that are sick do; i. e. they who are sensible of their disease. Only such persons as are deeply convinced of the sinfulness of sin, feel the plague of their own heart,

A. M. 4031. 5 ^d Blessed are the meek :
A. D. 27. for ^e they shall inherit the
An. Olymp. CCI. 3. earth.

6 Blessed are they which do hunger and ^d Psa. xxxvii. 11.—^e See Rom. iv. 13.—^f Isa. lv. 1 ;

lv. 13.

and turn with disgust from all worldly consolations, because of their insufficiency to render them happy, have God's promise of solid comfort. They shall be comforted, says Christ, παρακληθησονται, from παρα, near, and καλεω, I call. He will call them to himself, and speak the words of pardon, peace, and life eternal, to their hearts. See this notion of the word expressed fully by our Lord, chap. xi. 28, COME UNTO ME all ye who are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest.

Verse 5. Blessed are the meek] Happy, or πραεις, from παος, easy, those who are of a quiet, gentle spirit, in opposition to the proud and supercilious Scribes and Pharisees, and their disciples. We have a compound word in English, which once fully expressed the meaning of the original, viz. gentleman; but it has now almost wholly lost its original signification. Our word meek comes from the old Anglo-saxon meca, or mecca; a companion or equal, because he who is of a meek or gentle spirit, is ever ready to associate with the meanest of those who fear God, feeling himself superior to none; and well knowing that he has nothing of spiritual or temporal good but what he has received from the mere bounty of God, having never deserved any favour from his hand.

For they shall inherit the earth.] Or, την γην, the land. Under this expression, which was commonly used by the prophets to signify the land of Canaan, in which all temporal good abounded, Judg. xviii. 9, 10, Jesus Christ points out that abundance of spiritual good, which was provided for men in the Gospel. Besides, Canaan was a type of the kingdom of God; and who is so likely to inherit glory as the man in whom the meekness and gentleness of Jesus dwell! In some good MSS. and several ancient versions, the fourth and fifth verses are transposed: see the authorities in the various readings in Professor Griesbach's edition. The present arrangement certainly is most natural: 1. Poverty, to which the promise of the kingdom is made. 2. Mourning or distress, on account of this impoverished state, to which consolation is promised. And 3. Meekness established in the heart by the consolations received.

Verse 6. They which do hunger and thirst] As the body has its natural appetites of hunger and thirst for the food and drink suited to its nourishment, so has the soul. No being is indestructible or unfailing in its nature but God; no being is independent but him: as the body depends for its nourishment, health, and strength upon the earth, so does the soul upon heaven. Heavenly things cannot support the body; they are not suited to its nature: earthly things cannot support the soul, for the same reason. When the uneasy sensation termed hunger takes place in the stomach, we know we must get food or perish. When the soul is awakened to a sense of its wants, and begins to hunger thirst after righteousness: ^f for they shall be filled.

7 Blessed are the merciful: ^g for they shall obtain mercy.

^g Psa. xli. 1; chap. vi. 14; Mark xi. 25; 2 Tim. i. 16; Heb. vi. 10; James ii. 13.

and thirst after righteousness or holiness, which is its proper food, we know that it must be purified by the Holy Spirit, and be made a partaker of that living bread, John viii. 48, or perish everlastingly. Now, as God never inspires a prayer but with a design to answer it, he who hungers and thirsts after the full salvation of God, may depend on being speedily and effectually blessed or satisfied, well-fed, as the word χορτασθησονται implies. Strong and intense desire after any object has been, both by poets and orators, represented metaphorically by hunger and thirst. See the well-known words of Virgil, Æneid iii. 55.

—————Quid non mortalia pectora cogis,
Auri sacra FAMES!

"O cursed hunger after gold! what canst thou not influence the hearts of men to perpetrate?" How frequently do we find, inexplebilis honorum FAMES—sitiens virtutis—fama sitis, the insatiable hunger after honour, a thirst for virtue, thirst after fame, and such like! Righteousness here is taken for all the blessings of the new covenant—all the graces of the Messiah's kingdom—a full restoration to the image of God!

Verse 7. The merciful] The word mercy, among the Jews, signified two things: the pardon of injuries, and almsgiving. Our Lord undoubtedly takes it in its fullest latitude here. To know the nature of mercy, we have only to consult the grammatical meaning of the Latin word misericordia, from which ours is derived. It is composed of two words: miserrans, pitying, and cor, the heart; or miseria cordis, pain of heart. Mercy supposes two things: 1. A distressed object: and, 2. A disposition of the heart, through which it is affected at the sight of such an object. This virtue, therefore, is no other than a lively emotion of the heart, which is excited by the discovery of any creature's misery; and such an emotion as manifests itself outwardly, by effects suited to its nature. The merciful man is here termed by our Lord ελεημων, from ελεος, which is generally derived from the Hebrew חָיַל chil, to be in pain, as a woman in travail: or from יָלַל yalal, to cry, or lament grievously; because a merciful man enters into the miseries of his neighbour, feels for and mourns with him.

They shall obtain mercy.] Mercy is not purchased but at the price of mercy itself; and even this price is a gift of the mercy of God. What mercy can those vindictive persons expect, who forgive nothing, and are always ready to improve every advantage they have of avenging themselves? Whatever mercy a man shows to another, God will take care to show the same to him. The following elegant and nervous saying of one of our best poets is worthy of the reader's most serious attention:—

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

8 ^h Blessed are the pure in heart:
for they shall see God.

9 Blessed are the peace-makers:
for they shall be called the children of God.

^h Psa. xv. 2; xxiv. 4; Heb. xii. 11.—1 Cor. xiii. 12;

"The quality of mercy is not strained;
It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven
Upon the place beneath. It is twice blessed;
It blesseth him who gives, and him who takes:
'Tis mightiest in the mightiest: it becomes
The throned monarch better than his crown.
It is an attribute of God himself;
And earthly power doth then show likest God's,
When mercy seasons justice.—

Though justice be thy plea, consider this,
That, in the course of justice, none of us
Should see salvation. We do pray for mercy;
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The deeds of mercy.—

Why, all the souls that are, were forfeit once:
And he who might the 'vantage best have took
Found out the remedy. How would you be,
If He who is the top of judgment should
But judge you as you are? O! think on that;
And mercy then will breathe within your lips,
Like man, new made.

How shalt thou hope for mercy, rend'ring none?"

In the tract Shabbath, fol. 151, there is a saying very like this of our Lord. "He who shows mercy to men, God will show mercy to him: but to him who shows no mercy to man, God will show no mercy."

Verse 8. Pure in heart] In opposition to the Pharisees, who affected outward purity, while their hearts were full of corruption and defilement. A principal part of the Jewish religion consisted in outward washings and cleansings: on this ground they expected to see God, to enjoy eternal glory: but Christ here shows that a purification of the heart, from all vile affections and desires, is essentially requisite in order to enter into the kingdom of God. He whose soul is not delivered from all sin, through the blood of the covenant, can have no Scriptural hope of ever being with God. There is a remarkable illustration of this passage, quoted by Mr. Wakefield from Origen, Contra Cels. lib. vi. "God has no body, and therefore is invisible: but men of contemplation can discern him with the heart and understanding. But a defiled heart cannot see God: but he must be pure who wishes to enjoy a proper view of a pure being."

Shall see God.] This is a Hebraism, which signifies, possess God, enjoy his felicity: as seeing a thing, was used among the Hebrews for possessing it. See Psal. xvi. 10. Thou wilt not suffer thy Holy One to see corruption, i. e. he shall not be corrupted. So John iii. 3. Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God, i. e. he cannot enjoy it. So John iii. 16. He that believeth not the Son, shall not see life, i. e. shall not be put in possession of eternal glory. The Hindoo idolaters vainly boast of what the ge-

10 ^k Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake:
for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

1 John iii. 2, 3.—2 Cor. iv. 17; 2 Tim. ii. 12; 1 Pet. iii. 14.

nuine followers of Christ actually enjoy—having the Divine favour witnessed to their souls by the Holy Spirit. The Hindoos pretend that some of their sages have been favoured with a sight of their guardian deity.—See WARD's Customs.

Probably our Lord alludes to the advantages those had, who were legally pure, of entering into the sanctuary, into the presence of God, while those who had contracted any legal defilement were excluded from it. This also was obviously typical.

Verse 9. The peace-makers] Ειρηνη, peace, is compounded of εἰρην (eir) iv, connecting into one: for as war distracts and divides nations, families, and individuals, from each other, inducing them to pursue different objects and different interests, so PEACE restores them to a state of unity, giving them one object, and one interest. A peace-maker is a man who, being endowed with a generous public spirit, labours for the public good, and feels his own interest promoted in promoting that of others: therefore, instead of fanning the fire of strife, he uses his influence and wisdom to reconcile the contending parties, adjust their differences, and restore them to a state of unity. As all men are represented to be in a state of hostility to God and each other, the Gospel is called the Gospel of peace, because it tends to reconcile men to God and to each other. Hence our Lord here terms peace-makers, the children of God: for as he is the Father of peace, those who promote it are reputed his children. But whose children are they who foment divisions in the Church, the state, or among families? Surely they are not of that God, who is the Father of peace, and lover of concord; of that CHRIST, who is the sacrifice and mediator of it; of that SPRIT, who is the nourisher and bond of peace; nor of that CHURCH of the Most High, which is the kingdom and family of peace.

St. Clement, Strom. lib. iv. s. 6, in fin. says, that "Some who transpose the Gospels add this verse. Happy they who are persecuted by justice, for they shall be perfect: happy they who are persecuted on my account, for they shall have a place where they shall not be persecuted."

Verse 10. They which are persecuted] Δι' ὧν· νοι, they who are hard pressed upon, and pursued with repeated acts of enmity. Parkhurst. They or happy who suffer, seems a strange saying: and that the righteous should suffer, merely because they are such, seems as strange. But such is the enmity of the human heart to every thing of God and goodness, that all those who live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution in one form or other. As the religion of Christ gives no quarter to vice, so the vicious will give no quarter to this religion, or to its professors.

For theirs is the kingdom of heaven.] That spiritual

A. M. 4031. 11 ¹Blessed are ye, when men
A. D. 27. shall revile you, and persecute you,
An. Olymp. and shall say all manner of ²evil
CCL 3. against you ³falsely, for my sake.

12 ⁴Rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven: for ⁵so persecuted they the prophets which were before you.

13 ¶ Ye are the salt of the earth: ⁶but if kingdom, explained chap. iii. 2, and that kingdom of glory which is its counterpart and consequence.

¹Luke vi. 22.—²1 Pet. iv. 14.—³Gr. lying.—⁴Luke vi. 23; Acts v. 41; Rom. v. 3; James i. 2; 1 Pet. iv. 13.—⁵Neh. ix. 26; 2 Chron. xxxvi. 16; chap. xxiii. 34, 37; Acts vii. 52; 1 Thess. ii.

Verse 11. When men shall revile you, and persecute] The persecution mentioned in the preceding verse comprehends all outward acts of violence—all that the hand can do. This comprehends all calumny, slander, &c., all that the tongue can effect. But as διωκειν, which we render to persecute, is a forensic term, and signifies legal persecutions and public accusations, which, though totally unsubstantiated, were the means of destroying multitudes of the primitive Christians, our Lord probably refers to such. No Protestant can think, without horror, of the great numbers burnt alive in this country, on such accusations, under the popish reign of her who is emphatically called Bloody Queen Mary.

Verse 12. Rejoice] In the testimony of a good conscience; for, without this, suffering has nothing but misery in it.

Be exceeding glad] Ἀγαλλιασθε, leap for joy. There are several cases on record, where this was literally done by the martyrs, in Queen Mary's days.

Great is your reward in heaven] In the Talmudical tract Pirkey Aboth, are these words: "Rabbi Tarpon said, The day is short: the work is great: the labourers are slow: the REWARD IS GREAT: and the father of the family is urgent."

The followers of Christ are encouraged to suffer joyfully on two considerations. 1. They are thereby conformed to the prophets who went before. 2. Their reward in heaven is a great one. God gives the grace to suffer, and then crowns that grace with glory; hence it is plain, the reward is not of debt, but of grace: Rom. vi. 23.

Verse 13. Ye are the salt of the earth] Our Lord shows here what the preachers of the Gospel, and what all who profess to follow him, should be; the salt of the earth, to preserve the world from putrefaction and destruction. See the note on Lev. ii. 13.

But if the salt have lost his savour] That this is possible in the land of Judea, we have proof from Mr. Maundrell, who, describing the Valley of Salt, speaks thus: "Along, on one side of the valley, toward Gibul, there is a small precipice about two men's lengths, occasioned by the continual taking away of the salt; and, in this, you may see how the veins of it lie. I broke a piece of it, of which that part that was exposed to the rain, sun, and air, though it had the sparks and particles of salt, YET IT HAD PERFECTLY LOST ITS the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted? it is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out, and to be trodden under foot of men.

14 ⁷Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid.

15 Neither do men ⁸light a candle, and put it under ⁹a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house.

15.—⁷Mark ix. 50; Luke xiv. 34, 35.—⁸Prov. iv. 18; Phil. ii. 15.—⁹Mark iv. 21; Luke viii. 16; xi. 33.—¹⁰The word in the original signifieth a measure containing about a pint less than a peck.

SAVOUR: the inner part, which was connected to the rock, retained its savour, as I found by proof." See his Trav., 5th edit., last page. A preacher, or private Christian, who has lost the life of Christ, and the witness of his Spirit, out of his soul, may be likened to this salt. He may have the sparks and glittering particles of true wisdom, but without its unction or comfort. Only that which is connected with the rock, the soul that is in union with Christ Jesus by the Holy Spirit, can preserve its savour, and be instrumental of good to others.

To be trodden under foot] There was a species of salt in Judea, which was generated at the lake Asphaltites, and hence called bituminous salt, easily rendered vapid, and of no other use but to be spread in a part of the temple, to prevent slipping in wet weather. This is probably what our Lord alludes to in this place. The existence of such a salt, and its application to such a use, Schoettgenius has largely proved in his Hora Hebraica, vol. i. p. 18, &c.

Verse 14. Ye are the light of the world] That is, the instruments which God chooses to make use of to illuminate the minds of men; as he uses the sun (to which probably he pointed) to enlighten the world. Light of the world, נר עולם ner ôlam, was a title applied to the most eminent rabbins. Christ transfers the title from these, and gives it to his own disciples, who, by the doctrines that he taught them, were to be the means of diffusing the light of life throughout the universe.

A city that is set on a hill] This place may receive light from the following passage in Maundrell's Travels. "A few points toward the north (of Tabor) appears that which they call the Mount of Beatitudes, a small rising, from which our blessed Saviour delivered his sermon in the fifth, sixth, and seventh chapters of Matthew. (See the note on ver. 5.) Not far from this little hill is the city Saphet, supposed to be the ancient Bethulia. It stands upon a very eminent and conspicuous mountain, and is SEEN FAR AND NEAR. May we not suppose that Christ alludes to this city, in these words of his, A city set on a hill cannot be hid?" p. 115. Quernell remarks here: "The Christian life is something very high and sublime, to which we cannot arrive without pains: while it withdraws us from the earth, and carries us nearer heaven, it places us in view, and as a mark, to the malice of carnal men."

Verse 15. Neither do men light a candle and put it under a bushel] A bushel μωδιος;—a measure both

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3. 16 Let your light so shine before men, ^uthat they may see your good works, and ^vglorify your Father which is in heaven.

17 ¶ ^wThink not that I am come to destroy

^u 1 Pet. ii. 12.—^v John xv. 8; 1 Cor. xiv. 25.

among the Greeks and Romans, containing a little more than a peck English. From some ancient writers we learn, that only those who had bad designs hid a candle under a bushel; that, in the dead of the night, when all were asleep, they might rise up, and have light at hand to help them to effect their horrid purposes of murder, &c. See Wetstein, Kypke, Wolf, &c.

Verse 16. Let your light so shine] Or more literally, Thus let your light shine, Οὕτω λαμψατω το φως. As the sun is lighted up in the firmament of heaven to diffuse its light and heat freely to every inhabitant of the earth; and as the lamp is not set under the bushel, but placed upon the lamp-stand that it may give light to all in the house; thus let every follower of Christ, and especially every preacher of the Gospel, diffuse the light of heavenly knowledge, and the warmth of Divine love through the whole circle of their acquaintance.

That they may see your good works] It is not sufficient to have light—we must walk in the light, and by the light. Our whole conduct should be a perpetual comment on the doctrine we have received, and a constant exemplification of its power and truth.

And glorify your Father] The following curious saying is found in Bammidbar Rabba, s. 15. “The Israelites said to the holy blessed God, Thou commandest us to light lamps to thee; and yet thou art the Light of the world, and with thee the light dwelleth. The holy blessed God answered, I do not command this because I need light; but that you may reflect light upon me, as I have illuminated you:—that the people may say, Behold, how the Israelites illustrate him, who illuminates them in the sight of the whole earth.” See more in Schoettgen. Real Christians are the children of God—they are partakers of his holy and happy nature: they should ever be concerned for their Father’s honour, and endeavour so to recommend him, and his salvation, that others may be prevailed on to come to the light, and walk in it. Then God is said to be glorified, when the glorious power of his grace is manifested in the salvation of men.

Verse 17. Think not that I am come to destroy the law] Do not imagine that I am come to violate the law καταλυσαι, from κατα, and λυω, I loose, violate, or dissolve—I am not come to make the law of none effect—to dissolve the connection which subsists between its several parts, or the obligation men are under to have their lives regulated by its moral precepts; nor am I come to dissolve the connecting reference it has to the good things promised. But I am come, πληρωσαι, to complete—to perfect its connection and reference, to accomplish every thing shadowed forth in the Mosaic ritual, to fill up its great design; and to give grace to all my followers, πληρωσαι, to fill up, or complete, every moral duty. In a word, Christ completed the the law, or the prophets; I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

18 For, verily I say unto you, ^xTill heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no law: 1st. In itself, it was only the shadow, the typical representation, of good things to come; and he added to it that which was necessary to make it perfect, HIS OWN SACRIFICE, without which it could neither satisfy God, nor sanctify men. 2dly. He completed it in himself, by submitting to its types with an exact obedience, and verifying them by his death upon the cross. 3dly. He completes this law, and the sayings of his prophets, in his members, by giving them grace to love the Lord with all their heart, soul, mind, and strength, and their neighbour as themselves; for this is all the law and the prophets.

^w Rom. iii. 31; x. 4; Gal. iii. 21.—^x Luke xvi. 17.

It is worthy of observation, that the word גמל gamar, among the rabbins, signifies not only to fulfil, but also to teach; and, consequently, we may infer that our Lord intimated, that the law and the prophets were still to be taught or inculcated by him and his disciples; and this he and they have done in the most pointed manner. See the Gospels and epistles; and see especially this sermon on the mount, the Epistle of James, and the Epistle to the Hebrews. And this meaning of the word gives the clear sense of the apostle’s words, Colos. i. 25. Whereof I am made a minister, πληρωσαι τον λογον του Θεου, to fulfil the word of God, i. e. to teach the doctrine of God.

Verse 18. For verily I say unto you, Till heaven] In the very commencement of his ministry, Jesus Christ teaches the instability of all visible things. “The heaven which you see, and which is so glorious, and the earth which you inhabit and love, shall pass away; for the things which are seen are temporal, προσωκαιρα, are for a time; but the things which are not seen are eternal αιωνια, ever-during,” 2 Cor. iv. 18. And the word of the Lord endureth for ever.

One jot or one tittle] One yod, (י,) the smallest letter in the Hebrew alphabet. One tittle or point, קטפא, either meaning those points which serve for vowels in this language, if they then existed; or the seraphs, or points of certain letters, such as ר resh, or ד daleth, ה he, or ח cheth (as the change of any of these into the other would make a most essential alteration in the sense, or, as the rabbins say, destroy the world.) Or our Lord may refer to the little ornaments which certain letters assume on their tops, which cause them to appear like small branches. The following letters only can assume coronal apices, י tsaddi—ג gimel—ז zain—נ nun—ט teth—ע ayin—ש shin. These, with the coronal apices, often appear in MSS.

That this saying, one jot or one tittle, is a proverbial mode of expression among the Jews, and that it expressed the meaning given to it above, is amply proved by the extracts in Lightfoot and Schoettgen. The reader will not be displeased to find a few of them here, if he can bear with the allegorical and strongly figurative language of the rabbins.

A. M. 4031. wise pass from the law, till all be
A. D. 27. fulfilled.
An. Olymp. CCI. 3.

19 ^γ Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall ^γ James ii. 10.—^z Rom. ix. 31; x. 3.

"The book of Deuteronomy came and prostrated itself before the Lord, and said: 'O Lord of the world, thou hast written in me thy law; but now, a Testament defective in some parts is defective in all. Behold, Solomon endeavours to root the letter ^γ yod out of me.' (In this text, Dent. xvii. 5. לא ירבה נשים lo yirbeh, nashim, he shall not multiply wives.) The holy blessed God answered, 'Solomon and a thousand such as he shall perish, but the least word shall not perish out of thee.'"

In Shir Hashirim Rabba, are these words: "Should all the inhabitants of the earth gather together, in order to whiten one feather of a crow, they could not succeed: so, if all the inhabitants of the earth should unite to abolish one ^γ yod, which is the smallest letter in the whole law, they should not be able to effect it."

In Vayikra Rabba, s. 19, it is said: "Should any person in the words of Deut. vi. 4, Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is אחד achad, one Lord, change the ^ד daleth into a ^ר resh, he would ruin the world." [Because, in that case, the word אחר achar, would signify a strange or false God.]

"Should any one, in the words of Exod. xxxiv. 14, Thou shalt worship no OTHER, אחד achar, God, change ^ר resh into ^ד daleth, he would ruin the world." [Because the command would then run, Thou shalt not worship the ONLY or true God.]

"Should any one in the words of Levit. xxii. 32, Neither shall ye PROFANE תחלל techalelu, my holy name, change ^ח cheth into ^ה he, he would ruin the world." [Because the sense of the commandment would then be, Neither shall ye PRAISE my holy name.]

"Should any one, in the words of Psa. cl. 6, Let every thing that hath breath PRAISE, תהלל tehalal, the Lord, change ^ה hé into ^ח cheth, he would ruin the world." [Because the command would then run, Let every thing that hath breath PROFANE the Lord.]

"Should any one, in the words of Jer. v. 10, They lied AGAINST the Lord, ביהוה beihovah, change ^ב beth into ^כ eaph, he would ruin the world." [For then the words would run, They lied LIKE the Lord.]

"Should any one, in the words of Hosea v. 7, They have dealt treacherously, ביהוה beihovah, AGAINST the Lord, change ^ב beth into ^כ eaph, he would ruin the world." [For then the words would run, They have dealt treacherously LIKE the Lord.]

"Should any one, in the words of 1 Sam. ii. 2, There is none holy as the Lord, change ^כ eaph into ^ב beth, he would ruin the world." [For then the words would mean, There is no holiness in the Lord.]

These examples fully prove that the μικρα κεραια of our Lord, refers to the apices, points, or corners, that distinguish ^ב beth from ^כ eaph; ^ח cheth from ^ה hé; be called great in the kingdom of heaven. A. M. 4031. A. D. 27. An. Olymp. CCI. 3.

20 For I say unto you, That except your righteousness shall exceed ^z the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven.

21 ¶ Ye have heard that it was said ^a by

^a Or, to them.

and ^ר resh from ^ד daleth. For the reader will at once perceive, how easily a ^כ eaph may be turned into a ^ב beth; a ^ה hé into a ^ח cheth; and a ^ר resh into a ^ד daleth: and he will also see of what infinite consequence it is to write and print such letters correctly.

[Till all be fulfilled.] Or, accomplished. Though all earth and hell should join together to hinder the accomplishment of the great designs of the Most High, yet it shall all be in vain—even the sense of a single letter shall not be lost. The words of God, which point out his designs, are as unchangeable as his nature itself. Every sinner, who perseveres in his iniquity, shall surely be punished with separation from God and the glory of his power; and every soul that turns to God, through Christ, shall as surely be saved, as that Jesus himself hath died.

Verse 19. Whosoever—shall break one of these least commandments] The Pharisees were remarkable for making a distinction between weightier and lighter matters in the law, and between what has been called, in a corrupt part of the Christian Church, mortal and venial sins. See on chap. xxii. 36.

Whosoever shall break. What an awful consideration is this! He who, by his mode of acting, speaking, or explaining the words of God, sets the holy precept aside, or explains away its force and meaning, shall be called least—shall have no place in the kingdom of Christ here, nor in the kingdom of glory above. That this is the meaning of these words is evident enough from the following verse.

Verse 20. Except your righteousness shall exceed] περισσεύσῃ, Unless your righteousness abound more— unless it take in, not only the letter, but the spirit and design of the moral and ritual precept; the one directing you how to walk so as to please God; the other pointing out Christ, the great Atonement, through and by which a sinner is enabled to do so—more than that of the scribes and Pharisees, who only attend to the letter of the law, and had indeed made even that of no effect by their traditions—ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven. This fully explains the meaning of the preceding verse. The old English word is πνευματικῆς, right-wisdom, i. e. complete, thorough, excellent wisdom. For a full explanation of this verse, see Luke xviii. 10, &c.

Verse 21. Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time] τοῖς ἀρχαίοις, to or by the ancients. By the ancients, we may understand those who lived before the law, and those who lived under it: for murder was, in the most solemn manner, forbidden before as well as under, the law, Gen. ix. 5, 6.

But it is very likely that our Lord refers here merely to traditions and glosses relative to the ancients

A. M. 4031. them of old time, ^bThou shalt not
A. D. 27. kill; and whosoever shall kill, shall
An. Olymp. be in danger of the judgment:
CCL. 3.

22 But I say unto you, That ^cwhosoever

^b Exod. xx. 13; Deut. v. 17.—^c 1 John iii. 15.

Mosaic ordinance; and such as, by their operation, rendered the primitive command of little or no effect. Murder from the beginning has been punished with death; and it is, probably, the only crime that should be punished with death. There is much reason to doubt, whether the punishment of death, inflicted for any other crime, is not in itself murder, whatever the authority may be that has instituted it. GOD, and the greatest legislators that have ever been in the universe, are of the same opinion. See Montesquieu, Blackstone, and the Marquis Beccaria, and the arguments and testimonies lately produced by Sir Samuel Romilly, in his motion for the amendment of the criminal laws of this kingdom. It is very remarkable, that the criminal code published by Joseph II., late emperor of Germany, though it consists of seventy-one capital crimes, has not death attached to any of them. Even murder, with an intention to rob, is punished only with "imprisonment for thirty years, to lie on the floor, to have no nourishment but bread and water, to be closely chained, and to be publicly whipped once a year, with less than one hundred lashes." See Colquhoun on the Police of the City of London, p. 272.

Verse 22. Whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause] ὁ ὀργιζόμενος—εἰς, who is vainly incensed. "This translation is literal; and the very objectionable phrase, without a cause, is left out, εἰς being more properly translated by that above." What our Lord seems here to prohibit, is not merely that miserable facility which some have of being angry at every trifle, continually taking offence against their best friends; but that anger which leads a man to commit outrages against another, thereby subjecting himself to that punishment which was to be inflicted on those who break the peace. Εἰς, vainly, or, as in the common translation, without a cause, is wanting in the famous Vatican MS. and two others, the Ethiopic, latter Arabic, Saxon, Vulgate, two copies of the old Itala, J. Martyr, Ptolomeus, Origen, Tertullian, and by all the ancient copies quoted by St. Jerome. It was probably a marginal gloss originally, which in process of time crept into the text.

Shall be in danger of the judgment] ενοχος εἶναι, shall be liable to the judgment. That is, to have the matter brought before a senate, composed of twenty-three magistrates, whose business it was to judge in cases of murder and other capital crimes. It punished criminals by strangling or beheading; but Dr. Lightfoot supposes the judgment of God to be intended. See at the end of this chapter.

Raca] רַקָּה from the Hebrew רַק rak, to be empty. It signifies a rain, empty, worthless fellow, shallow brains, a term of great contempt. Such expressions were punished among the *Gentoo*s by a heavy fine. See all the cases, Code of Gentoo Laws, chap. xv. sec. 2.

The council] Συνεδριον, the famous council, known is angry with his brother without A. M. 4031 a cause, shall be in danger of the A. D. 27.

judgment: and whosoever shall say An. Olymp.
to his brother, ^d*Raca*, ^eshall be in danger of CCL. 3.

^d That is, a rain fellow; 2 Sam. vi. 20.—^e James ii. 20.

among the Jews by the name of Sanhedrin. It was composed of seventy-two elders, six chosen out of each tribe. This grand Sanhedrin not only received appeals from the inferior Sanhedrins, or court of twenty-three mentioned above; but could alone take cognizance, in the first instance, of the highest crimes, and alone inflict the punishment of stoning.

Thou fool] Moreh, probably from מרה marah, to rebel, a rebel against God, apostate from all good. This term implied, among the Jews, the highest enormity, and most aggravated guilt. Among the *Gentoo*s, such an expression was punished by cutting out the tongue, and thrusting a hot iron, of ten fingers' breadth, into the mouth of the person who used it. Code of Gentoo Laws, chap. xv. sec. 2. p. 212.

Shall be in danger of hell fire.] ενοχος εἶναι εἰς τὴν γέενναν τοῦ πυρός, shall be liable to the hell of fire. Our Lord here alludes to the valley of the son of Hinnom, גִּי הִינוֹם Ghi hinom. This place was near Jerusalem, and had been formerly used for those abominable sacrifices, in which the idolatrous Jews had caused their children to pass through the fire to Molech. A particular place in this valley was called Tophet, from תפת tophet, the fire stove, in which some supposed they burnt their children alive to the above idol. See 2 Kings xxiii. 10; 2 Chron. xxviii. 3; Jer. vii. 31. 32. From the circumstance of this valley having been the scene of those infernal sacrifices, the Jews, in our Saviour's time, used the word for hell, the place of the damned. See the word applied in this sense by the Targum, on Ruth ii. 12; Psa. cxl. 12; Gen. iii. 21; xv. 17. It is very probable that our Lord means no more here than this: if a man charge another with apostasy from the Jewish religion, or rebellion against God, and cannot prove his charge, then he is exposed to that punishment (burning alive) which the other must have suffered, if the charge had been substantiated. There are three kinds of offences here, which exceed each other in their degrees of guilt. 1st. Anger against a man, accompanied with some injurious act. 2dly. Contempt, expressed by the opprobrious epithet raca, or shallow brains. 3dly. Hatred and mortal enmity, expressed by the term moreh, or apostate, where such apostasy could not be proved. Now, proportioned to these three offences were three different degrees of punishment, each exceeding the other in its severity, as the offences exceeded each other in their different degrees of guilt. 1st. The judgment, the council of twenty-three, which could inflict the punishment of strangling. 2dly. The Sanhedrin, or great council, which could inflict the punishment of stoning. And 3dly. The being burnt alive in the valley of the son of Hinnom. This appears to be the meaning of our Lord.

Now, if the above offences were to be so severely punished, which did not immediately affect the life of another, how much sorer must the punishment of mu-

A. M. 4031. the council: but whosoever shall
A. D. 27. say, Thou fool, shall be in danger
An. Olymp. of hell fire.
CCL. 3.

23 Therefore ^f if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath aught against thee;

24 ^g Leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift.

^f Chap. viii. 4; xxiii. 19.—^g See Job xlii. 8; chap. xviii. 19; 1 Tim. ii. 8; 1 Pet. iii. 7.

der be!—ver. 21. And as there could not be a greater punishment inflicted than death, in the above terrific forms, and this was to be inflicted for minor crimes; then the punishment of murder must not only have death here, but a hell of fire in the eternal world, attached to it. It seems that these different degrees of guilt, and the punishment attached to each, had not been properly distinguished among the Jews. Our Lord here calls their attention back to them, and gives them to understand, that in the coming world there are different degrees of punishment prepared for different degrees of vice: and that not only the outward act of iniquity should be judged and punished by the Lord, but that injurious words, and evil passions, should all meet their just recompense and reward. Murder is the most punishable of all crimes, according to the written law, in respect both of our neighbours and civil society. But he who sees the heart, and judges it by the eternal law, punishes as much a word or a desire, if the hatred whence they proceed be complete and perfected. Dr. Lightfoot has some curious observations on this passage in the preface to his Harmony of the Evangelists. See his works, vol. ii., and the conclusion of this chapter.

Verse 23. Therefore if thou bring thy gift] Evil must be nipped in the bud. An unkind thought of another may be the foundation of that which leads to actual murder. A Christian, properly speaking, cannot be an enemy to any man; nor is he to consider any man his enemy, without the fullest evidence: for surmises to the prejudice of another can never rest in the bosom of him who has the love of God in his heart, for to him all men are brethren. He sees all men as children of God, and members of Christ, or at least capable of becoming such. If a tender forgiving spirit was required, even in a Jew, when he approached God's altar with a bullock or a lamb, how much more necessary is this in a man who professes to be a follower of the Lamb of God; especially when he receives the symbols of that Sacrifice which was offered for the life of the world, in what is commonly called the sacrament of the Lord's supper!

Verse 24. Leave there thy gift before the altar] This is as much as to say, "Do not attempt to bring any offering to God while thou art in a spirit of enmity against any person; or hast any difference with thy neighbour, which thou hast not used thy diligence to get adjusted." It is our duty and interest, both to bring our gift, and offer it too; but God will not accept of any act of religious worship from us, while 25 ^h Agree with thine adversary quickly, ⁱ while thou art in the way with him; lest at any time the adversary deliver thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou be cast into prison.

26 Verily I say unto thee, Thou shalt by no means come out thence, till thou hast paid the uttermost farthing.

^h Prov. xxv. 8; Luke xii. 58, 59.—ⁱ See Psa. xxxii. 6; Isa. lv. 6.

any enmity subsists in our hearts towards any soul of man; or while any subsists in our neighbour's heart towards us, which we have not used the proper means to remove. A religion, the very essence of which is love, cannot suffer at its altars a heart that is revengeful and uncharitable, or which does not use its utmost endeavours to revive love in the heart of another. The original word, δωρον, which we translate gift, is used by the rabbins in Hebrew letters דורון doron, which signifies not only a gift, but a sacrifice offered to God. See several proofs in Schoettgen.

Then come and offer thy gift.] Then, when either thy brother is reconciled to thee, or thou hast done all in thy power to effect this reconciliation. My own obstinacy and uncharitableness must render me utterly unfit to receive any good from God's hands, or to worship him in an acceptable manner; but the wickedness of another can be no hinderance to me, when I have endeavoured earnestly to get it removed, though without effect.

Verse 25. Agree with thine adversary quickly] Adversary, αντιδικος, properly a plaintiff in law—a perfect law term. Our Lord enforces the exhortation given in the preceding verses, from the consideration of what was deemed prudent in ordinary law-suits. In such cases, men should make up matters with the utmost speed, as running through the whole course of a law-suit must not only be vexatious, but be attended with great expense; and in the end, though the loser may be ruined, yet the gainer has nothing. A good use of this very prudential advice of our Lord is this: Thou art a sinner; God hath a controversy with thee. There is but a step between thee and death. Now is the accepted time. Thou art invited to return to God by Christ Jesus. Come immediately at his call, and he will save thy soul. Delay not! Eternity is at hand; and if thou die in thy sins, where God is thou shalt never come.

. Those who make the adversary, God; the judge, Christ; the officer, Death; and the prison, Hell, abuse the passage, and highly dishonour God.

Verse 26. The uttermost farthing.] Κοδραντην. The rabbins have this Greek word corrupted into קריונותם kordiontes, and קונטרין, kontrik, and say, that two כרוטות prutoth make a kontarik, which is exactly the same with those words in Mark xii. 42, λεπτα δυο, ο εστιν κοδραντης, two mites, which are one farthing. Hence it appears that the λεπτον lepton was the same as the prutah. The weight of the prutah was half a barley-corn, and it was the smallest coin among the

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

27 ¶ Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, ¹Thou shalt not commit adultery:

28 But I say unto you, That whosoever ¹looketh on a woman, to lust after her, hath committed adultery with her already in his heart.

29 ^m And if thy right eye ⁿ offend thee, ^o pluck it out, and cast it from thee: for it is

¹ Exod. xx. 14; Deut. v. 18.—¹ Job xxxi. 1; Prov. vi. 25; see Gen. xxxiv. 2; 2 Sam. xi. 2.

Jews, as the kadrantes, or farthing, was the smallest coin among the Romans. If the matter issue in law, strict justice will be done, and your creditor be allowed the fulness of his just claim; but if, while you are on the way, going to the magistrate, you come to a friendly agreement with him, he will relax in his claims, take a part for the whole, and the composition be, in the end, both to his and your profit.

This text has been considered a proper foundation on which to build not only the doctrine of a purgatory, but also that of universal restoration. But the most unwarrantable violence must be used before it can be pressed into the service of either of the above antisciptural doctrines. At the most, the text can only be considered as a metaphorical representation of the procedure of the great Judge; and let it ever be remembered, that by the general consent of all (except the basely interested) no metaphor is ever to be produced in proof of any doctrine. In the things that concern our eternal salvation, we need the most painted and express evidence on which to establish the faith of our souls.

Verse 27. Ye have heard that it was said by them of old] By the ancients, τοῖς ἀρχαίοις is omitted by nearly a hundred MSS., and some of them of the very greatest antiquity and authority: also by the Coptic, Ethiopic, Armenian, Gothic, and Sclavonian versions; by four copies of the old Itala; and by Origen, Cyril, Theophylact, Euthymius, and Hilary. On this authority Wetstein and Griesbach have left it out of the text.

Verse 28. Whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her] ἐπιθυμῶσαι αὐτήν, earnestly to covet her. The verb, ἐπιθυμῶ, is undoubtedly used here by our Lord, in the sense of coveting through the influence of impure desire. The word is used in precisely the same sense, on the same subject, by Herodotus, book the first, near the end. I will give the passage, but I dare not translate it. To the learned reader it will justify my translation, and the unlearned must take my word. Τῆς ἐπιθυμῆσαι γυναῖκος Μασσαγέτης ἀνὴρ, μ. σ. γ. ε. τ. α. ἁδ. ὡς. Raphaelius, on this verse, says, ἐπιθυμῶν hoc loco, est turpi cupiditate mulieris potius unde flagrare. In all these cases, our blessed Lord points out the spirituality of the law; which was a matter to which the Jews paid very little attention. Indeed it is the property of a Pharisee to abstain only from the outward crime. Men are very often less inquisitive to know how far the will of God extends, that they may please him in performing it, than they profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell.

30 And if thy right hand offend thee, cut it off, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

^m Ch. xviii. 8, 9; Mark ix. 43-47.—ⁿ Or, do cause thee to offend.
^o See chap. xix. 12; Rom. viii. 13; 1 Cor. ix. 27, Col. iii. 5.

are to know how far they may satisfy their lusts without destroying their bodies and souls utterly, by an open violation of his law.

Hath committed adultery with her already in his heart.] It is the earnest wish or desire of the soul, which, in a variety of cases, constitutes the good or evil of an act. If a man earnestly wish to commit an evil, but cannot, because God puts time, place, and opportunity out of his power, he is fully chargeable with the iniquity of the act, by that God who searches and judges the heart. So, if a man earnestly wish to do some kindness, which it is out of his power to perform, the act is considered as his; because God, in this case, as in that above, takes the will for the deed. If voluntary and deliberate looks and desires make adulterers and adulteresses, how many persons are there whose whole life is one continued crime! whose eyes being full of adultery, they cannot cease from sin, 2 Pet. ii. 14. Many would abhor to commit one external act before the eyes of men, in a temple of stone; and yet they are not afraid to commit a multitude of such acts in the temple of their hearts, and in the sight of God!

Verse 29. And if thy right eye offend thee] The right eye and the right hand are used here to point out those sins which appear most pleasing and profitable to us; from which we must be separated, if we desire ever to see the kingdom of God.

Offend thee] Σκαρδαλίζει σε. Te fait broncher, cause thee to stumble, French Bible. Σκαρδαλητρία is explained by Suidas, "that piece of wood in a trap, or pit for wild beasts, which, being trodden upon by them, causes them to fall into the trap or pit." The word in Suidas appears to be compounded of σκαρδαλον a stumbling-block, or something that causes a man to trip, and λατρία private or hidden. Thus then the right eye may be considered the darling idol; the right hand, the profitable employment, pursued on sinful principles; these become snares and traps to the soul, by which it falls into the pit of perdition.

Verses 29, 30. Pluck it out—cut it off] We must shut our senses against dangerous objects, to avoid the occasions of sin, and deprive ourselves of all that is most dear and profitable to us, in order to save our souls, when we find that these dear and profitable things, however innocent in themselves, cause us to sin against God.

It is profitable for thee that one of thy members] Men often part with some members of the body, at

A. M. 4031.

A. D. 27.

An. Olymp.

CCL. 3.

31 It hath been said, ^p Whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a writing of divorcement :

32 But I say unto you, That ^q whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of the discretion of a surgeon, that they may preserve the trunk, and die a little later; and yet they will not deprive themselves of a look, a touch, a small pleasure, which endanger the eternal death of the soul. It is not enough to shut the eye, or stop the hand; the one must be plucked out, and the other cut off. Neither is this enough, we must cast them both from us. Not one moment's truce with an evil passion, or a sinful appetite. If you indulge them, they will gain strength, and you shall be ruined. The rabbins have a saying similar to this: "It is better for thee to be scorched with a little fire in this world, than to be burned with a devouring fire in the world to come."

^p Deut. xxiv. 1; Jer. iii. 1; see chap. xix. 3, &c; Mark x. 2, &c.

Verse 31. Whosoever shall put away his wife] The Jewish doctors gave great license in the matter of divorce. Among them, a man might divorce his wife if she displeased him even in the dressing of his victuals!

Rabbi Akiba said, "If any man saw a woman handsomer than his own wife, he might put his wife away; because it is said in the law, If she find not favour in his eyes." Deut. xxiv. 1.

Jos. phus, the celebrated Jewish historian, in his Life, tells us, with the utmost coolness and indifference, "About this time I put away my wife, who had borne me three children, not being pleased with her manners."

These two cases are sufficient to show to what a scandalous and criminal excess this matter was carried among the Jews. However, it was allowed by the school of Shammai, that no man was to put away his wife unless for adultery. The school of Hillel gave much greater license.

A writing of divorcement] The following^r is the common form of such a writing. See Maimonides and Lightfoot.

"On the day of the week A. in the month B. in the year C. from the beginning of the world, according to the common computation in the province of D., I, N. the son of N. by whatever name I am called, of the city E. with entire consent of mind, and without any compulsion, have divorced, dismissed, and expelled thee—thee, I say, M. the daughter of M. by whatever name thou art called, of the city E. who wast heretofore my wife: but now I have dismissed thee—thee, I say, M. the daughter of M. by whatever name thou art called, of the city E. so as to be free, and at thine own disposal, to marry whomsoever thou pleasest, without hinderance from any one, from this day for ever. Thou art therefore free for any man. Let this be thy bill of divorce from me, a writing of separation and expulsion, according to the law of Moses and Israel.

REUBEN, son of Jacob, Witness.

ELIEZAR, son of Gilead, Witness."

fornication, causeth her to commit adultery: and whosoever shall marry her that is divorced, committeth adultery.

33 ¶ Again, ye have heard that ^r it hath been ^q Chap. xix. 9; Luke xvi. 18; Rom. vii. 3; 1 Cor. vii. 10, 11. ^r Chap. xxiii. 16.

God permitted this evil to prevent a greater; and, perhaps, to typify his repudiating the Jews, who were his first spouse.

Verse 32. Saving for the cause of fornication] λογον πορνείας, on account of whoredom. As fornication signifies no more than the unlawful connection of unmarried persons, it cannot be used here with propriety, when speaking of those who are married. I have therefore translated λογον πορνείας, on account of whoredom. It does not appear that there is any other case in which Jesus Christ admits of divorce. A real Christian ought rather to beg of God the grace to bear patiently and quietly the imperfections of his wife, than to think of the means of being parted from her. "But divorce was allowed by Moses;" yes, for the hardness of their hearts it was permitted; but what was permitted to an uncircumcised heart among the Jews, should not serve for a rule to a heart in which the love of God has been shed abroad by the Holy Spirit. Those who form a matrimonial connection in the fear and love of God, and under his direction, will never need a divorce. But those who marry as passion or money lead the way, may be justly considered adulterers and adulteresses as long as they live.

Verse 33. Thou shalt not forswear thyself] They dishonour the great God, and break this commandment, who use frequent oaths and imprecations, even in reference to things that are true; and those who make vows and promises, which they either cannot perform, or do not design to fulfil, are not less criminal. Swearing in civil matters is become so frequent, that the dread and obligation of an oath are utterly lost in it. In certain places, where oaths are frequently administered, people have been known to kiss their thumb or pen, instead of the book, thinking thereby to avoid the sin of perjury; but this is a shocking inposition on their own souls. See the notes on Deut. iv. 26; vi. 13.

Perform unto the Lord thine oaths] The morality of the Jews on this point was truly execrable: they maintained, that a man might swear with his lips, and annul it in the same moment in his heart. Rab. Akiba is quoted as an example of this kind of swearing. See Schurttgen.

Verse 34. Swear not at all] Much has been said in vindication of the propriety of swearing in civil cases before a magistrate, and much has been said against it. The best way is to have as little to do as possible with oaths. An oath will not bind a knave nor a liar; and an honest man needs none, for his character and conduct swear for him. On this subject the advice of Epictetus is very good: "Swear not at all, if possible; if you cannot avoid, do it as little as you can." Enchir. c. 44. See on Deut. iv. 26; vi. 13.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

said by them of old time, "Thou shalt not forswear thyself, but thou shalt perform unto the Lord thine oaths:

34 But I say unto you, "Swear not at all: neither by heaven; for it is God's throne:

35 Nor by the earth; for it is his footstool:

^aExod. xx. 7; Lev. xix. 12; Num. xxx. 2, Dent. v. 11.
^bDent. x. iii. 23.

Verses 31, 35. Neither by heaven, &c.] It was a custom among the Scythians, when they wished to bind themselves in the most solemn manner, to swear by the king's throne; and if the king was at any time sick, they believed it was occasioned by some one's having taken the oath falsely. Herod. l. iv.

Who is there among the traders and people of this world who obey this law! A common swearer is constantly perjuring himself: such a person should never be trusted. When we make any promise contrary to the command of God, taking, as a pledge of our sincerity, either God, or something belonging to him, we engage that which is not ours, without the Master's consent. God manifests his glory in heaven, as upon his throne; he imprints the footsteps of his perfections upon the earth, his footstool; and shows that his holiness and his grace reign in his temple as the place of his residence. Let it be our constant care to seek and honour God in all his works.

Verse 36. Neither shalt thou swear by thy head] For these plain reasons: 1st. God commands thee not to do it. 2dly. Thou hast nothing which is thy own, and thou shouldst not pledge another's property. 3dly. It never did, and never can, answer any good purpose. And 4thly. Being a breach of the law of God, it is the way to everlasting misery.

Verse 37. Let your communication be. Yea, yea; Nay, nay] That is, a positive affirmation, or negation, according to your knowledge of the matter concerning which you are called to testify. Do not equivocate; mean what you assert, and adhere to your assertion. Hear what a heathen says on this subject:—

Εὐθραὶς γὰρ μοι κενὸς ὅμως αἰὶας πηληται,
Ὅς ἕτερον μὲν κενθεὶ ἐνὶ φρεσὶν, ἀλλὰ δὲ βαῖσι.
Hom. Il. ix. 312.

"He whose words agree not with his private thoughts is as detestable to me as the gates of hell." See on Josh. ii. at the end.

See the subject of swearing particularly considered in the note at the conclusion of Deut. chap. vi.

Whatever is more than these] That is, more than a bare affirmation or negation, according to the requirements of Eternal Truth, cometh of evil; or, is of the wicked one—ἐκ τοῦ πονηροῦ ἐστίν, i. e. the devil, the father of superfluities and lies. One of Selden's MSS. and Gregory Nyssen, a commentator of the fourth century, have ἐκ τοῦ ἀγαλλίου ἐστίν, is of the devil.

That the Jews were notoriously guilty of common swearing, for which our Lord particularly reprehends them, and warns his disciples against, and that they swore by heaven, by earth, by Jerusalem, by their head, &c., the following extracts, made by Dr. Lightfoot from their own writings, amply testify:—

neither by Jerusalem; for it is the city of the great king.

36 Neither shalt thou swear by thy head, because thou canst not make one hair white or black.

37 "But let your communication be, Yea,

^aChap. xxiii. 16, 17, 22; James i. 12. — ^bIsa. lxxvi. 1. — ^cPsa. xlviii. 2; lxxxvii. 3. — ^dCol. iv. 6; James v. 12.

"It was customary and usual among them to swear by the creatures. 'If any swear by heaven, by earth, by the sun, &c., although the mind of the swearer be, under these words, to swear by HIM who created them, yet this is not an oath. Or, if any swear by some of the prophets, or by some of the books of the Scripture, although the sense of the swearer be to swear by HIM that sent that prophet, or that gave that book, nevertheless, this is not an oath. MAIMONIDES.'

"If any adjure another by heaven or earth, he is not guilty. TALMUD.

"They swore by HEAVEN, הַשָּׁמַיִם כֵּן הוּא hashshamayim. ken hu, 'By heaven, so it is.' BAB. BERAC.

"They swore by the TEMPLE. 'When turtles and young pigeons were sometimes sold at Jerusalem for a penny of gold, Rabban Simcon ben Gamaliel said, המעין הזה By this habitation (that is, by this TEMPLE) I will not rest this night, unless they be sold for a penny of silver.' CHERITHUTH, cap. i.

"R. Zechariah ben Ketsab said, המעין הזה 'By this TEMPLE, the hand of the woman departed not out of my hand.'—R. Jochanan said, היכלא 'By the TEMPLE, it is in our hand, &c.' KETUBOTH and BAB. KIDUSHIN.

"Bava ben Buta swore by the TEMPLE in the end of the tract Cherithuth, and Rabban Simcon ben Gamaliel in the beginning, וזה כנהג בישראל—And so was the custom in Israel.—Note this, so was the custom. JUCAS. fol. 56.

"They swore by the city Jerusalem. R. Judah saith, 'He that saith, By JERUSALEM, saith nothing, unless with an intent purpose he shall row towards Jerusalem.' Where also, after two lines coming between those forms of swearing and vowing, are added, ירושלם, להיכל להיכל להיכל להיכל 'Jerusalem, For Jerusalem, By Jerusalem.—The Temple, For the temple. By the temple.—The Altar, For the altar, By the altar.—The Lamb, For the Lamb, By the Lamb.—The Chambers of the Temple, For the chambers of the temple, By the chambers of the temple.—The Word, For the Word, By the Word.—The Sacrifices on Fire, For the sacrifices on fire, By the sacrifices on fire.—The Dishes, For the dishes, By the dishes.—By all these things, that I will do this to you.' TOSAPHT. ad. NEDARIM.

"They swore by their own HEADS. 'One is bound to swear to his neighbour, and he saith, רור ל' בוח' Vor (or swear) to me by the life of thy head, &c. SANHEDR. cap. 3.

"One of the holiest of their precepts relative to swearing was this: 'Be not much in oaths, although one should swear concerning things that are true; for in much swearing it is impossible not to profane.' Tract. DEMAI."—See Lightfoot's Works, vol. ii. p. 149.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3.

yea; Nay, nay; for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil.

38 ¶ Ye have heard that it hath been said, ^γ An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth:

39 But I say unto you, ^z That ye resist not evil: ^a but whosoever shall smite thee on thy

^γ Exod. xxi. 24; Lev. xxiv. 20; Deut. xix. 21.—^z Prov. xx. 22; xxiv. 29; Luke vi. 29; Rom. xii. 17, 19; 1 Cor. vi. 7;

They did not pretend to forbid ALL common swearing, but only what they term MUCH. A Jew might swear, but he must not be too abundant in the practice. Against such permission, our Lord opposes his Swear NOT AT ALL! He who uses any oath, except what he is solemnly called by the magistrate to make, so far from being a Christian, he does not deserve the reputation, either of decency or common sense. In some of our old elementary books for children, we have this good maxim: "Never swear: for he that swears will lie; and he that lies will steal; and, if so, what bad things will he not do!" READING MADE EASY.

Verse 38. An eye for an eye] Our Lord refers here to the law of retaliation mentioned Exod. xxi. 24, (see the note there, and on Levit. xxiv. 20,) which obliged the offender to suffer the same injury he had committed. The Greeks and Romans had the same law. So strictly was it attended to at Athens, that if a man put out the eye of another who had but one, the offender was condemned to lose both his eyes, as the loss of one would not be an equivalent misfortune. It seems that the Jews had made this law (the execution of which belonged to the civil magistrate) a ground for authorizing private resentments, and all the excesses committed by a vindictive spirit. Revenge was often carried to the utmost extremity, and more evil returned than what had been received. This is often the case among those who are called Christians.

Verse 39. Resist not evil] Or, the evil person. So, I am fully persuaded, τῷ πονηρῷ ought to be translated. Our Lord's meaning is, "Do not repel one outrage by another." He that does so makes himself precisely what the other is, a wicked person.

Turn to him the other also] That is, rather than avenge thyself, be ready to suffer patiently a repetition of the same injury. But these exhortations belong to those principally who are persecuted for righteousness' sake. Let such leave the judgment of their cause to Him for whose sake they suffer. The Jews always thought that every outrage should be resented; and thus the spirit of hatred and strife was fostered.

Verse 40. And if any man will sue thee at the law] Every where our blessed Lord shows the utmost disapprobation of such litigations as tended to destroy brotherly kindness and charity. It is evident he would have his followers to suffer rather the loss of all their property, than to have recourse to such modes of redress, at so great a risk. Having the mind averse from contentions, and preferring peace and concord to temporal advantages, is most solemnly recommended

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3.

right cheek, turn to him the other also.

40 And if any man will sue thee at the law, and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloke also.

41 And whosoever ^b shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain.

1 Thess. v. 15; 1 Pet. iii. 9.—^a Isa. l. 6; Lam. iii. 30.—^b C xxvii. 32; Mark xv. 21.

to all Christians. We are great gainers when we lose only our money, or other property, and risk not the loss of our souls, by losing the love of God and man.

Coat] Χιτῶνα, upper garment.—Cloke, ἡμῖον, under garment. What we call strait coat, and great coat.—See on Luke vi. 29.

Verse 41. Shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain.] ἀγγαρεύου. This word is said to be derived from the Persians, among whom the king's messengers, or posts, were called Ἀγγαροί, or angari.—This definition is given both by Hesychius and Suidas.

The Persian messengers had the royal authority for pressing horses, ships, and even men, to assist them in the business on which they were employed. These angari are now termed chappars, and serve to carry despatches between the court and the provinces.—When a chappar sets out, the master of the horse furnishes him with a single horse; and, when that is weary, he dismounts the first man he meets, and takes his horse. There is no pardon for a traveller that refuses to let a chappar have his horse, nor for any other who should deny him the best horse in his stable. See Sir J. Chardin's and Hanway's Travels. For pressing post horses, &c., the Persian term is سخره گرفتن Sukhrch geriften. I find no Persian word exactly of the sound and signification of Ἀγγαρος: but the Arabic اغارة agharet signifies spurring a horse, attacking, plundering, &c. The Greek word itself is preserved among the rabbins in Hebrew characters, אנגריה angaria, and it has precisely the same meaning: viz. to be compelled by violence to do any particular service, especially of the public kind, by the king's authority. Lightfoot gives several instances of this in his Hora Talmudica.

We are here exhorted to patience and forgiveness: First, When we receive in our persons all sorts of insults and affronts, ver. 39.

Secondly, When we are despoiled of our goods, ver. 40.

Thirdly, When our bodies are forced to undergo all kinds of toils, vexations, and torments, ver. 41.—The way to improve the injustice of man to our own advantage, is to exercise under it meekness, gentleness, and long-suffering, without which disposition of mind, no man can either be happy here or hereafter; for he that avenges himself must lose the mind of Christ, and thus suffer an injury ten thousand times greater than he can ever receive from man. Revenge, at such an expense, is dear indeed.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL.3. 42 Give to him that asketh thee, and ° from him that would borrow of thee turn not thou away.

43 ¶ Ye have heard that it hath been said,

° Deut. xv. 8, 10; Luke vi. 30, 35.—^d Lev. xix. 18.—° Deut.

Verse 42. Give to him that asketh thee, and from him that would borrow] To give and lend freely to all who are in need, is a general precept from which we are only excused by our inability to perform it. Men are more or less obliged to it as they are more or less able, as the want is more or less pressing, as they are more or less burthened with common poor, or with necessitous relatives. In all these matters, both prudence and charity must be consulted. That God, who makes use of the beggar's hand to ask our charity, is the same from whom we ourselves beg our daily bread: and dare we refuse Him! Let us show at least mildness and compassion, when we can do no more; and if we cannot or will not relieve a poor man, let us never give him an ill word nor an ill look. If we do not relieve him, we have no right to insult him.

To give and to lend, are two duties of charity which Christ joins together, and which he sets on equal footing. A rich man is one of God's stewards: God has given him money for the poor, and he cannot deny it without an act of injustice. But no man, from what is called a principle of charity or generosity, should give that in alms which belongs to his creditors. Generosity is godlike; but justice has ever, both in law and Gospel, the first claim.

A loan is often more beneficial than an absolute gift: first, because it flatters less the vanity of him who lends; secondly, it spares more the shame of him who is in real want; and, thirdly, it gives less encouragement to the idleness of him who may not be very honest. However, no advantage should be taken of the necessities of the borrower: he who does so is, at least, half a murderer. The lending which our Lord here inculcates is that which requires no more than the restoration of the principal in a convenient time: otherwise to live upon trust is the sure way to pay double.

Verse 43. Thou shalt love thy neighbour, and hate thine enemy.] Instead of πλησίων neighbour, the Codex Grævii. a MS. of the eleventh century, reads φίλον friend. Thou shalt love thy friend, and hate thine enemy. This was certainly the meaning which the Jews put on it: for neighbour, with them, implied those of the Jewish race, and all others were considered by them as natural enemies. Besides, it is evident that πλησίων, among the Hellenistic Jews, meant friend merely: Christ uses it precisely in this sense in Luke x. 36, in answer to the question asked by a certain lawyer, ver. 29. Who of the three was neighbour (πλησίων friend) to him who fell among the thieves? He who showed him mercy; i. e. he who acted the friendly part. In Hebrew, רֵעַ reâ, signifies friend, which word is translated πλησίων by the LXX. in more than one hundred places. Among the Greeks it was a very comprehensive term, and signified every man, not even an enemy excepted, as Raphelius, on this verse, has shown from Polybius. The Jews

Thou shalt love thy neighbour,
° and hate thine enemy.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL.3.

44 But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good xxiii. 6; Psal. xli. 10.—^f Luke vi. 27, 35; Rom. xii. 14, 20 thought themselves authorized to kill any Jew who apostatized; and, though they could not do injury to the Gentiles, in whose country they sojourned, yet they were bound to suffer them to perish, if they saw them in danger of death. Hear their own words: "A Jew sees a Gentile fall into the sea, let him by no means lift him out; for it is written, Thou shalt not rise up against the blood of thy neighbour:—but this is not thy neighbour." Maimon. This shows that by neighbour they understood a Jew; one who was of the same blood and religion with themselves.

Verse 44. Love your enemies] This is the most sublime piece of morality ever given to man. Has it appeared unreasonable and absurd to some? It has. And why? Because it is natural to man to avenge himself, and plague those who plague him; and he will ever find abundant excuse for his conduct, in the repeated evils he receives from others; for men are naturally hostile to each other. Jesus Christ designs to make men happy. Now he is necessarily miserable who hates another. Our Lord prohibits that only which, from its nature, is opposed to man's happiness. This is therefore one of the most reasonable precepts in the universe. But who can obey it! None but he who has the mind of Christ. But I have it not. Seek it from God; it is that kingdom of heaven which Christ came to establish upon earth. See on chap. iii. 2. This one precept is a sufficient proof of the holiness of the Gospel, and of the truth of the Christian religion. Every false religion flatters man, and accommodates itself to his pride and his passions. None but God could have imposed a yoke so contrary to self-love; and nothing but the supreme eternal love can enable men to practise a precept so insupportable to corrupt nature. Sentiments like this are found among Asiatic writers, and in select cases were strongly applied; but as a general command this was never given by them, or any other people. It is not an absolute command in any of the books which they consider to be Divinely inspired. Sir William Jones lays by far too much stress on the casual introduction of such sentiments as this in the Asiatic writers. See his Works, vol. i. p. 168, where the sentiment is connected with circumstances both extravagant and unnatural; and thus it is nullified by the pretended recommendation.

Bless them that curse you] Εὐλογεῖτε, give them good words for their bad words. See the note on Gen. ii. 3.

Do good to them that hate you] Give your enemy every proof that you love him. We must not love in longue, but in deed and in truth.

Pray for them which despitefully use you] Εὐχαριζομένων from εὐ against, and Ἀρης Mars, the heathen god of war. Those who are making continual war upon you, and constantly harassing and calumniating

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you;

45 That ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for ^h he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good;
and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust.

ε Luke xxiii. 34; Acts vii. 60; 1 Cor. iv. 12, 13; 1 Pet. ii. 23;
iii. 9.—^h Job xxv. 3.—ⁱ Luke vi. 32.

you. Pray for them—This is another exquisitely reasonable precept. I cannot change that wicked man's heart; and while it is unchanged he will continue to harass me: God alone can change it: then I must implore him to do that which will at once secure the poor man's salvation, and contribute so much to my own peace.

And persecute you] Διωκόντων, those who press hard on and pursue you with hatred and malice accompanied with repeated acts of enmity.

In this verse our Lord shows us that a man may be our enemy in three different ways.

First, in his heart, by hatred.

Secondly, in his words by cursing or using direful imprecations (κατ'ομμενων) against us.

Thirdly, in his actions, by continually harassing and abusing us.

He shows us also how we are to behave to those.

The hatred of the first we are to meet with love.

The cursings or evil words of the second, we are to meet with good words and blessings.

And the repeated injurious acts of the third, we are to meet with continual prayer to God for the man's salvation.

Verse 45. That ye may be the children of your Father] Instead of εσσι children, some MSS., the latter Persic version, and several of the primitive fathers, read ομοιωται, that ye may be like to, or resemble, your Father who is in heaven. This is certainly our Lord's meaning. As a man's child is called his, because a partaker of his own nature, so a holy person is said to be a child of God, because he is a partaker of the Divine nature.

He maketh his sun to rise on the evil] "There is nothing greater than to imitate God in doing good to our enemies. All the creatures of God pronounce the sentence of condemnation on the revengeful: and this sentence is written by the rays of the sun, and with the drops of rain, and indeed by all the natural good things, the use of which God freely gives to his enemies." If God had not loved us while we were his enemies, we could never have become his children:
and we shall cease to be such, as soon as we cease to imitate him.

Verse 46. For if ye love them which love you] He who loves only his friends, does nothing for God's sake.
He who loves for the sake of pleasure or interest, pays himself. God has no enemy which he hates but sin; we should have no other.

The publicans] That is, tax-gatherers, τελωναι, from τελος a tax, and ωκεομαι I buy or farm. A farmer or

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

46 ⁱ For if ye love them which love you, what reward have ye? do not even the publicans the same?

47 And if ye salute your brethren only, what do ye more than others? do not even the publicans so?

48 ¶ ^k Be ye therefore perfect, even ⁱ as your Father, which is in heaven, is perfect.

^k Gen. xviii. 1; Lev. xi. 44; xix. 2; Luke vi. 36; Col. i. 28; iv.
12; James i. 4; 1 Pet. i. 15, 16.—ⁱ Eph. v. 1.

collector of the taxes or public revenues. Of these there were two classes; the superior, who were Romans of the equestrian order; and the inferior, those mentioned in the Gospels, who it appears were mostly Jews.

This class of men was detestable among the Romans, the Greeks, and the Jews, for their intolerable rapacity and avarice. They were abhorred in an especial manner by the Jews, to whom the Roman government was odious: these, assisting in collecting the Roman tribute, were considered as betrayers of the liberties of their country, and abettors of those who enslaved it. They were something like the tythe- farmers of certain college-livings in some counties of England, as Lancashire, &c.—a principal cause of the public burthens and discontent. One quotation, of the many produced by Kypke, will amply show in what detestation they were held among the Greeks. Theo- critus being asked, Which of the wild beasts were the most cruel! answered, Εν μεν τοις ορεσιν αρκτοι και λεωντες εν δε ταις πολιται, ΤΕΛΩΝΑΙ και συκοφανται.
Bears and lions, in the mountains; and TAX-GATHER-ERS and calumniators, in cities.

Verse 47. And if ye salute your brethren only.
Instead of αδελφους brethren, upwards of one hundred MSS., and several of them of great authority and antiquity, have φιλους friends. The Armenian Slavonic, and Gothic versions, with the later Syriac, and some of the primitive fathers, agree in this reading. I scarcely know which to prefer; as brother is more conformable to the Jewish mode of address, it should be retained in the text: the other reading, however, tends to confirm that of the Codex Græc.
on ver. 43.

On the subject of giving and receiving salutations in Asiatic countries, Mr. Harmer, Observat. vol. ii. p.
327, &c., edit. 1808, has collected much valuable information: the following extract will be sufficient to elucidate our Lord's meaning.

"Dr. Doddridge supposes that the salutation our Lord refers to, Matt. v. 47, If ye salute your brethren only, what do ye more than others? do not even the publicans so? means embracing, though it is a different word. I would observe, that it is made use of in the Septuagint to express that action of endearment:
and which is made use of by an apocryphal writer.
(Eccclus. xxx. 19,) whereas, the word we translate salute is of a much more general nature: this, I apprehend, arose from his being struck with the thought, that it could never be necessary to caution his disciples, not to restrain the civilities of a common salutation to those of their own religious party. Juvenal, when he satirizes the Jews of the apostolic age for their religious opinions, and represents them as unfriendly, and even malevolent, to other people, Sat. xiv., and when he mentions their refusing to show travellers the way, Non monstrare vias, &c., or to point out to them where they might find water to drink when thirsty with journeying, takes no notice of their not saluting those of another nation; yet there is no reason to believe, from these words of Christ, that many of them at least would not, and that even a Jewish publican received no salutations from one of his own nation, excepting brother publicans.

"Nor shall we wonder at this, or think it requisite to suppose the word we translate salute (σπασθαι) and which certainly, sometimes at least, signifies nothing more than making use of some friendly words upon meeting with people, must here signify something more particular, since we find some of the present inhabitants of the east seem to want this admonition of our Lord. 'When the Arabs salute one another,' according to Niebuhr, 'it is generally in these terms, Salām aleikum, Peace be with you; in speaking which words they lay the right hand on the heart. The answer is, Aleikum essalām, With you be peace. Aged people are inclined to add to these words, And the mercy and blessing of God. The Mohammedans of Egypt and Syria never salute a Christian in this manner; they content themselves with saying to them, Good day to you; or, Friend, how do you do? The Arabs of Yemen, who seldom see any Christians, are not so zealous but that sometimes they will give them the Salām aleikum."

"Presently after he says: 'For a long time I thought the Mohammedan custom, of saluting Christians in a different manner from that made use of to those of their own profession, was an effect of their pride and religious bigotry. I saluted them sometimes with the Salām aleikum, and I had often only the common answer. At length I observed in Natolia, that the Christians themselves might probably be the cause that Mohammedans did not make the same return to their civilities that they did to those of their own religion. For the Greek merchants, with whom I travelled in that country, did not seem pleased with my saluting Mohammedans in the Mohammedan manner. And when they were not known to be Christians, by those Turks whom they met with in their journeying, (it being allowed Christian travellers in these provinces to wear a white turban, Christians in common being obliged to wear the sash of their turbans white striped with blue, that banditti might take them at a distance for 'Turks, and people of courage,) they never answered those that addressed them with the compliment of Salām aleikum. One would not, perhaps, suspect that similar customs obtain in our times, among Europeans: but I find that the Roman Catholics of some provinces of Germany never address the Protestants that live among them with the compliment JESUS CHRIST be praised; and, when such a thing happens by mistake, the Protestants do not return it after the manner in use among Catholics, Forever and ever. Amen!'"

"After this, the words of our Lord in the close of the fifth of Matthew want no farther commentary. The Jews would not address the usual compliment of Peace be to you, to either heathens or publicans; the publicans of the Jewish nation would use it to their countrymen that were publicans, but not to heathens; though the more rigid Jews would not do it to them, any more than to heathens: our Lord required his disciples to lay aside the moroseness of Jews, and express more extensive benevolence in their salutations. There seems to be nothing of embracing thought of in this case, though that, doubtless, was practised anciently among relations, and intimate friends, as it is among modern Asiatics."

If not to salute be a heathenish indifference, to hide hatred under outward civilities is a diabolic treachery. To pretend much love and affection for those for whom we have neither—to use towards them complimentary phrases, to which we affix no meaning, but that they mean nothing, is highly offensive in the sight of that God by whom actions are weighed and words judged.

Do not—the publicans] Τελωται,—but εθνικοι heathens, is adopted by Griesbach, instead of τελωται, on the authority of Codd. Vatican. & Beza, and several others; together with the Coptic, Syriac later, and Syriac Jerusalem; two Arabic, Persic, Slavonic; all the Itala but one; Vulgate, Saxon, and several of the primitive fathers.

Verse 48. Be ye therefore perfect—as your Father; God himself is the grand law, sole giver, and only pattern of the perfection which he recommends to his children. The words are very emphatic, εσθε οντες τελειοι, Ye shall be therefore perfect—ye shall be filled with the spirit of that God whose name is Mercy, and whose nature is love. God has many imitators of his power, independence, justice, &c., but few of his love, condescension, and kindness. He calls himself LOVE, to teach us that in this consists that perfection, the attainment of which he has made both our duty and privilege: for these words of our Lord include both a command and a promise.

"Can we be fully saved from sin in this world?" is an important question, to which this text gives a satisfactory answer: "Ye shall be perfect, as your Father, who is in heaven, is perfect."—As in his infinite nature there is no sin, nothing but goodness and love, so in your finite nature there shall dwell no sin, for the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus shall make you free from the law of sin and death, Rom. viii. 2. God shall live in, fill, and rule your hearts; and, in what He fills and influences, neither Satan nor sin can have any part. If men, slighting their own mercies, cry out, This is impossible!—whom does this arraigning reprove—God, who, on this ground, has given a command, the fulfilment of which is impossible. "But who can bring a clean out of an unclean thing?" God Almighty—and, however inveterate the disease of sin may be, the grace of the Lord Jesus can fully cure it; and who will say, that he who laid down his life for our souls will not use his power completely to effect that salvation which he has died to procure. "But where is the person thus saved?" Wherever he is found who loves God with all his heart, soul, mind, and strength, and his neighbour as himself; and, for the honour of Christianity and its AUTHOR, may we not hope there are many such in the Church of God, not known indeed by any profession of this kind which they make, but by a surer testimony, that of uniformly holy tempers, piety to God, and beneficence to man?

Dr. Lightfoot is not perfectly satisfied with the usual mode of interpreting the 22nd verse of this chapter. I subjoin the substance of what he says. Having given a general exposition of the word brother, which the Jews understood as signifying none but an Israelite—εὐχός, which we translate is in danger of, and which he shows the Jews used to signify, is exposed to, merits, or is guilty of—and the word gehenna, hell-fire, which he explains as I have done above, he comes to the three offences, and their sentences.

The FIRST is causeless anger, which he thinks too plain to require explanation; but into the two following he enters in considerable detail:—

“The SECOND. Whosoever shall say to his brother, ‘Racha,’ a nickname, or scornful title usual, which they disdainfully put one upon another, and very commonly; and therefore our Saviour has mentioned this word, the rather because it was of so common use among them. Take these few examples:—

“A certain man sought to betake himself to repentance (and restitution.) His wife said to him, ‘Rekah, if thou make restitution, even thy girdle about thee is not thine own, &c.’ Tanchum, fol. 5.

“Rabbi Jochanan was teaching concerning the building of Jerusalem with sapphires and diamonds, &c. One of his scholars laughed him to scorn. But afterwards, being convinced of the truth of the thing, he saith to him, ‘Rabbi, do thou expound, for it is fit for thee to expound: as thou saidst, so have I seen it.’ He saith to him, ‘Rekah, hadst thou not seen, thou wouldst not have believed, &c.’ Midras Tillin, fol. 38, col. 4.

“To what is the thing like? To a king of flesh and blood, who took to wife a king’s daughter: he saith to her, ‘Wait and fill me a cup;’ but she would not: whereupon he was angry, and put her away; she went, and was married to a sordid fellow; and he saith to her, ‘Wait, and fill me a cup;’ she said unto him, ‘Rekah, I am a king’s daughter, &c.’ Idem in Psalms, cxxxvii.

“A Gentile saith to an Israelite, ‘I have a choice dish for thee to eat of.’ He saith, ‘What is it?’ He answers, ‘Swine’s flesh.’ He saith to him, ‘Rekah, even what you kill of clean beasts is forbidden us, much more this.’ Tanchum, fol. 18, col. 4.

“The THIRD offence is to say to a brother, ‘Thou fool,’ which, how to distinguish from racha, which signifies an empty fellow, were some difficulty, but that Solomon is a good dictionary here for us, who takes the term continually here for a wicked wretch and reprobate, and in opposition to spiritual wisdom: so that in the first clause is condemned causeless anger; in the second, scornful taunting and reproaching of a brother; and, in the last, calling him a reprobate and wicked, or uncharitably censuring his spiritual and eternal estate. And this last does more especially hit the scribes and Pharisees, who arrogated to themselves only to be called חכמים chocamim, wise men, but of all others they had this scornful and uncharitable opinion, ‘This people, that knoweth not the law, is cursed,’ John vii. 49.

“And now for the penalties denounced upon these offences, let us look upon them, taking notice of these two traditions of the Jews, which our Saviour seems to face, and to contradict.

“1st. That they accounted the command, Thou shalt not kill, to aim only at actual murder. So that in their collecting the six hundred and thirteen precepts out of the law, they understand that command to mean but this: ‘That one should not kill an Israelite,’ and accordingly they allotted this only violation of it to judgments; against this wild gloss and practice, he speaks in the first clause: Ye have heard it said, Thou shalt not kill, and he that killeth, or committeth actual murder, is liable to judgment, and ye extend the violation of that command no farther; but I say to you, that causeless anger against thy brother is a violation of that command, and even that maketh a man liable to judgment.

“2nd. They allotted that murder only to be judged by the council, or Sanhedrin, that was committed by a man in propria persona: let them speak their own sense, &c. Talm. in Sanhedrin, per. 9.

“‘Any one that kills his neighbour with his hand, as if he strike him with a sword, or with a stone that kills him, or strangle him till he die, or burn him in the fire,’ seeing that he kills him any how in his own person, lo! such a one must be put to death by the Sanhedrin; but he that hires another to kill his neighbour, or that sends his servants, and they kill him, or that violently thrusts him before a lion, or the like, and the beast kills him—any one of these is a shedder of blood and the guilt of shedding of blood is upon him, and he is liable to death by the hand of Heaven, but he is not to be put to death by the Sanhedrin. And whence is the proof that it must be thus? Because it is said, He that sheddeth man’s blood, by man shall his blood be shed. This is he that slays a man himself, and not by the hand of another. Your blood of your lives will I require. This is he that slays himself. At the hand of every beast will I require it. This is he that delivers up his neighbour before a beast to be rent in pieces. At the hand of man, even at the hand of every man’s brother, will I require the life of man. This is he that hires others to kill his neighbour: In this interpretation, requiring is spoken of all the three: behold, their judgment is delivered over to Heaven (or God.) And all these man-slayers and the like, who are not liable to death by the Sanhedrin, if the king of Israel will slay them by the judgment of the kingdom, and the law of nations, he may, &c.’ Maym. ubi supr. per. 2.

“You may observe in these wretched traditions a twofold killing, and a twofold judgment: a man’s killing another in his own person, and with his own hand, and such a one liable to the judgment of the Sanhedrin, to be put to death by them, as a murderer; and a man that killed another by proxy, not with his own hand, but hiring another to kill him, or turning a beast or serpent upon him to kill him. This man is not to be judged and executed by the Sanhedrin, but referred and reserved only to the judgment of God. So that we see plainly, from hence, in what sense the word judgment is used in the latter end of the preceding verse, and the first clause of this, namely, not for the judgment of any one of the Sanhedrins, as it is commonly understood, but for the judgment of God. In the former verse. Christ speaks their sense, and in the first clause of this, his own, in application to it. Ye have heard it said, that any man that kills is liable to the judgment of God; but I say unto you, that he that is but angry with his brother without a cause is liable to the judgment of God. You have heard it said, that he only that commits murder with his own hand is liable to the council, or Sanhedrin, as a murderer; but I say unto you, that he that but calls his brother racha, as common a word as ye make it, and a thing of nothing, he is liable to be judged by the Sanhedrin.

“Lastly, He that saith to his brother, Thou fool, wicked one, or cast-away, shall be in danger of hell-fire, ενοχος εις γεενναν πυρος. There are two observable things in the words. The first is the change of case from what was before; there it was said τη κρισει τω σκεδρω, but here, εις γεενναν. It is but an emphatical raising of the sense, to make it the more feeling and to speak home. He that saith to his brother, Raka, shall be in danger of the council; but he that says, Thou fool, shall be in danger of a penalty even to hell-fire. And thus our Saviour equals the sin and penalty in a very just parable. In just anger, with God's just anger and judgment; public reproach, with public correction by the council; and censuring for a child of hell, to the fire of hell.

“2nd. It is not said εις πυρ γεεννης, To the fire of hell, but εις γεενναν πυρος, To a hell of fire; in which expression he sets the emphasis still higher. And, besides the reference to the valley of Hinnom, he seems to refer to that penalty used by the Sanhedrin of burning—the most bitter death that they used to put men to; the manner of which was thus: They set the malefactor in a duoghill up to the knees; and they put a towel about his neck, and one pulled one way, and another the opposite, till, by thus strangling him, they forced him to open his mouth. Then they poured boiling lead into his mouth, which went down into his belly, and so burnt his bowels. Talm. in Sanhedrin. per. 7.

“Now, having spoken in the clause before, of being judged by the Sanhedrin, whose most terrible penalty was this burning, he doth in this clause raise the penalty higher; namely, of burning in hell; not with a little scalding lead, but even with a hell of fire.” It is possible that our Lord might have reference to such customs as these.

CHAPTER VI.

Of alms-giving, 1–5. Of prayer, 6–8. The Lord's prayer, or model according to which Christians should pray, 9–13. Of forgiveness, 14, 15. Of fasting, 16, 17. Of laying up treasures, 18–21. Of the single eye, 22, 23. The impossibility of serving two masters, 24. Of contentment and confidence in the Divine providence, 25–32. Directions about seeking the kingdom of God, 33, 34.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.
TAKE heed that ye do not your “alms before men, to be seen of them: otherwise ye have no reward ^b of your Father which is in heaven.

2 Therefore ^cwhen thou doest

A. M. 4031
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

^a Or, righteousness; Deut. xxiv. 13; Psa. cxii. 9; Dan.

iv. 27; 2 Cor. ix. 9, 10.—^b Or, with.—^c Rom. xii. 8.

NOTES ON CHAP. VI.

Verse 1. That ye do not your alms] Δικαιοσυνην γαρ ου ποιειν, perform not your acts of righteousness—such as alms-giving, fasting, and prayer, mentioned immediately after. Instead of δικαιοσυνην, righteousness, or acts of righteousness, the reading in the text, that which has been commonly received is ελεημοσυνην, alms. But the first reading has been inserted in several editions, and is supported by the Codd. Vatican. and Beza, some others, and several versions, all the Itala except one, and the Vulgate. The Latin fathers have justitiam, a word of the same meaning. Mr. Gregory has amply proved, צדקה tsidekah, righteousness, was a common word for alms among the Jews. Works, 4to. p. 58, 1671. R. D. Kimchi says that צדקה tsidekah, Isa. lix. 14, means alms-giving; and the phrase צדקה נתן natan tsidekah, is used by the Jews to signify the giving of alms. The following passages from Dr. Lightfoot show that it was thus commonly used among the Jewish writers:—

“It is questioned,” says he, “whether Matthew
Vol. I (6)

ωριτ Ελεημοσυνην, alms, or Δικαιοσυνην, righteousness. I answer:—

“I. That our Saviour certainly said צדקה tsidekah, righteousness, (or, in Syriac זדקתא zidkatha.) I make no doubt at all; but, that that word could not be otherwise understood by the common people than of alms, there is as little doubt to be made. For although the word צדקה tsidekah, according to the idiom of the Old Testament, signifies nothing else than righteousness; yet now, when our Saviour spoke these words, it signified nothing so much as alms.

“II. Christ used also the same word זדקתא zidkatha, righteousness, in the three verses next following, and Matthew used the word ελεημοσυνην, alms; but by what right, I beseech you, should he call it δικαιοσυνην, righteousness, in the first verse, and ελεημοσυνην, alms, in the following; when Christ every where used one and the same word? Matthew might not change in Greek, where our Saviour had not changed in Syriac: therefore we must say that the Lord Jesus used the word צדקה tsidekah or זדקתא zidkatha, in these four first verses; but that, speaking in the dialect of com-

A. M. 4031. thine alms, ^d do not sound a trumpet
A. D. 27. before thee, as the hypocrites do in
An. Olymp. the synagogues and in the streets,
CCI. 3.

A. M. 4031. that they may have ^e glory of men. A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27. Verily I say unto you, They have A. D. 27.
An. Olymp. their reward. An. Olymp.
CCI. 3. CCI. 3.

^d Or, cause not a trumpet to be sounded; Prov. xx. 6.

^e 2 Kings x. 16.

mon people, he was understood by the common people to speak of alms. Now they called alms by the name of righteousness, for the fathers of the traditions taught, and the common people believed, that alms contributed very much to justification. Hear the Jewish chair in this matter—For one farthing given to a poor man in alms, a man is made partaker of the beatific vision: where it renders these words, Psa. xvii. 15, I shall behold thy face in righteousness, after this manner, I shall behold thy face, BECAUSE OF ALMS. Bava. Bathra.

“This money goeth for alms, that my sons may live, and that I may obtain the world to come.” Bab. Rosh. Hashshanah.

“A man’s table now expiates by alms, as heretofore the altar did by sacrifice.” Beracoth.

“If you afford alms out of your purse, God will keep you from all damage and harm.” Hieros. Peah.

“MONOBAZES the king bestowed his goods liberally upon the poor, and had these words spoken to him by his kinsmen and friends—‘Your ancestors increased both their own riches, and those that were left them by their fathers; but you waste both your own and those of your ancestors.’ To whom he answered—‘My fathers laid up their wealth on earth: I lay up mine in heaven. As it is written, Truth shall flourish out of the earth, but Righteousness shall look down from heaven. My fathers laid up treasures that bear no fruit; but I lay up such as bear fruit. As it is said, It shall be well with the just, for they shall eat the fruit of their own works. My fathers treasured up, when power was in their hands; but I where it is not. As it is said, Justice and judgment is the habitation of his throne. My fathers heaped up for others; I for myself. As it is said, And this shall be to thee for righteousness. They scraped together for this world. I for the world to come. As it is said, Righteousness shall deliver from death.’ Ibid.” These things are also recited in the Babylonian Talmud.

“You see plainly in what sense he understands righteousness, namely, in the sense of alms: and that sense not so much framed in his own imagination, as in that of the whole nation, and which the royal catachumen had imbibed from the Pharisees his teachers.

“Behold the justifying and saving virtue of alms, from the very work done according to the doctrine of the Pharisaical chair! And hence, the opinion of this efficacy of alms so far prevailed with the deceived people, that they pointed out alms by no other name (confined within one single word) than צדקה tsidekah, righteousness. Perhaps those words of our Saviour are spoken in derision of this doctrine. Yea, give those things which ye have in alms, and behold all things shall be clean to you, Luke xi. 41. With good reason indeed exhorting them to give alms; but yet withal striking at the covetousness of the Pharisees, and confuting their vain opinion of being clean by the washing of their hands, from their own opinion of the efficacy of alms. As if he had said, “Ye assert that alms justifies and saves, and therefore ye call it by the name of righteousness; why therefore do ye affect cleanliness by the washing of hands; and not rather by the performance of charity?” LIGHTFOOT’S Works vol. ii. p. 153.

Before men] Our Lord does not forbid public alms-giving, fasting, and prayer, but simply censures those vain and hypocritical persons who do these things publicly that they may be seen of men, and receive from them the reputation of saints, &c.

Verse 2. Therefore when thou doest thine alms] In the first verse the exhortation is general: Take ye heed. In this verse the address is pointed—and THOU—man—woman—who readest—hearest.

Do not sound a trumpet] It is very likely that this was literally practised among the Pharisees, who seemed to live on the public esteem, and were excessively self-righteous and vain. Having something to distribute by way of alms, it is very probable they caused this to be published by blowing a trumpet or horn, under pretence of collecting the poor; though with no other design than to gratify their own ambition. There is a custom in the east not much unlike this. “The derveeshes carry horns with them, which they frequently blow, when any thing is given to them, in honor of the donor. It is not impossible that some of the poor Jews who begged alms might be furnished like the Persian derveeshes, who are a sort of religious beggars, and that these hypocrites might be disposed to confine their alms-giving to those that they knew would pay them thus honour.” HARMER’S Observat. vol. i. p. 474.

It must be granted, that in the Jewish writings there is no such practice referred to as that which I have supposed above, viz. blowing a trumpet to gather the poor, or the poor blowing a horn when relieved. Hence some learned men have thought that the word שופר shopher, a trumpet, refers to the hole in the public almshouse, into which the money was dropped which was allotted for the service of the poor. Such holes, because they were wide at one end and grew gradually narrow towards the other, were actually termed שופרות shopheroth, trumpets, by the rabbins; of this Schoettgen furnishes several examples. An ostentatious man, who wished to attract the notice of those around him, would throw in his money with some force into these trumpet-resembling holes, and thus he might be said שופר shopher, to sound the trumpet. The Jerusalem Gemara, tract Shekalim, describes these שופרות shopheroth thus—These trumpet holes were crooked, narrow above and wide below, in order to prevent fraud. As our Lord only uses the words, μη καλπίζετε, it may be tantamount to our term jingle. Do not make a public ostentatious jingle of that money which you give to public charities. Pride and hypocrisy are the things here reprehended. The Pharisees, no doubt, felt the weight of the reproof. Still the words may

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

3 But when thou doest alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth:

4 That thine alms may be in secret: and thy Father, which seeth in secret, himself shall reward thee openly.

† Psa. xlv. 21; 2 Cor. ix. 7.

be taken in their literal meaning, as we know that the Moslems, who nearly resemble the ancient Pharisees in the ostentation, bigotry, and cruelty of their character, are accustomed, in their festival of Muhurram, to erect stages in the public streets, and, by the sound of a trumpet, call the poor together to receive alms of rice, and other kinds of food. See WARD.

Works of charity and mercy should be done as much in private as is consistent with the advancement of the glory of God, and the effectual relief of the poor.

In the synagogues and in the streets] That such chests or boxes, for receiving the alms of well-disposed people, were placed in the synagogues, we may readily believe; but what were the streets? Schoettgen supposes that courts or avenues in the temple and in the synagogues may be intended—places where the people were accustomed to walk, for air, amusement, &c., for it is not to be supposed that such chests were fixed in the public streets.

They have their reward.] That is, the honour and esteem of men which they sought. God is under no obligation to them—they did nothing with an eye to his glory, and from Him they can expect no recompense. They had their recompense in this life; and could expect none in the world to come.

Verse 3. Let not thy left hand know] In many cases, works of charity must be hidden from even our nearest relatives, who, if they knew, would hinder us from doing what God has given us power and inclination to perform. We must go even farther; and conceal them as far as is possible from ourselves, by not thinking of them, or eyeing them with complacency. They are given to God, and should be hidden in Him.

Verse 4. Which seeth in secret] We should ever remember that the eye of the Lord is upon us, and that he sees not only the act, but also every motive that led to it.

Shall reward thee openly.] Will give thee the fullest proofs of his acceptance of thy work of faith, and labour of love, by increasing that substance which, for his sake, thou sharest with the poor; and will manifest his approbation in thy own heart, by the witness of his Spirit.

Verse 5. And when thou prayest] Όταν προσευχή. Προσεύχη, prayer, is compounded of προς with, and ευχή a vow, because to pray right, a man binds himself to God, as by a vow, to live to his glory, if he will grant him his grace, &c. Ευχομαι signifies to pour out, prayers or vows, from ev well, and χέω, I pour out; probably alluding to the offerings or libations which were poured out before, or on the altar. A proper idea of prayer is, a pouring out of the soul unto God, as a free-will offering, solemnly and eternally dedicated

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

5 ¶ And when thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the hypocrites are: for they love to pray standing in the synagogues, and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward.

§ Luke xiv. 14.

to him, accompanied with the most earnest desire that it may know, love, and serve him alone. He that comes thus to God will ever be heard and blessed. Prayer is the language of dependence; he who prays not, is endeavouring to live independently of God: this was the first curse, and continues to be the great curse of mankind. In the beginning, Satan said, Eat this fruit; ye shall then be as God; i. e. ye shall be independent: the man hearkened to his voice, sin entered into the world, and notwithstanding the full manifestation of the deception, the ruinous system is still pursued: man will, if possible, live independently of God; hence he either prays not at all, or uses the language without the spirit of prayer. The following verses contain so fine a view, and so just a definition, of prayer, that I think the pious reader will be glad to find them here.

WHAT IS PRAYER?

Prayer is the soul's sincere desire,
Unuttered or expressed,

The motion of a hidden fire
That trembles in the breast:

Prayer is the burden of a sigh,
The falling of a tear,
The upward gleaming of an eye,
When none but God is near.

Prayer is the simplest form of speech
That infant lips can try;
Prayer, the sublimest strains that reach
The Majesty on high:

Prayer is the Christian's vital breath,
The Christian's native air,
His watch-word at the gates of death,
He enters heaven by prayer.

Prayer is the contrite sinner's voice,
Returning from his ways,
While angels in their songs rejoice,
And say, Behold he prays!

The saints in prayer appear as one,
In word, in deed, in mind,
When with the Father and the Son
Their fellowship they find.

Nor prayer is made on earth alone:
The Holy Spirit pleads:
And Jesus, on th' eternal throne,
For sinners intercedes.

"O Thou, by whom we come to God!
The Life, the Truth, the Way,
The path of prayer thyself hast trod,
Lord, teach us how to pray!"

MONTGOMERY

A. M. 4031. 6 But thou, when thou prayest,
A. D. 27. ^henter into thy closet, and when
An. Olymp. thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy CCI. 3. Father which is in secret; and thy Father, which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly.

7 But when ye pray, ⁱuse not vain repetitions, as the heathen do: ^kfor

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3.

^h 2 Kings iv. 33.—ⁱ Eccles. v. 2; Eccclus. vii. 14.

^k 1 Kings xviii. 26, 29.

Thou shalt not be as the hypocrites] ὑποκριται. From υπο under, and κρινομαι to be judged, thought: properly a stage-player, who acts under a mask, personating a character different from his own; a counterfeiter, a dissembler; one who would be thought to be different from what he really is. A person who wishes to be taken for a follower of God, but who has nothing of religion except the outside.

Love to pray standing in the synagogues and in the corners of the streets] The Jewish phylacterical prayers were long, and the canonical hours obliged them to repeat these prayers wherever they happened to be; and the Pharisees, who were full of vain glory, contrived to be overtaken in the streets by the canonical hour, that they might be seen by the people, and applauded for their great and conscientious piety. See Lightfoot. As they had no piety but that which was outward, they endeavoured to let it fully appear, that they might make the most of it among the people. It would not have answered their end to kneel before God, for then they might have been unnoticed by men; and consequently have lost that reward which they had in view: viz. the esteem and applause of the multitude. This hypocritical pretension to devotion is common among the Asiatics. Both Hindoos and Mohammedans love to pray in the most public places, at the landing places of rivers, in the public streets, on the roofs of the covered boats, without the least endeavour to conceal their outside devotion, that they may be seen of men.

Verse 6. But thou, when thou prayest] This is a very impressive and emphatic address. But τινὸς! whosoever thou art, Jew, Pharisee, Christian—enter into thy closet. Prayer is the most secret intercourse of the soul with God, and as it were the conversation of one heart with another. The world is too profane and treacherous to be of the secret. We must shut the door against it: endeavour to forget it, with all the affairs which busy and amuse it. Prayer requires retirement, at least of the heart; for this may be fitly termed the closet in the house of God, which house the body of every real Christian is, 1 Cor. iii. 16. To this closet we ought to retire even in public prayer, and in the midst of company.

Reward thee openly.] What goodness is there equal to this of God! to give, not only what we ask, and more than we ask, but to reward even prayer itself! How great advantage is it to serve a prince who places prayers in the number of services, and reckons to his subjects' account, even their trust and confidence in begging all things of him!

Verse 7. Use not vain repetitions] Μη βαττολογησῃτε. Suidas explains this word well: “πολλολογια, much speaking, from one Battus, who made very prolix hymns, in which the same idea frequently recurred.”

“A frequent repetition of awful and striking words may often be the result of earnestness and fervour. See Dan. ix. 3–20; but great length of prayer, which will of course involve much sameness and idle repetition, naturally creates fatigue and carelessness in the worshipper, and seems to suppose ignorance or inattention in the Deity; a fault against which our Lord more particularly wishes to secure them.” See verse 8. This judicious note is from the late Mr. Gilbert Wakefield, who illustrates it with the following quotation from the Hcautontimorumenos of Terence:—

Ohe! jam decine Deos, uxor, gratulando obtundere, Tuam esse inventam gnatum: nisi illos ex tuo ingenio judicas, Ut nil credas intelligere, nisi idem dictum sit centies.

“Pray thee, wife, cease from stunning the gods with thanksgivings, because thy child is in safety; unless thou judgest of them from thyself, that they cannot understand a thing, unless they are told of it a hundred times.” Heaut. ver. 880.

Prayer requires more of the heart than of the tongue. The eloquence of prayer consists in the fervency of desire, and the simplicity of faith. The abundance of fine thoughts, studied and vehement motions, and the order and politeness of the expressions, are things which compose a mere human harangue, not an humble and Christian prayer. Our trust and confidence ought to proceed from that which God is able to do in us, and not from that which we can say to him. It is abominable, says the HEDAYAH, that a person offering up prayers to God, should say, “I beseech thee, by the glory of thy heavens!” or, “by the splendour of thy throne!” for a style of this nature would lead to suspect that the Almighty derived glory from the heavens; whereas the heavens are created, but God with all his attributes is eternal and inimitable. HEDAYAH, vol. iv. p. 121.

This is the sentiment of a Mohammedan; and yet for this vain repetition the Mohammedans are peculiarly remarkable; they often use such words as the following:—

يا الله يا الله يا الله يا رب يا رب
يا رب يا رب يا حي وقيوم يا حي وقيوم يا
حي وقيوم يا حي وقيوم يا بدع السموات
و الارض يا ذا الجلال والاكرام—وغيره

O God, O God, O God, O God!—O Lord, O Lord, O Lord, O Lord!—O living, O immortal, O living, O immortal, O living, O immortal, O living, O immortal!—O Creator of the heavens and the earth!—O thou who art endowed with majesty and authority! O wonderful, &c. I have extracted the above from a form of prayer used by Tippo Sahib, which I met with in a book of devotion in which there were several prayers

A. M. 1031. they think that they shall be
A. D. 27. heard for their much speak-
An. Olymp. ing.
CCL. 3.

8 Be not ye therefore like unto them: nor

¹ Psa. xxxiii. 15; cxv. 3;

written with his own hand, and signed with his own name.

Of this vain repetition in civil matters, among the Jews, many instances might be given, and not a few examples might be found among Christians. The heathens abounded with them: see several quoted by Lightfoot.—Let the parricide be dragged! We beseech thee, Augustus, let the parricide be dragged! This is the thing we ask, let the parricide be dragged! Hear us, Caesar; let the false accusers be cast to the lion! Hear us, Caesar, let the false accusers be condemned to the lion! Hear us, Caesar, &c. It was a maxim among the Jews, that “he who multiplies prayer, must be heard.” This is correct, if it only imply perseverance in supplication; but if it be used to signify the multiplying of words, or even forms of prayer, it will necessarily produce the evil which our Lord reprehends: Be not as the heathen—use not vain repetition, &c. Even the Christian Churches in India have copied this vain repetition work; and in it the Roman Catholic, the Armenian, and the Greek Churches strive to excel.

As the heathen] The Vatican MS. reads υποκριται, like the hypocrites. Unmeaning words, useless repetitions, and complimentary phrases in prayer, are in general the result of heathenism, hypocrisy, or ignorance.

Verse 8. Your Father knoweth what things ye have need of] Prayer is not designed to inform God, but to give man a sight of his misery; to humble his heart, to excite his desire, to inflame his faith, to animate his hope, to raise his soul from earth to heaven, and to put him in mind that THERE is his Father, his country, and inheritance.

In the preceding verses we may see three faults, which our Lord commands us to avoid in prayer:—

- 1st. HYPOCRISY. Be not as the hypocrites. ver. 5.
- 2ndly. DISSIPATION. Enter into thy closet. ver. 6.
- 3rdly. MUCH SPEAKING, OR UNMEANING REPETITION, Be not like the heathens. ver. 7.

Verse 9. After this manner therefore pray ye] Forms of prayer were frequent among the Jews; and every public teacher gave one to his disciples. Some forms were drawn out to a considerable length, and from these abridgments were made: to the latter sort the following prayer properly belongs, and consequently, besides its own very important use, it is a plan for a more extended devotion. What satisfaction must it be to learn from God himself, with what words, and in what manner, he would have us pray to him, so as not to pray in vain! A king, who draws up the petition which he allows to be presented to himself, has doubtless the fullest determination to grant the request. We do not sufficiently consider the value of this prayer: the respect and attention which it requires; the preference to be given to it; its fulness and perfection; the frequent use we should make of it;

your Father knoweth what things ye have need of, before ye ask him.

A. M. 1031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

9 After this manner therefore pray ye: ¹ Our Luke xi. 2, &c; Rom. viii. 14, 15.

and the spirit which we should bring with it. “Lord, teach us how to pray!” is a prayer necessary to prayer; for unless we are divinely instructed in the manner, and influenced by the spirit of true devotion, even the prayer taught us by Jesus Christ may be repeated without profit to our souls.

Our Father] It was a maxim of the Jews, that a man should not pray alone, but join with the Church; by which they particularly meant that he should, whether alone or with the synagogue, use the plural number as comprehending all the followers of God. Hence, they say, Let none pray the short prayer, i. e. as the gloss expounds it, the prayer in the singular, but in the plural number. See Lightfoot on this place.

This prayer was evidently made in a peculiar manner for the children of God. And hence we are taught to say, not my Father, but our Father. The heart, says one, of a child of God, is a brotherly heart, in respect of all other Christians: it asks nothing but in the spirit of unity, fellowship, and Christian charity; desiring that for its brethren which it desires for itself.

The word Father, placed here at the beginning of this prayer, includes two grand ideas, which should serve as a foundation to all our petitions: 1st. That tender and respectful love which we should feel for God, such as that which children feel for their fathers. 2dly. That strong confidence in God’s love to us, such as fathers have for their children. Thus all the petitions in this prayer stand in strictest reference to the word Father; the first three referring to the love we have for God; and the three last, to that confidence which we have in the love he bears to us.

The relation we stand in to this first and best of beings dictates to us reverence for his person, zeal for his honour, obedience to his will, submission to his dispensations and chastisements, and resemblance to his nature.

Which art in heaven] The phrase אֲבִינוּ שְׁבַשְׁמַיִם, abinu sheboshemayim, our Father who art in heaven, was very common among the ancient Jews; and was used by them precisely in the same sense as it is used here by our Lord.

This phrase in the Scriptures seems used to express:

1st. HIS OMNIPRESENCE. The heaven of heavens cannot contain thee. 1 Kings viii. 27: that is, Thou fillest immensity.

2dly. HIS MAJESTY and DOMINION over his creatures. Art thou not God in heaven, and rulest thou not over all the kingdoms of the heathen? 2 Chron. xx. 6.

3dly. HIS POWER and MIGHT. Art thou not God in heaven, and in thy hand is there not power and might, so that no creature is able to withstand thee? 2 Chron. xx. 6. Our God is in heaven, and hath done whatsoever he pleased. Psa. cxv. 3.

4thly. HIS OMNISCIENCE. The Lord’s throne is in heaven, his eyes behold, his eye-lids try the children of

A. M. 4031. Father which art in heaven, Hal-
A. D. 27. lowed be thy name.
An. Olymp. CCI. 3.
10 Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, ⁿ as it is in A. M. 4031 heaven. A. D. 27.

An. Olymp. CCI. 3.
11 Give us this day our ^o daily bread.

ⁿ Chap. xxvi. 39, 42; Acts xxi. 14.—ⁿ Psa. ciii. 20, 31.

^o See Job xxiii. 12; Prov. xxx. 8.

men. Psa. xi. 4. The Lord looketh down from heaven, he beholdeth all the sons of men. Psa. xxxiii. 13–15.

5thly. His infinite PURITY and HOLINESS. Look down from thy holy habitation, &c. Deut. xxvi. 15. Thou art the high and lofty One, who inhabiteth eternity, whose name is holy. Isa. lviii. 15.

Hallowed] ἁγιασθῆτω. ἁγιαζω from a negative, and γῆ, the earth, a thing separated from the earth, or from earthly purposes and employments. As the word sanctified, or hallowed, in Scripture, is frequently used for the consecration of a thing or person to a holy use or office, as the Levites, first-born, tabernacle, temple, and their utensils, which were all set apart from every earthly, common, or profane use, and employed wholly in the service of God, so the Divine Majesty may be said to be sanctified by us, in analogy to those things, viz. when we separate him from, and in our conceptions and desires exalt him above, earth and all things.

Thy name.] That is, God himself, with all the attributes of his Divine nature—his power, wisdom, justice, mercy, &c.

We hallow God's name, 1st. With our lips, when all our conversation is holy, and we speak of those things which are meet to minister grace to the hearers.

2dly. In our thoughts, when we suppress every rising evil, and have our tempers regulated by his grace and Spirit.

3dly. In our lives, when we begin, continue, and end our works to his glory. If we have an eye to God in all we perform, then every act of our common employment will be an act of religious worship.

4thly. In our families, when we endeavour to bring up our children in the discipline and admonition of the Lord; instructing also our servants in the way of righteousness.

5thly. In a particular calling or business, when we separate the falsity, deception, and lying, commonly practised, from it; buying and selling as in the sight of the holy and just God.

Verse 10. Thy kingdom come.] The ancient Jews scrupled not to say: He prays not at all, in whose prayers there is no mention of the kingdom of God. Hence, they were accustomed to say, "Let him cause his kingdom to reign, and his redemption to flourish: and let the Messiah speedily come and deliver his people."

The universal sway of the sceptre of Christ:—God has promised that the kingdom of Christ shall be exalted above all kingdoms. Dan. vii. 14–27. That it shall overcome all others, and be at last the universal empire. Isa. ix. 7. Connect this with the explanation given of this phrase, chap. iii. 2.

Thy will be done] This petition is properly added to the preceding; for when the kingdom of righteousness, peace, and joy, in the Holy Spirit, is established in the heart, there is then an ample provision made for the fulfilment of the Divine will.

The will of God is infinitely good, wise, and holy;

to have it fulfilled in and among men, is to have infinite goodness, wisdom, and holiness diffused throughout the universe; and earth made the counterpart of heaven.

As it is in heaven.] The Jews maintained, that they were the angels of God upon earth, as those pure spirits were angels of God in heaven; hence they said, "As the angels sanctify the Divine name in heaven, so the Israelites sanctify the Divine name upon earth." See Schoettgen.

Observe, 1st. The salvation of the soul is the result of two wills conjoined: the will of God, and the will of man. If God will not the salvation of man, he cannot be saved: If man will not the salvation God has prepared for him, he cannot be delivered from his sins. 2dly. This petition certainly points out a deliverance from all sin; for nothing that is unholy can consist with the Divine will, and if this be fulfilled in man, surely sin shall be banished from his soul. 3dly. This is farther evident from these words, as it is in heaven; i. e. as the angels do it: viz. with all zeal, diligence, love, delight, and perseverance. 4thly. Does not the petition plainly imply, we may live without sinning against God? Surely the holy angels never mingle iniquity with their loving obedience, and as our Lord teaches us to pray, that we do his will here as they do it in heaven, can it be thought he would put a petition in our mouths, the fulfilment of which was impossible? 5thly. This certainly destroys the assertion: "There is no such state of purification to be attained here, in which it may be said, the soul is redeemed from sinful passions and desires;" for it is on EARTH that we are commanded to pray that this will, which is our sanctification, may be done. 6thly. Our souls can never be truly happy, till our wills be entirely subjected to, and become one with, the will of God. 7thly. How can any person offer this petition to his Maker, who thinks of nothing less than the performance of the will of God, and of nothing more than doing his own?

Some see the mystery of the Trinity in the three preceding petitions. The first being addressed to the Father, as the source of all holiness. The second, to the Son, who establishes the kingdom of God upon earth. The third, to the Holy Spirit, who by his energy works in men to will and to perform.

To offer these three petitions with success at the throne of God, three graces, essential to our salvation, must be brought into exercise; and, indeed, the petitions themselves necessarily suppose them. ΕΛΠΙΣ, Our Father—for he that cometh to God, must believe that he is.

HOPE, Thy kingdom come—For this grace has for its object good things to come.

LOVE, Thy will be done—For love is the incentive to and principle of all obedience to God, and beneficence to man.

Verse 11. Give us this day our daily bread.] The

A. M. 4031.

A. D. 27.

An. Olymp.

CC1.3.

12 And ^p forgive us our debts,

as we forgive our debtors.

13 ^a And lead us not into tempta-tion, but ^r deliver us from evil: ^s For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen.

A. M. 4031.

A. D. 27.

An. Olymp.

CC1.3.

^p Chap. xviii. 21, &c.—^a Chap. xxvi. 41; Luke xxii. 40, 46;
1 Cor. x. 13; 2 Pet. ii. 9; Rev. iii. 10.

^r John xvii. 15.—^s 1 Chron. xxix. 11.

word ἐπιουσιον has greatly perplexed critics and commentators. I find upwards of thirty different explanations of it. It is found in no Greek writer before the evangelists, and Origen says expressly, that it was formed by them, ἀλλ' εἰκε πεπλασθαι ὑπο τῶν εὐαγγελιστῶν. The interpretation of Theophylact, one of the best of the Greek fathers, has ever appeared to me to be the most correct, ἄρτος ἐπὶ τῇ οὐσίᾳ καὶ σὺστασι ἡμῶν ἀνταρκῆς, Bread, sufficient for our substance and support, i. e. 'That quantity of food which is necessary to support our health and strength, by being changed into the substance of our bodies. Its composition is of ἐπὶ and οὐσία, proper or sufficient for support. Mr. Wakefield thinks it probable, that the word was originally written ἐπὶ οὐσίαν, which coalesced by degrees, till they became the ἐπιουσιον of the MSS. There is probably an allusion here to the custom of travellers in the east, who were wont to reserve a part of the food given them the preceding evening to serve for their breakfast or dinner the next day. But as this was not sufficient for the whole day, they were therefore obliged to depend on the providence of God for the additional supply. In Luke xv. 12, 13, οὐσία signifies, what a person has to live on; and nothing can be more natural than to understand the compound ἐπιουσιος, of that additional supply which the traveller needs, to complete the provision necessary for a day's eating, over and above what he had then in his possession. See Harmer.

The word is so very peculiar and expressive, and seems to have been made on purpose by the evangelists, that more than mere bodily nourishment seems to be intended by it. Indeed, many of the primitive fathers understood it as comprehending that daily supply of grace which the soul requires to keep it in health and vigour: He who uses the petition would do well to keep both in view. Observe 1. God is the author and dispenser of all temporal as well as spiritual good. 2. We have merited no kind of good from his hand, and therefore must receive it as a free gift: Give us, &c. 3. We must depend on him daily for support; we are not permitted to ask any thing for to-morrow: give us to-day. 4. That petition of the ancient Jews is excellent: "Lord, the necessities of thy people Israel are many, and their knowledge small, so that they know not how to disclose their necessities: Let it be thy good pleasure to give to every man, what sufficeth for food!"—Thus they expressed their dependence, and left it to God to determine what was best and most suitable. We must ask only that which is essential to our support, God having promised neither luxuries nor superfluities.

Verse 12. And forgive us our debts] Sin is represented here under the notion of a debt, and as our sins are many, they are called here debts. God made man that he might live to his glory, and gave him a law to walk by; and if, when he does any thing that tends not to glorify God, he contracts a debt with Divine Justice, how much more is he debtor when he breaks the law by actual transgression! It has been justly observed, "All the attributes of God are reasons of obedience to man; those attributes are infinite; every sin is an act of ingratitude or rebellion against all these attributes; therefore sin is infinitely sinful."

Forgive us.—Man has nothing to pay: if his debts are not forgiven, they must stand charged against him for ever, as he is absolutely insolvent. Forgiveness, therefore, must come from the free mercy of God in Christ: and how strange is it we cannot have the old debt cancelled, without (by that very means) contracting a new one, as great as the old! but the credit is transferred from Justice to Mercy. While *sinner*s we are in debt to infinite Justice; when *pardon*ed, in debt to endless Mercy: and as a continuance in a state of grace necessarily implies a continual communication of mercy, so the debt goes on increasing ad infinitum. Strange economy in the Divine procedure, which by rendering a man an infinite debtor, keeps him eternally dependent on his Creator! How good is God! And what does this state of dependence imply! A union with, and participation of, the fountain of eternal goodness and felicity!

As we forgive our debtors.] It was a maxim among the ancient Jews, that no man should lie down in his bed, without forgiving those who had offended him. That man condemns himself to suffer eternal punishment, who makes use of this prayer with revenge and hatred in his heart. He who will not attend to a condition so advantageous to himself (remitting a hundred pence to his debtor, that his own creditor may remit him 10,000 talents) is a madman, who, to oblige his neighbour to suffer an hour, is himself determined to suffer everlastingly! This condition of forgiving our neighbour, though it cannot possibly merit any thing, yet it is that condition without which God will pardon no man. See ver. 14 and 15.

Verse 13. And lead us not into temptation] That is, bring us not into sore trial. Πειρασμῶν, which may be here rendered sore trial, comes from πείρω, to pierce through, as with a spear, or spit, used so by some of the best Greek writers. Several of the primitive fathers understood it something in this way; and have therefore added quam ferre non possumus, "which we cannot bear." The word not only implies violent assaults from Satan, but also sorely afflictive circumstances, none of which we have, as yet, grace or fortitude sufficient to bear. Bring us not in, or lead us not in. This is a mere Hebraism. God is said to do a thing which he only permits or suffers to be done.

The process of temptation is often as follows: 1st

A. M. 4031. 14 ¶ For if ye forgive men
A. D. 27. their trespasses, your heavenly Fa-
An. Olymp. ther will also forgive you :
CCI. 3.

A. M. 4031. 15 But if ye forgive not men
A. D. 27. their trespasses, neither will your
An. Olymp. Father forgive your trespasses.
CCI. 3.

† Ecclus. xxviii. 1, &c. ; Mark xi. 25, 26 ; Eph. iv. 32 ; Col. iii. 13.

‡ Chap. xviii. 35 ; James ii. 13.

A simple evil thought. 2ndly. A strong imagination, or impression made on the imagination, by the thing to which we are tempted. 3dly. Delight in viewing it. 4thly. Consent of the will to perform it. Thus lust is conceived, sin is finished, and death brought forth. James i. 15. See also on chap. iv. 1. A man may be tempted without entering into the temptation : entering into it implies giving way, closing in with, and embracing it.

But deliver us from evil] Απο του πονηρου, from the wicked one. Satan is expressly called ο πονηρος, the wicked one. Matt. xiii. 19, and 38, compare with Mark iv. 15 ; Luke viii. 12. This epithet of Satan comes from πονος, labour, sorrow, misery, because of the drudgery which is found in the way of sin, the sorrow that accompanies the commission of it, and the misery which is entailed upon it, and in which it ends.

It is said in the MISHNA, Tit. Beracoth, that Rabbi Judah was wont to pray thus : " Let it be thy good pleasure to deliver us from impudent men, and from impudence : from an evil man and an evil chance ; from an evil affection, an evil companion, and an evil neighbour : from Satan the destroyer, from a hard judgment, and a hard adversary." See Lightfoot.

Deliver us] Ρυσαι ημας—a very expressive word—break our chains, and loose our bands—snatch, pluck us from the evil, and its calamitous issue.

For thine is the kingdom, &c.] The whole of this doxology is rejected by Wetstein, Griesbach, and the most eminent critics. The authorities on which it is rejected may be seen in Griesbach and Wetstein, particularly in the second edition of Griesbach's Testament, who is fully of opinion that it never made a part of the sacred text. It is variously written in several MSS., and omitted by most of the fathers, both Greek and Latin. As the doxology is at least very ancient, and was in use among the Jews, as well as all the other petitions of this excellent prayer, it should not, in my opinion, be left out of the text, merely because some MSS. have omitted it, and it has been variously written in others. See various forms of this doxology, taken from the ancient Jewish writers, in Lightfoot and Schoettgen.

By the kingdom, we may understand that mentioned ver. 10, and explained chap. iii. 2.

By power, that energy by which the kingdom is governed and maintained.

By glory, the honour that shall redound to God in consequence of the maintenance of the kingdom of grace, in the salvation of men.

For ever and ever.] Εις τους αιωνας, to the for evers. Well expressed by our common translation—ever in our ancient use of the word taking in the whole duration of time ; the second ever, the whole of eternity. May thy name have the glory both in this world, and in that which is to come ! The original word αιων comes from αι always, and ων being, or existence.—This is Aristotle's definition of it. See the note on

Gen. xxi. 33. There is no word in any language which more forcibly points out the grand characteristic of eternity—that which always exists. It is often used to signify a limited time, the end of which is not known ; but this use of it is only an accommodated one ; and it is the grammatical and proper sense of it which must be resorted to in any controversy concerning the word. We sometimes use the phrase for evermore : i. e. for ever and more, which signifies the whole of time, and the more or interminable duration beyond it. See on chap. xxv. 46.

Amen.] This word is Hebrew, אמן, and signifies faithful or true. Some suppose the word is formed from the initial letters of אדוני כלך נאמן adoni melech neeman, My Lord, the faithful King. The word itself implies a confident resting of the soul in God, with the fullest assurance that all these petitions shall be fulfilled to every one who prays according to the directions given before by our blessed Lord.

The very learned Mr. Gregory has shown that our Lord collected this prayer out of the Jewish Eucharologies, and gives us the whole form as follows :—

" Our Father who art in heaven, be gracious unto us ! O Lord our God, hallowed be thy name, and let the remembrance of Thee be glorified in heaven above, and in the earth here below ! Let thy kingdom reign over us now, and for ever ! The holy men of old said, remit and forgive unto all men whatsoever they have done against me ! And lead us not into the hands of temptation, but deliver us from the evil thing ! For thine is the kingdom, and thou shalt reign in glory for ever and for evermore." Gregory's Works, 4to. 1671, p. 162. See this proved at large in the collections of Lightfoot and Schoettgenius.

Verse 14. If ye forgive men] He who shows mercy to men receives mercy from God. For a king to forgive his subjects a hundred millions of treasons against his person and authority, on this one condition, that they will henceforth live peaceably with him and with each other, is what we shall never see ; and yet this is but the shadow of that which Christ promises on his Father's part to all true penitents. A man can have little regard for his salvation, who refuses to have it on such advantageous terms. See Quesnel.

Verse 15. But if ye forgive not] He who does not awake at the sound of so loud a voice, is not asleep but dead. A vindictive man excludes himself from all hope of eternal life, and himself seals his own damnation.

Trespasses] Παραπτώματα, from παρα and πτω, to fall off. What a remarkable difference there is between this word and οφειλήματα, debts, in verse 12 ! Men's sins against us are only their stumblings, or fallings off from the duties they owe us ; but our's are debts to God's justice, which we can never discharge. It can be no great difficulty to forgive those, especially when we consider that in many respects

A. M. 4031. 16 Moreover *when ye fast, be
A. D. 27. not, as the hypocrites, of a *sad
An. Olymp. countenance: for they disfigure their
CCL. 3. faces, that they may appear unto men to fast.
Verily I say unto you, They have their reward.

17 But thou, *when thou fastest, *anoint thine head, and wash thy face;

1 Kings xxi. 27; Isa. lviii. 5.— Gen. iv. 4; Psa. xxxv. 13;
Matt. xiv. 15.—* Ruth iii. 3; 2 Sam. xii. 20; Eccles. ix. 8.

we have failed as much, in certain duties which we owed to others, as they have done in those which they owed us. "But I have given him no provocation." Perhaps thou art angry, and art not a proper judge in the matter; but, however it may be, it is thy interest to forgive, if thou expectest forgiveness from God. On this important subject I will subjoin an extract from Mason's Self-knowledge, page 218, 1755.

"Athenodorus, the philosopher, by reason of his old age, begged leave to retire from the court of Augustus, which the emperor granted. In his compliments of leave, he said, 'Remember, Cæsar, whenever thou art angry, that thou say or do nothing before thou hast distinctly repeated to thyself the twenty-four letters of the alphabet.' On which Cæsar caught him by the hand, and said, 'I have need of thy presence still:' and kept him a year longer. This was excellent advice from a heathen; but a Christian may prescribe to himself a wiser rule. When thou art angry, answer not till thou hast repeated the fifth petition of our Lord's prayer—Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors: and our Lord's comment upon it—For if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your heavenly Father forgive your trespasses."

PRAYER to God is considered among the Mohammedans in a very important point of view. It is declared by the Mosliman doctors to be the corner stone of RELIGION, and the pillar of FAITH. It is not, say they, a thing of mere form, but requires that the heart and understanding should accompany it, without which they pronounce it to be of no avail. They direct prayer to be performed five times in the twenty-four hours. 1. Between day-break and sun-rise; 2. Immediately after noon; 3. Immediately before sun-set; 4. In the evening before dark; and 5. Before the first watch of the night.

They hold the following points to be essentially requisite to the efficacy of prayer:—1. That the person be free from every species of defilement. 2. That all sumptuous and gaudy apparel be laid aside. 3. That the attention accompany the act, and be not suffered to wander to any other object. 4. That the prayer be performed with the face toward the temple of Mecca. HEDAYAH. Prel. Dis. pp. 53, 54.

There are few points here but the follower of Christ may seriously consider and profitably practise.

Verse 16. When ye fast] A fast is termed by the Greeks νηστευ, from νη not, and εσθην to eat; hence fast means, a total abstinence from food for a certain time. Abstaining from flesh, and living on fish, vegetables, &c., is no fast, or may be rather considered a 18 That thou appear not unto A. M. 4031.

men to fast, but unto thy Father A. D. 27.
which is in secret; and thy Father, An. Olymp.
which seeth in secret, shall reward thee CCL. 3. openly.

19 ¶ *Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal:

* Ruth iii. 3; Daniel x. 3.—* Prov. xxiii. 4; 1 Tim. vi. 17; Heb. xiii. 5; James v. 1, &c.

burlesque on fasting. Many pretend to take the true definition of a fast from Isaiah lviii. 3, and say that it means a fast from sin. This is a mistake; there is no such term in the Bible as fasting from sin; the very idea is ridiculous and absurd, as if sin were a part of our daily food. In the fast mentioned by the prophet, the people were to divide their bread with the hungry, ver. 7; but could they eat their bread, and give it too? No man should save by a fast: he should give all the food he might have eaten to the poor. He who saves a day's expense by a fast, commits an abomination before the Lord. See more on chap. ix. 15.

As the hypocrites, of a sad countenance] Σκυθρωποι, either from σκυρος sour, crabbed, and ωψ the countenance; or from Σκυθης a Scythian, a marase, gloomy, austere phiz, like that of a Scythian or Tartar. A hypocrite has always a difficult part to act: when he wishes to appear as a penitent, not having any godly sorrow at heart, he is obliged to counterfeit it the best way he can, by a gloomy and austere look.

Verse 17. Anoint thine head and wash thy face] These were forbidden in the Jewish canon on days of fasting and humiliation; and hypocrites availed themselves of this ordinance, that they might appear to fast. Our Lord, therefore, cautions us against this: as if he had said, Affect nothing—dress in thy ordinary manner, and let the whole of thy deportment prove that thou desirest to recommend thy soul to God, and not thy face to men. That factitious mourning, which consists in putting on black clothes, crapes, &c., is utterly inconsistent with the simplicity of the Gospel of Christ; and if practised in reference to spiritual matters, is certainly forbidden here: but sin is so common, and so boldly persisted in, that not even a crape is put on, as an evidence of deploring its influence, or of sorrow for having committed it.

Verse 18. Thy Father which seeth in secret] Let us not be afraid that our hearts can be concealed from God; but let us fear lest he perceive them to be more desirous of the praise of men than they are of that glory which comes from Him.

Openly.] Εν τω φανερω. These words are omitted by nine MSS. in uncial letters; and by more than one hundred others, by most of the versions, and by several of the primitive fathers. As it is supported by no adequate authority, Bengel, Wetstein, Griesbach, and others, have left it out of the text.

Verse 19. Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth] What blindness is it for a man to lay up that as a treasure which must necessarily perish! A heart designed for God and eternity is terribly degraded by

A. M. 4031. 20 ^a But lay up for yourselves
A. D. 27. treasures in heaven, where neither
An. Olymp. moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal:
CCI.3.

21 For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.

22 ¶ ^b The light of the body is the eye:

^a Eccles. xxix. 11; chap. xix. 21; Luke xii. 33, 34, xviii. 22;

being fixed on those things which are subject to corruption. "But may we not lay up treasure innocently?" Yes. 1st. If you can do it without setting your heart on it, which is almost impossible; and 2dly. If there be neither widows nor orphans, destitute nor distressed persons in the place where you live. "But there is a portion which belongs to my children; shall I distribute that among the poor?" If it belongs to your children, it is not yours, and therefore you have no right to dispose of it. "But I have a certain sum in stock, &c.; shall I take that and divide it among the poor?" By no means; for, by doing so, you would put it out of your power to do good after the present division: keep your principal, and devote, if you possibly can spare it, the product to the poor; and thus you shall have the continual ability to do good. In the mean time take care not to shut up your bowels of compassion against a brother in distress; if you do, the love of God cannot dwell in you.

Rust] Or canker, βρωσις, from βρωσκω, I eat, consume. This word cannot be properly applied to rust, but to any thing that consumes or cankers clothes or metals. There is a saying exactly similar to this in the Institutes of MEXU: speaking of the presents made to Brahmins, he says, "It is a gem which neither thieves nor foes take away, and which never perishes." Chapter of Government, Institute 83.

Where thieves do not break through] Διορρυσοντι, literally dig through, i. e. the wall, in order to get into the house. This was not a difficult matter, as the house was generally made of mud and straw, kneaded together like the cobb houses in Cornwall, and other places. See notes on chap. vii. 27.

Verse 20. Lay up—treasures in heaven] "The only way to render perishing goods eternal, to secure stately furniture from moths, and the richest metals from canker, and precious stones from thieves, is to transmit them to heaven by acts of charity. This is a kind of bill of exchange which cannot fail of acceptance, but through our own fault." Quesnel.

It is certain we have not the smallest portion of temporal good, but what we have received from the unmerited bounty of God: and if we give back to him all we have received, yet still there is no merit that can fairly attach to the act, as the goods were the Lord's; for I am not to suppose that I can purchase any thing from a man by his own property. On this ground the doctrine of human merit is one of the most absurd that ever was published among men, or credited by sinners. Yet he who supposes he can purchase heaven by giving that meat which was left at his own table, and that of his servants; or by giving a garment which he could no longer in decency wear, must have if therefore thine eye be single, A. M. 4031.

thy whole body shall be full of A. D. 27.
light. An. Olymp.
CCI.3.

23 But if thine eye be evil, thy whole body shall be full of darkness. If therefore the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness!

1 Tim. vi. 19; 1 Pet. i. 4.—^b Luke xi. 34. 36.

a base ignorant soul, and a very mean opinion of the heaven he hopes for. But shall not such works as these be rewarded? Yes, yes, God will take care to give you all that your refuse victuals and old clothes are worth. Yet he, who through love to God and man, divides his bread with the hungry, and covers the naked with a garment, shall not lose his reward; a reward which the mercy of God appoints, but to which, in strict justice, he can lay no claim.

Verse 21. Where your treasure is] If God be the treasure of our souls, our hearts, i. e. our affections and desires will be placed on things above. An earthly minded man proves that his treasure is below; a heavenly minded man shows that his treasure is above.

Verse 22. The light of the body is the eye] That is, the eye is to the body what the sun is to the universe in the day time, or a lamp or candle to a house at night.

If—thine eye be single] Απλους, simple, uncompounded; i. e. so perfect in its structure as to see objects distinctly and clearly, and not confusedly, or in different places to what they are, as is often the case in certain disorders of the eye: one object appearing two or more—or else in a different situation, and of a different colour to what it really is. This state of the eye is termed, ver. 23, πονηρος evil, i. e. diseased or defective. An evil eye was a phrase in use, among the ancient Jews, to denote an envious, covetous man or disposition; a man who repined at his neighbour's prosperity, loved his own money, and would do nothing in the way of charity for God's sake. Our blessed Lord, however, extends and sublimates this meaning, and uses the sound eye as a metaphor to point out that simplicity of intention, and purity of affection with which men should pursue the supreme good. We cannot draw more than one straight line between two indivisible points. We aim at happiness: it is found only in one thing, the indivisible and eternal God. If the line of simple intention be drawn straight to him, and the soul walk by it, with purity of affection, the whole man shall be light in the Lord; the rays of that excellent glory shall irradiate the mind, and through the whole spirit shall the Divine nature be transfused. But if a person who enjoyed this heavenly treasure permit his simplicity of intention to deviate from heavenly to earthly good; and his purity of affection to be contaminated by worldly ambition, secular profits, and animal gratifications; then, the light which was in him becomes darkness, i. e. his spiritual discernment departs, and his union with God is destroyed: all is only a pulpable obscure; and, like a man who has totally lost his sight, he walks without direction, certainty, or comfort. This state is most forcibly intimated in our

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

24 ¶ No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. ^aYe cannot serve God and mammon.

^c Luke xvi. 13.—^d Gal. i. 10; 1 Tim. vi. 17; James iv. 4; 1 John Lord's exclamation, How great a darkness! Who can adequately describe the misery and wretchedness of that soul which has lost its union with the fountain of all good, and, in losing this, has lost the possibility of happiness till the simple eye be once more given, and the straight line once more drawn.

Verse 24. No man can serve two masters] The master of our heart may be fitly termed the lord that reigns in it. We serve that only which we love supremely. A man cannot be in perfect indifference betwixt two objects which are incompatible: he is inclined to despise and hate whatever he does not love supremely, when the necessity of a choice presents itself.

He will hate the one and love the other.] The word hate has the same sense here as it has in many places of Scripture; it merely signifies to love less—so Jacob loved Rachel, but hated Leah; i. e. he loved Leah much less than he loved Rachel. God himself uses it precisely in the same sense: Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated; i. e. I have loved the posterity of Esau less than I have loved the posterity of Jacob: which means no more than that God, in the course of his providence, gave to the Jews greater earthly privileges than he gave to the Edomites, and chose to make them the progenitors of the Messiah, though they ultimately, through their own obstinacy, derived no more benefit from this privilege than the Edomites did. How strange is it, that with such evidence before their eyes, men will apply this loving and hating to degrees of inclusion and exclusion, in which neither the justice nor mercy of God are honoured!

Ye cannot serve God and mammon.] מַמּוֹן mamon is used for money in the Targum of Onkelos, Exod. xviii. 21; and in that of Jonathan, Judg. v. 19; 1 Sam. viii. 3. The Syriac word מַמְמוֹנָא mammona is used in the same sense, Exod. xxi. 30. Dr. Castel deduces these words from the Hebrew אָמַן aman, to trust, confide; because men are apt to trust in riches. Mammon may therefore be considered any thing a man confides in. Augustine observes, "that mammon, in the Punic or Carthaginian language, signified gain." Lucrum Punicè mammon dicitur. The word plainly denotes riches, Luke xvi. 9, 11, in which latter verse mention is made not only of the deceitful mammon, (τὸ αἰσχροπρεπές) but also of the true (τὸ ἀληθινόν.) St. Luke's phrase, μαμωνὰς αἰσχροπρεπές, very exactly answers to the Chaldee מַמּוֹן רַשָּׁע mamon dishekar, which is often used in the Targums. See more in Wetstein and Parkhurst.

Some suppose there was an idol of this name, and Kircher mentions such a one in his Ædip. Egyptiacus. See Castel.

25 Therefore I say unto you, ^aTake no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on. Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment?

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

ii. 15.—^c Psa. lv. 22; Luke xii. 22, 23; Phil. iv. 6; 1 Pet. v. 7.

Our blessed Lord shows here the utter impossibility of loving the world and loving God at the same time; or, in other words, that a man of the world cannot be a truly religious character. He who gives his heart to the world robs God of it, and, in snatching at the shadow of earthly good, loses substantial and eternal blessedness. How dangerous is it to set our hearts upon riches, seeing it is so easy to make them our God!

Verse 25. Therefore] Διὰ ταῦτα, on this account; viz., that ye may not serve mammon, but have unshaken confidence in God, I say unto you,—

Take no thought] Be not anxiously careful, μη μεριμνᾶτε; this is the proper meaning of the word. Μεριμνα anxious solicitude, from μεριμνᾶν τὸν νοῦν dividing or distracting the mind. My old MS. Bible renders it, be not busy to your life. Prudent care is never forbidden by our Lord, but only that anxious distracting solicitude, which, by dividing the mind, and drawing it different ways, renders it utterly incapable of attending to any solemn or important concern. To be anxiously careful concerning the means of subsistence is to lose all satisfaction and comfort in the things which God gives, and to act as a mere infidel. On the other hand, to rely so much upon providence as not to use the very powers and faculties with which the Divine Being has endowed us, is to tempt God. If we labour without placing our confidence in our labour, but expect all from the blessing of God, we obey his will, co-operate with his providence, set the springs of it a-going on our behalf, and thus imitate Christ and his followers by a sedate care and an industrious confidence.

In this and the following verses, our Lord lays down several reasons why men should not disquiet themselves about the wants of life, or concerning the future.

The first is, the experience of greater benefits already received. Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment? Can he who gave us our body, and breathed into it the breath of life, before we could ask them from him, refuse us that which is necessary to preserve both, and when we ask it in humble confidence?

The clause what ye must eat, is omitted by two MSS., most of the ancient versions, and by many of the primitive fathers. Griesbach has left it in the text with a note of doubtfulness. It occurs again in the 31st verse, and there is no variation in any of the MSS. in that place. Instead of, Is not the life more than, &c., we should read, Of more value; so the word πλεον is used in Num. xxii. 15, and by the best Greek writers; and in the same sense it is used in chap. xxi. 37. See the note there.

A. M. 4031. 26 ' Behold the fowls of the air :
A. D. 27. for they sow not, neither do they
An. Olymp. reap, nor gather into barns ; yet
CCL. 3. your heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they ?

27 Which of you by taking thought can add one cubit unto his stature ?

28 And why take ye thought for raiment ?
Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow ; they toil not, neither do they spin :

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

29 And yet I say unto you, ^b That even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these.

30 Wherefore, ^c if God so clothe the grass of the field, which to-day is, and to-morrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more clothe you, ^k O ye of little faith ?

^f Job xxxviii. 41 ; ^g Psa. cxlvii. 9 ; Luke xii. 24, &c. — ^h Luke ii.

52 ; xii. 25, 26. — ^b Luke xii. 27. — ^c Luke xii. 28. — ^k Ch. xiv. 31.

Verse 26. Behold the fowls of the air] The second reason why we should not be anxiously concerned about the future, is the example of the smaller animals, which the providence of God feeds without their own labour ; though he be not their father. We never knew an earthly father take care of his fowls, and neglect his children ; and shall we fear this from our heavenly Father ? God forbid ! That man is utterly unworthy to have God for his father, who depends less upon his goodness, wisdom, and power, than upon a crop of corn, which may be spoiled either in the field or in the barn. If our great Creator have made us capable of knowing, loving, and enjoying himself eternally, what may we not expect from him, after so great a gift ?

They sow not, neither do they reap] There is a saying among the rabbins almost similar to this—“ Hast thou ever seen a beast or a fowl that had a workshop ? yet they are fed without labour and without anxiety. They were created for the service of man, and man was created that he might serve his Creator. Man also would have been supported without labour and anxiety, had he not corrupted his ways. Hast thou ever seen a lion carrying burthens, a stag gathering summer fruits, a fox selling merchandise, or a wolf selling oil, that they might thus gain their support ? And yet they are fed without care or labour. Arguing therefore from the less to the greater, if they which were created that they might serve me, are nourished without labour and anxiety, how much more I, who have been created that I might serve my Maker ! What therefore is the cause, why I should be obliged to labour in order to get my daily bread ? Answer, SIN.” This is a curious and important extract, and is highly worthy of the reader's attention. See Schoettgen.

Verse 27. Which of you by taking thought can add one cubit unto his stature ?] The third reason against these carking cares is the unprofitableness of human solicitude, unless God vouchsafe to bless it. What can our uneasiness do but render us still more unworthy of the Divine care ? The passage from distrust to apostasy is very short and easy ; and a man is not far from murmuring against Providence, who is dissatisfied with its conduct. We should depend as fully upon God for the preservation of his gifts as for the gifts themselves.

Cubit unto his stature ?] I think ηλικίαν should be rendered age here, and so our translators have rendered the word in John ix. 21, αὐτοῦ ηλικίαν ἐχει he is of age. A very learned writer observes, that no difficulty can arise from applying πηχυν a cubit, a measure of extension, to time, and the age of man : as place and time are both quantities, and capable of increase and diminution : and, as no fixed material standard can be employed in the mensuration of the fleeting particles of time, it was natural and necessary, in the construction of language, to apply parallel terms to the discrimination of time and place. Accordingly we find the same words indifferently used to denote time and place in every known tongue. Lord, let me know the MEASURE of my days ! Thou hast made my days HAND-BREADTHS, Psa. xxxix. 56. Many examples might be adduced from the Greek and Roman writers. Besides, it is evident that the phrase of adding one cubit is proverbial, denoting something minute ; and is therefore applicable to the smallest possible portion of time ; but, in a literal acceptation, the addition of a cubit to the stature, would be a great and extraordinary accession of height. See Wakefield.

Verse 28. And why take ye thought for raiment ?] Or, why are ye anxiously careful about raiment ? The fourth reason against such inquietudes is the example of inanimate creatures : The herbs and flowers of the field have their being, nourishment, exquisite flavours, and beautiful hues from God himself. They are not only without anxious care, but also without care or thought of every kind. Your being, its excellence and usefulness, do not depend on your anxious concern : they spring as truly from the beneficence and continual superintendence of God, as the flowers of the field do ; and were you brought into such a situation, as to be as utterly incapable of contributing to your own preservation and support as the lilies of the field are to theirs, your heavenly Father could augment your substance, and preserve your being, when for his glory and your own advantage.

Consider] Diligently consider this, καταθετε, lay it earnestly to heart, and let your confidence be unshaken in the God of infinite bounty and love.

Verse 29. Solomon in all his glory] Some suppose that as the robes of state worn by the eastern kings were usually white, as were those of the nobles among the Jews, that therefore the lily was chosen for the comparison.

Verse 30. If God so clothe the grass of the field] Christ confounds both the luxury of the rich in their superfluities, and the distrust of the poor as to the necessities of life. Let man, who is made for God

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3. 31 Therefore take no thought, saying, What shall we eat? or, What shall we drink? or, Where-withal shall we be clothed?

32 (For after all these things do the Gentiles seek:) for your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things.

¹ See 1 Kings iii. 13; Psa. xxxvii. 25; Mark x. 30; Luke xii. 31; 1 Tim. iv. 8.

and eternity, learn from a flower of the field how low the care of Providence stoops. All our inquietudes and distrusts proceed from lack of faith: that supplies all wants. The poor are not really such, but because they are destitute of faith.

To-morrow is cast into the oven] The inhabitants of the east, to this day, make use of dry straw, withered herbs, and stubble, to heat their ovens. Some have translated the original word κλίσανον, a still, and intimate that our Lord alludes to the distillation of herbs for medicinal purposes; but this is certainly contrary to the scope of our Lord's argument, which runs thus: If God covers with so much glory things of no farther value than to serve the meanest uses, will he not take care of his servants, who are so precious in his sight, and designed for such important services in the world? See Harmer's Observations.

Verse 31. What shall we eat? or, What shall we drink? &c.] These three inquiries engross the whole attention of those who are living without God in the world. The belly and back of a worldling are his compound god; and these he worships in the lust of the flesh, in the lust of the eye, and in the pride of life.

Verse 32. For after all these things do the Gentiles seek] The fifth reason against solicitude about the future is—that to concern ourselves about these wants with anxiety, as if there was no such thing as a providence in the world; with great affection towards earthly enjoyments, as if we expected no other; and without praying to God or consulting his will, as if we could do any thing without him: this is to imitate the worst kind of heathens, who live without hope, and without God in the world.

Seek] Ἐπιζητεῖ from ἐπι, intensive, and ζητεω, I seek, to seek intensely, earnestly, again and again: the true characteristic of the worldly man; his soul is never satisfied—give! give! is the ceaseless language of his earth-born heart.

Your heavenly Father knoweth, &c.] The sixth reason against this anxiety about the future is—because God, our heavenly Father, is infinite in wisdom, and knows all our wants. It is the property of a wise and tender father to provide necessaries, and not superfluities, for his children. Not to expect the former is an offence to his goodness; to expect the latter is injurious to his wisdom.

Verse 33. But seek ye first the kingdom of God] See on Matt. iii. 7.

His righteousness] That holiness of heart and purity of life which God requires of those who profess 33 But ¹ seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; ² and all these things shall be added unto you.

34 Take therefore no thought for the ³ morrow: for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself. ⁴ Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.

¹ Mark x. 30; Luke xii. 31; Rom. xiv. 17.—² Lev. xxii. 30; Prov. xxvii. 1.—³ Job xiv. 1; Luke xii. 20.

to be subjects of that spiritual kingdom mentioned above. See on chap. v. 20.

The seventh reason against these worldly cares and fears is—because the business of our salvation ought to engross us entirely: hither all our desires, cares, and inquiries ought to tend. Grace is the way to glory—holiness the way to happiness. If men be not righteous, there is no heaven to be had: if they be, they shall have heaven and earth too; for godliness has the promise of both lives. 1 Tim. vi. 3.

All these things shall be added unto you.] The very blunt note of old Mr. Trapp, on this passage, is worthy of serious attention. All things shall be added. "They shall be cast in as an overplus, or as small advantages to the main bargain; as paper and pack-thread are given where we buy spice and fruit, or an inch of measure to an ell of cloth." This was a very common saying among the Jews: "Seek that, to which other things are necessarily connected." "A king said to his particular friend, 'Ask what thou wilt, and I will give it unto thee.' He thought within himself, 'If I ask to be made a general I shall readily obtain it. I will ask something to which all these things shall be added:' he therefore said, 'Give me thy daughter to wife.' This he did knowing that all the dignities of the kingdom should be added unto this gift." See in Schoettgen.

To this verse, probably, belong the following words, quoted often by Clement, Origen, and Eusebius, as the words of Christ: αἰτεῖτε τὰ μεγάλα, καὶ τὰ μικρὰ ὑμῖν προστεθήσεται καὶ αἰτεῖτε τὰ ἐπορρᾶνια, καὶ τὰ ἐπιγεία προστεθήσεται ὑμῖν. "Ask great things, and little things shall be added unto you; ask heavenly things, and earthly things shall be added unto you."

Verse 34. Take therefore no thought] That is, Be not therefore anxiously careful.

The eighth and last reason, against this preposterous conduct, is—that carling care is not only useless in itself, but renders us miserable beforehand. The future falls under the cognizance of God alone: we encroach, therefore, upon his rights, when we would fain foresee all that may happen to us, and secure ourselves from it by our cares. How much good is omitted, how many evils caused, how many duties neglected, how many innocent persons deserted, how many good works destroyed, how many truths suppressed, and how many acts of injustice authorized by those timorous forecasts of what may happen; and those faithless apprehensions concerning the future! Let us do now what God requires of us, and trust the consequences to him. The future time which God would have us foresee and provide for is that of judgment and eternity : and it is about this alone that we are careless !

Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.] Ἀρκετοὶ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἡ κακία αὐτῆς, Sufficient for each day is its own calamity. Each day has its peculiar trials : we should meet them with confidence in God. As we should live but a day at a time, so we should take care 'o suffer no more evils in one day than are necessarily attached to it. He who neglects the present for the future is acting opposite to the order of God, his own interest, and to every dictate of sound wisdom. Let us live for eternity, and we shall secure all that is valuable in time.

There are many valuable reflections in the Abbé Quesnel's work, on this chapter ; and from it several of the preceding have been derived.

CHAPTER VII.

Our Lord warns men against rash judgment and uncharitable censures, 1-5. Shows that holy things must not be profaned, 6 ; gives encouragement to fervent persevering prayer, 7-11. Shows how men should deal with each other, 12. Exhorts the people to enter in at the strait gate, 13, 14 ; to beware of false teachers, who are to be known by their fruits, 15-20. Shows that no man shall be saved by his mere profession of Christianity, however specious, 22, 23. The parable of the wise man who built his house upon a rock, 24, 25. Of the foolish man who built his house, without a foundation, on the sand, 26, 27. Christ concludes his sermon, and the people are astonished at his doctrine, 28, 29.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

JUDGE ^a not, that ye be not judged.

2 For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged : ^b and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again.

3 ^c And why beholdest thou the mote that

^a Luke vi. 37 ; Rom. ii. 1 ; xiv. 3, 4, 10, 13 ; 1 Cor. iv. 3, 5 ; James is in thy brother's eye, but consider-est not the beam that is in thine own eye ?

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

4 Or how wilt thou say to thy brother, Let me pull out the mote out of thine eye ; and, behold, a beam is in thine own eye ?

5 Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam

iv. 11, 12.—^b Mark iv. 24 ; Luke vi. 38.—^c Luke vi. 41, 42.

NOTES ON CHAP. VII.

Verse 1. Judge not, that ye be not judged.] These exhortations are pointed against rash, harsh, and uncharitable judgments, the thinking evil, where no evil seems, and speaking of it accordingly. The Jews were highly criminal here, and yet had very excellent maxims against it, as may be seen in Schoettgen. This is one of the most important exhortations in the whole of this excellent sermon. By a secret and criminal disposition of nature, man endeavours to elevate himself above others, and, to do it more effectually, depresses them. His jealous and envious heart wishes that there may be no good quality found hut in himself, that he alone may be esteemed. Such is the state of every unconverted man ; and it is from this criminal disposition, that evil surmises, rash judgments, precipitate decisions, and all other unjust procedures against our neighbour, flow.

Verse 2. For with what judgment] He who is severe on others will naturally excite their severity against himself. The censures and calumnies which we have suffered are probably the just reward of those which we have dealt out to others.

Verse 3. And why beholdest thou the mote] Καρφός might be translated the splinter : for splinter bears some analogy to beam, but mote does not. I should prefer this word (which has been adopted by some learned men) on the authority of Hesychius, who is a host in such matters ; Καρφός, κεφαλαίον ξύλινον λεπτόν. Karphos is a thin piece of wood, a splinter. It often happens that the faults which we consider as of the first enormity in others are, to our own iniquities, as a chip is, when compared to a large beam. On one side, self-love blinds us to ourselves ; and, on the other, envy and malice give us piercing eyes in respect of others. When we shall have as much zeal to correct ourselves, as we have inclination to reprove and correct others, we shall know our own defects better than now we know those of our neighbour. There is a caution very similar to this of our Lord given by a heathen :—

*Cum tua praevidas oculis mala lippus inunctis.
Cur in amicorum vitiis tam cernis acutum,
Quam aut aquila, aut serpens Epidaurus ?*

HOR. Sat. lib. 1. sat. 3. l. 25-27.

“When you can so readily overlook your own wickedness, why are you more clear-sighted than the eagle or serpent of Epidaurus, in spying out the failings of your friends !” But the saying was very common among the Jews, as may be seen in Lightfoot.

Verse 4. Or how wilt thou say] That man is utterly unfit to show the way of life to others who is himself walking in the way of death.

Verse 5. Thou hypocrite] A hypocrite, who professes to be what he is not, (viz. a true Christian,) is obliged, for the support of the character he has assumed, to imitate all the dispositions and actions of a Christian ; consequently he must reprove sin, and endeavour to show an uncommon affection for the glory of God. Our Lord unmasks this vile pretender to saintship, and shows him that his hidden hypocrisy, covered with the garb of external sanctity, is more abo

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye.

6 ¶ Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you.

7 ¶ Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you:

8 For every one that asketh receiveth, and

^d Prov. ix. 7, 8; xxii. 9; Acts xiii. 45, 46.—^e Ch. xxi. 22; Mark xi. 24; Luke xi. 9, 10; xviii. 1; John xiv. 13; xv. 7; xvi. 23, 24;

minable in the sight of God than the openly professed and practised iniquity of the profligate.

In after times, the Jews made a very bad use of this saying: "I wonder," said Rabbi Zarphon, "whether there be any in this age that will suffer reproof! If one say to another, Cast out the mote out of thine eye, he is immediately ready to answer, Cast out the beam that is in thine own eye." This proverbial mode of speech the Gloss interprets thus: "Cast out, קטן kism, the mote, that is, the little sin, that is in thy hand: to which he answered, Cast out the great sin that is in thine. So they could not reprove, because all were sinners." See Lightfoot.

Verse 6. Give not that which is holy] Τα ἁγία, the holy or sacred thing; i. e. any thing, especially, of the sacriſeial kind, which had been consecrated to God. The members of this sentence should be transposed thus:—

*Give not that which is holy unto the dogs,
Lest they turn again and rend you:
Neither cast ye your pearls before swine,
Lest they trample them under their feet.*

The propriety of this transposition is self-evident. There are many such transpositions as these, both in sacred and profane writers. The following is very remarkable:—

"I am black but comely;
"As the tents of Kedar, as the curtains of Solomon."

That is,

"I am black as the tents of Kedar,
"Comely as the curtains of Solomon."

See many proofs of this sort of writing in Mr. WAKEFIELD'S Commentary.

As a general meaning of this passage, we may just say: "The sacrament of the Lord's supper, and other holy ordinances which are only instituted for the genuine followers of Christ, are not to be dispensed to those who are continually returning like the snarling ill-natured dog to their easily predominant sins of rash judgment, barking at and tearing the characters of others by evil speaking, back biting and slandering; nor to him who, like the swine, is frequently returning to wallow in the mud of sensual gratifications and impurities."

Verse 7. Ask—seek—knock] These three words he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

9 ¶ Or what man is there of you, whom if his son ask bread, will he give him a stone?

10 Or if he ask a fish, will he give him a serpent?

11 If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father which is in heaven give good things to them that ask him?

James i. 5, 6; 1 John iii. 22; v. 14, 15.—^f Prov. viii. 17; Jer. xxix. 12, 13.—^g Luke xi. 11, 12, 13.—^h Gen. vi. 5; viii. 21.

include the ideas of want, loss, and earnestness. Ask: turn beggar at the door of mercy; thou art destitute of all spiritual good, and it is God alone who can give it to thee; and thou hast no claim but what his mercy has given thee on itself.

Seek: Thou hast lost thy God, thy paradise, thy soul.—Look about thee—leave no stone unturned: there is no peace, no final salvation for thee till thou get thy soul restored to the favour and image of God.

Knock: Be in earnest—be importunate: Eternity is at hand! and, if thou die in thy sins, where God is thou shalt never come.

Ask with confidence and humility.

Seek with care and application.

Knock with earnestness and perseverance.

Verse 8. For every one that asketh receiveth] Prayer is always heard after one manner or other. No soul can pray in vain that prays as directed above. The truth and faithfulness of the Lord Jesus are pledged for its success.—Ye SHALL receive—ye SHALL find—it SHALL be opened. These words are as strongly binding on the side of God, as thou shalt do no murder is on the side of man. Bring Christ's word, and Christ's sacrifice with thee, and not one of Heaven's blessings can be denied thee. See on Luke xi. 9.

Verse 9. Or what man is there—whom if his son] Men are exhorted to come unto God, with the persuasion that he is a most gracious and compassionate Parent, who possesses all heavenly and earthly good, knows what is necessary for each of his creatures, and is infinitely ready to communicate that which they need most.

Will he give him a stone?] Will he not readily give him bread if he have it! This was a proverb in other countries; a benefit grudgingly given by an avaricious man is called by Seneca, panem lapidosum, stony bread. Hence that saying in Plautus: Altera manu, fert lapidem, panem ostendit altera.—In one hand he brings a stone, and stretches out bread in the other.

Verse 11. If ye, then, being evil] Πονηροὶ οντες, who are radically and diabolically depraved, yet feel yourselves led, by natural affection, to give those things to your children which are necessary to support their lives, how much more will your Father who is in heaven, whose nature is infinite goodness, mercy, and grace, give good things—his grace and Spirit (πνευμα

A. M. 4031. 12 Therefore all things, ¹ what-
A. D. 27. soever ye would that men should
An. Olymp. do to you, do ye even so to them;
CCI. 3. for ^k this is the law and the prophets.

13 ¶ ¹ Enter ye in at the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many ^{A. M. 4031.}

there be which go in thereat. ^{A. D. 27.}
^{An. Olymp.}
^{CCI. 3.}

14 ^m Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it.

15 ¶ ⁿ Beware of false prophets, ^o which

¹ Tob. iv. 15; Luke vi. 31.—^k Lev. xix. 18; chap. xxii. 40; Rom. xiii. 8, 9, 10; Gal. v. 14; 1 Tim. i. 5.—^l Luke xiii. 24.
^m Or, How.

^o Deut. xiii. 3; Jer. xxiii. 16; chap. xxiv. 4, 5, 11, 24; Mark xiii. 22; Rom. xvi. 17, 18; Eph. v. 6; Col. ii. 8; 2 Pet. ii. 1, 2, 3; 1 John iv. 1.—ⁿ Mic. iii. 5; 2 Tim. iii. 5.

αγιον, the Holy Ghost, Luke xi. 13,) to them who ask him? What a picture is here given of the goodness of God! Reader, ask thy soul, could this heavenly Father reprobate to unconditional eternal damnation any creature he has made? He who can believe that he has, may believe any thing: but still God is LOVE.

Verse 12. Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men] This is a most sublime precept, and highly worthy of the grandeur and beneficence of the just God who gave it. The general meaning of it is this: "Guided by justice and mercy, do unto all men as you would have them to do to you, were your circumstances and theirs reversed." Yet this saying may be misunderstood. "If the prisoner should ask the judge, 'whether he would be content to be hanged, were he in his case,' he would answer, 'No.' Then, says the prisoner, do as you would be done to.—Neither of them must do as private men; but the judge must do by him as they have publicly agreed: that is, both judge and prisoner have consented to a law, that if either of them steal he shall be hanged."—Selden. None but he whose heart is filled with love to God and all mankind can keep this precept, either in its spirit or letter. Self-love will feel itself sadly cramped when brought within the limits of this precept; but God hath spoken it: it is the spirit and design of the law and the prophets; the sum of all that is laid down in the Sacred Writings, relative to men's conduct toward each other. It seems as if God had written it upon the hearts of all men, for sayings of this kind may be found among all nations, Jewish, Christian, and Heathen. See many examples in Welstein's notes.

Verse 13. Enter ye in at the strait gate] Our Saviour seems to allude here to the distinction between the public and private ways mentioned by the Jewish lawyers. The public roads were allowed to be sixteen cubits broad, the private ways only four. The words in the original are very emphatic: Enter in (to the kingdom of heaven) through this strait gate, δια της στενης πυλης, i. e. of doing to every one as you would he should do unto you; for this alone seems to be the strait gate which our Lord alludes to.

For wide is the gate] And very broad, ευρυχωρος, from ευρος, broad, and χωρος, a place, a spacious roomy place, that leadeth forward, απαγονσα, into that destruction, εις την απωλειαν, meaning eternal misery; intimating, that it is much more congenial, to the revengeful, covetous heart of fallen man, to take every advantage of another, and to enrich himself at his expense, rather than to walk according to the rule laid down before, by our blessed Lord, and that acting contrary to it is the way to everlasting misery. With those who say it means repentance, and forsaking sin, I can have no controversy. That is certainly a gate, and a strait one too, through which every sinner must turn to God, in order to find salvation. But the doing to every one as we would they should do unto us, is a gate extremely strait, and very difficult, to every unregenerate mind.

Verse 14. Because strait is the gate] Instead of οτι because, I should prefer τι how, which reading is supported by a great majority of the best MSS., versions, and fathers. How strait is that gate! This mode of expression more forcibly points out the difficulty of the way to the kingdom. How strange is it that men should be unwilling to give up their worldly interests to secure their everlasting salvation! And yet no interest need be abandoned, but that which is produced by injustice and unkindness. Reason, as well as God, says, such people should be excluded from a place of blessedness. He who shows no mercy (and much more he who shows no justice) shall have judgment without mercy. James ii. 13.

Few there be that find it.] The strait gate, στενη πυλη, signifies literally what we call a wicket, i. e. a little door in a large gate. Gate, among the Jews, signifies, metaphorically, the entrance, introduction, or means of acquiring any thing. So they talk of the gate of repentance, the gate of prayers, and the gate of tears. When God, say they, shut the gate of paradise against Adam, He opened to him the gate of repentance. The way to the kingdom of God is made sufficiently manifest—the completest assistance is promised in the way, and the greatest encouragement to persevere to the end is held out in the everlasting Gospel. But men are so wedded to their own passions, and so determined to follow the imaginations of their own hearts, that still it may be said: There are few who find the way to heaven; fewer yet who abide any time in it; fewer still who walk in it; and fewest of all who persevere unto the end. Nothing renders this way either narrow or difficult to any person, but sin. Let all the world leave their sins, and all the world may walk abreast in this good way.

Verse 15. Beware of false prophets] By false prophets we are to understand teachers of erroneous doctrines, who come professing a commission from God, but whose aim is not to bring the heavenly treasure to the people, but rather to rob them of their earthly good. Teachers who preach for hire, having no motive to enter into the ministry but to get a living, as it is ominously called by some, however they may bear the garb and appearance of the innocent useful

A. M. 1031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3. come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravens
wolves.

16 Ye shall know them by their fruits.
Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?

17 Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit.

18 A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit.

19 Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire.

^p Acts xx. 29, 30.—^q Ver. 20; chap. xii. 33.—^r Luke vi.
43, 41.—^s Jer. xi. 19; chap. xii. 33.—^t Chap. iii. 10; Luke
iii. 9; John xv. 2, 6.—^u Hos. viii. 2; chap. xxv. 11, 12; Luke sheep, the true pastors commissioned by the Lord Jesus, or to whatever name, class, or party they may belong, are, in the sight of the heart-searching God, no other than ravenous wolves, whose design is to feed themselves with the fat, and clothe themselves with the fleece, and thus ruin, instead of save, the flock.

Verse 16. Ye shall know them by their fruits. Fruits, in the Scripture and Jewish phraseology, are taken for works of any kind. "A man's works," says one, "are the tongue of his heart, and tell honestly whether he is inwardly corrupt or pure." By these works you may distinguish (επιγινώσκεσθε) these ravenous wolves from true pastors. The judgment formed of a man by his general conduct is a safe one; if the judgment be not favourable to the person, that is his fault, as you have your opinion of him from his works, i. e. the confession of his own heart.

Verse 17. No every good tree As the thorn can only produce thorns, not grapes; and the thistle, not figs, but prickles; so an unregenerate heart will produce fruits of degeneracy. As we perfectly know that a good tree will not produce bad fruit, and the bad tree will not, cannot produce good fruit, so we know that the profession of godliness, while the life is ungodly, is imposture, hypocrisy, and deceit. A man cannot be a saint and a sinner at the same time. Let us remember, that as the good tree means a good heart, and the good fruit, a holy life, and that every heart is naturally reclious; so there is none but God who can pluck up the vicious tree, create a good heart, plant, cultivate, water, and make it continually fruitful in righteousness and true holiness.

Verse 18. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit Love to God and man is the root of the good tree; and from this principle all its fruit is found. To teach, as some have done, that a state of salvation may be consistent with the greatest crimes, (such as murder and adultery in David,) or that the righteous necessarily sin in all their best works, is really to make the good tree bring forth bad fruit, and to give the lie to the Author of eternal truth.

Verse 19. Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit What a terrible sentence is this against Christless pastors, and Christless hearers! Every tree that 20 Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

21 Not every one that saith unto me, "Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven.

22 Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works?

23 And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity.

vi. 46; xiii. 25; Acts xix. 13; Rom. ii. 13; James i. 22.—^v Num. xxiv. 4; John xi. 51; 1 Cor. xiii. 2.—^w Chap. xxv. 12; Luke xiii. 25, 27; 2 Tim. ii. 19.—^x Psa. v. 5; vi. 8; chap. xxv. 41 produceth not good fruit, εκκοπτεται, is to be now cut down; the act of excision is now taking place: the curse of the Lord is even now on the head and the heart of every false teacher, and impenitent hearer.

Verse 20. Wherefore by their fruits, &c. This truth is often repeated, because our eternal interests depend so much upon it. Not to have good fruit is to have evil: there can be no innocent sterility in the invisible tree of the heart. He that brings forth no fruit, and he that brings forth bad fruit, are both only fit for the fire.

Verse 21. Not every one Ου πας, a Hebraism, say some, for no person. It is a Gracism and a Lotinism too: ου παντων θεων, not ALL of the gods, i. e. not ANY of the gods, HOM. Odyss. Z. 240. So TERENCE: Sine omni periculo, without ALL danger, i. e. without ANY danger. And JUVENAL: Sine omni labe, without ALL imperfection, i. e. without ANY. See more in Mr. Wakefield. The sense of this verse seems to be this: No person, by merely acknowledging my authority believing in the Divinity of my nature, professing faith in the perfection of my righteousness, and infinite merit of my atonement, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven—shall have any part with God in glory; but he who doeth the will of my Father—he who gets the bad tree rooted up, the good tree planted, and continues to bring forth fruit to the glory and praise of God. There is a good saying among the rabbins on this subject. "A man should be as vigorous as a panther, as swift as an eagle, as fleet as a stag, and as strong as a lion, to do the will of his Creator."

Verse 22. Many will say to me in that day Εκεινη τη ημερα, in that very day, viz. the day of judgment—have we not prophesied, taught, publicly preached, in thy name; acknowledging thee to be the only Saviour, and proclaiming thee as such to others; cast out demons, impure spirits, who had taken possession of the bodies of men; done many miracles, being assisted by supernatural agency to invert even the course of nature, and thus prove the truth of the doctrine we preached!

Verse 23. Will I profess Ομολογησω, I will fully and plainly tell them, I never knew you—I never ap-

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

24 ¶ Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock :

25 And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that proved of you : for so the word is used in many places, both in the Old and New Testaments. You held the truth in unrighteousness, while you preached my pure and holy doctrine ; and for the sake of my own truth, and through my love to the souls of men, I blessed your preaching ; but yourselves I could never esteem, because you were destitute of the spirit of my Gospel, unholy in your hearts, and unrighteous in your conduct. Alas ! alas ! how many preachers are there who appear prophets in their pulpits ; how many writers, and other evangelical workmen, the miracles of whose labour, learning, and doctrine, we admire, who are nothing, and worse than nothing, before God, because they perform not his will, but their own ? What an awful consideration, that a man of eminent gifts, whose talents are a source of public utility, should be only as a way-mark or finger-post in the way to eternal bliss, pointing out the road to others, without walking in it himself !

¶ St. Luke,

Depart from me] What a terrible word ! What a dreadful separation ! Depart from ME ! from the very Jesus whom you have proclaimed, in union with whom alone eternal life is to be found. For, united to Christ, all is heaven ; separated from him, all is hell.

Verse 24. Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine] That is, the excellent doctrines laid down before in this and the two preceding chapters. There are several parables or similitudes like to this in the rabbins. I shall quote but the two following :—

Rabbi Eleasar said, "The man whose knowledge exceeds his works, to whom is he like ? He is like a tree which had many branches, and only a few roots ; and, when the stormy winds came, it was plucked up and eradicated. But he whose good works are greater than his knowledge, to what is he like ? He is like a tree which had few branches, and many roots ; so that all the winds of heaven could not move it from its place." Pirke Aboth.

Elisha, the son of Abuja, said, "The man who studies much in the law, and maintains good works, is like to a man who built a house, laying stones at the foundation, and building brick upon them ; and, though many waters come against it, they cannot move it from its place. But the man who studies much in the law, and does not maintain good words, is like to a man who, in building his house, put brick at the foundation, and laid stones upon them, so that even gentle waters shall overthrow that house." Aboth Rab. Nath.

Probably our Lord had this or some parable in his eye : but how amazingly improved in passing through his hands ! In our Lord's parable there is dignity, majesty, and point, which we seek for in vain in the Jewish archetype.

house ; and it fell not : for it was founded upon a rock.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

26 And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand :

chap. vi. 47, &c.

I will liken him unto a wise man] To a prudent man—ἀνὴρ ὁρῶν, to a prudent man, a man of sense and understanding, who, foreseeing the evil hideth himself, who proposes to himself the best end, and makes use of the proper means to accomplish it. True wisdom consists in getting the building of our salvation completed : to this end we must build on the Rock, CHRIST JESUS, and make the building firm, by keeping close to the maxims of his Gospel, and having our tempers and lives conformed to its word and spirit ; and when, in order to this, we lean on nothing but the grace of Christ, we then build upon a solid rock.

Verse 25. And the rain descended—floods came—winds blew] In Judea, and in all countries in the neighbourhood of the tropics, the rain sometimes falls in great torrents, producing rivers, which sweep away the soil from the rocky hills ; and the houses, which are built of brick only dried in the sun, of which there are whole villages in the east, literally melt away before those rains, and the land-floods occasioned by them. There are three general kinds of trials to which the followers of God are exposed ; and to which, some think, our Lord alludes here : First, those of temporal afflictions, coming in the course of Divine Providence : these may be likened to the torrents of rain. Secondly, those which come from the passions of men, and which may be likened to the impetuous rivers. Thirdly, those which come from Satan and his angels, and which, like tempestuous whirlwinds, threaten to carry every thing before them. He alone, whose soul is built on the Rock of ages, stands all these shocks ; and not only stands in, but profits by them.

Verse 26. And every one that heareth—and doeth them not] Was there ever a stricter system of morality delivered by God to man, than in this sermon ? He who reads or hears it, and does not look to God to conform his soul and life to it, and notwithstanding is hoping to enter into the kingdom of heaven, is like the fool who built his house on the sand. When the rain, the rivers, and the winds come, his building must fall, and his soul be crushed into the nethermost pit by its ruins. Talking about Christ, his righteousness, merits, and atonement, while the person is not conformed to his word and spirit, is no other than solemn self-deception.

Let it be observed, that it is not the man who hears or believes these sayings of Christ, whose building shall stand, when the earth and its works are burnt up ; but the man who does them.

Many suppose that the law of Moses is abolished, merely because it is too strict, and impossible to be observed ; and that the Gospel was brought in to liberate us from its obligations ; but let all such know,

A. M. 4031.

A. D. 27.

An. Olymp.

CCL. 3.

27 And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell: and great was the fall of it.

28 And it came to pass, when Jesus had that in the whole of the old covenant nothing can be found so exceedingly strict and holy as this sermon, which Christ lays down as the rule by which we are to walk. "Then, the fulfilling of these precepts is the purchase of glory." No, it is the way only to that glory which has already been purchased by the blood of the Lamb. To him that believes, all things are possible.

¹ Chap. xiii. 51; Mark i. 22; vi. 2; Luke iv. 32.

Verse 27. And the rain descended, and the floods came, &c.] A fine illustration of this may be seen in the case of the fishermen in Bengal, who, in the dry season, build their huts on the beds of sand from which the rivers had retired: but when the rain sets in suddenly, as it often does, accompanied with violent north-west winds, and the waters pour down in torrents from the mountains; in one night, multitudes of these buildings are swept away, and the place where they stood is on the next morning undiscoverable.

Verse 28. The people were astonished] Οι οχλοι, the multitudes; for vast crowds attended the ministry of this most popular and faithful of all preachers. They were astonished at his doctrine. They heard the law defined in such a manner as they had never thought of before; and this sacred system of morality urged home on their consciences with such clearness and authority as they had never felt under the teaching of their scribes and Pharisees. Here is the grand difference between the teaching of scribes and Pharisees, the self-created or men-made ministers, and those whom God sends. The first may preach what is called very good and very sound doctrine: but it comes with no authority from God to the souls of the people: therefore, the unholy is unholy still; because preaching can only be effectual to the conversion of men, when the unction of the Holy Spirit is in it; and as these are not sent by the Lord, therefore they shall not profit the people at all. Jer. xxiii. 32.

ended these sayings, ² the people were astonished at his doctrine:

A. M. 4031.

A. D. 27.

An. Olymp.

CCL. 3.

29 ³ For he taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes.

³ John vii. 46.

From one of the royal household of George III., I have received the following anecdote:—The late Bishop F. of Salisbury having procured a young man of promising abilities to preach before the king, and the young man having, to his lordship's apprehension, acquitted himself well, the Bishop, in conversation with the king afterwards, wishing to get the king's opinion, took the liberty to say, "Does not your majesty think that the young man who had the honour to preach before your majesty, is likely to make a good clergyman, and has this morning delivered a very good sermon?" To which the king, in his blunt manner, hastily replied, "It might have been a good sermon, my lord, for aught I know; but I consider no sermon good that has nothing of Christ in it!"

Verse 29. Having authority] They felt a commanding power and authority in his word, i. e. his doctrine. His statements were perspicuous; his exhortations persuasive; his doctrine sound and rational: and his arguments irresistible. These they never felt in the trifling teachings of their most celebrated doctors, who consumed their own time, and that of their disciples and hearers, with frivolous cases of conscience, ridiculous distinctions, and puerile splittings of controversial hairs—questions not calculated to minister grace to the hearers.

Several excellent MSS. and almost all the ancient versions read, καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι, and the Pharisees. He taught them as one having authority, like the most eminent and distinguished teacher, and not as the scribes and Pharisees, who had no part of that unction which he in its plenitude possessed. Thus ends a sermon the most strict, pure, holy, profound, and sublime, ever delivered to man; and yet so amazingly simple is the whole that almost a child may apprehend it! Lord! write all these thy sayings upon our hearts, we beseech thee! Amen.

CHAPTER VIII.

Great multitudes follow Christ, 1. He heals a leper, 2–4. Heals the centurion's servant, 5–13. Heals Peter's wife's mother, 14, 15; and several other diseased persons, 16, 17. Departs from that place, 18. Two persons offer to be his disciples, 19–22. He and his disciples are overtaken with a tempest, which he miraculously stills, 23–27. He cures demoniacs, and the demons which were cast out enter into a herd of swine, which, rushing into the sea, perish, 28–32. The swine-herds announce the miracle to the Gergesenes, who request Christ to depart from their country, 33, 34.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

WHEN he was come down from the ^amountain, great multitudes followed him.

2 ^b And, behold, there came a leper and worshipped him, saying, Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.

3 And Jesus put forth his hand, and touched

^a Chap. v. 1 ; Luke vii. 1.—^b Mark i. 40, &c. ; Luke v. 12, &c.

NOTES ON CHAP. VIII.

Verse 1. From the mountain] That mountain on which he had delivered the preceding inimitable sermon.

Great multitudes followed him.] Having been deeply impressed with the glorious doctrines which they had just heard.

Verse 2. And, behold, there came a leper] The leprosy λεπρα, from λεπς, a scale, was an inveterate cutaneous disease, appearing in dry, thin, white scurfy scales or scabs, either on the whole body, or on some part of it, usually attended with violent itching, and often with great pain. The eastern leprosy was a distemper of the most loathsome kind, highly contagious, so as to infect garments, (Lev. xiii. 47, &c.) and houses, (Lev. xiv. 34, &c.) and was deemed incurable by any human means. Among the Jews, God alone was applied to for its removal ; and the cure was ever attributed to his sovereign power.

The various symptoms of this dreadful disorder, which was a striking emblem of sin, may be seen in Lev. xiii. xiv., where also may be read the legal ordinances concerning it ; which, as on the one hand, they set forth how odious sin is to God, so, on the other, they represent the cleansing of our pollutions by the sacrifice and resurrection of Christ, by the sprinkling and application of his blood, and by the sanctifying and healing influences of the Holy Spirit.

The Greek name λεπρα, seems to have been given to this distemper, on account of the thin, white scales (λεπιδες) with which the bodies of the leprous were sometimes so covered as to give them the appearance of snow, Exod. iv. 6 ; Num. xii. 10 ; 2 Kings v. 27.

Herodotus, lib. 1, mentions this disorder as existing, in his time, among the Persians. He calls it λευκη, the white scab ; and says, that those who were affected with it were prohibited from mingling with the other citizens ; and so dreadful was this malady esteemed among them that they considered it a punishment on the person, from their great god, the sun, for some evil committed against him. Dr. Mead mentions a remarkable case of this kind which came under his own observation. "A countryman whose whole body was so miserably seized with it that his skin was shining as covered with flakes of snow, and as the furfaceous or bran-like scales were daily rubbed off, the flesh appeared quick or raw underneath." See the doctor's Medica Sacra, chap. ii. It was probably on account of its tendency to produce this disorder, in that warm climate, that God forbade the use of swine's flesh to the Jews. Feeding on this crude aliment, in union with the intemperate use of ardent spirits, is, in all likelihood, the grand cause of the scurvy, which him, saying, I will ; be thou clean. A. M. 4031.

And immediately his leprosy was A. D. 27.
cleansed. An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

4 And Jesus saith unto him, ^c See thou tell no man ; but go thy way, show thyself to the priest, and offer the gift that ^d Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them.

^c Chap. ix. 30 ; Mark v. 43.—^d Lev. xiv. 3, 4, 10 ; Luke v. 14.

is so common in the British nations, and which would probably assume the form and virulence of a leprosy, were our climate as hot as that of Judea. See the notes on Exod. iv. 6, and on Levit. xiii. and xiv.

Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.] As this leper may be considered as a fit emblem of the corruption of man by sin ; so may his cure, of the redemption of the soul by Christ. A sinner, truly penitent, seeks God with a respectful faith ; approaches him in the spirit of adoration ; humbles himself under his mighty hand, acknowledging the greatness of his fall, and the vileness of his sin ; his prayer, like that of the leper, should be humble, plain, and full of confidence in that God who can do all things, and of dependence upon his will or mercy, from which all good must be derived. It is peculiar to God that he need only will what he intends to perform. His power is his will. The ability of God to do what is necessary to be done, and his willingness to make his creatures happy, should be deeply considered by all those who approach him in prayer. The leper had no doubt of the former, but he was far from being equally satisfied in respect of the latter.

Verse 3. Jesus put forth his hand—I will ; be thou clean.] The most sovereign authority is assumed in this speech of our blessed Lord—I WILL : there is here no supplication of any power superior to his own ; and the event proved to the fullest conviction, and by the clearest demonstration, that his authority was absolute, and his power unlimited. Be thou cleansed, καθαρισθητι ; a single word is enough.

And immediately his leprosy was cleansed.] What an astonishing sight ! A man whose whole body was covered over with the most loathsome disease, cleansed from it in a moment of time ! Was it possible for any soul to resist the evidence of this fact ! This action of Christ is a representation of that invisible hand which makes itself felt by the most insensible heart ; of that internal word which makes itself heard by the most deaf ; and of that supreme will which works every thing according to its own counsel.

Verse 4. Jesus saith—See thou tell no man] Had our Lord, at this early period, fully manifested himself as the Messiah, the people in all likelihood would have proclaimed him King ; this, however, refused by him, must have excited the hatred of the Jewish rulers, and the jealousy of the Roman government ; and, speaking after the manner of men, his farther preachings and miracles must have been impeded. This alone seems to be the reason why he said to the leper, See thou tell no man.

Show thyself to the priest] This was to conform to the law instituted in this case, Lev. xiv. 1, &c.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

5 ¶ And when Jesus was entered into Capernaum, there came unto him a centurion, beseeching him,

6 And saying, Lord, my servant lieth at home sick of the palsy, grievously tormented.

7 And Jesus saith unto him, I will come and heal him.

8 The centurion answered and said, Lord,

• Luke vii. 1, &c.—† Luke xv. 19, 21.

Offer the gift] This gift was two living, clean birds, some cedar wood, with scarlet and hyssop, Lev. xiv. 4, which were to be brought for his cleansing; and, when clean, two he lambs, one ewe lamb, three tenth deals of flour, and one log of oil, ver. 10; but if the person was poor, then he was to bring one lamb, one tenth deal of flour, one log of oil, and two turtle doves, or young pigeons, ver. 21, 22. See the notes on Lev. xiv.

Now all this was to be done for a testimony to them; to prove that this leper, who was doubtless well known in the land, had been thoroughly cleansed; and thus, in this private way, to give full proof to the priesthood that Jesus was the true Messiah. The Jewish rabbins allowed that curing the lepers should be a characteristic of the Messiah; (see Bishop Chandler's Vindication;) therefore the obstinacy of the priests, &c., in rejecting Christ, was utterly inexcusable.

Verse 5. Capernaum] See chap. iv. 13.

A centurion] Εκατονταρχος. A Roman military officer who had the command of one hundred men.

Verse 6. Lord] Rather, Sir, for so the word κυrie should always be translated when a Roman is the speaker.

Lieth at home] Βεβληται, lieth all along; intimating that the disease had reduced him to a state of the utmost impotence, through the grievous torments with which it was accompanied.

Sick of the palsy] Or paralytic. See chap. iv. 24. This centurion did not act as many masters do when their servants are afflicted, have them immediately removed to an infirmary, often to a work-house; or sent home to friends or relatives, who probably either care nothing for them, or are unable to afford them any of the comforts of life. In case of a contagious disorder, it may be necessary to remove an infected person to such places as are best calculated to cure the distemper, and prevent the spread of the contagion. But, in all common cases, the servant should be considered as a child, and receive the same friendly attention. If, by a hasty, unkind, and unnecessary removal, the servant die, are not the master and mistress murderers before God!

Verse 7. I will come and heal him.] Εγω ελθων θεραπευσω αυτον. I am coming, and will heal him. This saying is worthy of observation. Jesus did not positively say, I will come and heal him; this could not have been strictly true, because our Lord healed him without going to the house: and the issue shows that the words ought to be taken in the most literal sense:

† I am not worthy that thou shouldest come under my roof: but speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed.

9 For I am a man under authority, having soldiers under me: and I say to this man, Go, and he goeth; and to another, Come, and he cometh; and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth it.

ε Psa. cvii. 20.

thus understood, they contained a promise which it seems none of them distinctly comprehended. Foreseeing the exercise of the centurion's faith, he promises that while he is coming, ere he arrives at the house, he will heal him, and this was literally done, verse 13. There is much beauty in this passage.

Verse 8. But speak the word only] Or instead of ειπε λογον, read ειπε λογω, speak by word or command. This reading is supported by the most extensive evidence from MSS., versions, and fathers. See here the pattern of that living faith and genuine humility which ought always to accompany the prayer of a sinner: Jesus can will away the palsy, and speak away the most grievous torments. The first degree of humility is to acknowledge the necessity of God's mercy, and our own inability to help ourselves: the second, to confess the freeness of his grace, and our own utter unworthiness. Ignorance, unbelief, and presumption will ever retard our spiritual cure.

Verse 9. For I am a man under authority] That is, under the authority of others. This verse has given considerable embarrassment to commentators and critics. I believe the paraphrase given above to be the true meaning of the evangelist. To make this matter more plain, let it be observed, that the Roman foot was divided into three grand parts, Hastati, Principes, and Triarii. Each of these grand divisions was composed of thirty manipuli or companies; and every manipulus made two centuries or companies of one hundred men. Every manipulus had two centurions; but these were very far from being equal in rank and honour, though possessing the very same office. The Triarii and Principes were esteemed the most honourable, and had their centurions elected first; and these first elected centurions took precedence of the centurions of the Hastati, who were elected last. The centurion in the text was probably one of this last order; he was under the authority of either the Principes or Triarii, and had none under him but the hundred men whom he commanded, and who appear to have been in a state of the most loving subjection to him. The argument of the centurion seems to run thus. If I, who am a person subject to the control of others, yet have some so completely subject to myself, that I can say to one, Come, and he cometh, to another, Go, and he goeth, and to my slave (τω δουλω μου) Do this, and he doeth it; how much more then canst thou accomplish whatsoever thou wilt, being under no control, and having all things under thy command. He makes a proper use of his authority, who, by it,

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.
10 When Jesus heard it he marvelled, and said to them that followed, Verily I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel.

11 And I say unto you, that ^hmany shall come from the east and west, and shall sit raises his mind to the contemplation of the sovereign power of God, taking occasion from it to humble himself before Him who has all power in heaven and earth, and to expect all good from him.

^h Gen. xii. 3; Isa. ii. 2, 3; xi. 10; Mal. i. 11; Luke xiii. 29; Acts x. 45; xi. 18; xiv. 27; Rom. xv. 9, &c.; Eph. iii. 6; Chap. xxi. 43.

There are two beautiful passages in Arrian that tend much to illustrate this speech of the centurion. Καταταγεις Αγαμεμνων, λεγει μοι, πορευου προς τον Αχιλλεα, και αποσπασον την Βρισηίδα, πορευομαι. Ερχου, ερχομαι. "He who personates Agamemnon says to me, Go to Achilles, and bring hither Briseis: I go. He says, Come hither: I come." Dissert. I. i. c. 25. p. 97.

Οταν ο Θεος ειπη τοις φυτοις ανθειν, ανθει. Οταν ειπη βλασανειν, βλασανει. Οταν εκφερειν τον καρπον, εκφερει. Οταν πεταινειν, πεταινει. Οταν παλιν αποβαλλειν, και φυλλορροειν, και αυτα εις αυτα συνειλουμενα εφ' ηνυχιας μενειν, και αναπνευσθαι, μενει και αναπνευεται. "When God commands the plants to blossom, they bear blossoms. When he commands them to bear seed, they bear seed. When he commands them to bring forth fruit, they put forth their fruits. When he commands them to ripen, they grow ripe. When he commands them to fade, and shed their leaves, and remain inactive, involved in themselves, they thus remain, and are inactive." Cap. 14. p. 62. See Raphelius.

This mode of speech fully marks supreme and uncontrolled power, and that power put forth by a sovereign will to effect any purpose of justice or mercy. And God said, let there be light, and there was light, is a similar expression.

Verse 10. I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel. That is, I have not found so great an instance of confidence and faith in my power, even among the Jews, as this Roman, a Gentile, has shown himself to possess.

From Luke vii. 5, where it is said of this centurion, "he loved our nation, and has built us a synagogue," we may infer that this man was like the centurion mentioned Acts x. 1; a devout Gentile, a proselyte of the gate, one who believed in the God of Israel, without conforming to the Jewish ritual, or receiving circumcision. Though the military life is one of the most improper nurses for the Christian religion, yet in all nations there have been found several instances of genuine humility, and faith in God, even in soldiers; and perhaps never more, in the British military, than at present, A. D. 1831.

Verse 11. Many shall come from the east and west] Men of every description, of all countries, and of all professions; and shall sit down, that is, to meat, for this is the proper meaning of ανακληθουσινται, intimating the recumbent posture used by the easterns at their meals. The rabbins represent the blessedness

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.
down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven.

12 But ⁱthe children of the kingdom ^kshall be cast ^lout into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

^k Chap. xiii. 42, 50; xxii. 13; xxiv. 51; xxv. 30; Luke xiii. 28; 2 Pet. ii. 17; Jude 13.—Psa. xlix. 19; Rev. xvi. 9, 11.

of the kingdom of God under the notion of a banquet. See several proofs of this in Schoettgenius. This was spoken to soften the unreasonable prejudices of the Jews, which they entertained against the Gentiles, and to prepare them to receive their brethren of mankind into religious fellowship with themselves, under the Christian dispensation.

With Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob] In the closest communion with the most eminent followers of God. But if we desire to inherit the promises, we must be followers of them who through faith and patience enjoy them. Let us therefore imitate Abraham in his faith, Isaac in his obedience unto death, and Jacob in his hope and expectation of good things to come, amidst all the evils of this life, if we desire to reign with them.

Verse 12. Shall be cast out into outer darkness] As the enjoyment of that salvation which Jesus Christ calls the kingdom of heaven is here represented under the notion of a nuptial festival, at which the guests sat down in a reclining posture, with the master of the feast; so the state of those who were excluded from the banquet is represented as deep darkness; because the nuptial solemnities took place at night. Hence, at those suppers, the house of reception was filled with lights called δαδες, λαμπαδες, λυκνεια, φανοι, torches, lamps, candles, and lanthorns, by Athenaus and Plutarch: so they who were admitted to the banquet had the benefit of the light; but they who were shut out were in darkness, called here outer darkness, i. e. the darkness on the outside of the house in which the guests were; which must appear more abundantly gloomy, when compared with the profusion of light within the guest-chamber. And because they who were shut out were not only exposed to shame, but also to hunger and cold; therefore it is added, there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. As these feasts are often alluded to by the evangelists, I would observe, once for all:—that they who were invited to them entered by a gate designed to receive them; whence Christ, by whom we enter into the marriage feast, compares himself to a gate, John x. 1, 2, 7, 9. This gate, at the time the guests were to come, was made narrow, the wicket only being left open, and the porter standing there, that they who were not bidden to the marriage might not rush into it. Hence Christ exhorts the Jews to enter in at the strait gate, chap. vii. 13, &c. When all that were invited were once come, the door was presently shut, and was not to be opened to any who came too late, and stood knocking without: so after the wise virgins had entered with the bridegroom, the gate was shut, and was not opened to the foolish virgins, who

A. M. 4031.

A. D. 27.

An. Olymp.

CCL. 3.

13 And Jesus said unto the centurion, Go thy way; ^mand as thou hast believed, so be it stood knocking without, chap. xxv. 11. And in this sense we are to understand the words of Christ, Luke xiii. 24, 25. Many shall seek to enter in, but shall not be able. Why? because the master of the house hath risen up and shut to the door; they would not come to him when they might, and now the day of probation is ended, and they must be judged according to the deeds done in the body. See Whitby on the place. How many of those who are called Christians suffer the kingdom, the graces, and the salvation which they had in their hands, to be lost; while West-India negroes, American Indians, Hindoo polytheists, and atheistic Hottentots obtain salvation! An eternity of darkness, fears, and pains, for comparatively a moment of sensual gratification, how terrible the thought! What outer darkness, or το σκοτος το εξωτερον, that darkness, that which is outermost, may refer to, in eternal damnation, is hard to say: what it alludes to I have already mentioned: but as the words βρυχυος των οδοντων, gnashing or CHATTERING of teeth, convey the idea, not only of extreme anguish, but of extreme cold; some have imagined that the punishment of the damned consists in sudden transitions from extreme heat to extreme cold; the extremes of both I have found to produce exactly the same sensation.

^m Mark v. 34;

MILTON happily describes this in the following inimitable verses, which a man can scarcely read, even at midsummer, without shivering.

Beyond this flood a frozen continent
Lies dark and wild, beat with perpetual storms
Of whirlwind and dire hail——

—— the parching air
Burns froze, and cold performs the effect of fire.
Thither by harpy-footed furies haled,
At certain revolutions all the damn'd
Are brought; and feel by turns the bitter change
Of fierce extremes, extremes by change more fierce,
From beds of raging fire, to starve in ice,

—— and there to pine
Immovable, infix'd, and frozen round
Periods of time: thence hurried back to fire.

Parad. Lost, book ii. line 586.

There is a passage in the Vulgate, Job xxiv. 19, that might have helped Milton to this idea. Ad nimium calorem transeat ab aquis nivium. "Let him pass to excessive heat, from waters of snow." This reading, which is found only in this form in the Vulgate, is vastly expressive. Every body knows that snow-water feels colder than snow itself, even when both are of the same temperature, viz. 32°, because the human body, when in contact with snow water, cools quicker than when in contact with snow. Another of our poets has given us a most terrible description of perdition on the same ground.

The once pamper'd spirit
To hathe in fiery floods, or to reside done unto thee. And his servant was healed in the selfsame hour.

I

A. M. 4031.

A. D. 27.

An. Olymp.

CCL. 3.

Luke vii. 10, 50.

*In thrilling regions of thick-ribbed ice;
To be imprison'd in the viewless winds,
And blown with restless violence round about
This pendant world; or to be worse than worst
Of those that lawless and ineertain thoughts
Imagine——*

Similar to this is that dreadful description of the torments of the wicked given in the Institutes of Menu: "The wicked shall have a sensation of agony in Tamisa, or utter darkness, and in other seats of horror; in Asipatrarana, or the sword-leaved forest, and in different places of binding fast, and of rending: multifarious tortures await them: they shall be mangled by ravens and owls, and shall swallow cakes boiling hot, and shall walk over inflamed sands, and shall feel the pangs of being baked like the vessels of a potter: they shall assume the forms of beasts continually miserable, and suffer alternate afflictions from extremities of cold and heat; surrounded with terrors of various kinds. They shall have old age without resource; diseases attended with anguish; pangs of innumerable sorts, and, lastly, unconquerable death."

Institutes of Menu, chap. xii. Inst. 75–80.

In the Zend Avesta, the place of wicked spirits is termed, "The places of darkness, the germs of the thickest darkness." An uncommonly significant expression: Darkness has its birth there: there are its seeds and buds, there it vegetates everlastingly, and its eternal fruit is—darkness!

See Zend Avesta, vol. i. Vendidad sadi, Fargard. xviii. p. 412.

And is this, or any thing as bad as this, HELL? Yes, and worse than the worst of all that has already been mentioned. Hear Christ himself. There their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched! Great God! save the reader from this damnation!

Verse 13. As thou hast believed; so be it done] Let the mercy thou requestest be equal to the faith thou hast brought to receive it by. According to thy faith be it done unto thee, is a general measure of God's dealings with mankind. To get an increase of faith is to get an increase of every grace which constitutes the mind that was in Jesus, and prepares fully for the enjoyment of the kingdom of God. God is the same in the present time which he was in ancient days; and miracles of healing may be wrought on our own bodies and souls, and on those of others, by the instrumentality of our faith. But, alas! where is faith to be found!

And his servant was healed in the selfsame hour.] Εν τη ωρα εκείνη, in that very hour. Faith is never exercised in the power and goodness of God till it is needed; and, when it is exercised, God works the miracle of healing. Christ never says, Believe now for a salvation which thou now needest, and I will give it to thee in some future time. That salvation

A. M. 4031. 14 ¶ And when Jesus was come
A. D. 27. into Peter's house, he saw ° his
An. Olymp. wife's mother laid, and sick of CCI. 3. a fever.

15 And he touched her hand, and the fever left her: and she arose and ministered unto them.

16 ¶ When the even was come, they brought unto him many that were possessed with devils: and he cast out the spirits with which is expected through works or sufferings must of necessity be future, as there must be time to work or suffer in; but the salvation which is by faith must be for the present moment, for this simple reason, it is BY FAITH, that God may be manifested and honoured; and not by works or by sufferings, lest any man should boast. To say that, though it is of faith, yet it may, and must in many cases, be delayed, (though the person is coming in the most genuine humility, deepest contrition, and with the liveliest faith in the blood of the Lamb,) is to say that there is still something necessary to be done, either on the part of the person, or on the part of God, in order to procure it; neither of which positions has any truth in it.

° Mark i. 29, 30, 31; Luke iv. 38, 39.—° 1 Corinthians ix. 5.

Verse 14. Peter's house] That Peter lived at Capernaum, and that Christ lodged with him, is fully evident from this verse compared with chap. xvii. 24.

Peter's—wife's mother] Learn hence, says Theophylact, that marriage is no hinderance to virtue, since the chief of the apostles had his wife. Marriage is one of the first of Divine institutions, and is a positive command of God. He says, the state of celibacy is not good, Gen. ii. 18. Those who pretend to say that the single state is more holy than the other slander their Maker, and say in effect, "We are too holy to keep the commandments of God."

Verse 15. He touched her hand] Can any thing on this side the unlimited power of God effect such a cure with only a touch? If the Scriptures had not spoken of the divinity of Christ, these proofs of his power must have demonstrated it to the common sense of every man whose creed had not previously blinded him.

Ministered unto them.] Avrois, them, is the reading of most of the printed editions, but avrw, to him, has the utmost evidence in its support from MSS., versions, and fathers. Serving Christ in his ordinances and in his members is the best proof we can give to others of our being soundly restored to spiritual health.

Verse 16. When the even was come] The Jews kept their sabbath from evening to evening, according to the law, Lev. xxiii. 32, From evening to evening shall ye celebrate your sabbath. And the rabbins say, The sabbath doth not enter but when the sun is set. Hence it was that the sick were not brought out to our Lord till after sun-set, because then the sabbath was ended.

his word, and healed all that were sick:

17 That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, ¶ Himself took our infirmities, and bare our sicknesses.

18 ¶ Now when Jesus saw great multitudes about him, he gave commandment to depart unto the other side.

19 ¶ And a certain scribe came, and said

¶ Mark i. 32, &c.; Luke iv. 40, 41.—¶ Isa. liii. 4; 1 Pet. ii. 24.
° Luke ix. 57, 58.

Many that were possessed with devils] Dr. Lightfoot gives two sound reasons why Judea, in our Lord's time, abounded with demoniacs. First, Because they were then advanced to the very height of impiety. See what Josephus, their own historian, says of them: There was not (said he) a nation under heaven more wicked than they were. See on Rom. i. 1. Secondly, Because they were then strongly addicted to magic, and so, as it were, invited evil spirits to be familiar with them. It seems strange to find men at this distance of time questioning the truth of that which neither scribes nor Pharisees then doubted; nor did they ever object against the pretensions of Christ and his apostles to cast them out. And, if the whole business of demonism had been only a vulgar error, (as wise men now tell us,) what a fine opportunity had the wise men then, to unmask the whole matter, and thus pour contempt on the pretensions of our blessed Lord and his followers, who held it to be one proof of their Divine mission, that demons were subject to them!

And healed all that were sick] Not a soul did the Lord Jesus ever reject, who came to him soliciting his aid. Need any sinner despair who comes to him, conscious of his spiritual malady, to be healed by his merciful hand?

Verse 17. Himself took our infirmities] The quotation is taken from Isa. liii. 4, where the verb נָסָא nasa signifies to bear sin, so as to make atonement for it. And the rabbins understand this place to speak of the sufferings of the Messiah for the sins of Israel; and say that all the diseases, all the griefs, and all the punishments due to Israel shall be borne by him. See Synopsis Sohar. Christ fulfils the prophecies in all respects, and is himself the completion and truth of them, as being the lamb and victim of God, which bears and takes away the sin of the world. The text in Isaiah refers properly to the taking away of sin; and this in the evangelist, to the removal of corporal afflictions: but, as the diseases of the body are the emblems of the sin of the soul, Matthew, referring to the prediction of the prophet, considered the miraculous healing of the body as an emblem of the soul's salvation by Christ Jesus.

Verse 18. Unto the other side.] Viz. of the lake of Gennesareth, whence he proceeded to the country of the Gergesenes, ver. 28.

Verse 19. A certain scribe] Though ἐκ γραμματέως, one scribe, may be considered as a Hebraism, yet it

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3.

unto him, Master, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest.

20 And Jesus saith unto him, The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the son of man hath not where to lay his head.

21 "And another of his disciples said unto him, Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father.

22 But Jesus said unto him, Follow me;

* Luke ix. 59, 60.—† See 1 Kings xix. 20.

is probable that the literal construction of it was intended, to show that few of this class came to the Lord Jesus for instruction or salvation.

Master] Rather, teacher, διδάσκαλε, from διδάσκω, I teach, which itself seems to be derived from δείκω, I show, and means the person who shows or points out a particular way or science.

I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest.] A man who is not illuminated by the Spirit of God thinks himself capable of any thing: he alone who is divinely taught knows he can do nothing but through Christ strengthening him. Every teacher among the Jews had disciples, and some especially that followed or accompanied them wherever they went, that they might have some person at hand with whom they might converse concerning the Divine law.

Verse 20. The foxes have holes, &c.] Reader! art thou a poor man? and dost thou fear God? Then, what comfort must thou derive from the thought, that thou so nearly resemblest the Lord Jesus! But how unlike is the rich man, who is the votary of pleasure and slave of sin, to this heavenly pattern!

Son of man] A Hebrew phrase, expressive of humiliation and debasement; and, on that account, applied emphatically to himself, by the meek and lowly Jesus. Besides, it seems here to be used to point out the incarnation of the Son of God, according to the predictions of the prophets, Psa. viii. 5; Dan. vii. 13. And as our Lord was now showing forth his eternal Divinity in the miracles he wrought, he seems studious to prove to them the certainty of his incarnation, because on this depended the atonement for sin. Indeed our Lord seems more intent on giving the proofs of his humanity, than of his divinity, the latter being necessarily manifested by the miracles which he was continually working.

Verse 21. Another of his disciples] This does not mean any of the twelve, but one of those who were constant hearers of our Lord's preaching; the name of disciple being common to all those who professed to believe in him, John vi. 66. Bury my father: probably his father was old, and apparently near death: but it was a maxim among the Jews, that, if a man had any duty to perform to the dead, he was, for that time, free from the observance of any other precept or duty. The children of Adam are always in extremes; some will rush into the ministry of the Gospel without a call, others will delay long after they are called; the middle way is the only safe one: not

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3.

and let the dead bury their dead.

23 ¶ And when he was entered into a ship, his disciples followed him.

24 "And, behold, there arose a great tempest in the sea, inasmuch that the ship was covered with the waves: but he was asleep.

25 And his disciples came to him, and awoke him, saying, Lord, save us: we perish.

" Mark iv. 37. &c.; Luke viii. 23, &c.

to move a finger in the work till the call be given, and not to delay a moment after.

Verse 22. Let the dead bury their dead.] It was usual for the Jews to consider a man as dead who had departed from the precepts of the law; and, on this ground, every transgressor was reputed a dead man. Our Lord's saying, being in common use, had nothing difficult in it to a Jew. Natural death is the separation of the body and soul; spiritual death, the separation of God and the soul: men who live in sin are dead to God. Leave the spiritually dead to bury their natural dead. All the common offices of life may be performed by any person; to preach the glad tidings of the kingdom of God is granted but to a few, and to these only by an especial call; these should immediately abandon worldly concerns and employments, and give themselves wholly up to the work of the ministry.

Verse 21. Arose a great tempest in the sea] Probably excited by Satan, the prince of the power of the air, who, having got the author and all the preachers of the Gospel together in a small vessel, thought by drowning it to defeat the purposes of God, and thus to prevent the salvation of a ruined world. What a noble opportunity must this have appeared to the enemy of the human race!

Verse 25. And his disciples] The disciples. In the common printed editions, as well as in our translation, it is his disciples, but αυτου, his, is omitted by the very best MSS., and by Bengel, Wetstein, and Griesbach. This is a matter of very small importance, and need not be noticed; only every translator and commentator should aim, to the uttermost of his knowledge and power, to give every porticle of the language of the inspired penman that can be expressed, and to insert no one word which he has reason to believe did not come by the inspiration of God.

Lord, save us: we perish.] One advantage of trials is to make us know our weakness, so as to oblige us to have recourse to God by faith in Christ. It is by faith alone that we may be said to approach him; by love we are united to him, and by prayer we awake him. All good perishes in us without Christ: without his grace, there is not so much as one moment in which we are not in danger of utter ruin. How proper, then, is this short prayer for us, and how familiar should it be to us! Taken in the extensive Christian sense it is exceedingly expressive: it com-

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

26 And he saith unto them, Why are ye fearful, O ye of little faith? Then he arose, and rebuked the winds and the sea; and there was a great calm.

27 But the men marvelled, saying, What manner of man is this, that even the winds and the sea obey him!

28 ¶ And when he was come to the † Psa. lxxv. 7; lxxxix. 9; cvii. 29.

prehends all the power of our Lord's might, all the merit of his atonement, and all the depth of our misery and danger. See Quesnel.

Verse 26. Why are ye fearful, O ye of little faith? Faith is ever bold—incredulity always timid. When faith fails in temptation, there is the utmost danger of shipwreck. Lord, increase our faith! is a necessary prayer for all who desire to be saved.

Then he arose and rebuked the winds, &c.] As the agitation of the sea was only the effect of the wind, it was necessary to remove the cause of the disturbance, that the effect might cease. Joshua did not say to the earth, Earth, stand thou still, because the earth is not the cause of its own motion: but, Sun, stand thou still, שמש דום shemesh dom, Sun, be silent, or restrain thy influence, which is a proper cause of the revolutions of all the planets. When the solar influence was by the miraculous power of God suspended, the standing still of the earth was a necessary consequence. Both Christ and Joshua spoke with the strictest philosophical precision. See the notes on Josh. x. 12–14.

There was a great calm.] One word of Christ can change the face of nature; one word of his can restore calm and peace to the most troubled and disconsolate soul. Prayer and faith, if sincere, shall be heard, though they may be weak. 1. That our imperfections may not hinder us from praying to God. 2. That we may be persuaded it is not our merits which make our prayers effectual. 3. That we may offer them up with great humility: and, 4. That we may be fully united to Christ, without which union there is no salvation.

There was at first a great agitation; then a great calm. Thus God ever proportions the comfort to the affliction.

Verse 27. The men marvelled] Every part of the creation (man excepted) hears and obeys the Creator's voice. Sinners have an ear for the world, the devil, and the flesh: till this ear is shut, God's voice is not discerned; for when it is shut to its enemies it is open to its friends.

What manner of man is this] Παταπος εστιν ουτος, How great is this person! Here was God fully manifest; but it was in the flesh—there were the hidings of his power.

Verse 28. The country of the Gergesenes] This word is variously written in the MSS. and versions; Gergasenes, Gerasenes, Gadarenes, Gergesions, and Gerscdonians. The three first are supported by the

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

other side, into the country of the Gergesenes, there met him two possessed with devils, coming out of the tombs, exceeding fierce, so that no man might pass by that way.

29 And, behold, they cried out, saying, What have we to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of God? art thou come hither to torment us before the time?

¶ Mark v. 1, &c.; Luke viii. 26, &c.

greater authorities. They might have all been names of the same place or district; but, if we depend on what Origen says, the people mentioned here could not have been the inhabitants of Gerasa, which, says he, is a city of Arabia, ουτε θαλασσαν, ουτε λιμνην πλησιον εχοντα, which has neither sea nor lake nigh to it.—“Gadara was, according to Josephus, the metropolis of Perca, or the region beyond Jordan: both the city and villages belonging to it lay in the country of the Gergasenus; whence Christ going into the country of the Gadarenes, Mark v. 1, is said to go into the region of the Gergasenes, Matt. viii. 28.” WHITEBY.

Two possessed with devils] Persons possessed by evil demons. Mark and Luke mention only one demoniac, probably the fiercer of the two.

Coming out of the tombs] It is pretty evident that cupolas were generally builded over the graves among the Jews, and that these demoniacs had their dwellings under such: the evil spirits which were in them delighting more in these abodes of desolation and ruin, as being more congenial to their fierce and diabolic nature, and therefore would drive the possessed into them.

Verse 29. What have we to do with thee] The literal translation of τι ημιν και σοι, is, What is it to us and to thee; which perhaps might be understood to imply their disclaiming any design to interfere with the work of Christ, and that he should not therefore meddle with them; for it appears they exceedingly dreaded his power.

What have we to do with thee, is a Jewish phrase, which often occurs in the Old Testament, signifying an abrupt refusal of some request, or a wish not to be troubled with the company or importunity of others. Jehu said to the messenger who was sent by Joram to meet him, What hast thou to do with peace? David said, What have I to do with you, ye sons of Zeruah? Compare Judg. xi. 12; 2 Sam. xvi. 10; 2 Kings ix. 18; Ezra iv. 3; John ii. 4. See the note on Mark i. 24.

Jesus, thou Son of God] Griesbach omits the word Jesus, on the authority of several MSS. of the greatest antiquity and respectability; besides some versions, and several of the fathers. I heartily concur with these MSS., &c., for this simple reason, among others, that the word Jesus, i. e. Saviour, was of too ominous an import to the Satanic interest to be used freely, in such a case, by any of his disciples or subalterns.

Art thou come hither to torment us before the time?] I

A. M. 4031. 30 And there was, a good way
A. D. 27. off from them, a herd of many
An. Olymp. swine feeding.
CCL 3.

31 So *the devils besought him, saying,
If thou cast us out, suffer us to go away into the herd of swine.

32 And he said unto them, Go. And when they were come out, they went into the herd of swine: and, behold, the whole herd of swine ran violently down a steep place into

* Mark v. 7, 12; Luke viii. 30-33; Rev. xii. 12.

From this it appears that a greater degree of punishment awaited these demons than they at that time endured; and that they knew there was a time determined by the Divine Judge, when they should be sent into greater torments.

Verse 30. A herd of many swine] These were in all probability Jewish property, and kept and used in express violation of the law of God; and therefore their destruction, in the next verse, was no more than a proper manifestation of the justice of God.

Verse 31. Suffer us to go away] Ἐπιτρέψον ἡμῖν ἀπελθεῖν: this is the common reading; but ἀποστείλον ἡμᾶς, send us away, appears more likely to be genuine. This latter reading Griesbach has adopted, on the authority of three ancient MSS., the Coptic, Sahidic, Ethiopic, Syriac, all the Arabic, Saxon, most of the Itala, and the Vulgate. Send us away seems to express more fully the absolute power Jesus Christ had over them—permission alone was not sufficient; the very power by which they were to go away, must come from Christ himself! How vain was the boast of Satan, chap. iv. 9, when we find he could not possess the body of one of the vilest animals that God has made, without immediate authority from the Most High! Since a demon cannot enter even into a swine without being sent by God himself, how little is the power or malice of any of them to be dreaded by those who have God for their portion and protector!

Verse 32. They went into the herd of swine] Instead of τὴν ἀγέλην τῶν χοίρων, the herd of swine, Griesbach reads τοὺς χοίρους, the swine, on the authority of many MSS. and versions.

The whole herd of swine] Ὁὗτοι χοίρων, of swine, is omitted by many MSS. and versions. See Griesbach, and see on Luke viii. 26, &c.

Ran violently down a steep place, &c.] The prayer of these demons is heard and answered! Strange! But let it be noted, that God only hears demons and certain sinners when their prayer is the echo of his own justice. Here is an emblem of the final impenitence and ruin into which the swinish sinners, the habitually impure, more commonly fall than other sinners. Christ permits the demons to do that in the swine which he did not permit them to do in the pos-the sea, and perished in the waters.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL 3.

33 And they that kept them fled, and went their ways into the city, and told every thing, and what was befallen to the possessed of the devils.

34 And, behold, the whole city came out to meet Jesus: and when they saw him, they besought him that he would depart out of their coasts.

† See Deut. v. 25; 1 Kings xvii. 18; Luke v. 8, Acts xvi. 39.

seduced, on purpose to show us what rage they would exercise on us if left to their liberty and malice.—Many are the Divine favours which we do not consider, or know only in general. “But the owners of the swine lost their property.” Yes; and learn from this of how small value temporal riches are in the estimation of God. He suffers them to be lost, sometimes to disengage us from them through mercy; sometimes out of justice, to punish us for having acquired or preserved them either by covetousness or injustice.

Verse 33. And they that kept them fled] Terrified at what had happened to the swine.

Verse 34. The whole city came out] Probably with the intention to destroy Jesus for having destroyed their swine; but, having seen him, they were awed by his presence, and only besought him to depart from their borders. Many rather chose to lose Jesus Christ than those temporal goods by which they gratify their passions at the expense of their souls. They love even their swine better than their salvation.

Certain doctors in both sciences, divinity and physic, gravely tell us that these demoniacs were only common madmen, and that the disease was supposed, by the superstitious Jews, to be occasioned by demons. But, with due deference to great characters, may not a plain man be permitted to ask, by what figure of speech can it be said that “two diseases besought—went out—filled a herd of swine—rushed down a precipice?” &c. What silly trifling is this! Some people’s creeds will neither permit God nor the devil to work; and, in several respects, hardly to exist. For he who denies Divine inspiration, will scarcely acknowledge diabolic influence. See the note on ver. 16, and on Luke vii. 21.

It is said, The whole city came out to meet Jesus. This means no more than all the inhabitants of that place, which, most probably, was no more than a small country village; or perhaps but a few houses. I have observed that the inhabitants of the Zeland Isles, in the North Seas, denominate any collection of houses a town, even where there are but three or four: and thus I think that the Jews denominated their villages, often calling them cities.

CHAPTER IX.

Christ heals a paralytic person at Capernaum, 1-8. Calls Matthew, 10. Eats with publicans and sinners, at which the Pharisees are offended, and he vindicates his conduct, 11, 12. The disciples of John come to him and inquire about fasting, 14-17. A ruler requests him to heal his daughter, 18, 19. On his road to the ruler's house, he heals a diseased woman, 20-22. Arriving at the ruler's house, he restores the young woman to life, 23-26. Heals two blind men, 27-31. Casts out a dumb demon, 32-34. Preaches and works miracles in all the cities and villages, 35. Is greatly affected at the desolate and dark state of the Jewish people, 36. Exhorts his disciples to pray to God to send them proper instructors, 37, 38.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

AND he entered into a ship, and passed over, ^a and came into his own city.

2 ^b And, behold, they brought to him a man sick of the palsy, lying on a bed: ^c and Jesus, seeing their faith, said unto the sick of the palsy, Son, be of good cheer; thy sins be forgiven thee.

^a Chap. iv. 13.—^b Mark ii. 3; Luke v. 18.—^c Chap. viii. 10.

NOTES ON CHAP. IX.

Verse 1. He came into his own city] Viz. Capernaum, where he seems to have had his common residence at the house of Peter. See chap. iv. 13, and viii. 13. This verse properly belongs to the preceding chapter.

Verse 2. Sick of the palsy] See chap. iv. 24.

Lying on a bed] Κλινής, a couch or sofa, such as they reclined on at meals.

Seeing their faith] The faith of the paralytic person, and the faith of those who brought him; see on Mark ii. 4.

Be of good cheer] Θαράττε τεκνον, Son, take courage! Probably he began to despond, and Christ spoke thus to support his faith.

Thy sins be forgiven thee.] Moral evil has been the cause of all the natural evil in the world. Christ goes to the source of the malady, which is sin; and to that as the procuring cause we should refer in all our afflictions. It is probable that this paralytic person had, in the earnest desires of his heart, entreated the cure of his soul, leaving his body to the care of others, as the first miracle of healing is wrought on his soul. In a state of helplessness, when we seek above all things to please God, by giving him our hearts, he often inspires others with the care of our temporal necessities. It may be necessary to be observed, that it was a maxim among the Jews that no diseased person could be healed till all his sins were blotted out. See Nedarim, fol. 41. Hence our Lord first forgives the sins, and then heals the body of the paralytic person. This appears to have been founded on Psa. ciii. 3. Who forgiveth all thine iniquities, and healeth all thy diseases. Here pardon precedes health. See also Psa. xli. 3, 4. It may be observed, also, that most people are more in earnest about their souls when in sickness than in health, and therefore are more earnest in prayer for salvation.

Verse 3. This man blasphemeth.] Βλασφημέω comes either from βλάπτειν την φημην, to hurt or blast the 3 And, behold, certain of the scribes said within themselves, This man blasphemeth.

4 And Jesus, ^d knowing their thoughts, said, Wherefore think ye evil in your hearts?

5 For whether is easier, to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, ^e Arise, and walk?

6 But that ye may know that the Son of man

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

^d Psa. cxxxix. 2; chap. xii. 25; Mark xii. 15; Luke v. 22; vi. 8; ix. 47; xi. 17.—^e Isa. xxxv. 6; John v. 8.

reputation or credit of another, or from βλάττειν τας φημιας, to smite with reports. Whenever it is used in reference to God, it simply signifies, to speak impiously of his nature, or attributes, or works. Injurious speaking is its proper translation when referred to man.

The scribes were the literati of that time; and their learning, because not used in dependence on God, rendered them proud, envious, and obstinate. Unsanctified knowledge has still the same effect: that light serves only to blind and lead men out of the way which is not joined with uprightness of heart. The most sacred truths often become an occasion of delusion, where men are under the government of their evil passions.

Verse 4. Jesus knowing (ιδων seeing) their thoughts] In telling them what the thoughts of their hearts were, (for they had expressed nothing publicly,) he gave them the fullest proof of his power to forgive sins; because God only can forgive sins, and God only can search and know the heart. Jesus pronounced the man's sins forgiven; and gave the scribes the fullest proof of his power to do so, by telling them what, in the secret of their souls, they thought on the subject.

God sounds the secrets of all hearts—no sin escapes his notice: how senseless then is the sinner to think he sins securely when unseen by men! Let us take heed to our hearts, as well as to our conduct, for God searches out and condemns all that does not spring from, and leads not to himself.

Verse 5. For whether is easier, to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise, and walk?] Both are equally easy, and equally difficult; for both require unlimited power to produce them. And every thing is equally easy to that power which is unlimited. A universe can be as easily produced by a single act of the Divine will as the smallest elementary part of matter.

The common punctuation of the above passage almost destroys the sense: the comma should be placed after easier, and to say, made the first part of the question.

Verse 6. But that ye may know, &c.] External miracles are the proofs of internal ones. Three mira

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCl. 3.
hath power on earth ^f to forgive sins; (then saith he to the sick of the palsy,) Arise, take up thy bed, and go unto thine house.

7 And he arose, and departed to his house.

8 But when the multitude saw it, they marvelled, and glorified God, which had given such power unto men.

9 ¶ ^g And as Jesus passed forth from thence, he saw a man, named Matthew, sitting at the receipt of custom: and he saith <sup>A. M. 4031.

A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCl. 3.</sup> unto him, Follow me. And he arose, and followed him.

10 ¶ ^h And it came to pass, as Jesus sat at meat in the house, behold many publicans and sinners came and sat down with him and his disciples:

11 And when the Pharisees saw it, they said unto his disciples, Why catch your Master with ⁱ publicans and ^k sinners?

^f Isaiah xlii. 25; Mic. vii. 18.—^g Mark ii. 14; Luke v. 27.

^h Mark ii. 15, &c.; Luke v. 29, &c.—ⁱ Chap. xi. 19; Luke v. 30; xv. 2.—^k Gal. ii. 15.

cles are wrought in this case. (I mean, by miracle, something produced or known that no power is capable of but that which is omnipotent, and no knowledge adequate to but that which is omniscient.) The miracles are these: 1st. The remission of the poor man's sins. 2d. The discernment of the secret thoughts of the scribes. 3d. The restoring of the paralytic, in an instant, to perfect soundness. Thus one miracle becomes the proof and establishment of another. Never was a clearer proof of omnipotent energy and merey wrought under the senses of man. Here is an absolutely perfect miracle wrought; and here are absolute uncontested proofs that the miracle was wrought; and he conclusion is the fullest demonstration of the Divinity of the ever-blessed Jesus.

Arise, take up thy bed] Being enabled to obey this command was the public proof that the man was made whole. Such a circumstance should not pass without improvement. A man gives proof of his conversion from sin to God who imitates this paralytic person. He who does not rise and stand upright, but either continues grovelling on the earth, or falls back as soon as he is got up, is not yet cured of his spiritual palsy. When we see a penitent enabled to rejoice in hope of God's glory, and to walk in the way of his commandments, he affords us all the proof which we can reasonably require, that his conversion is real: the proof sufficient to satisfy himself is the witness of the Holy Spirit in his own heart; but this is a matter of which those who are without cannot judge: they must form their opinion from his conduct, and judge of the tree by its fruits.

Verse 8. When the multitudes saw it, they marvelled] Instead of θαυμάσαν, wondered, the Codex Vaticanus and Cod. Beza, with several other MSS. and versions, have εφοβήθησαν, feared. In the Gothic, and one copy of the Itala, both readings are conjoined, thus: And the multitudes seeing it, wondered and feared, and glorified God. Wondered at the miracle; feared to offend against such power and goodness; and glorified God for the works of merey which he had wrought.

That which to the doctors of the law, the worldly-wise and prudent, is a matter of scandal, is to the humble an occasion of glorifying the Most High. Divine things make a deeper impression on the hearts of the simple multitude than on those of the doctors, who, puffed up with a sense of their own wisdom, refuse to receive the truth as it is in Jesus. The conversion of one rebellious soul is a greater miracle, and more to be admired than all that can be wrought on inanimate creatures. He who sees a sinner converted from the error of his way sees a miracle wrought by eternal power and goodness. May such miracles be multiplied!

Verse 9. Named Matthew] Generally supposed to be the same who wrote this history of our blessed Lord. Mathai signifies a gift in Syriac; probably so named by his parents as implying a gift from God.

The receipt of custom] The custom-house, τελωνιον—the place where the taxes levied by the Romans of the Jews, were collected.

Follow me.] That is, become my disciple.

And he arose, and followed him.] How blessed it is to be obedient to the first call of Christ—how much happiness and glory are lost by delays, though conversion at last may have taken place!

Verse 10. Sat at meat in the house] Viz. of Matthew, who it appears, from Luke v. 29, made a great feast on the occasion, thus testifying his gratitude for the honour done him; and that his friends and acquaintances might profit by the teaching of his new master, he invites them to the entertainment that was honoured by the presence of Christ. His companions, it appears, were not of the most creditable kind. They were tax-gatherers (see chap. v. 46) and sinners, αμαρτωλοι, a word which I believe in general signifies heathens, throughout the Gospels, and in several other parts of the New Testament. See, among others, chap. xi. 19; xxvi. 45; Mark ii. 15–17; xiv. 41; Luke v. 30–32; vi. 32–34; vii. 34, 37, 39; xv. 1, 2, 7, 10; xix. 7; xxiv. 7; John ix. 16, 24, 25, 31; Rom. v. 8; Gal. ii. 15; Heb. vii. 26; 1 Pet. iv. 18; in most, if not all of which places, it evidently refers to the character or state of a Gentile, or Heathen. See also the notes on these passages.

Verse 11. When the Pharisees saw it] He who, like a Pharisee, never felt himself indebted to infinite merey for his own salvation, is rarely solicitous about the salvation of others. The grace of Christ alone inspires the soul with true benevolence. The self-righteous Pharisees considered it equal to legal defilement to sit in company with tax-gatherers and heathens. It is certain that those who fear God should not associate, through choice, with the workers of iniquity, and should only be found with them when transacting their

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.
12 But when Jesus heard that, he said unto them, They that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick.

13 But go ye and learn what that meaneth, I will have mercy and not sacrifice; for I am not come to call the righteous, ^m but sinners to repentance.

¹ Hos. vi. 6; Mic. vi. 6, 7, 8; chap. xii. 7.—^m 1 Tim. i. 15.

secular business requires it, or when they have the prospect of doing good to their souls.

Verse 12. They that be whole need not a physician] A common proverb, which none could either misunderstand or misapply. Of it the reader may make the following use:—

1. Jesus Christ represents himself here as the sovereign Physician of souls. 2. That all stand in need of his healing power. 3. That men must acknowledge their spiritual maladies, and the need they have of his mercy, in order to be healed by him. 4. That it is the most inveterate and dangerous disease the soul can be afflicted with to imagine itself whole, when the sting of death, which is sin, has pierced it through in every part, infusing its poison every where.

Verse 13. I will have mercy, and not sacrifice] Quoted from 1 Sam. xv. 22. These are remarkable words. We may understand them as implying, 1st. That God prefers an act of mercy, shown to the necessitous, to any act of religious worship to which the person might be called at that time. Both are good; but the former is the greater good, and should be done in preference to the other. 2dly. That the whole sacrificial system was intended only to point out the infinite mercy of God to fallen man, in his redemption by the blood of the new covenant. And 3dly. That we should not rest in the sacrifices, but look for the mercy and salvation prefigured by them. This saying was nervously translated by our ancestors, Ic pylle mildheortnesse neær onwæðnesse, I will mild-heartedness, and not sacrifice.

Go ye and learn] למד ולכת tse vclimmed, a form of speech in frequent use among the rabbins, when they referred to any fact or example in the Sacred Writings. Nothing tends more to humble pretenders to devotion than to show them that they understand neither Scripture nor religion, when, relying on external performances, they neglect love to God and man, which is the very soul and substance of true religion. True holiness has ever consisted in faith working by love.

I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners] Most of the common editions add, εἰς μετανοίαν, unto repentance; but this is omitted in the Codex Valic. and Beza, sixteen others, both the Syriac, both the Persic, Ethiop. Armen. Gothic, Anglo-Saxon, all the Itala except three, the Vulgate, Clemens Roman. Origen, Basil, Jerome, Augustin, Ambrose, and Barnabas. The omission is approved by Mill and Bengel. Griesbach leaves it out of the text.

Verse 14. Thy disciples fast not?] Probably meaning that they did not fast so frequently as the others

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.
14 ¶ Then came to him the disciples of John, saying, ^a Why do we and the Pharisees fast oft, but thy disciples fast not?

15 And Jesus said unto them, Can ^o the children of the bride-chamber mourn, as long as the bridegroom is with them? but the days will come, when the bridegroom shall be taken did, or for the same purposes, which is very likely. for the Pharisees had many superstitious fasts. They fasted in order to have lucky dreams, to obtain the interpretation of a dream, or to avert the evil import of a dream. They also fasted often, in order to obtain the things they wished for. The tract, Taanith is full of these fasts, and of the wonders performed thus by the Jewish doctors.

^a Mark ii. 18, &c.; Luke v. 33, &c.; xviii. 12.—^o John iii. 29.

Verse 15. Can the children of the bride-chamber] νυμφίος. Or, νυμφίον, bridegroom, as the Cod. Beza and several versions have it. These persons were the companions of the bridegroom, who accompanied him to the house of his father-in-law when he went to bring the bride to his own home. The marriage-feast among the Jews lasted seven days; but the new married woman was considered to be a bride for thirty days. Marriage feasts were times of extraordinary festivity, and even of riot, among several people of the east.

When the bridegroom shall be taken from them, &c.] There was one annual fast observed in the primitive Church, called by our ancestors lenten-fæsten, the spring fast, and, by us, LENT; by the Greeks τεσσαράκωστη, and by the Latins, Quadragesima. This fast is pretended to be kept by many, in the present day. in commemoration of our Lord's forty days' fast in the wilderness; but it does not appear that, in the purest ages of the primitive Church, genuine Christians ever pretended that their quadragesimal fast was kept for the above purpose. Their fast was kept merely to commemorate the time during which Jesus Christ lay under the power of death, which was about forty hours; and it was in this sense they understood the words of this text: the days will come, &c. With them, the bridegroom meant Christ: the time in which he was taken away, his crucifixion, death, and the time he lay in the grave. Suppose him dying about twelve o'clock on what is called Friday, and that he rose about four on the morning of his own day, (St. John says, Early, while it was yet dark, chap. xx. 1.) the interim makes forty hours, which was the true primitive Lent, or quadragesimal fast. It is true that many in the primitive Church were not agreed on this subject, as Socrates, in his Church History, book v. chap. 22, says, "Some thought they should fast one day; others two; others more." Different Churches also were divided concerning the length of the time, some keeping it three, others five, and others seven weeks; and the historian himself is puzzled to know why they all agreed in calling these fasts, differing so much in their duration, by the name of Quadragesima, or forty days' fast: the plain obvious reason appears

A. M. 4031. from them, and then shall they
A. D. 27. fast.
An. Olymp. CCI.3.

16 No man putteth a piece of new cloth unto an old garment, for that which is put in to fill it up taketh from the garment, and the rent is made worse.

17 Neither do men put new wine into old bottles: else the bottles break, and the wine

¶ Acts xiii. 2, 3; xiv. 23; 1 Cor. vii. 5.—¶ Or, raw, or to me to have been simply this: They put DAYS in the place of HOURS; and this absurdity continues in some Christian Churches to the present day. For more on fasting, see chap. vi. 16.

Verse 16. No man putteth a piece of new cloth] Οὐδεὶς δὲ ἐπιβάλλει ἐπὶ θῆμα παλαιὸν σενῶνον ἐπὶ ἡμῶν. No man putteth a patch of unscoured cloth upon an old garment. This is the most literal translation I can give of this verse, to convey its meaning to those who cannot consult the original. Παλῶς ἀγρῶνον is that cloth which has not been scoured, or which has not passed under the hand of the fuller, who is called γράφτης in Greek: and ἐπιθῆμα signifies a piece put on, or what we commonly term a patch.

It—taketh from the garment] Instead of closing up the rent, it makes a larger, by tearing away with it the whole breadth of the cloth over which it was laid; αὐρεὶ γὰρ τὸ πλῆρωμα αὐτοῦ—it taketh its fulness or whole breadth from the garment; this I am persuaded is the meaning of the original, well expressed by the Latin, or Itala of the C. BEZÆ, Tollit enim plenitudo ejus de vestimento. "It takes away its fulness from the garment."

Verse 17. New wine into old bottles] It is still the custom, in the eastern countries, to make their bottles of goat skins: if these happened to be old, and new wine were put into them, the violence of the fermentation must necessarily burst them; and therefore newly made bottles were employed for the purpose of putting that wine in which had not yet gone through its state of fermentation. The institutes of Christ, and those of the Pharisees, could never be brought to accord: an attempt to combine the two systems would be as absurd as it would be destructive. The old covenant made way for the new, which was its completion and its end; but with that old covenant the new cannot be incorporated.

Christian prudence requires that the weak, and newly converted, should be managed with care and tenderness. To impose such duties and mortifications as are not absolutely necessary to salvation, before God has properly prepared the heart by his grace for them, is a conduct as absurd and ruinous as putting a piece of raw, unscoured cloth on an old garment; it is, in a word, requiring the person to do the work of a man, while as yet he is but a little child. Preachers of the Gospel, and especially those who are instruments in God's hand of many conversions, have need of much heavenly wisdom, that they may know to watch over guide, and advise those who are runneth out, and the bottles perish: but they put new wine into new bottles, and both are preserved.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI.3

18 ¶ While he spake these things unto them, behold, there came a certain ruler, and worshipped him, saying, My daughter is even now dead: but come and lay thy hand upon her, and she shall live.

unscoured cloth.—¶ Mark v. 22, &c.; Luke viii. 41, &c.

brought to a sense of their sin and danger. How many auspicious beginnings have been ruined by men's proceeding too hastily, endeavouring to make their own designs take place, and to have the honour of that success themselves which is due only to God.

Verse 18. A certain ruler] There were two officers in the synagogue, ὁ ἐπιστάτης ἡ ἐκκλησίας chazan ha-ceneseth, the bishop or overseer of the congregation; and ὁ ἡγούμενος rosh ha-ceneseth, the head or ruler of the congregation. The chazan takes the book of the Law, and gives it to the rosh, or ruler; and he appoints who shall read the different sections, &c. Jairus, who is the person intended here, was, in this latter sense, the ruler or governor of one of the synagogues, probably at Caper-naum. See Mark v. 22; Luke viii. 41.

My daughter is even now dead] Or, my daughter was just now dying; ἀπὸ ἐτελευτήσεν, or, is by this time dead: i. e. as Mr. Wakefield properly observes. She was so ill when I left home that she must be dead by this time. This turn of the expression reconciles the account given here with that in Mark and Luke. Michaelis conjectures that, in the Hebrew original, the words must have stood thus, אֵתָהּ מֵתָהּ atah matah, which, without the points, may signify either, She is dead, or She is dying.

To be successful in our applications to God by prayer, four things are requisite; and this ruler teaches us what they are.

First, A man should place himself in the presence of God—he came unto him.

Secondly, He should humble himself sincerely before God—he fell down before him—at his feet. Mark v. 22.

Thirdly, He should lay open his wants with a holy earnestness—he besought him greatly. Mark v. 23.

Fourthly, He should have unbounded confidence in the power and goodness of Christ that his request shall be granted—put thy hand upon her, and she shall live. He who comes in this way to God, for salvation, is sure to be heard. Imposition of hands was a rite anciently used by the servants of God, through which heavenly influences were conveyed to the bodies and souls of men. This rite is still used in certain Churches; but, as there is no Holy Ghost communicated by it, some suppose it may be as well omitted. But why is this? Is it not because there is an unfaithfulness in the person who lays on hands, or an unfitness in him on whom they are laid? Let the rite be restored to its primitive simplicity, and God will own it as he formerly did. But, however this may be, where is the man or number of men who have autho-

A. M. 4031. 19 And Jesus arose, and followed
A. D. 27. him, and so did his disciples.
An. Olymp. CCI. 3.

20 ¶ And, behold, a woman which was diseased with an issue of blood twelve years, came behind him, and touched the hem of his garment :

21 For she said within herself, If I may but touch his garment, I shall be whole.

* Mark v. 25 ; Luke viii. 43. —† Luke vii. 50 ; viii. 48 ; xvii. 19 ; city to abrogate a rite of God's own appointment ? In the appointment of men to the sacred ministry it should never be omitted : even in these degenerate days, it may still serve as a sign of the necessity of the gifts and graces of that Holy Spirit without which no man can fulfil the work of the ministry, or be the instrument of saving the souls of them that hear him. When the inventions of men are put in the place of the ordinances of God, the true Church of Christ is in great danger.

Verse 19. Jesus arose, and followed him] Our blessed Lord could have acted as well at a distance as present ; but he goes to the place, to teach his ministers not to spare either their steps or their pains when the salvation of a soul is in question. Let them not think it sufficient to pray for the sick in their closets ; but let them go to their bed-sides, that they may instruct and comfort them. He can have little unction in private, who does not also give himself up to public duties.

Verse 20. A woman which was diseased with an issue of blood] Ἐνῇ αἰμορροῦσα. Mulier sanguinis profluvio laborans. Significatur hoc loco, fluxus mulieris, in SANIS, menstruus ; in HAC perpetuus. It would be easy to explain the nature and properties of the disease here mentioned ; but, when it is said that prudence forbids it, the intimation itself may be thought sufficiently explanatory of the disorder in question. There are some remarkable circumstances relative to this case mentioned by St. Mark, chap. v. 25, &c., which shall be properly noticed in the notes on that place.

The hem of his garment] The ציצית tsitsith, or fringes, which the Jews were commanded to wear on their garments. See Num. xv. 38, and the note there.

Verse 21. She said within herself, If I may but touch his garment] Her disorder was of that delicate nature that modesty forbade her to make any public acknowledgment of it ; and therefore she endeavoured to transact the whole business in private. Besides, the touch of such a person was by the law reputed unclean. By faith in Christ Jesus, little things are often rendered efficacious to our salvation. What more simple than a morsel of bread, and a few drops of wine, in the Lord's Supper ! And yet, they who receive them by faith in the sacrifice they represent, are made partakers of the blessings purchased by the crucified body and spilled blood of the Lord Jesus !

Verse 22. Daughter, be of good comfort] Θάρσει θυγάτηρ, Take courage, daughter. See on ver. 2. The reason of this kind speech was—Jesus, finding that 22 But Jesus turned him about, A. M. 4031.

and when he saw her, he said, A. D. 27.
Daughter, be of good comfort ; An. Olymp.
thy faith hath made thee whole. CCI. 3.
And the woman was made whole from that hour.

23 ¶ And when Jesus came into the ruler's house, and saw the minstrels and the people making a noise, xviii. 42. —† Mark v. 39 ; Luke viii. 51. —‡ Sec 2 Chron. xxxv. 25.

virtue had proceeded from him, made inquiry who had touched him. The woman, finding that she could not be hid, came fearing and trembling, (Mark v. 33,) and confessed the truth : to dispel these fears and to comfort her mind, Jesus said, Daughter, take courage.

Thy faith hath made thee whole.] Ἡ πίστις σου σέσωκε σε, This thy faith hath saved thee : i. e. thy faith in my power has interested that power in thy behalf, so that thou art saved from thy disorder, and from all its consequences. See on Luke viii. 46.

Verse 23. Saw the minstrels and the people making a noise] Αὐλητας, pipers ; Anglo-Saxon, hyrtlenar, the whistlers ; Gothic, haurngans haurngandans, the horn-blowers blowing with their horns. Nearly the same as the pipublasara, pipe-blowers of the Islandic : for among all those nations funeral lamentations, accompanied with such rude instruments, were made at the death of relatives. That pipes were in use among the Jews, in times of calamity or death, is evident from Jer. xlviii. 36. And among the Greeks, and Romans, as well as among the Jews, persons were hired on purpose to follow the funeral processions with lamentations. See Jer. ix. 17–21 ; Amos v. 16. Even the poorest among the Jews were required to have two pipers, and one mourning woman. At these funeral solemnities it was usual with them to drink considerably ; even ten cups of wine each, where it could be got. See Lightfoot. This custom is observed among the native Irish to this day, in what is called their CAOINAN. The body of the deceased, dressed in grave-clothes and ornamented with flowers, is placed in some eminent place ; the relations and caoiners range themselves in two divisions, one at the head and the other at the feet of the corpse. Anciently, where the deceased was a great personage, the bards and croteries prepared the caoinan. The chief bard of the head chorus began by singing the first stanza in a low doleful tone ; which was softly accompanied by the harp. At the conclusion, the foot semichorus began the lamentation, or ULLALOO, from the final note of the preceding stanza, in which they were answered by the head semichorus ; then both united in one general chorus.

The chorus of the first stanza being ended, the chief bard of the foot semichorus sung the second stanza, the strain of which was taken from the concluding note of the preceding chorus, which ended, the head semichorus began the COL, or lamentation, in which they were answered by that of the foot, and then, as before, both united in the general full chorus. Thus alternately were the song and choruses performed

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL.3.

21 He said unto them, "Give place: for the maid is not dead, but sleepeth. And they laughed him to scorn.

25 But when the people were put forth, he went in, and took her by the hand, and the maid arose.

26 And ^x the same hereof went abroad into all that land.

27 ¶ And when Jesus departed thence, two

^w Acts xx. 10 — ^x Or, this fame. — ^y Chap. xv. 22;

during the night. I have seen a number of women, sometimes fourteen, twenty-four, or more, accompany the deceased from his late house to the grave-yard, divided into two parties on each side the corpse, singing the ULLALOO, alternately, all the way. That drinking, in what is called the wake, or watching with the body of the deceased, is practised, and often carried to a shameful excess, needs little proof. This kind of intemperance proceeded to such great lengths among the Jews that the Sanhedrin were obliged to make a decree, to restrain the drinking to ten cups each. I mention these things more particularly, because I have often observed that the customs of the aboriginal Irish bear a very striking resemblance to those of the ancient Jews, and other Asiatic nations. The application of these observations I leave to others.

It was a custom with the Greeks to make a great noise with brazen vessels: and the Romans made a general outcry, called conclamatio, hoping either to stop the soul which was now taking its flight, or to awaken the person, if only in a state of torpor. This they did for eight days together, calling the person incessantly by his name; at the expiration of which term the phrase, Conclamatum est—all is over—there is no hope—was used. See the words used in this sense by Terence, Et. x. l. 347. In all probability this was the ὁρμηγερον, the making a violent outcry, mentioned here by the evangelist. How often, on the death of relatives, do men incumber and perplex themselves with vain, worldly, and tumultuous ceremonies, instead of making profitable reflections on death!

Verse 24. The maid is not dead, but sleepeth] That is, she is not dead so as to continue under the power of death; but shall be raised from it as a person is from natural sleep.

They laughed him to scorn.] Κατεγελαν αυτον, they ridiculed him; from κατα, intensive, and γελαω, I laugh:—they grinned a ghastly smile, expressive of the contempt they felt for his person and knowledge.—People of the world generally ridicule those truths which they neither comprehend nor love, and deride those who publish them; but a faithful minister of God, (copying the example of Christ,) keeps on his way, and does the work of his Lord and Master.

Verse 25. He—took her by the hand, and the maid arose.] The fountain of life thus communicating its vital energy to the dead body. Where death has blind men followed him, crying, and saying, 'Thou son of David, have mercy on us.' A. M. 4031.

A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL.3.

28 And when he was come into the house, the blind men came to him; and Jesus saith unto them, Believe ye that I am able to do this? They said unto him, Yea, Lord.

29 Then touched he their eyes, saying, According to your faith be it unto you.

xx. 30, 31; Mark x. 47, 49; Luke xviii. 39, 39.

already taken place, no power but that of the great God can restore to life; in such a case, vain is the help of man. So the soul that is dead in trespasses and sins—that is, sentenced to death because of transgression—and is thus dead in law, can only be restored to spiritual life by the mighty power of the Lord Jesus; because HE alone has made the atonement, and HE alone can pardon transgression. If the spiritually dead person be utterly unconcerned about the state and fate of his soul, let a converted relative either bring him to Christ by leading him to hear the unadulterated Gospel of the kingdom; or bring Christ to him by fervent, faithful, and persevering prayer.

Verse 26. And the same hereof went abroad] In this business Jesus himself scarcely appears, but the work effected by his sovereign power is fully manifested; to teach us that it is the business of a successful preacher of the Gospel to conceal himself as much as possible, that God alone may have the glory of his own grace. This is a proper miracle, and a full exemplification of the unlimited power of Christ.

Verse 27. Son of David] This was the same as if they had called him Messiah. Two things here are worthy of remark: 1st. That it was a generally received opinion at this time in Judea, that the Messiah should be son of David. (John vii. 42.) 2dly. That Jesus Christ was generally and incontestably acknowledged as coming from this stock. Matt. xii. 23.

Have mercy on us.] That man has already a measure of heavenly light who knows that he has no merit; that his cry should be a cry for mercy; that he must be fervent, and that in praying he must follow Jesus Christ as the true Messiah, the son of David, expected from heaven.

Verse 28. When he was come into the house] That is, the house of Peter at Capernaum, where he ordinarily lodged.

Believe ye that I am able to do this?] Without faith Jesus does nothing to men's souls now, no more than he did to their bodies in the days of his flesh.

They said unto him, Yea, Lord.] Under a sense of our spiritual blindness we should have, 1st. A lively faith in the almighty grace of Christ. 2dly. A fervent, incessant cry for the communication of this grace. 3dly. A proper view of his incarnation, because it is through his union with our nature, and by his sufferings and death, we are to expect salvation.

Verse 29. According to your faith] See on chap. viii. 13.

A. M. 4031.

A. D. 27.

An. Olymp.

CCL. 3.

30 And their eyes were opened ;

and Jesus straitly charged them, saying, ² See that no man know it.31 ^a But they, when they were departed, spread abroad his fame in all that country.32 ¶ ^b As they went out, behold, they brought to him a dumb man possessed with a devil.

33 And when the devil was cast out, the dumb spake : and the multitudes marvelled, saying, It was never so seen in Israel.

34 But the Pharisees said, ^c He casteth out devils through the prince of the devils.

35 ^d And Jesus went about all the cities and villages, ^e teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the Gospel of the kingdom, and healing every sickness and every disease among the people.36 ¶ ^f But when he saw the multitudes, he was moved with compassion on them, because they ^g fainted, and were scattered abroad, ^h as sheep having no shepherd.

A. M. 4031.

A. D. 27.

An. Olymp.

CCL. 3.

² Chap. viii. 4 ; xii. 16 ; xvii. 9 ; Luke v. 14. — ^a Mark vii. 36. — ^b See chap. xii. 22 ; Luke xi. 14. — ^c Chap. xii. 24 ; Mark iii. 22 ; Luke xi. 15.^d Mark vi. 6 ; Luke xiii. 22. — ^e Chap. iv. 23. — ^f Mark vi. 34. ^g Or, were tired and lay down. — ^h Num. xxvii. 17 ; 1 Kings xxii. 17 ; Ezek. xxiv. 5 ; Zech. x. 2.

Verse 30. Straitly charged them] He charged them severely, from ἐνεβριμῆσατο, from ἐν, and βριμασμαι, to roar or storm with anger ; he charged them, on pain of his displeasure, not to make it as yet public. See the reasons, chap. viii. 4.

Verse 31. But they—spread abroad his fame] They should have held their peace ; for to obey is better than sacrifice, 1 Sam. xv. 22 ; but man must always be wiser than God. However, it may be profitable to remark, 1st. That honour pursues those who fly from it. 2dly. He who is thoroughly sensible of God's mercy cannot long contain his acknowledgments. 3dly. That God in general requires that what a man has received, for his own salvation, shall become subservient to that of others—Let your light so shine, &c. God chooses to help man by man, that all may be firmly knit together in brotherly love.

Verse 32. A dumb man possessed with a devil.] Some demons rendered the persons they possessed paralytic, some blind, others dumb, &c. It was the interest of Satan to hide his influences under the appearance of natural disorders. A man who does not acknowledge his sin to God, who prays not for salvation, who returns no praises for the mercies he is continually receiving, may well be said to be possessed with a dumb demon.

Verse 33. And when the devil was cast out, the dumb spake] The very miracle which was now wrought was to be the demonstrative proof of the Messiah's being manifested in the flesh. See Isa. xxxv. 5, 6.

It was never so seen in Israel] The greatest of the prophets has never been able to do such miracles as these. This was the remark of the people ; and thus we find that the poor and the simple were more ready to acknowledge the hand of God than the rich and the learned. Many miracles had been wrought in the course of this one day, and this excited their surprise.

Verse 34. He casteth out devils through the prince of the devils.] This verse is wanting in both the Greek and Latin of the C. Beza, in another copy of the Itala, and in Hilary and Juvenius. But see on chap. xii. 24.

It is a consummate piece of malice to attribute the works of God to the devil. Envy cannot suffer the approbation which is given to the excellencies of others. Those whose hearts are possessed by this vice speak the very language of the devil. Calumny is but a little distance from envy. Though all persons may not have as much envy as the Pharisees, yet they should fear having some degree of it, as all have the principle from whence it proceeds, viz. sin.

Verse 35. Jesus went about all the cities and villages] Of Galilee. See on chap. iv. 23, 24. A real minister of Jesus Christ, after his example, is neither detained in one place by a comfortable provision made by some, nor discouraged from pursuing his work by the calumny and persecution of others. It is proper to remark, that, wherever Christ comes, the proofs of his presence evidently appear : he works none but salutary and beneficial miracles, because his ministry is a ministry of salvation.

Among the people.] Εν τῷ λαῷ. This clause is omitted by about fifty MSS., several of them of the first antiquity and authority ; by the Complutensian, and by Bengel ; by both the Syriac, both the Arabic, both the Persian ; the Ethiopic, Gothic, Saxon, and all the Itala, except four. Griesbach has left it out of the text.

Verse 36. Moved with compassion] Εσπλαγχνισθη, from σπλαγχνον, a bowel. The Jews esteemed the bowels to be the seat of sympathy and the tender passions, and so applied the organ to the sense.

Εσπλαγχνίζομαι signifies, says Mintert, "to be moved with pity from the very inmost bowels. It is an emphatic word, signifying a vehement affection of commiseration, by which the bowels and especially the heart is moved." Both this verb and the noun seem to be derived from σπᾶω, to draw ; the whole intestinal canal, in the peristaltic motion of the bowels, being drawn, affected, and agitated with the sight of a distressed or miserable object. Pity increases this motion of the bowels, and produces considerable pain : hence σπλαγχνίζομαι, to have the bowels moved, signifies to feel pity or compassion at seeing the miseries of others.

They fainted] Instead of ἐκλελυμένοι, fainted, all the best MSS., versions, and fathers, read ἐσκυλμένοι, grieved and melancholy. Kypke says σκυλλειν properly signifies, to pluck off the hair, as persons do in extreme sorrow or distress. The margin says, They were tired and lay down.

And were scattered abroad] Ερριμμένοι, thrown

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3.

37 Then saith he unto his disciples, 'The harvest truly is plentiful, but the labourers are few; down, or, all along. They were utterly neglected as to the interests of their souls, and rejected by the proud and disdainful Pharisees. This people (οχλος, this mob) that knoweth not the law, is accursed, John vii. 49. Thus those execrable men spoke of the souls that God had made, and of whom they should have been the instructors.

¹ Luke x. 2; John iv. 35.

Those teachers, in name, have left their successors behind them; but, as in the days of Christ, so now, God has in his mercy rescued the flock out of the hands of those who only fed upon their flesh, and clothed themselves with their wool. The days in which a man was obliged to give his property to what was called the Church, for the salvation of his soul, Christ being left out of the question, are, thank God, nearly over and gone. Jesus is the true Shepherd; without him there is nothing but fainting, fatigue, vexation, and dispersion. O that we may be led out and in by him, and find pasture!

Verse 37. The harvest] The souls who are ready to receive the truth are very numerous; but the labourers are few. There are multitudes of scribes, Pharisees, and priests, of reverend and right reverend men; but there are few that work. Jesus wishes for labourers, not gentlemen, who are either idle drones, or slaves to pleasure and sin, and nati consumere fruges "Born to consume the produce of the soil."

It was customary with the Jews to call their rabbins and students reapers; and their work of instruction, the harvest. So in Idra Rabba, s. 2. "The days are few; the creditor is urgent; the crier calls out incessantly; and the reapers are few." And in Pirkey Aboth: "The day is short, the work great, the workmen idle, the reward abundant, and the master of the household is urgent." In all worldly concerns, if there be the prospect of much gain, most men are willing enough to labour; but if it be to save their own souls, or the souls of others, what indolence, backwardness, and carelessness! While their adversary, the devil, is going about as a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour; and a careless soul, and especially a careless minister is his especial prey.

The place of the harvest is the whole earth: it signifies little where a man works, provided it be by the appointment, in the Spirit, and with the blessing of God.

Verse 38. That he will send forth labourers] Οπως εκβαλλη εpyaras, that he would thrust forth labourers. Those who are fittest for the work are generally most backward to the employment. The man who is forward to become a preacher knows little of God, of human nature, or of his own heart. It is God's province to thrust out such preachers as shall labour; and it is our duty to entreat him to do so. A minister of Christ is represented as a day-labourer: he comes into the harvest, not to become lord of it, not to live on the labour of others, but to work, and to labour his day. Though the work may be very severe, yet, to use a familiar expression, there is good wages in the harvest-

38 ^k Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth labourers into his harvest.

A. M. 4031
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3.

^k 2 Thess. iii. 1.

home; and the day, though hot, is but a short one. How earnestly should the flock of Christ pray to the good Shepherd to send them pastors after his own heart, who will feed them with knowledge, and who shall be the means of spreading the knowledge of his truth and the savour of his grace over the face of the whole earth!

The subject of fasting, already slightly noticed in the preceding notes, should be farther considered.

In all countries, and under all religions, fasting has not only been considered a duty, but also of extraordinary virtue to procure blessings, and to avert evils. Hence it has often been practised with extraordinary rigour, and abused to the most superstitious purposes. There are twelve kinds of fasts among the Hindoos:—

1. The person neither eats nor drinks for a day and night. This fast is indispensable, and occurs twenty-nine times in the year.

2. The person fasts during the day, and eats at night.

3. The person eats nothing but fruits, and drinks milk or water.

4. He eats once during the day and night.

5. Eats one particular kind of food during the day and night, but as often as he pleases.

6. Called Chanderaym, which is, to eat on the first day, only one mouthful; two on the second; and thus continue increasing one mouthful every day for a month, and then decreasing a mouthful every day, till he leaves off where he began.

7. The person neither eats nor drinks for twelve days.

8. Lasts twelve days: the first three days he eats a little once in the day; the next three, he eats only once in the night; the next three, he eats nothing, unless it be brought to him; and, during the last three days, he neither eats nor drinks.

9. Lasts fifteen days. For three days and three nights, he eats only one handful at night; the next three days and nights, he eats one handful if it be brought him, if not, he takes nothing. Then he eats nothing for three days and three nights. The next three days and nights he takes only a handful of warm water each day. The next three days and nights he takes a handful of warm milk each day.

10. For three days and nights he neither eats nor drinks. He lights a fire, and sits at a door where there enters a hot wind, which he draws in with his breath.

11. Lasts fifteen days. Three days and three nights he eats nothing but leaves; three days and three nights, nothing but the Indian fig; three days and three nights, nothing but the seed of the lotus; three days and three nights, nothing but peepul leaves; three days and three nights, the expressed juice of a particular kind of grass called doobah.

12. Lasts a week. First day he eats milk; second, milk-curds; third, ghee, i. e. clarified butter; fourth, cow's urine; fifth, cow's dung; sixth, water seventh, nothing.

During every kind of fast, the person sleeps on the ground, plays at no game, has no connection with women, neither shaves nor anoints himself, and bestows alms each day.—AYEEN AKBERRY, vol. iii. p. 247–250. How much more simple and effectual is the way of salvation taught in the BIBLE! But, because it is true, it is not credited by fallen man.

FASTING is considered by the Mohammedans as an essential part of piety. Their orthodox divines term it the gate of religion. With them, it is of two kinds, voluntary and incumbent; and is distinguished by the Moslimân doctors into three degrees: 1. The refraining from every kind of nourishment or carnal indulgence. 2. The restraining the various members from every thing which might excite sinful or corrupt desires. 3. The abstracting the mind wholly from worldly cares, and fixing it exclusively upon God.

Their great annual fast is kept on the month Ramzan, or Ramadhan, beginning at the first new moon, and continuing until the appearance of the next; during which, it is required to abstain from every kind of nourishment from day-break till after sun-set of each day. From this observance none are excused but the sick, the aged, and children. This is properly the Mohammedan Lent. See HEDAYAH, prel. Dis. p. LV. LVI.

It is worthy of remark, that these children of the Bridegroom, the disciples, did not mourn, were exposed to no persecution, while the Bridegroom, the Lord Jesus, was with them: but after he had been taken from them, by death and his ascension, they did fast and mourn; they were exposed to all manner of hardships, persecutions, and even death itself, in some of its worst forms.

CHAPTER X.

Jesus calls, commissions, and names his twelve disciples, 1–4. Gives them particular instructions relative to the objects of their ministry, 5, 6. Mode of preaching, &c., 7–15. Foretells the afflictions and persecutions they would have to endure, and the support they should receive, 16–25. Cautions them against betraying his cause, in order to procure their personal safety, 26–39. And gives especial promises to those who should assist his faithful servants in the execution of their work, 40–42.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3

AND ^a when he had called unto him his twelve disciples, he — gave them power ^b against unclean spirits, to cast them out, and to heal all manner of sickness and all manner of disease.

^a Mark iii. 13, 14; vi. 7; Luke vi. 13; ix. 1.

NOTES ON CHAP. X.

Verse 1. Twelve disciples] Our Lord seems to have had the twelve patriarchs, heads of the congregation of Israel, in view, in his choosing twelve disciples. That he had the plan of the ancient Jewish Church in his eye is sufficiently evident from chap. xix. 28; and from Luke x. 1; xxii. 30; John xvii. 1, &c., and Rev. xxi. 12–14.

He gave them power against unclean spirits] The word kata, against, which our translators have supplied in Italic, is found in many MSS. of good note, and in the principal versions. Here we find the first call to the Christian ministry, and the end proposed by the commission given. To call persons to the ministry belongs only to Him who can give them power to cast out unclean spirits. He whose ministry is not accompanied with healing to diseased souls, was never called of God. But let it be observed, that, though the spiritual gifts requisite for the ministry must be supplied by God himself, yet this does not preclude the importance of human learning. No man can have his mind too well cultivated, to whom a dispensation of the Gospel is committed. The influence of the Spirit of God was no more designed to render human learning useless, than that learning should be considered as superseding the necessity of Divine inspiration.

Verse 2. Apostles] This is the first place where

2 Now the names of the twelve apostles are these: The first, Simon, ^c who is called Peter, and Andrew his brother; James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother;

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3

^b Or, over.—^c John i. 42.

the word is used. Αποστολος, an apostle, comes from αποστέλλω, I send a message. The word was anciently used to signify a person commissioned by a king to negotiate any affair between him and any other power or people. Hence αποστολοι and κηρυκτες, apostles and heralds, are of the same import in Herodotus. See the remarks at the end of chap. iii.

It is worthy of notice, that those who were Christ's apostles were first his disciples; to intimate, that men must be first taught of God, before they be sent of God. Jesus Christ never made an apostle of any man who was not first his scholar or disciple. These twelve apostles were chosen: 1. That they might be with our Lord, to see and witness his miracles, and hear his doctrine. 2. That they might bear testimony of the former, and preach his truth to mankind.

The first, Simon, who is called Peter, and Andrew his brother; &c.] We are not to suppose that the word πρωτος, first, refers to any kind of dignity, as some have imagined; it merely signifies the first in order—the person first mentioned. A pious man remarks: "God here unites by grace those who were before united by nature." Though nature cannot be deemed a step towards grace, yet it is not to be considered as always a hinderance to it. Happy the brothers who are joint envoys of Heaven, and the parents who have two or more children employed as ambassa-

A. M. 4031. 3 Philip, and Bartholomew ;
A. D. 27. Thomas, and Matthew the publi-
An. Olymp. can; James the son of Alpheus, CCL. 3. and Lebbeus, whose surname was Thaddeus;

4 ^d Simon the Canaanite, and Judas ^e Iscariot, who also betrayed him.

5 ¶ These twelve Jesus sent forth, and ^d Luke vi. 15; Acts i. 13.—^e John xiii. 26.—^f Chap. iv. 15.

See 2 Kings xvii. 24; John iv. 9, 20.—^h Chap. xv. 21; Acts dors for God! But this is a very rare case; and family compacts in the work of the ministry are dangerous and should be avoided.

Verse 3. Bartholomew] Many are of opinion that this was Nathanael, mentioned John i. 46, whose name was probably Nathanael bar Talmi, Nathanael, the son of Talmi: here, his own name is repressed, and he is called Bar Talmi, or Bartholomew, from his father.

Matthew the publican] The writer of this history.
See the preface.

James the son of Alpheus] This person was also called Cleopas, or Clopas, Luke xxiv. 18; John xix.
25. He had married Mary, sister to the blessed Virgin, John xix. 25.

Verse 4. Simon] He was third son of Alpheus, and brother of James and Jude, or Judas, Matt. xiii. 55.

The Canaanite] This word is not put here to signify a particular people, as it is elsewhere used in the Sacred Writings; but it is formed from the Hebrew קנא kana, which signifies zealous, literally translated by Luke, chap. vi. 15, ζηλωτης, zeletes, or the zealous, probably from his great ferrency in preaching the Gospel of his Master. But see Luke vi. 15.

Judas Iscariot] Probably from the Hebrew יִשְׁכְּרִיָּת ish kerioth, a man of Kerioth, which was a city in the tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 25, where it is likely this man was born.

אִסְכָּרְיָה iscara, signifies the quinsy, or strangulation, and Judas hanged himself after he had betrayed our Lord, Dr. Lightfoot seems inclined to believe that he had his name from this circumstance, and that it was not given him till after his death.

Who also betrayed him] Rather, even he who betrayed him, or delivered him up; for so, I think, ο καὶ παράδους αὐτον should be translated. The common translation, who also betrayed him, is very exceptionable, as it seems to imply, he was betrayed by some others, as well as by Judas.

Verse 5. These twelve Jesus sent forth, and commanded] To be properly qualified for a minister of Christ, a man must be, 1. filled with the spirit of holiness; 2. called to this particular work; 3. instructed in its nature, &c.; and, 4. commissioned to go forth, and testify the Gospel of the grace of God.
These are four different gifts which a man must receive from God by Christ Jesus. To these let him add all the human qualifications he can possibly attain;
as in his arduous work he will require every gift and every grace.

Go not into the way of the Gentiles] Our Lord commanded them, saying, 'Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of ^e the Samaritans enter ye not:

6 ^h But go rather to the ⁱ lost sheep of the house of Israel.

7 ^k And as ye go, preach, saying, ^l The kingdom of heaven is at hand.

xiii. 46.—ⁱ Isa. liii. 6; Jer. l. 6, 17; Ezek. xxxiv. 5, 6, 16; 1 Pet. ii. 25.—^k Luke ix. 2.—^l Chap. iii. 2; iv. 17; Luke x. 9.

only intended that the first offers of salvation should be made to the Jewish people; and that the heathen should not be noticed in this first mission, that no stumbling-block might be cast in the way of the Jews.

Into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not] The Samaritans had afterwards the Gospel preached to them by Christ himself, John iv. 4, &c., for the reason assigned above. Such as God seems at first to pass by are often those for whom he has designed his greatest benefits, (witness the Samaritans, and the Gentiles in general,) but he has his own proper time to discover and reveal them.

The history of the Samaritans is sufficiently known from the Old Testament. Properly speaking, the inhabitants of the city of Samaria should be termed Samaritans; but this epithet belongs chiefly to the people sent into that part of the promised land by Salmanezer, king of Assyria, in the year of the world 3283, when he carried the Israelites that dwelt there captives beyond the Euphrates, and sent a mixed people, principally Cuthites, to dwell in their place. These were altogether heathens at first; but they afterwards incorporated the worship of the true God with that of their idols. See the whole account, 2 Kings xvii. 5, &c. From this time they feared Jehovah, and served other gods till after the Babylonish captivity. From Alexander the Great, Sanballat, their governor, obtained permission to build a temple upon Mount Gerizim, which the Jews conceiving to be in opposition to their temple at Jerusalem, hated them with a perfect hatred, and would have no fellowship with them. The Samaritans acknowledge the Divine authority of the law of Moses, and carefully preserve it in their own characters, which are probably the genuine ancient Hebrew; the character which is now called Hebrew being that of the Chaldeans. The Samaritan Pentateuch is printed in the London Polyglott, and is an undeniable record. A poor remnant of this people is found still at Naplouse, the ancient Shechem; but they exist in a state of very great poverty and distress, and probably will soon become extinct.

Verse 6. But go rather to the lost sheep, &c.] The Jewish Church was the ancient fold of God; but the sheep had wandered from their Shepherd, and were lost. Our blessed Lord sends these under-shepherds to seek, find, and bring them back to the Shepherd and Overseer of their souls.

Verse 7. And as ye go, preach] πορευομενοι δε κηρυσσετε, and as you proceed, proclaim like heralds— make this proclamation wherever ye go, and while ye are journeying. Preach and travel; and, as ye travel

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.
8 Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils: ^mfreely ye have received, freely give.

9 ⁿProvide ^oneither gold, nor silver, nor ^pbrass in your purses,

^m Acts viii. 18, 20.—ⁿ 1 Sam. ix. 7; Mark vi. 8; Luke ix. 3; x, 4; xxii. 35.—^o Or, Get.

preach—proclaim salvation to all you meet. Wherever the ministers of Christ go, they find lost, ruined souls; and, wherever they find them, they should proclaim Jesus, and his power to save. For an explanation of the word proclaim or preach, see on chap. iii. 1.

From this commission we learn what the grand subject of apostolic preaching was—THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN IS AT HAND! This was the great message. “They preached,” says Quesnel, “to establish the faith; the kingdom, to animate the hope; of heaven, to inspire the love of heavenly things, and the contempt of earthly; which is at hand, that men may prepare for it without delay.”

Verse 8. Raise the dead] This is wanting in the MSS. marked EKLMS of Griesbach, and in those marked BHV of Mathai, and in upwards of one hundred others. It is also wanting in the Syriac, (Vienna edition,) latter Persian, Sahidic, Armenian, Slavonic, and in one copy of the Itala; also in Athanasius, Basil, and Chrysostom. There is no evidence that the disciples raised any dead person previously to the resurrection of Christ. The words should certainly be omitted, unless we could suppose that the authority now given respected not only their present mission, but comprehended also their future conduct. But that our blessed Lord did not give this power to his disciples at this time, is, I think, pretty evident from verse 1. and from Luke ix. 6, 10; x. 19, 20, where, if any such power had been given, or exercised, it would doubtless have been mentioned. Wetstein has rejected it, and so did Griesbach in his first edition; but in the second (1796) he has left it in the text, with a note of doubtfulness.

Freely ye have received, freely give.] A rule very necessary, and of great extent. A minister or labourer in the Gospel vineyard, though worthy of his comfortable support while in the work, should never preach for hire, or make a secular traffic of a spiritual work. What a scandal is it for a man to traffic with gifts which he pretends, at least, to have received from the Holy Ghost, of which he is not the master, but the dispenser. He who preaches to get a living, or to make a fortune, is guilty of the most infamous sacrilege.

Verse 9. Provide neither gold, nor silver, nor brass, in your purses] Εἰς τὰς ζωνὰς ὑμῶν, in your GIRDLES. It is supposed that the people of the east carry their money in a fold of their girdles. This is scarcely correct: they carry it in a purse in their bosom, under their girdles. This I have often observed.

In a thousand instances an apostolic preacher, who goes to the wilderness to seek the lost sheep, will be exposed to hunger and cold, and other inconveniences; he must therefore resign himself to God, depending on

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.
10 Nor scrip for your journey, neither two coats, neither shoes, nor yet ^astaves: ^zfor the workman is worthy of his meat.

11 ^sAnd into whatsoever city or town ye shall enter, inquire who in it is wor his providence for the necessities of life. If God have sent him, he is bound to support him, and will do it: anxiety therefore, in him, is a double crime, as it insinuates a bad opinion of the Master who has employed him. Every missionary should make himself master of this subject.

^p See Mark vi. 8.—^q Gr. a staff.—^r Luke x. 7; 1 Cor. ix. 7, &c. 1 Tim. v. 18.—^s Luke x. 8.

Have no money in your purse, is a command, obedience to which was secured by the narrow circumstances of most of the primitive genuine preachers of the Gospel. Whole herds of friars mendicants have professed the same principle, and abandoned themselves to voluntary poverty; but if the money be in the heart it is a worse evil. In the former case, it may be a temptation to sin; in the latter, it must be ruinous.

Verse 10. Nor scrip for your journey] To carry provisions. This was called תורמיל tornul, by the rabbins; it was a leathern pouch hung about their necks, in which they put their victuals. This was properly, the shepherd's bag.

Neither two coats, &c.] Nothing to encumber you Nor yet staves] Ραβδον, a staff, as in the margin, but, instead of ραβδον, staff, which is the common reading, all the following MSS. and versions have παῖδες, staves, and CEFGLMPS. V. ninety-three others, Coptic, Armenian, latter Syriac, one of the Itala, Chrysostom, and Theophylact. This reading is of great importance, as it reconciles this place with Luke ix. 3, and removes the seeming contradiction from Mark vi. 8; as if he had said: “Ye shall take nothing to defend yourselves with, because ye are the servants of the Lord, and are to be supported by his bounty, and defended by his power. In a word, be like men in haste, and eager to begin the important work of the ministry. The sheep are lost—ruined: Satan is devouring them: give all diligence to pluck them out of the jaws of the destroyer.”

The workman is worthy of his meat.] Τῆς τροφῆς αὐτοῦ, of his maintenance. It is a maintenance, and that only, which a minister of God is to expect, and that he has a Divine right to; but not to make a fortune, or lay up wealth: besides, it is the workman, he that labours in the word and doctrine, that is to get even this. How contrary to Christ is it for a man to have vast revenues, as a minister of the Gospel, who ministers no Gospel, and who spends the revenues of the Church to its disgrace and ruin!

Verse 11. Into whatsoever city or town ye shall enter] In the commencement of Christianity, Christ and his preachers were all itinerant.

Inquire who in it is worthy] That is, of a good character; for a preacher of the Gospel should be careful of his reputation, and lodge only with those who are of a regular life.

A. M. 4031. thy; and there abide till ye go
A. D. 27. thence.
An. Olymp. CCI. 3.

12 And when ye come into a house, salute it.

13 ¹And if the house be worthy, let your peace come upon it: ²but if it be not worthy, let your peace return to you.

14 ³And whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear your words, when ye depart out of

¹ Luke x. 5. — ² Psa. xxxv. 13. — ³ Mark vi. 11; Luke ix. 5; x. 10, 11. — ⁴ Neh. v. 13; Acts xiii. 51; xviii. 6.

[There abide till ye go thence.] Go not about from house to house, Luke x. 7. Acting contrary to this precept has often brought a great disgrace on the Gospel of God. Stay in your own lodging as much as possible, that you may have time for prayer and study. Seldom frequent the tables of the rich and great; if you do, it will unavoidably prove a snare to you. The unction of God will perish from your mind, and your preaching be only a dry barren repetition of old things; the bread of God in your hands will be like the dry, mouldy, Gibeonitish crusts, mentioned Josh. ix. 5. He who knows the value of time, and will redeem it from useless chit-chat, and trifling visits, will find enough for all the purposes of his own salvation, the cultivation of his mind, and the work of the ministry. He to whom time is not precious, and who lives not by rule, never finds time sufficient for any thing—is always embarrassed—always in a hurry, and never capable of bringing one good purpose to proper effect.

Verse 12. Salute it] Λεγοντες, ειρηνη εν τω οικω τουτω, saying, "Peace be to this house." This clause, which, as explanatory of the word ασπασαθε, is necessary to the connection in which it now stands, is added, by the MSS. D and L, and forty-three others, the Armenian, Ethiopic, Slavonic, Saxon, Vulgate, all the copies of the old Itala, Theophylact, and Hilary. The clause is also found in several modern versions. The modern Greek has λεγοντες ειρηνη εις το σκηπτι τουτο. The Italian, by Matthew, of Erberg, and of Diodati, renders it thus: Pace sia a questa casa. Peace be to this house.

It is found also in Wickliff, and in my old MS. Seynge, pres be to this hous. Some suppose it is an addition taken from Luke; but there is nearly as much reason to believe he took it from Matthew.

Peace, שלום, among the Hebrews, had a very extensive meaning:—it comprehended all blessings, spiritual and temporal. Hence that saying of the rabbins, גדול שלום שכל הברכות כלולות בו Gadol shalom, shecol haberacoth culaloth bo. Great is PEACE, for all other blessings are comprehended in it. To wish peace to a family, in the name and by the authority of Christ, was in effect a positive promise, on the Lord's side, of all the good implied in the wish. This was paying largely even beforehand. Whoever receives the messengers of God into his house confers the highest honour upon himself, and not upon the preacher, whose honour is from God, and who comes with the blessings of life eternal to that man and his family who receives him.

that house or city, ¹shake off the dust of your feet.

15 Verily I say unto you, ²It shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrah, in the day of judgment, than for that city.

16 ¶ ³Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves: ⁴be ye therefore wise as serpents, and ⁵harmless ⁶as doves.

¹ Chap. xi. 22, 24. — ² Luke x. 3. — ³ Rom. xvi. 19; Eph. v. 15. — ⁴ 1 Cor. xiv. 20; Phil. ii. 15. — ⁵ Or, simple.

In India, it is customary for a way-faring man, when night draws on, to enter a house, and simply say, "Sir, I am a guest with you this night." If the owner cannot lodge him, he makes an apology, and the traveller proceeds to another house.

Verse 13. If that house be worthy] If that family be proper for a preacher to lodge in, and the master be ready to embrace the message of salvation.

Your peace] The blessings you have prayed for shall come upon the family: God will prosper them in their bodies, souls, and substance.

But if it be not worthy] As above explained.

Let your peace] The blessings prayed for, return to you. Ηπος υμας επισπονητω, it shall turn back upon yourselves. They shall get nothing, and you shall have an increase.

The trials, disappointments, insults, and wants of the followers of Christ become, in the hand of the all-wise God, subservient to their best interests: hence, nothing can happen to them without their deriving profit from it, unless it be their own fault.

Verse 14. Shake off the dust of your feet.] The Jews considered themselves defiled by the dust of a heathen country, which was represented by the prophets as a polluted land, Amos vii. 17, when compared with the land of Israel, which was considered as a holy land, Ezek. xlv. 1; therefore, to shake the dust of any city of Israel from off one's clothes or feet was an emblematical action, signifying a renunciation of all farther connection with them, and placing them on a level with the cities of the Heathen. See Amos ix. 7.

Verse 15. In the day of judgment] Or, punishment, — κρισιως. Perhaps not meaning the day of general judgment, nor the day of the destruction of the Jewish state by the Romans; but a day in which God should send punishment on that particular city, or on that person, for their crimes. So the day of judgment of Sodom and Gomorrah, was the time in which the Lord destroyed them by fire and brimstone, from the Lord out of heaven.

If men are thus treated for not receiving the preachers of the Gospel, what will it be to despise the Gospel itself—to deery it—to preach the contrary—to hinder the preaching of it—to abuse those who do preach it in its purity—or to render it fruitless by calumnies and lies? Their punishment, our Lord intimates, shall be greater than that inflicted on the inhabitants of Sodom and Gomorrah!

Verse 16. Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves] He who is called to preach the

A. M. 4031. 17 But beware of men : for ^e they
A. D. 27. will deliver you up to the councils,
An. Olymp. and ^d they will scourge you in their
CCI. 3. synagogues :

^c Chap. xxiv. 9 ; Mark xiii. 9 ; Luke xii. 11 ; xxi. 12.

Gospel is called to embrace a state of constant labour, and frequent suffering. He who gets ease and pleasure, in consequence of embracing the ministerial office, neither preaches the Gospel, nor is sent of God. If he did the work of an evangelist, wicked men and demons would both oppose him.

Wise (σοφίμοι prudent) as serpents, and harmless as doves.] This is a proverbial saying : so in Shir hashirim Rabba, fol. 16, "The holy blessed God said to the Israelites, Ye shall be towards me as upright as the doves ; but, towards the Gentiles, as cunning as serpents."

There is a beauty in this saying which is seldom observed. The serpent is represented as prudent to excess, being full of cunning, Gen. iii. 1 ; 2 Cor. xi. 3 ; and the dove is simple, even to stupidity, Hos. vii. 11 ; but Jesus Christ corrects here the cunning of the serpent, by the simplicity of the dove ; and the too great simplicity of the dove, by the cunning of the serpent. For a fine illustration of this text, see the account of the Boiga :—

"This species is remarkably beautiful, combining the richest colours of the finest gems with the splendour of burnished gold, mingled with dark brown shades, which contrast and heighten its brilliant ornaments. The whole under surface of the head and body is of a silver white, separated from the changing blue of the back by a golden chain on each side, the whole length of the body. This fine blue and silver, ornamented with gold, by no means give a full idea of the beautiful embroidery of the boiga. We must take in all the reflected tints of silver colour, golden yellow, red, blue, green, and black, mingled, and changing in the most extraordinary and beautiful manner possible ; so that, when about to change its skin, it seems studded with a mixed assemblage of diamonds, emeralds, topazes, sapphires, and rubies, under a thin transparent veil of bluish crystal. Thus, in the rich and torrid plains of India, where the most splendid gems abound, nature seems to have chosen to reunite them all, together with the noble metals, to adorn the brilliant robe of the boiga. This is one of the most slender of serpents in proportion to its length. The specimens in the royal collection, which exceed three feet in length, are hardly a few lines in diameter. The tail is almost as long as the body, and at the end is like a needle for fineness ; yet it is sometimes flattened above, below, and on the two sides, rendering it in some measure square. From the delicacy of its form, its movements are necessarily extremely agile ; so that, doubling itself up several times, it can spring to a considerable distance, with great swiftness. It can twine and twist itself, most readily, and nimbly, around trees or other such bodies ; climbing, or descending, or suspending itself, with the utmost facility. The boiga feeds on small birds, which it swallows very easily, notwithstanding

A. M. 4031. 18 And ^e ye shall be brought
A. D. 27. before governors and kings for my
An. Olymp. sake, for a testimony against them
CCI. 3. and the Gentiles.

^d Acts v. 40.—^e Acts xii. 1 ; xxiv. 10 ; xxv. 7, 23 ; 2 Tim. iv. 16.

the small diameter of its body, in consequence of the great distensibility of its jaws, throat, and stomach, common to it with other serpents. It conceals itself under the foliage of trees, on purpose to surprise the small birds, and is said to attract them by a peculiar kind of whistling, to which the term of song has been applied ; but we must consider this as an exaggeration, as its long divided tongue, and the conformation of its other organs of sound, are only adapted for producing a hiss, or species of simple whistle, instead of forming a melodious assemblage of tones. Yet, if nature has not reckoned the boiga among the songsters of the woods, it seems to possess a more perfect instinct than other serpents, joined to more agile movements, and more magnificent ornament. In the isle of Borneo, the children play with the boiga, without the smallest dread. They carry it in their hands, as innocent as themselves, and twist it about their necks, arms, and bodies, in a thousand directions. This circumstance brings to recollection that fine emblem of Candour and Confidence imagined by the genius of the ancients : a child smiling on a snake, which holds him fast in his convolutions. But, in that beautiful allegory, the snake is supposed to conceal a deadly poison ; while the boiga returns caress for caress to the Indian children who fondle it, and seems pleased to be twisted about their delicate hands. As the appearance of such nimble and innocent animals in the forests must be extremely beautiful, displaying their splendid colours, and gliding swiftly from branch to branch, without possessing the smallest noxious quality, we might regret that this species should require a degree of heat greatly superior to that of our regions, and that it can only subsist near the tropics, in Asia, Africa, and America. It has usually a hundred and sixty-six large plates, and a hundred and twenty-eight pairs of small plates, but is subject to considerable variation.

"According to this representation, the boiga is not merely to be praised for its beauty, but may be said to fulfil the old maxim of combining the wisdom of the serpent with the harmlessness of the dove." Cope's Hist. of Oviparous Quadrupeds and Serpents.

Instead of ἀκεραίοι, harmless, or as the Etymol. Mag. defines it, without mixture of evil, the Cod. Beza reads ἀπλοῦστατοι, simple—uncompounded,—so all the copies of the old Itala, the Vulgate, and the Latin fathers ; but this curious and explanatory reading is found in no other Greek MS.

Verse 17. But beware of men] Or, be on your guard against men, τῶν ἀνθρώπων THESE men ; i. e. your countrymen ; those from whom you might have reasonably expected comfort and support ; and especially those in power, who will abuse that power to oppress you.

Councils] Συνοδικα, synhedrins and synagogues See on chap. v. 22. "By synagogues we may under-

A. M. 4031. 19 'But when they deliver you
A. D. 27. up, take no thought how or what
An. Olymp. ye shall speak: for ^ε it shall be CCL. 3. given you in that same hour, what ye shall speak:

20 ^h For it is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father which speaketh in you.

21 'And the brother shall deliver up the brother to death, and the father the child: and the children shall rise up against their parents, stand here, not the places of public worship, but assemblies where three magistrates, chosen out of the principal members of the synagogue, presided to adjust differences among the people: these had power, in certain cases, to condemn to the seourge, but not to death. See Acts xxii. 19; 2 Cor. xi. 24, compared with Luke xii. 11." See Lightfoot.

^ε Mark xiii. 11, 12, 13; Luke xii. 11; xxi. 14, 15.—^ε Exod. iv. 12; Jer. i. 7.—^h 2 Sam. xxiii. 2; Acts iv. 8; vi. 10; 2 Tim. iv. 17.—ⁱ Mic. vii. 6; ver. 35, 36; Luke xxi. 16.

Verse 18. Ye shall be brought before governors, &c.] "This affords a striking proof of the prescience of Christ. Who could have thought, at that time, that these despised and illiterate men could excite so much attention, and be called upon to apologize for the profession of their faith before the tribunals of the most illustrious personages of the earth?" Wakefield.

By governors and kings we may understand, the Roman proconsuls, governors of provinces, and the kings who were tributary to the Roman government, and the emperors themselves, before whom many of the primitive Christians were brought.

For a testimony against them and the Gentiles.] That is, to render testimony, both to Jews and Gentiles, of the truth and power of my Gospel.

Verse 19. Take no thought how or what ye shall speak] Μη μεριμνησατε—Be not anxiously careful, because such anxiety argues distrust in God, and infallibly produces a confused mind. In such a state, no person is fit to proclaim or vindicate the truth. This promise, It shall be given you, &c., banishes all distrust and inquietude on dangerous occasions; but without encouraging sloth and negligence, and without dispensing with the obligation we are under to prepare ourselves by the meditation of sacred truths, by the study of the Holy Scriptures, and by prayer.

It shall be given you in that same hour what] This clause is wanting in the MSS. D and L, and several others, some versions, and several of the fathers; but it is found in Mark xiii. 11, without any various reading; and in substance in Luke xi. 13.

Verse 20. For it is—the Spirit of your Father, &c.] This was an extraordinary promise, and was literally fulfilled to those first preachers of the Gospel; and to them it was essentially necessary, because the New Testament dispensation was to be fully opened by their extraordinary inspiration. In a certain measure, it may be truly said, that the Holy Spirit animates the true disciples of Christ, and enables them to speak. The Head speaks in his members, by his and cause them to be put to death.

22 And ^k ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake: ^l but he that endueth to the end shall be saved.

23 But ^m when they persecute you in this city, flee ye into another: for verily I say unto you, Ye shall not ⁿ have gone over the cities of Israel, ^o till the Son of man be come.

^k Luke xxi. 17.—^l Dan. xii. 12, 13; chap. xxiv. 13; Mark xiii. 13.—^m Chap. ii. 13, iv. 12; xii. 15; Acts viii. 1; ix. 25; xiv. 6.
ⁿ Or, end, or, finish.—^o Chap. xvi. 23.

Spirit; and it is the province of the Spirit of God to speak for God. Neither surprise, defect of talents, nor even ignorance itself, could hurt the cause of God, in the primitive times, when the hearts and minds of those Divine men were influenced by the Holy Spirit.

Your Father] This is added to excite and increase their confidence in God.

Verse 21. And the brother shall deliver up the brother, &c.] What an astonishing enmity is there in the soul of man against God and goodness! That men should think they did God service, in putting to death those who differ from them in their political or religious creed, is a thing that cannot be accounted for but on the principle of an indescribable depravity:

O shame to men! devil with devil damn'd
Firm concord holds, men only disagree
Of creatures rational; though under hope
Of heavenly grace; and, God proclaiming peace,
Yet live in hatred, enmity, and strife
Among themselves, and levy cruel wars,
Wasting the earth, each other to destroy!

PAR. LOST, b. ii. l. 496.

Verse 22. Ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake] Because ye are attached to me, and saved from the corruption that is in the world; therefore the world will hate you. "The laws of Christ condemn a vicious world, and call it to revenge."

He that endureth to the end shall be saved] He who holds fast faith and a good conscience to the end, till the punishment threatened against this wicked people be poured out, he shall be saved, preserved from the destruction that shall fall upon the workers of iniquity. This verse is commonly understood to refer to the destruction of Jerusalem. It is also true that they who do not hold fast faith and a good conscience till death have no room to hope for an admission into the kingdom of God.

Verse 23. But when they persecute you] It is prudence and humility (when charity or righteousness obliges us not to the contrary) to avoid persecution. To deprive those who are disposed to do evil of the opportunities of doing it; to convey the grace which they despise to others; to accomplish God's designs of justice on the former, and of mercy on the latter are consequences of the flight of a persecuted preacher. This flight is a precept to those who are highly

A. M. 4031. 24 ^p The disciple is not above his
A. D. 27. master, nor the servant above his An. Olymp. CCI. 3. lord.

25 It is enough for the disciple that he be necessary to the Church of Christ, an advice to those who might imprudently draw upon themselves persecution, and of indulgence for those who are weak.—But this flight is highly criminal in those mercenary preachers who, through love to their flesh and their property, abandon the flock of Christ to the wolf. See Quesnel.

^p Luke vi. 40; John xiii. 16; xv. 20.—^r Chap. xii. 24;

[In this city, flee ye into another] There is a remarkable repetition of this clause found in the MSS. DL and eight others; the Armenian, Saxon, all the Itala except three; Athan., Theodor., Tertul., August., Ambr., Hilar., and Juvencus. Bengel, in his gnomon, approves of this reading. On the above authorities Griesbach has inserted it in the text. It probably made a portion of this Gospel as written by Matthew. The verse in the MSS. is as follows:—But when they shall persecute you in this city, flee ye into another; and if they persecute in the other, flee ye unto another.

[Ye shall not have gone over (ended or finished, margin) the cities, &c.] The word τελεισητε here is generally understood as implying to go over or through, intimating that there should not be time for the disciples to travel over the cities of Judea before the destruction predicted by Christ should take place. But this is very far from being the truth, as there were not less than forty years after this was spoken, before Jerusalem was destroyed: τελειων και μαθησαντων are used by the Septuagint, 1 Chron. xxv. 8, for those who teach and those who learn. And τοις τελειοις is used by the apostle, 1 Cor. ii. 6, for those who are perfectly instructed in the things of God. Ovid has used the Latin perficio, which answers to the Greek τελειωω in exactly the same sense.

Phillyrides puerum citharâ perfecit Achillem.

“Chiron TAUGHT the young Achilles to play on the harp.” For these reasons some contend that the passage should be translated, Ye shall not have INSTRUCTED, i. e. preached the Gospel in the cities of Israel, till the Son of man be come. The Greek divines call baptism τελειωσις or initiation. See Leigh. Crit. sacr. Edit. Amst. p. 326, 328.

Dr. Lightfoot supposes the meaning to be: “Ye shall not have travelled over the cities of Israel, preaching the Gospel, before the Son of man is revealed by his resurrection, Rom. i. 4; compare Acts iii. 19, 20, and v. 26. To you first, God, raising up his Son, sent him to bless you, &c. The epoch of the Messiah is dated from the resurrection of Christ.” After all, the place may be understood literally; for τελειντας πολεις, to finish the cities, is only a concise mode of speech, for τελειν οδον δια των πολεις, to complete the journey through the cities. To finish the survey, to preach in every one:—till the Son of man be come, may refer either to the outpouring of the Spirit on the as his master, and the servant as his lord. If ^a they have called the master of the house ^r Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of his household?

Mark iii. 22; Luke xi. 15; John viii. 49, 52.—^r Gr. Beelzebub.

day of pentecost, or to the subversion of the Jewish state. See Rosenmuller.

Verse 24. The disciple is not above his master] Or in plainer terms, A scholar is not above his teacher. The saying itself requires no comment, its truth and reasonableness are self-evident, but to the spirit and design we should carefully attend. Jesus is the great teacher: we profess to be his scholars. He who keeps the above saying in his heart will never complain of what he suffers. How many irregular thoughts and affections is this maxim capable of restraining! A man is not a scholar of Christ unless he learn his doctrine; and he does not learn it as he ought unless he put it in practice.

Verse 25. It is enough for the disciple that he be as his master] Can any man who pretends to be a scholar or disciple of Jesus Christ, expect to be treated well by the world? Will not the world love its own, and them only? Why, then, so much impatience under sufferings, such an excessive sense of injuries, such delicacy! Can you expect any thing from the world better than you receive? If you want the honour that comes from it, abandon Jesus Christ, and it will again receive you into its bosom. But you will, no doubt, count the cost before you do this. Take the converse, abandon the love of the world, &c., and God will receive you.

Beelzebub] This name is variously written in the MSS. Beelzeboul, Beelzeboun, Beelzebud, but there is a vast majority in favour of the reading Beelzebub, which should, by all means, be inserted in the text instead of Beelzebub. See the reasons below, and see the margin.

It is supposed that this idol was the same with בַּעַל זְבוּב Baalzebub the god fly, worshipped at Ekron. 2 Kings i. 2, &c., who had his name changed afterwards by the Jews to בַּעַל זְבוּל Baalzebub, the dung god, a title expressive of the utmost contempt. It seems probable that the worship of this vile idol continued even to the time of our Lord; and the title, being applied by the Jews to our blessed Lord, affords the strongest proof of the inveteracy of their malice.

Dr. Lightfoot has some useful observations on this subject, which I shall take the liberty to subjoin.

“For the searching out the sense of this horrid blasphemy, these things are worthy observing.

“I. Among the Jews it was held, in a manner, for a matter of religion, to reproach idols, and to give them odious names. R. Akubah saith, Idolatry pollutes, as it is said, Thou shalt cast away the (idol) as something that is abominable, and thou shalt say to it, Get thee hence. (Isaiah xxx. 22.) R. Lazar saith, Thou shalt say to it. Get thee hence: that which they call the face of God, let them call the face of a dog. That which they call בְּנֵי כֹס ein cos, the foun-

A. M. 4031.

A. D. 27.

An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

26 Fear them not therefore : * for there is nothing covered that shall not be revealed ; and hid that shall not be known.

27 What I tell you in darkness, that speak ye in light : and what ye hear in the ear,

* Mark iv. 22 ; Luke xiii. 17, xii. 2, 3.

RAIN OF A CUP, let them call קין קין cin kuts, the MOUNTAIN OF TOIL (or of stails.) That which they all גדיה gediyah, FORTUNE, let them call גליה gehya, STINK, &c. That town which sometimes was called Bethel, was afterwards called Bethaven. See also the tract Schabbath.

"II. Among the ignominious names bestowed upon idols, the general and common one was זבול Zebul, ung, or a DUNGHILL. 'Even to them that have stretched out their hands בזבול bezebul in a dung-hill, (that is, in an idol temple, or in idolatry,) there is hope. Thou must not bring them (into the Church) because they are stretched forth their hands bezebul, in a dung-hill. But yet you cannot reject them, because they are repented.' And a little after, He that sees them unguing, בזבול, (that is, sacrificing,) to an idol, let him say, Cursed be he that sacrifices to a strange god. Let them, therefore, who dare, form this word in Matthew into Beelzebub. I am so far from doubting that the Pharisees pronounced the word BEELZEBUL, and that Matthew so wrote it, that I doubt not but the sense fails if it be writ otherwise.

"III. Very many names of evil spirits, or devils, occur in the Talmud, which it is needless here to mention. Among all the devils, they esteemed that evil the worst, the foulest, as it were, the prince of the rest, who ruled over the idols, and by whom oracles and miracles were given forth among the Heathens and idolaters. And they were of this opinion for this reason, because they held idolatry, above all other things, chiefly wicked and abominable, and to be the prince and head of evil. This demon they called זבול Baal-zebul, not so much by a proper name, as by one more general and common ; as much as to say, the lord of idolatry : the worst devil, and the worst thing ; and they called him the prince of evils, because idolatry is the prince (or chief) of wickedness."

Verse 26. Fear them not] A general direction to all the persecuted followers of Christ. Fear them not, for they can make you suffer nothing worse than they have made Christ suffer ; and under all trials he has promised the most ample support.

For there is nothing covered, &c.] God sees everything : this is consolation to the upright, and dismay to the wicked ; and he will bring into judgment every work, and every secret thing, whether good or bad. Ecc. xii. 14.

Verse 27. What I tell you in darkness] A man ought to preach that only which he has learned from God's Spirit, and his testimonies ; but let him not pretend to bring forth any thing new, or mysterious. There is nothing that concerns our salvation that is never that preach ye upon the house-tops.

28 * And fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul : but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell.

* Isa. iii. 12, 13, Luke xii. 4 ; 1 Pet. iii. 14.

than the new covenant ; and in that there are, properly speaking, no mysteries : what was secret before is now made manifest in the Gospel of the ever-blessed God. See Eph. iii. 1-12.

What ye hear in the ear] The doctor who explained the law in Hebrew had an interpreter always by him, in whose ears he softly whispered what he said ; this interpreter spoke aloud what had been thus whispered to him. Lightfoot has clearly proved this in his Horæ Talmudicæ, and to this custom our Lord here evidently alludes. The spirit of our Lord's direction appears to be this : whatever I speak to you is for the benefit of mankind,—keep nothing from them, declare explicitly the whole counsel of God ; preach ye, (κηρυξάτε proclaim.) on the house-tops. The houses in Judea were flat-roofed, with a ballustrade round about, which were used for the purpose of taking the air, prayer, meditation, and it seems, from this place, for announcing things in the most public manner. As there are no bells among the Turks, a crier proclaims all times of public worship from the house-tops. Whoever will give himself the trouble to consult the following scriptures will find a variety of uses to which these house-tops were assigned. Deut. xxii. 8 ; Josh. ii. 6 ; Judg. ix. 51 ; Neh. viii. 16 ; 2 Sam. xi. 2 ; 2 Kings xxiii. 12 ; Isa. xv. 3 ; Jer. xxxii. 29, and Acts x. 9.

Lightfoot thinks that this may be an allusion to that custom, when the minister of the synagogue, on the Sabbath eve, sounded with a trumpet six times, upon the roof of a very high house, that from thence all might have notice of the coming in of the Sabbath. The first blast signified that they should leave off their work in the field : the second that they should cease from theirs in the city : the third that they should light the Sabbath candle, &c.

Verse 28. Fear not them which kill the body] Τῶν ἀποκτείνοντων. Those who slay with acts of cruelty, alluding probably to the cruelties which persecutors should exercise on his followers in their martyrdom. But are not able to kill the soul. Hence we find that the body and the soul are distinct principles, for the body may be slain and the soul escape ; and, secondly, that the soul is immaterial, for the murderers of the body are not able, μη δύναμεν, have it not in their power, to injure it.

Fear him] It is not hell-fire we are to fear, but it is God ; without the stroke of whose justice hell itself would be no punishment, and whose frown would render heaven itself insupportable. What strange blindness is it to expose our souls to endless ruin, which should enjoy God eternally ; and to save and pamper the body, by which we enjoy nothing but the creatures, and them only for a moment !

A. M. 4031. 29 Are not two sparrows sold for a
A. D. 27. " farthing? and one of them shall not
An. Olymp. fall on the ground without your Father.
CCL. 3.

30 ▸ But the very hairs of your head are all numbered.

31 Fear ye not therefore, ye are of more value than many sparrows.

^u It is in value half penny farthing in the original, as being the tenth part of the Roman penny. See on chap. xviii. 28.

Verse 29. Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing?] Ἀσκαριον. A Roman AS was one-tenth of a DENARIUS, which was about sevenpence-halfpenny, and one-tenth of sevenpence-halfpenny makes just three farthings.

The word ασκαριον, which we translate farthing, is found among the rabbins in the word יֵיסָר aisar, which, according to Maimonides, is equal to four grains of silver, but is used among them to express a thing of the lowest, or almost no value. Our Lord seems to have borrowed the expression, One of them shall not fall on the ground, &c., from his own countrymen. In Bereshith Rabba, sec. 79, fol. 77, it is said: In the time in which the Jews were compelled to apostatize, Rab. Simeon, Ben. Jochai, and Eliezer his son hid themselves in a cave, and lived upon dry husks. After thirteen years they came out; and, sitting at the mouth of the cave, they observed a fowler stretching his nets to catch birds; and as often as the Bath Kol said דִּמּוֹס dimos, escape! the bird escaped; but when it said סִפְקוּלָא spicula, a dart, the bird was taken. Then the rabbin said, Even a bird is not taken without Heaven, i. e. without the will of God, how much less the life of man! The doctrine intended to be inculcated is this: The providence of God extends to the minutest things; every thing is continually under the government and care of God, and nothing occurs without his will or permission; if then he regards sparrows, how much more man, and how much more still the soul that trusts in him!

Fall on the ground] Instead of ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν, Origen, Clement, Chrysostom, Juvenius, and six MSS. of Mathai, read εἰς τὴν παγίδα, into a snare. Bengel conjectures that it might have been written at first, ἐπὶ τὴν παγῆν; that the first syllable πα being lost out of the word, γῆν, the earth, instead of παγῆν, snare, became the common reading.

Without your Father.] Without the will of your Father: τῆς βουλῆς, the will or counsel, is added here by Origen, Coptic, all the Arabic, latter Persic, Gothic, all the Itala except two; Tert., Iren., Cypr., Novatian, and other Latin fathers. If the evidence be considered as insufficient to entitle it to admission into the text, let it stand there as a supplementary italic word, necessary to make the meaning of the place evident.

All things are ordered by the counsel of God. This is a great consolation to those who are tried and afflicted. The belief of an all-wise, all-directing Providence, is a powerful support under the most grievous accidents of life. Nothing escapes his merciful regards, not even the smallest things of which 32 ▸ Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, * him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven.

33 ▸ But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven.

^v 1 Sam. xiv. 45; 2 Sam. xiv. 11; Luke xxi. 18; Acts xxvii. 34.—^w Luke xii. 8; Rom. x. 9, 10.—^x Rev. iii. 5.—^y Mark viii. 38; Luke ix. 26; 2 Tim. ii. 12.

he may be said to be only the creator and preserver how much less those of whom he is the Father, Saviour and endless felicity! See on Luke xii. 7.

Verse 30. But the very hairs of your head are all numbered.] Nothing is more astonishing than the care and concern of God for his followers. The least circumstances of their life are regulated, not merely by that general providence which extends to all things; but by a particular providence, which fits and directs all things to the design of their salvation, causing them all to co-operate for their present and eternal good Rom. v. 1-5.

Verse 31. Fear ye not—ye are of more value None can estimate the value of a soul, for which Christ has given his blood and life! Have confidence in his goodness; for he who so dearly purchased the will miraculously preserve and save thee. Did the poet intend to contradict Christ when he said:—

"He sees with equal eye, as God of all,
A HERO perish, or a SPARROW fall?"

How cold and meagre is this shallow deistical saying! But could the poet mean, that a sparrow is of as much worth in the sight of God, who regards (if we may believe him) things only in general, as an immortal soul, purchased by the sacrifice of Christ?

Verse 32. Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men] That is, whosoever shall acknowledge me to be the Messiah, and have his heart and life regulated by my spirit and doctrine. It is not merely sufficient to have the heart right before God; there must be firm, manly, and public profession of Christ before men. "I am no hypocrite," says one; neither should you be. "I will keep my religion to myself," i. e. you will not confess Christ before men; then he will renounce you before God.

We confess or own Christ when we own his doctrine, his ministers, his servants, and when no fear hinders us from supporting and assisting them in times of necessity.

Verse 33. Whosoever shall deny me] Whosoever prefers his worldly interest to his duty to God, sets greater value on earthly than on heavenly things, and prefers the friendship of men to the approbation of God.

Let it be remembered, that to be renounced by Christ is to have him neither for a Mediator nor Saviour. To appear before the tribunal of God without having Christ for our Advocate, and, on the contrary, to have him there as our Judge, and a witness against us,—how can a man think of this and not die with horror!

A. M. 4031. 34 ^z Think not that I am come to
A. D. 27. send peace on earth: I came not
An. Olymp. CCL. 3. to send peace, but a sword.

35 For I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law.

36 And ^b a man's foes shall be they of his own household.

^a Luke xii. 49, 51, 52, 53. — ^a Mic. vii. 6. — ^b Psa. xli. 9; Iv.
13; Mic. vii. 6; John xiii. 18.

Verse 31. Think not that I am come to send peace, &c.] The meaning of this difficult passage will be plain, when we consider the import of the word peace, and the expectation of the Jews. I have already had occasion to remark, (ver. 12,) that the word shalom, rendered by the Greeks euphry, was used among the Hebrews to express all possible blessings, temporal and spiritual; but especially the former. — The expectation of the Jews was, that, when the Messiah should come, all temporal prosperity should be accumulated on the land of Judea; therefore την γην, in this verse, should not be translated the earth, but this land. The import of our Lord's teaching here is this, Do not imagine, as the Jews in general vainly do, that I am come to send forth, (ἀλλεῖν), by forcing out the Roman power, that temporal prosperity which they long for; I am not come for this purpose, but to send forth (ἀλλεῖν) the Roman sword, to cut off a disobedient and rebellious nation, the cup of whose iniquity is already full, and whose crimes cry aloud for speedy vengeance. See also on Luke xii. 49. From the time they rejected the Messiah, they were a prey to the most cruel and destructive factions; they employed their time in butchering one another, till the Roman sword was unsheathed against them, and desolated the land.

Verse 35. I am come to set a man at variance] The spirit of Christ can have no union with the spirit of the world. Even a father, while unconverted, will oppose a godly child. Thus the spirit that is in those who sin against God is opposed to that spirit which is in the followers of the Most High. It is the spirits when that are in opposition, and not the persons.

Verse 36. A man's foes shall be they of his own household.] Our Lord refers here to their own traditions. So Sota, fol. 49. "A little before the coming of the Messiah, the son shall insult the father, the daughter rebel against her mother, the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law; and each man shall have his own household for his enemies." Again, in Sanhedrin, fol. 97, it is said: "In the age in which the Messiah shall come, the young men shall turn the elders into ridicule; the elders shall rise up against the youth, the daughter against her mother, the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law; and the men of that age shall be excessively impudent; nor shall the son reverence his father." These are most remarkable sayings, and, by them, our Lord shows them that he was the Messiah, for all these things literally took 37 ^c He that loveth father or mother more than me, is not worthy of me: and he that loveth son or daughter more than me, is not worthy of me.

38 ^d And he that taketh not his cross, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me.

39 ^e He that findeth his life shall lose it: and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it.

^c Luke xiv. 26. — ^d Chap. xvi. 24; Mark viii. 31; Luke ix. 23, xiv. 27. — ^e Chap. xvi. 25; Luke xvii. 33; John xii. 25.

place shortly after their final rejection of Christ. See the terrible account, given by Josephus, relative to the desolations of those times. Through the just judgment of God, they who rejected the Lord that bought them became abandoned to every species of iniquity; they rejected the salvation of God, and fell into the condemnation of the devil.

Father Quesnel's note on this place is worthy of deep attention. "The father (says he) is the enemy of his son, when, through a bad education, an irregular love, and a cruel indulgence, he leaves him to take a wrong bias, instructs him not in his duty, and fills his mind with ambitious views. The son is the father's enemy, when he is the occasion of his doing injustice, in order to heap up an estate for him, and to make his fortune. The mother is the daughter's enemy, when she instructs her to please the world, breeds her up in excess and vanity, and suffers any thing scandalous or unseemly in her dress. The daughter is the mother's enemy, when she becomes her idol, when she engages her to comply with her own irregular inclinations, and to permit her to frequent balls and plays. The master is the enemy of his servant, and the servant that of his master, when the one takes no care of the other's salvation, and the latter is subservient to his master's passions."

Verse 37. He that loveth father or mother more than me] He whom we love the most is he whom we study most to please, and whose will and interests we prefer in all cases. If, in order to please a father or mother who are opposed to vital godliness, we abandon God's ordinances and followers, we are unworthy of any thing but hell.

Verse 38. He that taketh not his cross] i. e. He who is not ready, after my example, to suffer death in the cause of my religion, is not worthy of me, does not deserve to be called my disciple.

This alludes to the custom of causing the criminal to bear his own cross to the place of execution: so Plutarch, ἑκαστος των κακοεργων εκφερε τον αυτον σταυρον. Each of the malefactors carries on his own cross. See John xix. 17.

Verse 39. He that findeth his life, &c.] i. e. He who, for the sake of his temporal interest, abandons his spiritual concerns, shall lose his soul; and he who, in order to avoid martyrdom, abjures the pure religion of Christ, shall lose his soul, and perhaps his life too. He that findeth his life shall lose it, was literally fulfilled in Archbishop Cranmer. He confessed Christ

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

40 ¶ He that receiveth you, receiveth me; and he that receiv-eth me, receiveth him that sent me.

41 § He that receiveth a prophet in the name of a prophet, shall receive a prophet's reward; and he that receiveth a righteous man

¶ Chap. xviii. 5; Luke ix. 48; x. 16; John xiii. 20; Gal.
iv. 14.

against the devil, and his eldest son, the pope. He was ordered to be burnt: to save his life he recanted, and was, notwithstanding, burnt. Whatever a man sacrifices to God is never lost, for he finds it again in God.

There is a fine piece on this subject in Juvenal,
Sat. viii. l. 80, which deserves to be recorded here.

—ambiguæ si quando citabere testis
Incertæque rei, Phalaris licet imperet ut sis
Falsus, et admoto dietet perjuriam tauro,
Summum crede nefas animam præferre pudori
Et propter vitam vivendi perdere causas.

—If ever call'd
To give thy witness in a doubtful case,
Though Phalaris himself should bid thee lie,
On pain of torture in his flaming bull,
Disdain to barter innocence for life;
To which life owes its lustre and its worth.

Wakefield.

Verse 40. He that receiveth you] Treats you kindly, receiveth me; I will consider the kindness as shown to myself; for he who receiveth me, as the true Messiah, receiveth that God by whose counsels and through whose love I am come.

Verse 41. He that receiveth a prophet] Προφήτην, a teacher, not a foreteller of future events, for this is not always the meaning of the word; but one commissioned by God to teach the doctrines of eternal life. It is no small honour to receive into one's house a minister of Jesus Christ. Every person is not admitted to exercise the sacred ministry; but none are excluded from partaking of its grace, its spirit, and its reward. If the teacher should be weak, or even if he should be found afterwards to have been worthless, yet the person who has received him in the name, under the sacred character, of an evangelist, shall not lose his reward; because what he did he did for the sake of Christ, and through love for his Church. Many sayings of this kind are found among the rabbins, and this one is common: "He who receives a learned man, or an elder, into his house, is the same as if he had received the Shekinah." And again: "He who in the name of a righteous man, shall receive a righteous man's reward.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

42 ^h And whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones, a cup of cold water only, in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward

§ 1 Kings xvii. 10; xviii. 4; 2 Kings iv. 8. — ^h Chap. viii. 5, 6;
xxv. 40; Mark ix. 41; Heb. vi. 10.

speaks against a faithful pastor, it is the same as if he had spoken against God himself." See Schoettgen.

Verse 42. A cup of cold water] ὕδατος, of water is not in the common text, but it is found in the Codes
Bezae, Coptic, Armenian, Gothic, Anglo-Saxon, Slavo- nic, all copies of the Itala, Vulgate, and Origen. I is necessarily understood; the ellipsis of the same substantive is frequent, both in the Greek and Latin writers. See Wakefield.

Little ones] My apparently mean and generally despised disciples.

But a cup of water in the eastern countries was no a matter of small worth. In India, the Hindoos g sometimes a great way to fetch it, and then boil i that it may do the less hurt to travellers when they are hot; and, after that, they stand from morning t night in some great road, where there is neither pi nor rivulet, and offer it, in honour of their god, to b drunk by all passengers. This necessary work o charity, in these hot countries, seems to have bee practised by the more pious and humane Jews; an our Lord assures them that, if they do this in his name they shall not lose their reward. See the Asiatic Miscellany, vol. ii. p. 142.

Verily—he shall in no wise lose his reward.] Th rabbins have a similar saying: "He that gives food t one that studies in the law, God will bless him in thi world, and give him a lot in the world to come." Syn Sohar.

Love heightens the smallest actions, and gives worth to them which they cannot possess without i Under a just and merciful God every sin is eithe punished or pardoned, and every good action rewardec
The most indigent may exercise the works of merc and charity; seeing even a cup of cold water, give in the name of Jesus, shall not lose its reward. How astonishing is God's kindness! It is not the ric merely whom he calls on to be charitable; but eve the poor, and the most impoverished of the poor! Go gives the power and inclination to be charitable, an then rewards the work which, it may be truly said God himself hath wrought. It is the name of Jesu that sanctifies every thing, and renders services, i themselves comparatively contemptible, of high wor in the sight of God. See Quesnel.

CHAPTER XI.

Christ, having finished his instructions to his disciples, departs to preach in different cities, 1. John send two of his disciples to him to inquire whether he were the Christ, 2-6. Christ's testimony concernin John, 7-15 He upbraideth the Jews with their capriciousness, 16-19. The condemnation of Chorazin and Bethsaida, and Capernaum, for their unbelief and impenitence, 20-24. Praises the Divine wisdom for revealing the Gospel to the simple-hearted, 25, 26. Shows that none can know God but by the revelation of his Son, 27. Invites the distressed to come unto him, and gives them the promise of rest for their souls, 28-30.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.
AND it came to pass, when Jesus had made an end of commanding his twelve disciples, he departed thence to teach and to preach in their cities.

2 ¶ ^a Now when John had heard ^b in the prison the works of Christ, he sent two of his disciples,

3 And said unto him, Art thou ^c he that should come, or do we look for another?

^a Luke vii. 18, 19, &c. — ^b Chap. xiv. 3. — ^c Gen. xlix. 10; Num. xxiv. 17; Dan. ix. 24; John vi. 14. — ^d Isa. xxix. 18; xxv. 4, 5, 6; xlii. 7; John ii. 23; iii. 2; v. 36; x. 25, 38; xiv.

NOTES ON CHAP. XI.

Verse 1. This verse properly belongs to the preceding chapter, from which it should on no account be separated; as with that it has the strictest connection, but with this it has none.

To teach and to preach] To teach, to give private instructions to as many as came unto him; and to preach, to proclaim publicly, that the kingdom of God was at hand; two grand parts of the duty of a Gospel minister.

Their cities] The cities of the Jews.

Verse 2. John had heard in the prison] John was cast into prison by order of Herod Antipas, chap. xiv. 3, &c., (where see the notes,) a little after our Lord began his public ministry, chap. iv. 12; and after the first passover, John iii. 24.

Verse 3. Art thou he that should come] Ο ερχομενος, he that cometh, seems to have been a proper name of the Messiah; to save or deliver is necessarily implied. See on Luke vii. 19.

There is some difficulty in what is here spoken of John. Some have thought he was utterly ignorant of our Lord's Divine mission, and that he sent merely for his own information; but this is certainly inconsistent with his own declaration, Luke iii. 15, &c.; John i. 15, 26, 33, iii. 28, &c. Others suppose he sent the message merely for the instruction of his disciples; but, as he saw his end approaching, he wished them to have the fullest conviction that Jesus was the Messiah, that they might attach themselves to him.

A third opinion takes a middle course between the two former, and states that, though John was at first perfectly convinced that Jesus was the Christ, yet, entertaining some hopes that he would erect a secular kingdom in Judea, wished to know whether this was likely to take place speedily. It is very probable that John now began, through the length of his confinement, to entertain doubts, relative to his kingdom, which perplexed and harassed his mind; and he took the most reasonable way to get rid of them at once, viz. by applying to Christ himself.

Two of his disciples] Instead of δύο, two, several excellent MSS., with both the Syriac, Armenian, Gothic, and one copy of the Itala, have δια, by; he sent by his disciples.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.
4 Jesus answered and said unto them, Go and show John again those things which ye do hear and see:

5 ^d The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk; the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear; the dead are raised up, and ^e the poor have the Gospel preached to them:

6 And blessed is he, whosoever shall not ^f be offended in me.

11. — ^c Isa. lxi. 1; Luke iv. 18; James ii. 5. — ^f Chap. xiii. 57; xxiv. 10; xxvi. 31; Rom. ix. 32, 33; 1 Cor. i. 23; Gal. v. 11; 1 Pet. ii. 8.

Verse 4. Go and show John the things—ye do hear and see] Christ would have men to judge only of him and of others by their works. This is the only safe way of judging. A man is not to be credited because he professes to know such and such things; but because he demonstrates by his conduct that his pretensions are not vain.

Verse 5. The blind receive their sight, &c.] Αναβλεπωσι, look upwards, contemplating the heavens which their Lord hath made.

The lame walk] Περιπατωσι, they walk about; to give the fullest proof to the multitude that their cure was real. These miracles were not only the most convincing proofs of the supreme power of Christ, but were also emblematic of that work of salvation which he effects in the souls of men. 1. Sinners are blind; their understanding is so darkened by sin that they see not the way of truth and salvation. 2. They are lame—not able to walk in the path of righteousness. 3. They are leprous, their souls are defiled with sin, the most loathsome and inveterate disease; deepening in themselves, and infecting others. 4. They are deaf to the voice of God, his word, and their own conscience. 5. They are dead in trespasses and sins; God, who is the life of the soul, being separated from it by iniquity. Nothing less than the power of Christ can redeem from all this; and, from all this, that power of Christ actually does redeem every penitent believing soul. Giving sight to the blind, and raising the dead, are allowed by the ancient rabbins to be works which the Messiah should perform, when he should manifest himself in Israel.

The poor have the Gospel preached to them.] And what was this Gospel? Why, the glad tidings that Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners: that he opens the eyes of the blind; enables the lame to walk with an even, steady, and constant pace in the way of holiness; cleanses the lepers from all the defilement of their sins; opens the ears of the deaf to hear his pardoning words; and raises those who were dead in trespasses and sins to live in union with himself to all eternity.

Verse 6. Blessed is he whosoever shall not be offended in me.] Or, Happy is he who will not be stumbled at me; for the word σκανδαλιζεσθαι, in its roo

A. M. 4031. 7 ¶ ε And as they departed, Jesus
A. D. 27. began to say unto the multitudes
An. Olymp. concerning John, What went ye out
CCL. 3. into the wilderness to see? ^h A reed shaken with the wind?

8 But what went ye out for to see? A man clothed in soft raiment? behold, they that wear soft clothing are in kings' houses.

9 But what went ye out for to see? A pro-ε Luke vii. 24. — ^h Eph. iv. 14. — ⁱ Chap. xiv. 5; xxi. 26; Luke signifies to hit against or stumble over a thing, which one may meet with in the way. The Jews, as was before remarked, expected a temporal deliverer. Many might be tempted to reject Christ, because of his mean appearance, &c., and so lose the benefit of salvation through him. To instruct and caution such, our blessed Lord spoke these words. By his poverty and meanness he condemns the pride and pomp of this world. He who will not humble himself, and become base, and poor, and vile in his own eyes, cannot enter into the kingdom of God. It is the poor, in general, who hear the Gospel; the rich and the great are either too busy, or too much gratified with temporal things, to pay any attention to the voice of God.

Verse 7. What went ye out into the wilderness to see? The purport of our Lord's design, in this and the following verses, is to convince the scribes and Pharisees of the inconsistency of their conduct in acknowledging John Baptist for a divinely authorized teacher, and not believing in the very Christ which he pointed out to them. He also shows, from the excellencies of John's character, that their confidence in him was not misplaced, and that this was a farther argument why they should have believed in him, whom the Baptist proclaimed as being far superior to himself.

A reed shaken with the wind? An emblem of an irresolute, unsteady mind, which believes and speaks one thing to-day, and another to-morrow. Christ asks these Jews if they had ever found any thing in John like this: Was he not ever steady and uniform in the testimony he bore to me? The first excellency which Christ notices in John was his steadiness; convinced once of the truth, he continued to believe and assert it. This is essentially necessary to every preacher, and to every private Christian. He who changes about from opinion to opinion, and from one sect or party to another, is never to be depended on; there is much reason to believe that such a person is either mentally weak, or has never been rationally and divinely convinced of the truth.

Verse 8. A man clothed in soft raiment? A second excellency in John was, his sober and mortified life. A preacher of the Gospel should have nothing about him which savours of effeminacy and worldly pomp: he is awfully mistaken who thinks to prevail on the world to hear him and receive the truth, by conforming himself to its fashions and manners. Excepting the mere colour of his clothes, we can scarcely now distinguish a preacher of the Gospel, whether in the establishment of the country, or out of it, from the phet? yea, I say unto you, ¹ and more than a prophet:

10 For this is he of whom it is written, ^k Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.

11 Verily I say unto you, Among them that are born of women, there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist: notwithstanding

i. 76; vii. 26. — ^k Mal. iii. 1; Mark i. 2; Luke i. 76; vii. 27.

merest worldly man. Ruffles, powder, and fribble seem universally to prevail. Thus the Church and the world begin to shake hands, the latter still retaining its enmity to God. How can those who profess to preach the doctrine of the cross act in this way? Is not a worldly-minded preacher, in the most peculiar sense, an abomination in the eyes of the Lord?

Are in kings' houses.] A third excellency in John was, he did not affect high things. He was contented to live in the desert, and to announce the solemn and severe truths of his doctrine to the simple inhabitants of the country. Let it be well observed, that the preacher who conforms to the world in his clothing, is never in his element but when he is frequenting the houses and tables of the rich and great.

Verse 9. A prophet? yea—and more than a prophet] That is, one more excellent (περισσότερον) than a prophet; one greatly beyond all who had come before him, being the immediate forerunner of Christ, (see below,) and who was especially commissioned to prepare the way of the Lord. This was a fourth excellency: he was a prophet, a teacher, a man divinely commissioned to point out Jesus and his salvation; and more excellent than any of the old prophets, because he not only pointed out this Christ, but saw him, and had the honour of dying for that sacred truth which he steadily believed and boldly proclaimed.

Verse 10. Behold, I send my messenger] A fifth excellency of the Baptist was, his preparing the way of the Lord; being the instrument, in God's hand, of preparing the people's hearts to receive the Lord Jesus: and it was probably through his preaching that so many thousands attached themselves to Christ, immediately on his appearing as a public teacher.

Verse 11. A greater than John the Baptist] A sixth excellency of the Baptist—he was greater than any prophet from the beginning of the world till that time:—1st. Because he was prophesied of by them, Isa. xl. 3, and Mal. iii. 1, where Jesus Christ himself seems to be the speaker. 2ndly. Because he had the privilege of showing the fulfilment of their predictions, by pointing out that Christ has now come, which they foretold should come. And 3dly. Because he saw and enjoyed that salvation which they could only foretell. See Quesnel.

Notwithstanding, he that is least in the kingdom of heaven] By the kingdom of heaven in this verse is meant, the fulness of the blessings of the Gospel of peace; which fulness was not known till after Christ had been crucified, and had risen from the dead. Now

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

ing, he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he.

12 ¹ And from the days of John the Baptist until now, the kingdom of heaven ^m suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force.

13 ⁿ For all the prophets and the law prophesied until John.

¹ Luke xvi. 16.—^m Or, is gotten by force, and they that thrust men.—ⁿ Mal. iv. 6.

the least in this kingdom, the meanest preacher of a crucified, risen, and glorified Saviour, was greater than John, who was not permitted to live to see the plenitude of Gospel grace, in the pouring out of the Holy Spirit. Let the reader observe, 1st. That the kingdom of heaven here does not mean the state of future glory. See chap. iii. 2. 2dly. That it is not in holiness or devotedness to God that the least in this kingdom is greater than John; but 3dly. That it is merely in the difference of the ministry. The prophets pointed out a Christ that was coming; John showed that that Christ was then among them; and the preachers of the Gospel prove that this Christ has suffered, and entered into his glory, and that repentance and remission of sins are proclaimed through his blood. There is a saying similar to this among the Jews: "Even the servant maid that passed through the Red Sea, saw what neither Ezekiel, nor any other of the prophets had seen."

Verse 12. The kingdom of heaven suffereth violence] The tax-gatherers and heathens, whom the scribes and Pharisees think have no right to the kingdom of the Messiah, filled with holy zeal and earnestness, seize at once on the proffered mercy of the Gospel, and so take the kingdom as by force from those learned doctors who claimed for themselves the chiefest places in that kingdom. Christ himself said, The tax-gatherers and harlots go before you into the kingdom of God. See the parallel place, Luke vii. 28, 29, 30. He that will take, get possession of the kingdom of righteousness, peace, and spiritual joy, must be in earnest: all hell will oppose him in every step he takes; and if a man be not absolutely determined to give up his sins and evil companions, and have his soul saved at all hazards, and at every expense, he will surely perish everlastingly. This requires a violent earnestness.

Verse 13. All the prophets and the law prophesied until John.] I believe προφήτευσαν means here, they taught, or continued to instruct. They were the instructors concerning the Christ who was to come, till John came and showed that all the predictions of the one, and the types and ceremonies of the other were now about to be fully and finally accomplished; for Christ was now revealed. The word is taken in this sense, Matt. vii. 22.

Verse 11. This is Elias, which was for to come.] This should always be written Elijah, that as strict a conformity as possible might be kept up between the names in the Old Testament and the New. The Prophet Malachi, who predicted the coming of the Baptist in the spirit and power of Elijah, gave the three

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

14 And if ye will receive it, this is ^o Elias, which was for to come.

15 ^p He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

16 ¶ ^q But whereunto shall I liken this generation? It is like unto children sitting in the markets, and calling unto their fellows,

17 And saying, We have piped unto you,

^o Mal. iv. 5; chap. xvii. 12; Luke i. 17.—^p Chap. xiii. 9; Luke viii. 8; Rev. ii. 7, 11, 17, 29; iii. 6, 13, 22.—^q Luke vii. 31.

following distinct characteristics of him. First, That he should be the forerunner and messenger of the Messiah: Behold I send my messenger before me. Mal. iii. 1. Secondly, That he should appear before the destruction of the second temple: Even the Lord whom ye seek shall suddenly come to his temple, ibid. Thirdly, That he should preach repentance to the Jews; and that, some time after, the great and terrible day of the Lord should come, and the Jewish land be smitten with a curse, chap. iv. 5, 6. Now these three characters agree perfectly with the conduct of the Baptist, and what shortly followed his preaching, and have not been found in any one else; which is a convincing proof that Jesus was the promised Messiah.

Verse 15. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.] As if our Lord had said, These things are so clear and manifest that a man has only to hear them to be convinced and fully satisfied of their truth. But neither the Jews of that time nor of the succeeding times to the present day, have heard or considered these things. When spoken to on these subjects, their common custom is to stop their ears, spit out, and blaspheme; this shows not only a bad, but a ruined cause. They are deeply and wilfully blind. They will not come unto the light, lest their deeds should become manifest, that they are not wrought in God. They have ears but they will not hear.

Verse 16. But whereunto shall I liken this generation?] That is, the Jewish people—την γενεαν ταυτην, this race: and so the word γενεα is often to be understood in the evangelists.

In the markets] Or, places of concourse, αγοραις, from αγειρω, I gather together; not a market-place only, but any place of public resort: probably meaning here, places of public amusement.

Calling unto their fellows] Or, companions. In stead of εταιροις, companions, many of the best MSS. have ετεροις, others. The great similarity of the words might have easily produced this difference.

There are some to whom every thing is useful in leading them to God; others, to whom nothing is sufficient. Every thing is good to an upright mind, every thing bad to a vicious heart.

Verse 17. We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced] We have begun the music, which should have been followed by the dance, but ye have not attended to it.

We have mourned—and ye have not lamented.] Ye have not smote the breast: οὐκ ἐκοψασθε, from κοπτοιαι, to strike, or beat the breasts with the hands, particularly in lamentation. So used, Nah. ii. 7; Luke xviii. 13;

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3.
and ye have not danced; we have mourned unto you, and ye have not lamented.

18 For John came neither eating nor drinking, and they say, ' He hath a devil.

19 The Son of man came eating and drinking, and they say, Behold a man gluttonous, and a winebibber, ' a friend of publicans and sinners. ' But wisdom is justified of her children.

' John viii. 48.—' Chap. ix. 10.—' Luke vii. 35.

xxiii. 48, and by the best Greek and Roman writers. There is an allusion here to those funeral lamentations explained chap. ix. 23.

Verse 18. For John came neither eating nor drinking] Leading a very austere and mortified life: and yet, he did not receive him. A sinner will not be persuaded that what he has no mind to imitate can come from God. There are some who will rather blame holiness itself, than esteem it in those whom they do not like.

He hath a devil.] He is a vile hypocrite, influenced by a demon to deceive and destroy the simple.

Verse 19. The Son of man came eating and drinking] That is, went wheresoever he was invited to eat a morsel of bread, and observed no rigid fasts: how could he, who had no corrupt appetites to mortify or subdue!

They say, Behold a man gluttonous, &c.] Whatever measures the followers of God may take, they will not escape the censure of the world: the best way is not to be concerned at them. Iniquity, being always ready to oppose and contradict the Divine conduct, often contradicts and exposes itself.

But wisdom is justified of her children.] Those who follow the dictates of true wisdom ever justify, point out as excellent, the holy maxims by which they are guided, for they find the way pleasantness, and the path, peace. Of, here, and in many places of our translation, ought to be written by in modern English.

Some suppose that our blessed Lord applies the epithet of η σοφια, that Wisdom to himself; as he does that of Son of man, in the first clause of the verse; and that this refers to the sublime description given of wisdom in Prov. viii. Others have supposed that by the children or sons (τεκνων) of wisdom our Lord means John Baptist and himself, who came to preach the doctrines of true wisdom to the people, and who were known to be teachers come from God by all those who seriously attended to their ministry: they recommending themselves, by the purity of their doctrines, and the holiness of their lives, to every man's conscience in the sight of God. It is likely, however, that by children our Lord simply means the fruits or effects of wisdom, according to the Hebrew idiom, which denominates the fruits or effects of a thing, its children. So in Job chap. v. 7, sparks emitted by coals are termed בני רשף beney resheph, the children of the coal. It was probably this well known meaning of the word, which led the Codex Vaticanus, one of

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3.
20 ¶ Then began he to upbraid the cities wherein most of his mighty works were done, because they repented not:

21 Wo unto thee, Chorazin! wo unto thee, Bethsaida! for if the mighty works, which were done in you, had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago, ' in sackcloth and ashes.

22 But I say unto you, ' It shall be more u Luke x. 13, &c.—v Jonah iii. 7, 8.—w Chap. x. 15; ver. 24.

the most ancient MSS. in the world, together with the Syriac, Persic, Coptic, and Ethiopic, to read εργων, works, instead of τεκνων, sons or children. Wisdom is vindicated by her works, i. e. the good effects prove that the cause is excellent.

The children of true wisdom can justify all God's ways in their salvation; as they know that all the dispensations of Providence work together for the good of those who love and fear God. See on Luke vii. 35.

Verse 20. Then began he to upbraid the cities] The more God has done to draw men unto himself, the less excusable are they if they continue in iniquity. If our blessed Lord had not done every thing that was necessary for the salvation of these people, he could not have reproached them for their impenitence.

Verse 21. Wo unto thee, Chorazin—Bethsaida!] It would be better to translate the word οαι σοι, alas for thee, than wo to thee. The former is an exclamation of pity; the latter a denunciation of wrath. It is evident that our Lord used it in the former sense. It is not known precisely where Chorazin was situated; but as Christ joins it in the same censure with Bethsaida, which was in Upper Galilee, beyond the sea, Mark vi. 45, it is likely that Chorazin was in the same quarter. Though the people in these cities were (generally) impenitent, yet there is little doubt that several received the word of life. Indeed, Bethsaida itself furnished not less than three of the twelve apostles, Philip, Andrew, and Peter. See John i. 44.

Tyre and Sidon] Were two heathen cities, situated on the shore of the Mediterranean Sea, into which it does not appear that Christ ever went, though he was often very nigh to them; see chap. xv. 21.

They would have repented long ago] Παλαι, formerly, seems here to refer to the time of Ezekiel, who denounced destruction against Tyre and Sidon, Ezek xxvi., xxvii., and xxviii. Our Lord, then, intimates that, if Ezekiel had done as many miracles in those cities as himself had in Chorazin and Bethsaida, the inhabitants would have repented in sackcloth and ashes, with the deepest and most genuine sorrow.

A Hindoo who renounces the secular life, and becomes a religious mendicant, often covers himself with a coarse cloth sprinkled over with ashes. This is the sackcloth and ashes which our Lord refers to; and this covering was the outward sign of deep repentance, and forsaking of sin.

Verse 22. But—it shall be more tolerable] Every thing will help to overwhelm the impenitent at the

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3.

tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the day of judgment than for you.

23 And thou, Capernaum, which art exalted unto heaven, shalt be brought down to hell: for if the mighty works, which have been done in thee, had been done in Sodom, it would have remained until this day.

24 But I say unto you, That it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom in tribunal of God—the benefits and favours which they have received, as well as the sins which they have committed.

* See Isa. xiv. 13. Lam. ii. 1. —† Chap. x. 15. —‡ Luke x. 21.

Verse 23. Thou, Capernaum—exalted unto heaven] A Hebrew metaphor, expressive of the utmost prosperity, and the enjoyment of the greatest privileges. This was properly spoken of this city, because that in it our Lord dwelt, and wrought many of his miraculous works.

Shalt be brought down to hell] Perhaps not meaning, here, the place of torment, but rather a state of desolation. The original word is Hades, Ἅδης, from a, not, and ideiv, to see—the invisible receptacle or mansion of the dead, answering to שְׁאוֹל sheol, in Hebrew; and implying often, 1st. the grave; 2dly. the state of separate souls, or unseen world of spirits, whether of torment, Luke xvi. 23, or, in general, Rev. i. 18; vi. 8; xx. 13, 14. The word hell, used in the common translation, conveys now an improper meaning of the original word; because hell is only used to signify the place of the damned. But, as the word hell comes from the Anglo-Saxon, helan, to cover, or hide, hence the tiling or slating of a house is called, in some parts of England (particularly Cornwall) heling, to this day; and the covers of books (in Lancashire) by the same name: so the literal import of the original word Ἅδης was formerly well expressed by it. Here it means a state of the utmost woe, and ruin, and desolation, to which these impenitent cities should be reduced. This prediction of our Lord was literally fulfilled; for, in the wars between the Romans and the Jews, these cities were totally destroyed, so that no traces are now found of Bethsaida, Chorazin, or Capernaum. See Bp. PEARCE.

Verse 24. But—it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom] Ἡ Σοδομων, the land of the Sodomites; i. e. the ancient inhabitants of that city and its neighbourhood.

In Jude, verse 7, we are told that these persons are suffering the vengeance of eternal fire. The destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah happened A. M. 2107, which was 1897 years before the incarnation. What a terrible thought is this! It will be more tolerable for certain sinners, who have already been damned nearly four thousand years, than for those who live and die infidels under the Gospel! There are various degrees of punishments in hell, answerable to various degrees of guilt; and the contempt manifested to, and the abuse made of, the preaching of the Gospel, will the day of judgment than for thee.

25 ¶ At that time Jesus answered and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes.

26 Even so, Father; for so it seemed good in thy sight.

* See Psa. viii. 2; 1 Cor. i. 19, 27; ii. 8; 2 Cor. iii. 14. † Chap. xvi. 17.

rank semi-infidel Christians in the highest list of transgressors, and purchase them the hottest place in hell! Great God! save the reader from this destruction!

Day of judgment] May either refer to that particular time in which God visits for iniquity, or to that great day in which he will judge the world by the Lord Jesus Christ. The day of Sodom's judgment was that in which it was destroyed by fire and brimstone from heaven, Gen. xix. 21; and the day of judgment to Chorazin, Bethsaida, and Capernaum, was the time in which they were destroyed by the Romans, ver. 23. But there is a day of final judgment, when Hades itself (sinners in a state of partial punishment in the invisible world) shall be cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, which is the second death. See Rev. xx. 14.

Verse 25. I thank thee] Εὐχαριστοῦμαι σοι, I fully agree with thee—I am perfectly of the same mind. Thou hast acted in all things according to the strictest holiness, justice, mercy, and truth.

Wise and prudent] The scribes and Pharisees, vainly puffed up by their fleshly minds, and having their foolish hearts darkened, refusing to submit to the righteousness of God (God's method of saving man by Christ) and going about to establish their own righteousness, (their own method of saving themselves,) they rejected God's counsel, and God sent the peace and salvation of the Gospel to others, called here babes, (his disciples,) simple-hearted persons, who submitted to be instructed and saved in God's own way. Let it be observed, that our Lord does not thank the Father that he had hidden these things from the wise and prudent, but that, seeing they were hidden from them, he had revealed them to the others.

There is a remarkable saying in the Talmudists, which casts light upon this: "Rab. Joehanan said: 'From the time in which the temple was destroyed, wisdom was taken away from the prophets, and given to fools and children.'" Bara Bathra, fol. 12. Again: "In the days of the Messiah, every species of wisdom, even the most profound, shall be revealed; and this even to children." Synop. Soher, fol. 10.

Verse 26. Even so, Father] Νοί ο πατηρ. An emphatical ratification of the preceding address.

It was right that the heavenly wisdom, despised, rejected, and persecuted by the scribes and Pharisees, should be offered to the simple people, and afterwards to the foolish people, the Gentiles, who are the children of wisdom, and justify God in his ways, by bringing

A. M. 4031. 27 ^c All things are delivered unto
A. D. 27. me of my Father: and no man
An. Olymp. knoweth the Son, but the Father;
CCI. 3. ^d neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him.

28 ¶ Come unto me, all ye that labour and

^c Chap. xxviii. 18; Luke x. 22; John iii. 35; xiii. 3; xvii. 2; ^d 1 Cor. xv. 27.—^d John i. 18; vi. 46; x. 15.

forth that fruit of the Gospel of which the Pharisees refused to receive even the seed.

Verse 27. All things are delivered unto me of my Father] This is a great truth, and the key of the science of salvation. The man Christ Jesus receives from the Father, and in consequence of his union with the eternal Godhead becomes the Lord and sovereign Dispenser of all things. All the springs of the Divine favour are in the hands of Christ, as Priest of God, and atoning Sacrifice for men: all good proceeds from him, as Saviour, Mediator, Head, Pattern, Pastor, and sovereign Judge of the whole world.

No man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man, &c.] None can fully comprehend the nature and attributes of God, but Christ; and none can fully comprehend the nature, incarnation, &c., of Christ, but the Father. The full comprehension and acknowledgment of the Godhead, and the mystery of the Trinity, belong to God alone.

Verse 28. Come unto me] This phrase in the new covenant implies simply, believing in Christ, and becoming his disciple, or follower.

All ye that labour and are heavy laden] The metaphor here appears to be taken from a man who has a great load laid upon him, which he must carry to a certain place: every step he takes reduces his strength, and renders his load the more oppressive. However, it must be carried on; and he labours, uses his utmost exertions, to reach the place where it is to be laid down. A kind person passing by, and seeing his distress, offers to ease him of his load, that he may enjoy rest.

The Jews, heavily laden with the burdensome rites of the Mosaic institution, rendered still more oppressive by the additions made by the scribes and Pharisees, who, our Lord says, (chap. xxiii. 4,) bound on heavy burdens; and labouring, by their observance of the law, to make themselves pleasing to God, are here invited to lay down their load, and receive the salvation procured for them by Christ.

Sinners, wearied in the ways of iniquity, are also invited to come to this Christ, and find speedy relief.

Penitents, burdened with the guilt of their crimes, may come to this Sacrifice, and find instant pardon.

Believers, sorely tempted, and oppressed by the remains of the carnal mind, may come to this blood, that cleanseth from all unrighteousness; and, purified from all sin, and powerfully succoured in every temptation, they shall find uninterrupted rest in this complete Saviour.

All are invited to come, and all are promised rest. If few find rest from sin and vile affections, it is because few come to Christ to receive it are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.

29 Take my yoke upon you, ^e and learn of me; for I am meek and ^flowly in heart: ^g and ye shall find rest unto your souls.

30 ^h For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light.

^e John xiii. 15; Phil. ii. 5; 1 Pet. ii. 21; 1 John ii. 6.—^f Zech. ix. 9; Phil. ii. 7, 8.—^g Jer. vi. 16.—^h 1 John v. 3.

Verse 29. Take my yoke upon you] Strange paradox! that a man already weary and overloaded must take a new weight upon him, in order to be eased and find rest! But this advice is similar to that saying, Psa. lv. 22. Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and he will sustain thee; i. e. trust thy soul and concerns to him, and he will carry both thyself and thy load.

I am meek and lowly in heart] Wherever pride and anger dwell, there is nothing but mental labour and agony; but, where the meekness and humility of Christ dwell, all is smooth, even, peaceable, and quiet; for the work of righteousness is peace, and the effect of righteousness, quietness and assurance for ever. Isa. xxxii. 17.

Verse 30. For my yoke is easy] My Gospel imposes nothing that is difficult; on the contrary, it provides for the complete removal of all that which oppresses and renders man miserable, viz. sin. The commandments of Christ are not grievous. Hear the whole: Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and thy neighbour as thyself. Can any thing be more congenial to the nature of man than love?—such a love as is inspired by God, and in which the soul rests supremely satisfied and infinitely happy! Taste, and know, by experience, how good the Lord is, and how worthy his yoke is to be taken, borne, and loved. This most tender invitation of the compassionate Jesus is sufficient to inspire the most diffident soul with confidence. See on Mark viii. 34.

Creeshna, the incarnate God of the Hindoos, is represented in the Geeta addressing one of his beloved disciples thus: "I am the creator of all things, and all things proceed from me. Those who are endued with spiritual wisdom, believe this, and worship me: their very hearts and minds are in me; they rejoice among themselves, and delight in speaking of my name, and teaching one another my doctrine. I gladly inspire those who are constantly employed in my service with that use of reason by which they come unto me; and, in compassion, I stand in my own nature, and dissipate the darkness of their ignorance with the light of the lamp of wisdom." Bhagvat Geeta, p. 84.

The word יֹקֵל aval, among the Jews, which we properly enough translate yoke, signified not only that sort of neck-harness by which bullocks drew in wagons, carts, or in the plough; but also any kind of bond, or obligation, to do some particular thing, or to do some particular work. By them it is applied to the following things:—

1. The yoke of the מִלְכּוּת of heaven, עֹל מַלְכוּת הַשָּׁמַיִם—obedience to the revealed will of God.

2. The yoke of the LAW, יְעוֹל תּוֹרָה—the necessity of obeying all the rites, ceremonies, &c., of the Mo-saic institution.

3. The yoke of the PRECEPT, יְעוֹל כִּצְוָה—the neces-sity of performing that particular obligation by which any person had bound himself, such as that of the Nazarite, &c.

4. The yoke of REPENTANCE, יְעוֹל שֶׁל תְּשׁוּבָה—with-out which, they knew, they could not enter into the kingdom of heaven. With the Jews, repentance not only implied forsaking sin, but fasting, mortifica-tion, &c.

5. The yoke of FAITH, יְעוֹל אֱמוּנָה—the necessity of believing in the promised Messiah.

6. The Divine yoke, יְעוֹל רִלְיָנָא—the obligation to live a spiritual life; a life of thanksgiving and grati-tude unto God.

In Schemoth Rabba it is said: “Because the ten tribes did not take the yoke of the holy and blessed God upon them, therefore Sennacherib led them into captivity.”

CHRIST'S yoke means, the obligation to receive him as the MESSIAH, to believe his doctrine, and to be in all things conformed to his Word and to his Spirit

CHAPTER XII.

Jesus and his disciples go through the corn-fields on the Sabbath, and the latter pluck and eat some of the ears, at which the Pharisees take offence, 1, 2. Our Lord vindicates them, 3-8. The man with the withered hand cured, 9-13. The Pharisees seek his destruction, 14. He heals the multitudes, and fulfils certain prophecies, 15-21. Heals the blind and dumb demoniac, 22, 23. The malice of the Pharisees reproved by our Lord, 24-30. The sin against the Holy Ghost, 31, 32. Good and bad trees known by their fruits—evil and good men by their conduct, 33-37. Jonah, a sign of Christ's death and resurrec-tion, 38-40. The men of Nineveh and the queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment against the Jews, 41, 42. Of the unclean spirit, 43-45. Christ's mother and brethren seek him, 46-50.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3.

AT that time ^a Jesus went on the Sabbath-day through the corn; and his disciples were an hungered, and began to pluck the ears of corn, and to eat.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3.

2 But when the Pharisees saw it,

^a Deut. xxiii. 25; Mark

ii. 23; Luke vi. 1.

NOTES ON CHAP. XII.

Verse. 1. At that time Jesus went on the Sabbath-day through the corn] “The time is determined by Luke in these words, εν σαββατω δευτεροπρωτω, that is, on the Sabbath from the second-first.

“1. Provision was made by the Divine law that the sheaf of first-fruits should be offered on the second day of the pass-over week, Levit. xxiii. 10, 11. On the morrow after the Sabbath, the priest shall shake (or wave) it. Not on the morrow after the ordinary Sab-bath of the week, but the morrow after the first of the pass-over week, which was a Sabbatic day, Exod. xii. 16; Levit. xxiii. 7. Hence the seventy, επαρσιον της πρωτης, the morrow of the first day; the Chaldee. the morrow after the holy day. The rabbins, Salomon and Menachen, have it, On the morrow after the first day of the pass-over feast; of which mention had been made in the verses foregoing.

“But now, from the second day of the pass-over solemnity, wherein the sheaf was offered, were num-bered seven weeks to pentecost: for the day of the sheaf, and the day of pentecost did mutually respect each other; for on this second day of the pass-over, the offering of the sheaf was supplicatory, and by way of prayer, beseeching a blessing upon the new corn, and leave to eat it, and to put in the sickle into the standing corn. Now, the offering of the first-fruit -oaves on the day of pentecost, (Lev. xxiii. 15, 16, 17,) did respect the giving of thanks for the finishing and housing of the barley-harvest. Therefore, in regard of this relation, these two solemnities were linked to-gether, that both might respect the harvest; that, the harvest beginning; this, the harvest ended: this de-pended on that, and was numbered seven weeks after it. Therefore, the computation of the time coming between could not but carry with it the memory of that second day of the pass-over week; and hence pentecost is called the feast of weeks, Deut. xvi. 10. The true calculation of the time between could not otherwise be retained, as to Sabbaths, but by number-ing thus: this is σαββατον δευτεροπρωτον, the first Sabbath after the second day of the pass-over. This is δευτεροδευτερον, the second Sabbath after that second day. And so of the rest. In the Jerusalem Talmud, the word שבת פרוטוגמיא shebeth pratogamiya, the Sabbath, πρωτογαμιας, of the first marriage, is a com-position not very unlike.” Lightfoot.

His disciples were an hungered] Were hungry. The former is a mode of expression totally obsolete. How near does the translation of this verse come to our an-cient mother-tongue, the Anglo-Saxon!—ðe wærend for on þe 7te-dæg ofer æcean. 7odlice hƿ 7eoƿning-enlhtear hingede. and hig engunnum pluccian pa ean and etan —The Healer went on rest-day over acres: truly his learning knights hungred, and they began to pluck the ear and eaten. We may well wonder at the ex-treme poverty of Christ and his disciples. He was himself present with them, and yet permitted them to lack bread! A man, therefore, is not forsaken of God because he is in want. It is more honourable to suf-fer the want of all temporal things in fellowship with Christ and his followers, than to have all things in abundance in connection with the world.

Verse 2. Thy disciples do that which is not lawful

A. M. 4031. they said unto him, Behold, thy dis-
A. D. 27. ciples do that which is not lawful
An. Olymp. to do upon the Sabbath-day.
CCL. 3.

3 But he said unto them, Have ye not read what David did, when he was an hungered, and they that were with him;

4 How he entered into the house of God, and did eat ^c the shew-bread, which was not lawful for him to eat, neither for them which were with him, ^d but only for the priests?

5 Or have ye not read in the ^e law, how that on the Sabbath-days, the priests in the temple profane the Sabbath, and are blameless?

^b 1 Sam. xxi. 6.—^c Exod. xxv. 30; Lev. xxiv. 5.—^d Exod.
xxix. 32, 33; Lev. viii. 31; xxiv. 9.—^e Num. xxviii. 9; John vii. 22.

to do] The Jews were so superstitious, concerning the observance of the Sabbath, that in their wars with Antiochus Epiphanes, and the Romans, they thought it a crime even to attempt to defend themselves on the Sabbath: when their enemies observed this, they deferred their operations to that day. It was through this, that Pompey was enabled to take Jerusalem.
Dion. Cass. lib. xxxvi.

Those who know not the spirit and design of the Divine law are often superstitious to inhumanity, and indulgent to impiety. An intolerant and censorious spirit in religion is one of the greatest curses a man can well fall under.

Verse 3, 1. Have ye not read what David did] The original history is in 1 Sam. xxi. 1–6.

When he was an hungered] Here hearken to Kimchi, producing the opinion of the ancients concerning this story in these words: “Our rabbins of blessed memory say, that he gave him the shew-bread, &c. The interpretation also of the clause, Yea, though it were sanctified this day in the vessel, is this: It is a small thing to say, that it is lawful for us to eat THESE LOAVES, taken from before the Lord, when we are hungry; for it would be lawful to eat this very loaf which is now set on, which is also sanctified in the vessel, (for the table sanctified), it would be lawful to eat even this, when another loaf is not present with you to give us, and we are so hunger-bitten. And a little after, There is nothing which may hinder taking care of life, beside idolatry, adultery, and murder. That is, a man, according to them, should do any thing but these in order to preserve life.” See Lightfoot.

He entered into the house of God] Viz. the house of Ahimelech the priest, who dwelt at Nob, with whom the tabernacle then was, in which the Divine presence was manifested.

And did eat the shew-bread] Τῶν ἀρτῶν τῆς προθεσεως—in Hebrew, לחם פנים lechem panim—bread of the presence, or faces, because this bread was to be set continually. יהוה לפני lipney Yehovah, before the face of Yehovah. See the notes on Exod. xxv. 23 and 30.

“Since part of the frankincense put in the bread was to be burnt on the altar for a memorial, Lev.
xxiv. 7, and since Aaron and his sons were to eat it in

A. M. 4031. 6 But I say unto you, That in this
A. D. 27. place is ^f one greater than the
An. Olymp. temple.
CCL. 3.

7 But if ye had known what this meaneth
^g I will have mercy, and not sacrifice, ye would not have condemned the guiltless.

8 For the Son of man is Lord even of the Sabbath-day.

9 ¶ ^h And when he was departed thence, he went into their synagogue:

10 And, behold, there was a man which had his hand withered. And they asked him, saying, ⁱ Is it lawful to heal on the Sabbath-

^f 2 Chron. vi. 18; Mal. iii. 1.—^g Hos. vi. 6; Mic. vi. 6, 7, 8; chap. ix. 13.—^h Mark iii. 1; Luke vi. 6.—ⁱ Luke xiii.
14; xiv. 3; John ix. 16.

the holy place, it is evident that this bread typified Christ, first presented as a sacrifice to, or in the presence of, Jehovah, and then becoming spiritual food to such as, in and through him, are spiritual priests to God. See Rev. i. 6; v. 10; xx. 6; also 1 Pet. ii. 5.”
Parkhurst.

Verse 5. The priests—profane the Sabbath] Profane, i. e. put it to what might be called a common use, by slaying and offering up sacrifices, and by doing the services of the temple, as on common days, Exod.
xxix. 38; Num. xxviii. 9.

Verse 6. In this place is one greater than the temple.] Does not our Lord refer here to Mal. iii. 1?
Compare this with Heb. iii. 3. The Jews esteemed nothing greater than the temple, except that God who was worshipped in it. Christ, by asserting he was greater than the temple, asserts that he was God; and this he does, in still more direct terms, ver. 8, The Son of man is Lord of the Sabbath—is Institutor and Governor of it. Compare this with Gen. ii. 3, and see the notes there.

Verse 7. I will have mercy, &c.] See this explained, chap. ix. 13. There are four ways in which positive laws may cease to oblige.

First, by the natural law of necessity.

Secondly, by a particular law, which is superior.

Thirdly, by the law of charity and mercy

Fourthly, by the dispensation and authority of the Lawgiver.

These cases are all exemplified from verse 4 to verse 8.

Verse 8. The Son of man is Lord even of the Sabbath-day.] The change of the Jewish into the Christian Sabbath, called the Lord's day, Rev. i. 10, shows that Christ is not only the Lord, but also the truth and completion of it. For it seems to have been by an especial providence that this change has been made and acknowledged all over the Christian world.

Verse 10. A man which had his hand withered.] Probably through a partial paralysis. The man's hand was withered; but God's mercy had still preserved to him the use of his feet: he uses them to bring him to the public worship of God, and Jesus meets and heals

A. M. 4031. days? that they might accuse
A. D. 27. him.
An. Olymp. CCl. 3.

11 And he said unto them, What man shall there be among you, that shall have one sheep, and ^k if it fall into a pit on the Sabbath-day, will he not lay hold on it, and lift it out?

12 How much then is a man better than a sheep? Wherefore, it is lawful to do well on the Sabbath-days.

13 Then saith he to the man, Stretch forth

^{*} See Exod. xxiii. 4, 5; Deut. xxii. 4.—[†] Chap. xvii. 1; Mark iii. 6; Luke vi. 11; John v. 19; x. 39; xi. 53.

him there. How true is the proverb—It is never so ill with us, but it might be much worse!

Verse 11. If it fall into a pit on the Sabbath-day, &c.] It was a canon among the Jews: "We must take a tender care of the goods of an Israelite." Hence:—

"If a beast fall into a ditch, or into a pool of water, let (the owner) bring him food in that place if he can; but, if he cannot, let him bring clothes and litter, and bear up the beast; whence, if he can come up, let him come up, &c."

"If a beast or its foal fall into a ditch on a holy day, R. Lazar saith. Let him lift up the former to kill him, and let him kill him: but let him give fodder to the other, lest he die in that place. R. Joshua saith, Let him lift up the former with the intention of killing him, although he kill him not; let him lift up the other also, although it be not in his mind to kill him." To these canons our Lord seems here very properly to appeal, in vindication of his intention to heal the distressed man. See Lightfoot.

Self-interest is a very decisive casuist, and removes abundance of scruples in a moment. It is always the first consulted, and the most readily obeyed. It is not sinful to hearken to it, but it must not govern nor determine by itself.

Verse 12. How much then is a man better than a sheep?] Our Lord's argument is what is called argumentum ad hominem; they are taken on their own ground, and confuted on their own maxims and conduct. There are many persons who call themselves Christians, who do more for a beast of burden or pleasure than they do for a man for whom Christ died! Many spend that on coursers, spaniels, and hounds, of which multitudes of the followers of Christ are destitute:—but this also shall come to judgment.

Wherefore, it is lawful to do well, &c.] This was allowed by a multitude of Jewish canons. See Schoettgen.

Verse 13. Stretch forth thine hand.] The bare command of God is a sufficient reason of obedience. This man might have reasoned thus: "Lord, my hand is withered; how then can I stretch it out? Make it whole first, and afterwards I will do as thou commandest." This may appear reasonable, but in his case it would have been foolishness. At the command of the Lord he made the effort, and in making it the thine hand. And he stretched it forth; and it was restored whole, like as the other.

14 ¶ Then the Pharisees went out, and ^m held a council against him, how they might destroy him.

15 But when Jesus knew it, ⁿ he withdrew himself from thence: ^o and great multitudes followed him, and he healed them all;

16 And ^p charged them that they should not make him known:

^m Or, took counsel.—ⁿ See chap. x. 23; Mark iii. 7.—^o Chap. xix. 2.—^p Chap. ix. 30.

cure was effected! Faith disregards apparent impossibilities, where there is a command and promise of God. The effort to believe is, often, that faith by which the soul is healed.

A little before (verses 6 and 8) Jesus Christ had asserted his Godhead, in this verse he proves it. What but the omnipotence of the living God could have, in a moment, restored this withered hand? There could be no collusion here; the man who had a real disease was instantaneously and therefore miraculously cured; and the mercy and power of God were both amply manifested in this business.

It is worthy of remark, that as the man was healed with a word, without even a touch, the Sabbath was unbroken, even according to their most rigid interpretation of the letter of the law.

Verse 14. Held a council against him] Nothing sooner leads to utter blindness, and hardness of heart, than envy. There are many who abandon themselves to pleasure-taking and debauchery on the Sabbath, who condemn a poor man whom necessity obliges to work on what is termed a holiday, or a national fast.

Verse 15. Jesus—withdrew himself from thence] It is the part of prudence and Christian charity not to provoke, if possible, the blind and the hardened; and to take from them the occasion of sin. A man of God is not afraid of persecution; but, as his aim is only to do good, by proclaiming every where the grace of the Lord Jesus, he departs from any place when he finds the obstacles to the accomplishment of his end are, humanly speaking, invincible, and that he cannot do good without bringing the means of much evil. Yield to the stream when you cannot stem it.

Great multitudes followed him, and he healed them all] The rejection of the Gospel in one place has often been the means of sending it to and establishing it in another. Jesus healed all that followed him, i. e. all who had need of healing, and who desired to be healed; for thus the passage must be understood:—and is he not still the same? No soul shall ever implore his healing power in vain; but let it be remembered, that only those who follow Christ, and apply to him, are healed of their spiritual maladies.

Verse 16. Charged them that they should not make him known] See chap. viii. 4. Jesus Christ, as God, could have easily concealed himself, but he chooses to do it as man, and to use no other than human means.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3.

17 That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying,

18 ^a Behold my servant, whom I have chosen; my beloved, ^r in whom my soul is well pleased; I will put my Spirit upon him, and he shall show judgment to the Gentiles.

19 He shall not strive, nor cry; neither shall any man hear his voice in the streets.

20 A bruised reed shall he not break, and smoking flax shall he not quench, till he send forth judgment unto victory.

¹ Isa. xlii. 1. — ^r Chap. iii. 17; xvii. 5. — See chap. ix. 32; Mark iii. 11; Luke xi. 14.

as these were quite sufficient for the purpose, to teach us not to neglect them in our necessity. Indeed, he always used his power less on his own account, than on that of men.

Verse 18. Behold my servant] This title was given to our blessed Lord in several prophecies. See Isa. xlii. 1; liii. 2. Christ assumes it, Psal. xl. 7–9. Compare these with John xvii. 4, and Phil. ii. 7. God required an acceptable and perfect service from man; but man, being sinful, could not perform it. Jesus, taking upon him the nature of man, fully performed the whole will of God, and communicates grace to all his followers, to enable them perfectly to love and worthily to magnify their Maker.

And he shall show judgment to the Gentiles.] That is, He will publish the Gospel to the heathens; for the word κρίσιν here answers to the word מִשְׁפָּט mishpat of the prophet, and it is used among the Hebrews to signify laws, precepts, and a whole system or body of doctrine. See Psal. xix. 19; cxix. 30, 39; Isa. lviii. 2.

Verse 19. He shall not strive, nor cry] The spirit of Christ is not a spirit of contention, murmuring, clamour, or litigiousness. He who loves these does not belong to him. Christ therefore fulfilled a prophecy by withdrawing from this place, on account of the rage of the Pharisees.

Verse 20. A bruised reed shall he not break] A reed is, in Scripture, the emblem of weakness, Ezek. xxix. 6; and a bruised reed must signify that state of weakness that borders on dissolution and death.

And smoking flax shall he not quench] Λινον τυρόμενον. Λινον means the wick of a lamp, and τυρόμενον is intended to point out its expiring state, when the oil has been all burnt away from it, and nothing is left but a mere snuff, emitting smoke. Some suppose the Jewish state, as to ecclesiastical matters, is here intended, the prophecy declaring that Christ would not destroy it, but leave it to expire of itself, as it already contained the principles of its own destruction. Others have considered it as implying that great tenderness with which the blessed Jesus should treat the weak and the ignorant, whose good desires must not be stifled, but encouraged. The bruised reed may recover itself, if permitted to vegetate under the genial influences of heaven; and the life and light of 21 And in his name shall the Gentiles trust.

22 ¶ ^s Then was brought unto him one possessed with a devil, blind and dumb; and he healed him, insomuch that the blind and dumb both spake and saw.

23 And all the people were amazed, and said, Is not this the son of David?

24 ¶ ^t But when the Pharisees heard it, they said, This fellow doth not cast out devils, but by ^u Beelzebub the prince of the devils.

25 And Jesus ^v knew their thoughts, and

¹ Chap. ix. 34; Mark iii. 22; Luke xi. 15. — ^u Gr. Beelzebub: and so ver. 27. — ^v Chap. ix. 4; John ii. 25; Rev. ii. 23.

the expiring lamp may be supported by the addition of fresh oil. Jesus therefore quenches not faint desires after salvation, even in the worst and most undeserving of men; for even such desires may lead to the fulness of the blessing of the Gospel of peace.

Judgment unto victory.] See ver. 18. By judgment, understand the Gospel, and by victory its complete triumph over Jewish opposition, and Gentile impiety. He will continue by these mild and gentle means to work till the whole world is Christianized, and the universe filled with his glory.

Verse 21. And in his name shall the Gentiles trust.] ἐλπίζοντες, they shall hope. Jesus Christ is the sole hope and trust of mankind; to trust and hope in his name, Jesus, is to expect salvation and all things necessary from him alone, to despise, comparatively, all earthly promises, to esteem, love, and desire heavenly things only, and to bear with patience and tranquillity all the losses and evils of this life, upon the prospect and hope of that felicity which he has purchased for us.

Verse 22. One possessed with a devil, blind and dumb] A person from whom the indwelling demon took away both sight and hearing. Satan makes himself master of the heart, the eyes, and the tongue of the sinner. His heart he fills with the love of sin; his eyes he blinds that he may not see his guilt, and the perdition which awaits him; and his tongue he hinders from prayer and supplication, though he gives it increasing liberty in blasphemies, lies, slanders, &c. None but Jesus can redeem from this threefold captivity.

Verse 23. Is not this the son of David?] Is not this the true Messiah? Do not these miracles sufficiently prove it? See Isa. xxxv. 5.

Verse 24. Beelzebub] See chap. x. 25.

Verse 25. Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation] Our Lord's argument runs thus:—"The welfare of any kingdom, city, or family, depends on its concord and unanimity; Satan, like every other potentate, must wish to rule his empire in peace and security; how then can he be in league with me, who oppose his authority, and am destroying his kingdom?"

The reasoning of the Pharisees, ver. 24, was not expressed, and Jesus, knowing their thoughts, gave

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.
said unto them, Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation; and every city or house divided against itself shall not stand.

26 And if Satan cast out Satan, he is divided against himself; how shall then his kingdom stand?

27 And if I by Beelzebub cast out devils, by whom do your children cast them out? therefore they shall be your judges.

28 But if I cast out devils by the Spirit

• Dan. ii. 44; vii. 11; Luke i. 33; xi. 20; xvii. 20, 21.
* Isa. xlix. 24; Luke xi. 21, 22, 23.

them ample proof of his omniscience. This, with our Lord's masterly confutation of their reasonings, by a conclusion drawn from their own premises, one would have supposed might have humbled and convinced these men; but the most conclusive reasoning, and the most astonishing miracles, were lost upon a people who were obstinately determined to disbelieve every thing good, relative to Christ. How true the saying—He came unto his own, and his own received him not!

Verse 26. If Satan cast out Satan] A good cause will produce a good effect, and an evil cause an evil effect. Were I on Satan's side, I would act for his interest and confirm his influence among you; but I oppose his maxims by my doctrine, and his influence by my power.

Verse 27. By whom do your children cast them out?] Children, or sons of the prophets, means the disciples of the prophets; and children or sons of the Pharisees, disciples of the Pharisees. From Acts xix. 13, 14, it is evident there were exorcists among the Jews, and, from our Lord's saying here, it is also evident that the disciples of the Pharisees did cast out demons, or, at least, those who educated them wished to have it believed that they had such a power. Our Lord's argument here is extremely conclusive: If the man who casts out demons proves himself thereby to be in league with and influenced by Satan, then your disciples, and you who taught them, are all of you in league with the devil: ye must either give up your assertion, that I cast out demons by Beelzebub, or else admit this conclusion, in its fullest force and latitude, that ye are all children of the devil, and leagued with him against God.

Envy causes persons often to condemn in one, what they approve in another.

Verse 28. But if I cast out devils by the Spirit of God] Perhaps the Spirit of God is here mentioned by way of opposition to the magical incantations of the Jews; for it is well known that by fumigations and magical washings, they professed to cast out devils. See a case mentioned by Schoettgen on this verse.

Then the kingdom of God] For the destruction of the kingdom of Satan plainly implies the setting up of the kingdom of God.

Is come unto you.] Is come unexpectedly upon you. Εἰδοσεν, from εἶδω, to appear suddenly—unexpectedly.

of God, then * the kingdom of God is come unto you.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

29 * Or else how can one enter into a strong man's house, and spoil his goods, except he first bind the strong man? and then he will spoil his house.

30 He that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad.

31 Wherefore I say unto you, * All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto

* Mark iii. 29; Luke xii. 10; Heb. vi. 4, &c.; x. 26, 29;
1 John v. 16.

They pretended to be in expectation of the kingdom of God, and consequently of the destruction of the kingdom of Satan. But, by being not prepared to receive Christ in these proofs of his Divine mission, they showed that their expectation was but pretended. They were too carnal to mind spiritual things.

Verse 29. Else how can one enter into a strong man's house] Men, through sin, are become the very house and dwelling place of Satan, having of their own accord surrendered themselves to this unjust possessor; for whoever gives up his soul to sin gives it up to the devil. It is Jesus, and Jesus alone, who can deliver from the power of this bondage. When Satan is cast out, Jesus purifies and dwells in the heart.

Verse 30. He that is not with me is against me] In vain do men seek for methods to reconcile God and mammon. There is no medium between loving the Lord and being his enemy—between belonging to Christ or to Satan. If we be on the side of the devil, we must expect to go to the devil's hell; if we be on the side of Christ, we may expect to go to his heaven. When Christ, his truth, and his servants are assaulted, he who does not espouse their cause is not on Christ's side, but incurs the guilt of deserting and betraying him. There are many, (it is to be feared,) in the world who are really against Christ, and scatter abroad, who flatter themselves that they are workers together with him, and of the number of his friends!

Scattereth abroad.] This seems to have been a proverbial form of speech, and may be a metaphor taken from shepherds. He who does not help the true shepherd to gather his flock into the fold is, most likely, one who wishes to scatter them, that he may have the opportunity of stealing and destroying them. I do not find any parallel to this proverbial mode of speech in the Jewish rabbins, if it be one, nor have I met with it among the Greek or Roman writers.

Verse 31. All manner of sin and blasphemy] Βλασφημία, injurious or impious speaking, byρνεισπρæc, mocking and deriding speech, Anglo-Saxon. See chap. ix. 3.

But the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost] Even personal reproaches, revilings, persecutions against Christ, were remissible; but blasphemy, or impious speaking against the Holy Spirit was to have no forgiveness: i. e. when the person obstinately attributed those works to the devil, which he had the fullest evi-

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3.
men: ^a but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men.

32 And whosoever ^a speaketh a word against the Son of man, ^b it shall be forgiven him: but whosoever

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3.

^a Acts vii. 51.—^a Chap. xi. 19; xiii. 55; John vii. 12, 52.

^b 1 Tim. i. 13.

dence could be wrought only by the Spirit of God. That this, and nothing else, is the sin against the Holy Spirit, is evident from the connection in this place, and more particularly from Mark iii. 28, 29, 30. "All sins shall be forgiven unto the sons of men, and blasphemies wherewith soever they shall blaspheme; but he that shall blaspheme against the Holy Ghost hath never forgiveness, but is in danger of eternal damnation; BECAUSE they said, He hath an unclean spirit."

Here the matter is made clear beyond the smallest doubt—the unpardonable sin, as some term it, is neither less nor more than ascribing the miracles Christ wrought, by the power of God, to the spirit of the devil. Many sincere people have been grievously troubled with apprehensions that they had committed the unpardonable sin; but let it be observed that no man who believes the Divine mission of Jesus Christ, ever can commit this sin: therefore let no man's heart fail because of it, from henceforth and for ever, Amen. See below.

Verse 32. Neither in this world, neither in the world to come. Though I follow the common translation, yet I am fully satisfied the meaning of the words is, neither in this dispensation, (viz. the Jewish,) nor in that which is to come, viz. the Christian. עולם הבא olam ha-ba, the world to come, is a constant phrase for the times of the Messiah in the Jewish writers. See below. The sin here spoken of by our Lord ranks high in the catalogue of presumptuous sins, for which there was no forgiveness under the Mosaic dispensation. See Num. xv. 30, 31; xxxv. 31; Lev. xx. 10; 1 Sam. ii. 25. When our Lord says that such a sin hath no forgiveness, is he not to be understood as meaning that the crime shall be punished under the Christian dispensation as it was under the Jewish, viz. by the destruction of the body? And is not this the same mentioned 1 John i. 7, called there the sin unto death; i. e. a sin that was to be punished by the death of the body, while mercy might be extended to the soul? The punishment for presumptuous sins, under the Jewish law, to which our Lord evidently alludes, certainly did not extend to the damnation of the soul, though the body was destroyed: therefore I think that, though there was no such forgiveness to be extended to this crime as to absolve the man from the punishment of temporal death, yet, on repentance, mercy might be extended to the soul; and every sin may be repented of under the Gospel dispensation.

Dr. Lightfoot has sufficiently vindicated this passage from all false interpretation. "They that endeavour hence to prove the remission of some sins after death, seem little to understand to what Christ had respect when he spake these words. Weigh well this common and most known doctrine of the Jewish schools, and judge.

"He that transgresses an affirmative precept, if he presently repent, is not moved until the Lord pardon him; and of such it is said, Be ye converted, O backsliding children! and I will heal your backslidings.—He that transgresses a negative precept, and repents his repentance suspends judgment, and the day of expiation expiates him; as it is said, This day shall all your uncleanness be expiated to you. He that transgresses to cutting off (by the stroke of God) or to death by the Sanhedrin, and repents, repentance and the day of expiation do suspend judgment, and the strokes that are laid upon him wipe off sin, as it is said, And I will visit their transgression with a rod and their iniquity with scourges. But he by whom the name of God is profaned (or blasphemed) repentance is of no avail to him to suspend judgment, no the day of expiation to expiate it, nor scourges (or corrections inflicted) to wipe it off, but all suspend judgment, and death wipes it off. Thus the Babylonian Gemara writes; but the Jerusalem thus: Repentance and the day of expiation expiate as to the third part, and corrections as to the third part, and death wipes it off, as it is said, And your iniquities shall not be expiated to you until ye die: behold, we learn that death wipes off. Note this, which Christ contradicts, concerning blasphemy against the Holy Ghost. It shall not be forgiven, saith he, neither in this world, nor in the world to come; that is, neither before death, nor, as you dream, by death. Jerus. Sanhed. fol. 37. and Bab. Yoma, fol. 86.

"In the world to come.—I. Some phrases were received into common use, by which, in common speech they opposed the heresy of the Sadducees, who denied immortality. Of that sort were עולם הבא olam ha-ba אלוהים elohim, The world to come. גן עדן gan eden Παράδεισος, paradise: גי הנום gei hinom, Tervu hell, &c.

"At the end of all the prayers in the temple (as we observed before) they said עולם עד ad olam, forever. But when the heretics (i. e. the Sadducees) brake in, and said there was no AGE but one, then it was appointed to be said for ever and ever. עולם עד ad olam ועד u'ad min ha-olam, read ha-olam. Bab. Berachoth, fol. 54. This distinction of עולם הזה olam hazeh, this world, and of עולם הבא olam ha-ba, the world to come, you may find almost in every page of the rabbins.

"The Lord recompense thee a good reward for thy good work in this world, and let thy reward be perfected in the world to come. Targum on Ruth.

"It (that is, the history of the creation and of the Bible) therefore begins with the letter ב beth, (in the word בְּרִשִׁית bereshith), because two worlds were created, this world and a world to come. Baal Turin

"The world to come hints two things especially (of which see Rambam, in Sanhed. cap. ii. Chelek. I. The times of the Messiah: 'Be mindful of the day wherein thou camest out of Egypt, all the days of thy life: the wise men say, by the days of thy life is intimated this world: by all the days of thy life, th

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.
speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, neither in the world to come.

33 Either make the tree good, and ^e his fruit good; or else make the tree corrupt, and his fruit corrupt; for the tree is known by his fruit.

34 O ^d generation of vipers, how can ye, being evil, speak good things? ^e for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh.

35 A good man out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth good things: and an evil man out of the evil treasure bringeth forth evil things.

36 But I say unto you, That every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment.

37 For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned.

38 ¶ Then certain of the scribes and of the Pharisees answered, saying, Master, we would see a sign from thee.

39 But he answered and said unto them, An evil and ^e adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given to

^e Chap. vii. 17. Luke vi. 43, 44. — ^e Chap. iii. 7; xxiii. 33; Luke vi. 45 — ^d Chap. xvi. 1; Mark viii. 11; Luke xi. 16, 29; John ii. 18; 1 Cor. i. 22. — ^e Isa. lvii. 3; chap. xvi. 1 Mark viii. 39; John iv. 48.

'ays of the Messiah are superinduced.' In this sense the apostle seems to speak, Heb. ii. 5, and vi. 5. — I. The state after death: thus Rab. Tancum, The world to come, is when a man has departed out of his world."

Verse 33. Either make the tree good] That is, the effect will be always similar to the cause; a bad tree will produce bad fruit, and a good tree, good fruit.

The works will resemble the heart: nothing good can proceed from an evil spirit; no good fruit can proceed from a corrupt heart. Before the heart of man can produce any good, it must be renewed and influenced by the Spirit of God.

Verse 34. O generation of vipers] These are apparently severe words; but they were extremely proper in reference to that execrable people to whom they were addressed: the whole verse is an inference from what was spoken before.

Out of the abundance (περισσευματος, the overflowings) of the heart] Wicked words and sinful actions may be considered as the overflowings of a heart that is more than full of the spirit of wickedness; and holy words and righteous deeds may be considered as the overflowings of a heart that is filled with the Holy Spirit, and running over with love to God and man.

Verse 35. A good man out of the good treasure of the heart] Της καρδιας, of the heart, is omitted by upwards of one hundred MSS., many of them of the greatest antiquity and authority; by all the Syriac, Arabic, and Persian; by the Slavonic, Saxon, Vulgate, and Itala, (except four,) and by several of the primitive fathers. It seems to have been added here by some copyist, merely to explain. The good heart is the good treasury, and the treasure that is in it is the love of God, and of all mankind. The bad heart is the bad treasury, and its treasure is the carnal mind, which is enmity against God, and ill-will to man.

Verse 36. Every idle word] Πᾶσα ἀργον, a word that does nothing, that neither ministers grace nor instruction to them who hear it. The word ἀργον corresponds to the Hebrew שׁוֹן shavé, which signifies not only rain or empty, but also wicked and injurious, such as a false testimony against a neighbour, compare Deut. v. 11 and 20. Add to this, that Symmachus translates פגול piggul, polluted, Lev. xix. 7, by the very Greek word in the text. It was to explain this ambiguous meaning of the word, that ten MSS. have changed ἀργον into πονηρον, evil. Our Lord must be understood here as condemning all false and injurious words: the scope of the place necessarily requires this meaning.

Verse 37. By thy words thou shalt be justified] That is, the whole tenor of thy conversation will be an evidence for or against thee, in the great day. — How many are there who count words for nothing! and yet eternity often depends on them. Lord, put a watch before the door of my lips! is a prayer proper for all men.

Verse 38. We would see a sign from thee.] That is, we wish now to see thee work a miracle. Pride, vain curiosity, and incredulity, have never proof sufficient of the truth: for they will not be satisfied.

Verse 39. An evil and adulterous generation] Or, race of people; for so γένεα should be translated here, and in most other places in the Gospels; for our Lord, in general, uses it to point out the Jewish people. — This translation is a key to unlock some very obscure passages in the evangelists.

Seeketh after a sign] Or, seeketh another sign, (ἐπιζητεῖ,) so I think this word should be translated. Our Lord had already given the Jews several signs; and here they desire sign upon sign.

Our Lord terms the Jews an adulterous race. — Under the old covenant, the Jewish nation was represented as in a marriage contract with the Lord of hosts; as believers, in the new covenant, are represented as the spouse of Christ. All unfaithfulness and disobedience was considered as a breach of this marriage contract; hence the persons who were thus guilty are denominated adulterers and adulteresses. But, independently of this, there is the utmost proof, from their own writings, that in the time of our Lord they were most literally an adulterous race of people: for, at this very time, R. Joehanan ben Zacchai abrogated the trial by the bitter waters of jealousy, because so many were found to be thus criminal. See on John viii. 3.

A. M. 4031 it, but the sign of the Prophet
A. D. 27. Jonas :
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3.

40 ^b For as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly : so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth.

^b Jonah i. 17.—ⁱ Luke xi. 32.—^k See Jer. iii. 11; Ezek. xvi. 51, 52;

Verse 40. Three days and three nights] Our Lord rose from the grave on the day but one after his crucifixion : so that, in the computation in this verse, the part of the day on which he was crucified, and the part of that on which he rose again, are severally estimated as an entire day ; and this, no doubt, exactly corresponded to the time in which Jonah was in the belly of the fish. Our Lord says, As Jonah was, so shall the Son of man be, &c. Evening and morning, or night and day, is the Hebrew phrase for a natural day, which the Greeks termed νυχθημερον, nuchthemeron. The very same quantity of time which is here termed three days and three nights, and which, in reality, was only one whole day, a part of two others, and two whole nights, is termed three days and three nights, in the book of Esther : Go ; neither eat nor drink THREE DAYS, NIGHT or DAY, and so I will go in unto the king : chap. iv. 16. Afterwards it follows, chap. v. 1. On the THIRD DAY, Esther stood in the inner court of the king's house. Many examples might be produced, from both the sacred and profane writers, in vindication of the propriety of the expression in the text. For farther satisfaction, the reader, if he please, may consult Whitby and Wakefuld, and take the following from Lightfoot.

"I. The Jewish writers extend that memorable station of the unmoving sun, at Joshua's prayer, to six and thirty hours ; for so Kimchi upon that place : 'According to more exact interpretation, the sun and moon stood still for six and thirty hours : for when the fight was on the eve of the Sabbath, Joshua feared lest the Israelites might break the Sabbath ; therefore he spread abroad his hands, that the sun might stand still on the sixth day, according to the measure of the day of the Sabbath, and the moon according to the measure of the night of the Sabbath, and of the going out of the Sabbath, which amounts to six and thirty hours.'

"II. If you number the hours that pass from our Saviour's giving up the ghost upon the cross to his resurrection, you shall find almost the same number of hours ; and yet that space is called by him three days and three nights, whereas two nights only came between, and one complete day. Nevertheless, while he speaks these words, he is not without the consent both of the Jewish schools and their computation. Weigh well that which is disputed in the tract Scabbath, concerning the separation of a woman for three days ; where many things are discussed by the Gemarists, concerning the computation of this space of three days. Among other things these words occur : R. Ismael saith, Sometimes it contains four אונות onoth, sometimes five, sometimes six. But how much is the space of an אונה onah ? R. Jochanan saith, Either a day

41 ⁱ The men of Nineveh shall rise in judgment with this generation, and ^k shall condemn it :
A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3.

^l because they repented at the preaching of Jonas ; and, behold, a greater than Jonas is here.

42 ^m The queen of the south shall rise up

Rom. ii. 27.—^l Jon. iii. 5.—^m 1 Kgs. x. 1 ; 2 Chr. ix. 1 ; Luke xi. 31 or a night. And so also the Jerusalem Talmud : 'R. Akiba fixed a DAY for an onah, and a NIGHT for an onah.' But the tradition is, that R. Eliazar ben Azariah said, A day and a night make an onah : and a PART of an onah is as the WHOLE. And a little after R. Ismael computed a part of the onah for the whole.' Thus, then, three days and three nights, according to this Jewish method of reckoning, included any part of the first day ; the whole of the following night ; the next day and its night ; and any part of the succeeding or third day.

In the whale's belly] That a fish of the shark kind and not a whale, is here meant, Bochart has abundantly proved, vol. iii. col. 742, &c., edit. Leyd. 1692. It is well known that the throat of a whale is capable of admitting little more than the arm of an ordinary man ; but many of the shark species can swallow : man whole, and men have been found whole in the stomachs of several. Every natural history abound with facts of this kind. Besides, the shark is a native of the Mediterranean Sea, in which Jonah was sailing when swallowed by what the Hebrew term גודל דג dag gadol, a great fish ; but every body knows that whales are no produce of the Mediterranean Sea though some have been by accident found there, as in most other parts of the maritime world ; but, let them be found where they may, there is none of them capable of swallowing a man. Instead of either whale or shark, some have translated גודל דג dag gadol, Jonah i. 17, by a fishing cove, or something of this nature ; but this is merely to get rid of the miracle : for according to some, the whole of Divine revelation is : forgery—or it is a system of metaphor or allegory that has no miraculous interferences in it. But, independently of all this, the criticism is contemptible. Others say, that the great fish means a vessel so called into which Jonah went, and into the hold of which he was thrown, where he continued three days and three nights. In short, it must be any thing but a real miracle, the existence of which the wise men, so called of the present day, cannot admit. Perhaps these very men are not aware that they have scarcely any belief even in the existence of God himself!

Verse 41. The men of Nineveh shall rise in judgment] The voice of God, threatening temporal judgments, caused a whole people to repent, who had neither Moses nor Christ, neither the law nor the prophets and who perhaps never had but this one preacher among them. What judgment may not we expect, if we continue impenitent, after all that God has bestowed upon us ?

A greater than Jonas is here.] Πλεον, for τι πλεον something more. The evidence offered by Jonah sufficed to convince and lead the Ninevites to repentance.

M. 4031. in the judgment with this generation,
D. 27. and shall condemn it: for she came
i. Olymp. from the uttermost parts of the CCI. 3. earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and, hold, a greater than Solomon is here.

13 ^a When the unclean spirit is gone out of man, ^o he walketh through dry places, seek-g rest, and findeth none:

14 Then he saith, I will return into my house from whence I came out; and when he is me, he findeth it empty, swept, and garnished.

Luke xi. 24.—^o Job i. 7; 1 Pet. v. 8.—^p Heb. vi. 4; x. 26;
2 Pet. ii. 20, 21, 22.

There was more evidence, and a greater person; and so obstinate are the Jews that all is ineffectual.

Christ, who preached to the Jews, was infinitely greater than Jonah, in his nature, person, and mission.

Jonah preached repentance in Nineveh only forty days, and Christ preached among the Jews for several years. 3. Jonah wrought no miracles to authorize his preaching; but Christ wrought miracles every day, every place where he went, and of every kind.
14. Notwithstanding all this, the people of Judea did not repent, though the people of Nineveh did.

Verse 42. The queen of the south] In 1 Kings
1, this queen is said to be of Saba, which was a city and province of Arabia Felix, to the south, or south-east, of Judea.

Uttermost parts of the earth] Παραγών της γης— form of speech which merely signifies, a great distance. See Deut. xxviii. 49.

Verse 43. When the unclean spirit] If there had been no reality in demoniacal possessions, our Lord could have scarcely appealed to a case of this kind to point out the real state of the Jewish people, and the desolation which was coming upon them.
Had this been only a vulgar error, of the nonsense of which the learned scribes and the wise Pharisees must have been convinced, the case not being one in point, the cause not true, must have been treated by that very people with contempt for whose conviction it was alone designed.

He walketh through dry places] Δι' ἀνδρῶν τοπων.
Here seems to be a reference here to the Orphic de-monology, in which evil spirits were divided into various classes, according to the different regions of their mode, or places in which they delighted. These classes were five: 1. Δαιμονες οὐρανοῦ, Celestial de- mons. 2. Δαιμονες ἡερῶν, Aerial. 3. Δαιμονες ἐν- νοῦ, Aquatic. 4. Δαιμονες χθονῶν, Terrestrial. 5.
καὶ δαιμονες ὑποχθονῶν, And subterranean demons.
See Orph. ad Mus. ap. Schott. The Platonists, the followers of Zoroaster, and the primitive Jews, made early the same distinctions.

Seeking rest] Or refreshment. Strange! a fallen corrupt spirit can have no rest but in the polluted human heart: the corruption of the one is suited to the pollution of the other, and thus like cleaves to like.

Verse 44. Into my house] The soul of that person from whom he had been expelled by the power of 45 Then goeth he, and taketh with ^{A. M. 4031.} himself seven other spirits more ^{A. D. 27.}

wicked than himself, and they enter ^{An. Olymp.} in and dwell there: ^{CCI. 3.} and the last state of that man is worse than the first. Even so shall it be also unto this wicked generation.

46 ¶ While he yet talked to the people, behold his mother and ^a his brethren stood without, desiring to speak with him.

47 Then one said unto him, Behold, thy mo-

9 Mark iii. 31; Luke viii. 19, 20, 21.—^r Ch. xiii. 55; Mark vi. 3;
John ii. 12; vii. 3, 5; Acts i. 14; 1 Cor. ix. 5; Gal. i. 19.

Christ, and out of which he was to have been kept by continual prayer, faith, and watchfulness.

He findeth it empty] Unoccupied, σχολαζοντα, empty of the former inhabitant, and ready to receive a new one: denoting a soul that has lost the life and power of godliness, and the testimony of the Holy Spirit.

Swept and garnished.] As σχολαζω signifies to be idle, or unemployed, it may refer here to the person, as well as to his state. His affections and desires are no longer busied with the things of God, but gad about, like an idle person, among the vanities of a perishing world. Swept, from love, meekness, and all the fruits of the Spirit; and garnished, or adorned, κεκοσμημενον, decorated, with the vain showy trifles of folly and fashion. This may comprise also smart speeches, cun- ning repartees, &c., for which many who have lost the life of God are very remarkable.

Verse 45. Seven other spirits more wicked] Seven was a favourite number with the Jews, implying frequently, with them, something perfect, completed, filled up, for such is the proper import of the Hebrew word שבע shevâ or shevang: nearly allied in sound to our seven. And perhaps this meaning of it refers to the seventh day, when God rested from his work, having filled up, or completed the whole of his creative design. Seven demons—as many as could occupy his soul, harassing it with pride, anger, self-will, lust, &c., and torturing the body with disease.

The last state of that man is worse than the first.] His soul, before influenced by the Spirit of God, dilated and expanded under its heavenly influences, becomes more capable of refinement in iniquity, as its powers are more capacious than formerly. Evil habits are formed and strengthened by relapses; and relapses are multiplied, and become more incurable, through new habits.

So shall it be also unto this wicked generation.] And so it was: for they grew worse and worse, as if totally abandoned to diabolic influence: till at last the besom of destruction swept them and their privileges, national and religious, utterly away. What a terrible description of a state of apostasy is contained in these verses! May he who readeth understand!

Verse 46. His mother and his brethren] These are supposed to have been the cousins of our Lord, as the word brother is frequently used among the Hebrews in this sense. But there are others who believe Mary

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

ther and thy brethren stand without, desiring to speak with thee.

48 But he answered and said unto him that told him. Who is my mother? and who are my brethren?

^s See John xv. 14; Gal. v. 6; vi. 15; had other children beside our Lord and that these were literally his brothers, who are spoken of here. And, although it be possible that these were the sons of Mary, the wife of Cleopas or Alpheus, his mother's sister, called his relations, Mark iii. 21; yet it is as likely that they were the children of Joseph and Mary, and brethren of our Lord, in the strictest sense of the word. See on chap. xiii. 55.

Verse 48. Who is my mother? and who are my brethren? The reason of this seeming disregard of his relatives was this: they came to seize upon him, for they thought he was distracted. See Mark iii. 21.

Verse 50. Whosoever shall do the will of my Father, &c. Those are the best acknowledged relatives of Christ who are united to him by spiritual ties, and who are become one with him by the indwelling of his Spirit. We generally suppose that Christ's relatives must have shared much of his affectionate attention; and doubt-

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

49 And he stretched forth his hand toward his disciples, and said,
Behold my mother and my brethren!

50 For ^s whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother.

Col. iii. 11; Heb. ii. 11.

less they did: but here we find that whosoever doe the will of God is equally esteemed by Christ, as his brother, sister, or even his virgin mother. What an encouragement for fervent attachment to God!

1. From various facts related in this chapter, we see the nature and design of the revelation of God and of all the ordinances and precepts contained in—they are all calculated to do man good: to improve his understanding, to soften and change his nature that he may love his neighbour as himself. That religion that does not inculcate and produce humanity never came from heaven.

2. We have already seen what the sin against the Holy Ghost is: no soul that fears God can commit it; perhaps it would be impossible for any but Jews to be guilty of it, and they only in the circumstances mentioned in the text; and in such circumstances, it is impossible that any person should now be found.

CHAPTER XIII.

Christ teaches the multitudes out of a ship, they standing on the shore, 1, 2. The parable of the sower, 3-9. He gives his reasons for speaking in parables, 10-17. Explains the parable of the sower, 18-23. Parable of the tares and the wheat, 24-30. Of the grain of mustard seed, 31, 32. Of the leaven, 33. The prophecy fulfilled by this mode of teaching, 34, 35. He explains the parable of the tares and the wheat, 36-43. Parable of the treasure hid in a field, 44. Of the pearl-merchant, 45, 46. Of the drag-net, 47-50. His application of the whole, 51, 52. He teaches in his own country, and his neighbours take offence, 53-56. Our Lord's observations on this, 57. He works no miracle among them because of their unbelief, 58.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

THE same day went Jesus out of the house, ^a and sat by the sea side.

2 ^b And great multitudes were gathered together unto him, so that ^c he went into a ship,

^a Mark iv. 1.—^b Luke viii. 4.

NOTES ON CHAP. XIII.

Verse 1. The same day] Our Lord scarcely ever appears to take any rest: he is incessant in his labours, and instant in season and out of season; and in this he has left all his successors in the ministry an example, that they should follow his steps: for he who wishes to save souls will find few opportunities to rest. As Satan is going about as a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour, the messenger of God should imitate his diligence, that he may counteract his work. The gospels are journals of our Lord's life.

Went Jesus out of the house] This was the house of Peter. See chap. xvii. 24.

Sat by the sea side.] The sea of Galilee, on the borders of which the city of Capernaum was situated.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

and sat; and the whole multitude stood on the shore.

3 And he spake many things unto them in parables, saying, ^d Behold, a sower went forth to sow;

^c Luke v. 3.—^d Luke viii. 5.

Verse 2. Into a ship] Το πλοῖον, THE vessel or boat. Mr. Wakefield supposes (which is very likely) that a particular vessel is uniformly specified, which seems to have been kept on the lake for the use of Christ and his apostles: it probably belonged to some of the fishermen, (see chap. iv. 22,) who, he thinks occasionally, at least, followed their former occupation. See John xxi. 3.

The thought of pious Quesnel on this verse should not be neglected. We see here a representation of the Church, which consists of the people united to the pastors. These, being more exposed to violent tempests and storms, are, as it were, in a ship, while the multitude continue at ease on the shore.

Verse 3. He spake many things unto them in par-

A. M. 4031. 4 And when he sowed, some
A. D. 27. seeds fell by the way side, and the
An. Olymp. fowls came and devoured them up:
CCL. 3.

5 Some fell upon stony places, where they had not much earth: and forthwith they sprung up, because they had no deepness of earth:

6 And when the sun was up, they were scorched; and because they had no root, they withered away.

7 And some fell among thorns;
and the thorns sprung up and choked them:

8 But other fell into good ground, and brought forth fruit, some ^a a hundred-fold, some sixty fold, some thirty-fold.

^a Genesis,

chap. xvi. 12.

[Notes] Parable, from παρά, near, and βάλλω, I cast, or put. A comparison or similitude, in which one thing is compared with another, especially spiritual things with natural, by which means these spiritual things are better understood, and make a deeper impression on an attentive mind. Or, a parable is a representation of any matter accommodated, in the way of similitude, to the real subject, in order to delineate it with the greater force and perspicuity. See more on this subject at the conclusion of this chapter. No scheme, says Dr.
Lightfoot, of Jewish rhetoric was more familiarly used than that of parables; which, perhaps, creeping in from hence among the heathens, ended in fables.

It is said in the tract Sotah, chap. ix. "From the time that Rabbi Meri died, those that spake in parables ceased." Not that this figure of rhetoric perished in the nation from that time; but because he surpassed all others in these flowers, as the gloss there from the tract Sanhedrin speaks. "A third part of his discourses was tradition; a third part allegory; and a third part parable." The Jewish books every where bound with these figures, the nation inclining by a kind of natural genius to this kind of rhetoric. Their very religion might be called parabolical, folded up within the covering of ceremonies; and their oratory in their sermons was like to it. But is it not indeed a wonder, that they who were so much given to and delighted in parables, and so dexterous in unfolding them, should stick in the outward shell of ceremonies, and should not have brought out the parabolical and spiritual sense of them! Our Saviour, who always poke with the common people, uses the same kind of speech, and very often the same preface which they used, To what is it likened? See Lightfoot in loco.
Though we find the basis of many of our Lord's parables in the Jewish writings, yet not one of them comes through his hands without being astonishingly improved.
In this respect also, Surely never man spake like this man.

Under the parable of the sower, our Lord intimates,
1. That of all the multitudes then attending his ministry, few would bring forth fruit to perfection. And 2.
That this would be a general case in preaching the Gospel among men.

Verse 4. Some seeds fell by the way side] The hard beaten path, where no plough had broken up the ground.

Verse 5. Stony places] Where there was a thin surface of earth, and a rock at the bottom.

Verse 7. Among thorns] Where the earth was ploughed up, but the brambles and weeds had not been cleared away.

Verse 8. Good ground] Where the earth was deep,

the field well ploughed, and the brambles and weeds all removed. See more on ver. 18, &c., and see on Luke viii. 15.

Some a hundred-fold. For the elucidation of this text, I beg leave to introduce the following experiment.
In 1816 I sowed, for a third crop, a field with oats, at Millbrook, in Lancashire; the grains weighed, on an average, $\frac{3}{4}$ of a grain each. One grain produced three stalks with three ears: the largest had 68 grains in it, the second 26, and the third 25.

| | |
|--|-------------------|
| Whole number of grains | 119, which to- |
| gether weighed | 82 grs |
| The root separately, after washing and dry- | |
| ing, weighed | 13 $\frac{1}{2}$ |
| The stalks and remaining leaves (for many | |
| had perished in the wet season) | 630 $\frac{1}{2}$ |

| | |
|------------------------------------|----------|
| Weight of the whole produce of one | |
| grain of oats | 726 grs. | which was 725 times and one quarter more than the original weight.

The power of grain to multiply itself, even in the same year, is a subject as much of curiosity and astonishment as of importance and general utility. For the farther elucidation of this text, I shall give the following example from a practice in agriculture, or rural economy, which is termed filtering.

On the 2nd of June, 1766, Mr. C. Miller, of Cambridge, sowed some grains of the common red wheat; and on the 8th of August a single plant was taken up, and separated into 18 parts, and each planted separately: these plants having pushed out several side shoots, about the middle of September some of them were taken up and divided; and the rest between that time and October. This second division produced 67 plants.
These plants remained through the winter, and another division of them, made between the middle of March and the 12th of April, produced 500 plants. They were divided no farther, but permitted to remain in the field. These plants were in general stronger than any of the wheat in the field. Some of them produced upwards of 100 ears from a single root; and many of the ears measured seven inches in length, and contained between sixty and seventy grains. The whole number of ears produced from the single plant was 21,109, which yielded three pecks and three-quarters of clear corn, weighing 47lbs. 7oz., and, from a calculation made by counting the grains in an ounce, the whole number of grains was about 576,840. Mr.
Miller thinks that, had he made a second division in the spring, the number of plants would have amounted to 2000. Who can help admiring the wisdom and providence of God in this single grain of corn! He

A. M. 4031. 9 ¶ Who hath ears to hear, let
A. D. 27. him hear.
An. Olymp. CCI. 3.

10 ¶ And the disciples came, and said unto him, Why speakest thou unto them in parables?

11 He answered and said unto them, Because it is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given.

[Chap. xi. 15.—Chap. xi. 25; xvi. 17; Mark iv. 11; 1 Cor. ii. 10; 1 John ii. 27.]

has, in some sort, impressed on it an idea of his own infinity; and an idea which, like the subject to which it refers, confounds our imagination and reason. How infinitely great is God, even in his minor works!

Verse 9. Who hath ears to hear, &c.] Let every person who feels the necessity of being instructed in the things which concern his soul's welfare pay attention to what is spoken, and he shall become wise unto salvation.

Verse 11. It is given unto you to know the mysteries, &c.] By mysteries, here, we may understand not only things concerning the scheme of salvation, which had not yet been revealed; but also the prophetic declarations concerning the future state of the Christian Church, expressed in the ensuing parables. It is not given to them to know the purport and design of these things—they are gross of heart, earthly and sensual, and do not improve the light they have received: but to you it is given, because I have appointed you not only to be the first preachers of my Gospel to sinners, but also the persons who shall transmit accounts of all these things to posterity. The knowledge of these mysteries, in the first instance, can be given only to a few; but when these faithfully write and publish what they have heard and seen, unto the world, then the science of salvation is revealed and addressed to all. From ver. 17, we learn, that many prophets and righteous men had desired to see and hear these things, but had not that privilege—to them it was not given; not because God designed to exclude them from salvation, but because He who knew all things knew, either that they were not proper persons, or that that was not the proper time: for the choice of the PERSONS by whom, and the choice of the TIME in which it is most proper to reveal Divine things, must ever rest with the all-wise God.

Verse 12. Whosoever hath, to him shall be given] This is an allusion to a common custom in all countries: he who possesses much or is rich, to such a person, presents are ordinarily given.

Whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken away even that he hath.] That is, the poor man: he that has little may be easily made a prey of, and so lose his little. This is a proper sense of the word εχειν in sacred and profane writers. In 1 Cor. xi. 22, τοὺς ἡσυχίας, those who have not, means simply THE POOR: and Aristophanes uses τοὺς ἡσυχίας, those that have, for the RICH or OPULENT. See a variety of pertinent examples in Kypke on Luke viii. 18. There is 12 ¶ For whosoever hath, to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance: but whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken away even that he hath.

13 Therefore speak I to them in parables: because they seeing, see not; and hearing, they hear not; neither do they understand.

Chapter xxv. 29; Mark iv. 25; Luke viii. 18, xix. 26.

one example in Juvenal, Sat. iii. l. 208, 209, that expresses the whole of our Lord's meaning, and is a beautiful illustration of this apparently difficult passage. NIL habuit Codrus: quis enim negat? et tamen illud Perdidit infelix TOTUM NIL.

"Tis true, poor Codrus NOTHING had to boast,
And yet poor Codrus ALL that NOTHING lost."

Dryden.

Now what was this NOTHING which, the poet said, Codrus had and lost? The five preceding lines tell you.

*Lectus erat Codro Proculâ minor, urceoli sex,
Ornamentum abaci; necnon et parvulus infrâ
Cantharus, et recubans sub eodem marmore Chiron;
Janque vetus Græcos servabat cista libellos,
Et divina Opici rodebant earmina mures.*

He had one small bed, six little pitchers, the ornament of a side-board; a small jug or tankard, the image of a centaur, and an old chest with some Greek books in it, on which the mice had already begun to make depredations. And all this he lost; probably by continuing, in spite of his destiny, to be a poet. So those who devote not the light and power which God has given them to the purposes for which he has granted these gifts, from them shall be taken away these unemployed or prostituted blessings. This seems to have been a proverbial mode of speech, which our Lord here uses to inform his disciples, that he who does not improve the first operations of grace, howsoever small, is in danger of losing not only all the possible product, but even the principal; for God delights to heap benefits on those who properly improve them. See the note on Luke viii. 18.

Verse 13. Therefore speak I to them in parables] On this account, viz. to lead them into a proper knowledge of God. I speak to them in parables, natural representations of spiritual truths, that they may be allured to inquire, and to find out the spirit, which is hidden under the letter; because, seeing the miracles which I have wrought, they see not, i. e. the end for which I have wrought them; and hearing my doctrines, they hear not, so as to profit by what is spoken; neither do they understand, οὐδὲ συνιέναι, they do not lay their hearts to it. Is not this obviously our Lord's meaning? Who can suppose that he would employ his time in speaking enigmatically to them, on purpose that they might not understand what was spoken? Could the God of truth and sincerity act thus? If he

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3. 14 And in them is fulfilled the prophecy of Esaias, which saith, ¹ By hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand; and seeing ye shall see, and shall not perceive:

15 For this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears ^k are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed; lest at any time they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them.

16 But ¹ blessed are your eyes, for they see: and your ears, for they hear.

17 For verily I say unto you, ^m That many prophets and righteous men have desired to ¹ Isa. vi. 9; Ezek. xii. 2; Mark iv. 12; Luke viii. 10; John xii. 40; Acts xxviii. 26, 27; Rom. xi. 8; 2 Cor. iii. 14, 15.

^k Heb. v. 11.

had designed to act otherwise, he might have saved his time and labour, and not spoken at all, which would have answered the same end, viz. to leave them in gross ignorance.

Verse 14. In them is fulfilled] Αναπληρουνται, Is again fulfilled: this proper meaning of the Greek word has been generally overlooked. The evangelist means, that as these words were fulfilled in the Jews, in the time of the Prophet Isaiah, so they are now again fulfilled in these their posterity, who exactly copy their fathers' example. These awful words may be again fulfilled in us, if we take not warning by the things which these disobedient people have suffered.

By hearing ye shall hear] Jesus Christ shall be sent to you, his miracles ye shall fully see, and his doctrines ye shall distinctly hear; but God will not force you to receive the salvation which is offered.

Verse 15. Heart is waxed gross] Επαχυνθη, is become fat—inattentive, stupid, insensible. They hear heavily with their ears—are half asleep while the salvation of God is preached unto them.

Their eyes they have closed] Totally and obstinately resisted the truth of God, and shut their eyes against the light.

Lest—they should see, &c.] Lest they should see their lost estate, and be obliged to turn unto God, and seek his salvation. His state is truly deplorable who is sick unto death, and yet is afraid of being cured. The fault is here totally in the people, and not at all in that God whose name is Mercy and whose nature is love.

Verse 16. But blessed are your eyes] Ye improve the light which God has given you; and you receive an increase of heavenly wisdom by every miracle and by every sermon.

Verse 17. Many prophets and righteous men] These lived by and died in the faith of the promised Messiah: the fulness of the time was not then come for his manifestation in the flesh. See also on ver. 11.

Verse 19. When any one heareth the word of the see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them.

18 ¶ ⁿ Hear ye therefore the parable of the sower.

19 When any one heareth the word ^a of the kingdom, and understandeth it not, then cometh the wicked one, and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart. This is he which received seed by the way side.

20 But he that received the seed into stony places, the same is he that heareth the word, and anon ^p with joy receiveth it;

21 Yet hath he not root in himself, but kingdom] Viz. the preaching of the Gospel of Christ. And understandeth it not] Μη συνιεντος, perhaps more properly, regardeth it not, does not lay his heart to it.

¹ Chap. xvi. 17; Luke x. 23, 24; John xx. 29.—^m Heb. xi. 13; 1 Pet. i. 10, 11.—^a Mark iv. 14; Luke viii. 11.—^p Chap. iv. 23.—^p Isa. lviii. 2; Ezek. xxxiii. 31, 32; John v. 35.

The wicked one] Ο πανηρος, from πανος, labour, toil, he who distresses and torments the soul. Mark, chap. iv. 15, calls him ο σατανας, the adversary or opposer, because he resists men in all their purposes of amendment, and, to the utmost of his power opposes, in order to frustrate, the influences of Divine grace upon the heart. In the parallel place in Luke, chap. viii. 12, he is called ο διαβολος, the devil, from διαβαλλειν, to shoot, or dart through. In allusion to this meaning of the name, St. Paul, Eph. vi. 16, speaks of the fiery darts of the wicked one. It is worthy of remark, that the three evangelists should use each a different appellation of this mortal enemy of mankind: probably to show that the devil, with all his powers and properties, opposes every thing that tends to the salvation of the soul.

Catcheth away] Makes the utmost haste to pick up the good seed, lest it should take root in the heart.

A careless inattentive hearer is compared to the way side—his heart is an open road, where evil affections, and foolish and hurtful desires, continually pass and repass, without either natiice or restraint. "A heart where Satan has" (as one terms it) "ingress, egress, regress, and progress: in a word, the devil's thoroughfare."

Verse 20. But he that received the seed into stony places—is he] That is, is a fit emblem of that man who, hearing the Gospel, is affected with its beauty and excellency, and immediately receiveth it with joy—is glad to hear what God has done to make man happy.

Verse 21. Yet hath he not root in himself] His soul is not deeply convinced of its guilt and depravity; the fallow ground is not properly ploughed up, nor the rock broken. When persecution, &c., ariseth, which he did not expect, he is soon stumbled—seeks some

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI 3.
dureth for a while : for when tribulation or persecution ariseth because of the word, by and by ^a he is offended.

22 ^a He also that received seed ^a among the thorns, is he that heareth the word ; and the care of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, choke the word, and he becometh unfruitful.

23 But he that received seed into the good pretext to abandon both the doctrine and followers of Christ. Having not felt his own sore, and the plague of his heart, he has not properly discovered that this salvation is the only remedy for his soul : thus he has no motive in his heart strong enough to counteract the outward scandal of the cross ; so he endureth only for the time in which there is no difficulty to encounter, no cross to bear.

^a Chap. xi. 6 ; 2 Tim. i. 15.—^a Chap. xix. 23 ; Mark x. 23 ; Luke xviii. 24 ; 1 Tim. vi. 9 ; 2 Tim. iv. 10.

Verse 22. He also that received seed among the thorns] In land ploughed, but not properly cleared and weeded. Is he—represents that person who heareth the word, but the cares, rather the anxiety, η μεριμνα, the whole system of anxious carking cares. Lexicographers derive the word μεριμνα from μεριζειν τον νοον, dividing, or distracting the mind. Thus a poet, Tot me impediunt curæ quæ mecum animum diversè trahunt.

“ So many cares hinder me which draw my mind different ways.” Terence.

The deceitfulness of riches] Which promise peace and pleasure, but can never give them.

Choke the word] Or, together choke the word, συμπνιγει, meaning, either that these grow up together with the word, overtop, and choke it ; or that these united together, viz. carking worldly cares, with the delusive hopes and promises of riches, cause the man to abandon the great concerns of his soul, and seek, in their place, what he shall eat, drink, and wherewithal he shall be clothed. Dreadful stupidity of man, thus to barter spiritual for temporal good—a heavenly inheritance for an earthly portion ! The seed of the kingdom can never produce much fruit in any heart, till the thorns and thistles of vicious affections and impure desires be plucked up by the roots and burned. The Persic translator renders it اصل کلمه را خبه کند, usle kalmé-ra khubé kund, chokes the root of the word : for it appears the seed had taken root, and that these cares, &c., choked it in the root, before even the blade could show itself.

Verse 23. Good ground] That which had depth of mould, was well ploughed, and well weeded.

Is he that heareth] Who diligently attends the ministry of the word.

And understandeth it] Lays the subject to heart, deeply weighing its nature, design, and importance.

Which also beareth fruit] His fruitfulness being an almost necessary consequence of his thus laying the

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI 3.
ground, is he that heareth the word, and understandeth it ; which also beareth fruit, and bringeth forth, ^a some a hundred-fold, some sixty. some thirty.

24 ¶ Another parable put he forth unto them, saying, The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man which sowed ^a good seed in his field :

25 But while men slept, his enemy came

^a Jer. iv. 3.—^a Gen. xxvi. 12 ; John xv. 4, 5, 8 ; Gal. v. 22.
^a Mark iv. 26.

Divine message to heart. Let it be observed, that to hear, to understand, and to bring forth fruit, are the three grand evidences of a genuine believer. He who does not hear the word of wisdom cannot understand what makes for his peace ; and he who does not understand what the Gospel requires him to be and to perform, cannot bring forth fruit ; and he who is not fruitful, very fruitful, cannot be a disciple of Christ—see John xv. 8 ; and he who is not Christ's disciple cannot enter into the kingdom of God.

From the different portions of fruit produced by the good ground, a hundred, sixty, and thirty, we may learn that all sound believers are not equally fruitful ; all hear, understand, and bring forth fruit, but not in the same degrees—occasioned, partly, by their situation and circumstances not allowing them such extensive opportunities of receiving and doing good ; and, partly, by lack of mental capacity—for every mind is not equally improvable.

Let it be farther observed that the unfruitfulness of the different lands was not owing to bad seed or an unskilful sower—the same sower sows the same seed in all, and with the same gracious design—but it is unfruitful in many because they are careless, inattentive, and worldly-minded.

But is not the ground naturally bad in every heart ? Undoubtedly. And can any but God make it good ? None. But it is your business, when you hear of the justice and mercy of God, to implore him to work in you that which is pleasing in his sight. No man shall be condemned because he did not change his own heart, but because he did not cry to God to change it, who gave him his Holy Spirit for this very purpose, and which he, by his worldly-mindedness and impiety, quenched. Whoso hath ears to hear let him hear : and may the Lord save the reader from an impenitent and unfruitful heart !

Verse 24. The kingdom of heaven] God's method of managing the affairs of the world, and the concerns of his Church.

Is likened unto a man which sowed good seed in his field] In general, the world may be termed the field of God ; and in particular, those who profess to believe in God through Christ are his field or farm ; among whom God sows nothing but the pure unadulterated word of his truth.

Verse 25. But while men slept] When the professors were lukewarm, and the pastors indolent, his

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3. and sowed * tares among the wheat, and went his way.

26 But when the blade was sprung up, and brought forth fruit, then appeared the tares also.

27 So the servants of the householder came and said unto him, Sir, didst not thou sow good seed in thy field? from whence then hath it tares?

* Deut. xvii. 9, Isa. lvi. 9, 10; Wisd. ii. 24; 1 Tim. iv. 2.

enemy came and sowed tares, ζιζανία, degenerate, or bastard wheat. The righteous and the wicked are often mingled in the visible Church. Every Christian society, how pure soever its principles may be, has its bastard wheat—those who bear a resemblance to the good, but whose hearts are not right with God. He who sows this bastard wheat among God's people is here styled God's enemy; and he may be considered also as a sower of them who permits them to be sown and to spring up through his negligence. Wo to the indolent pastors, who permit the souls under their care to be corrupted by error and sin! This word does not, I believe, occur in any of the Greek classics, nor in Dioscorides; but it may be seen in the Geoponica, or Greek writers De Re Rustica: see the edition by Niclas, vol. i. lib. ii. c. 43, where το ζιζανιον is said to be the same which the Greeks call alpa; and Florentinus, the author, says, Το ζιζανιον, το λεγομενον Αλπα, φθειρει τον αυτον, αρτοις δε μνηνιμενη, σκοτοι τους εσθιοντας. “Zizanian, which is called alpa, darnel, injures the wheat; and, mixed in the bread, causes dimness of the eyes to those who eat of it.” And the author might have added vertigo also. But this does not seem to be the grain to which our Lord alludes.

The word ζιζανία, zizania, which is here translated tares, and which should rather be translated bastard or degenerate wheat, is a Chaldee word; and its meaning must be sought in the rabbinical writers. In a treatise in the Mishna called Kelayim, which treats expressly on different kinds of seeds, the word זִנִּים zunim, or זִנִּין zunin, is used for bastard or degenerated wheat; that which was wholly a right seed in the beginning, but afterwards became degenerate—the ear not being so large, nor the grains in such quantity, as formerly, nor the corn so good in quality. In Psa. cxliv. 13, the words זֶן אֵל מִצָּן mizzan al zan, are translated all manner of store; but they properly signify, from species to species: might not the Chaldee word זִנִּין zunin, and the Greek word ζιζανία, zizania, come from the psalmist's זֶן zanzan, which might have signified a mixture of grain of any kind, and be here used to point out the mixing bastard or degenerate wheat among good seed wheat! The Persic translator renders it تلخ دانہ telkh danch, bitter grain; but it seems to signify merely degenerate wheat. This interpretation throws much light on the scope and design of the whole passage. Christ seems to refer, first, to the origin of evil. God sowed good seed in his field; made man in his own image and likeness: but the enemy, the 28 He said unto them, * An enemy hath done this. The servants said unto him, * Wilt thou then that we go and gather them up?

29 But he said, Nay; lest while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them.

30 Let both grow together until the harvest; and in the time of harvest I will say to devil, (ver. 39,) corrupted this good seed, and caused it to degenerate. Secondly, he seems to refer to the state of the Jewish people: God had sowed them, at first, wholly a right seed, but now they were become utterly degenerate, and about to be plucked up and destroyed by the Roman armies, which were the angels or messengers of God's justice, whom he had commissioned to sweep these rebellious people from the face of the land. Thirdly, he seems to refer also to the state in which the world shall be found, when he comes to judge it. The righteous and the wicked shall be permitted to grow together, till God comes to make a full and final separation.

* Esth. vii. 6.—* Luke ix. 51; 1 Pet. i. 24.

Verse 26. When the blade was sprung up—then appeared the tares also.] Satan has a shoot of iniquity for every shoot of grace; and, when God revives his work, Satan revives his also. No marvel, therefore, if we find scandals arising suddenly to discredit a work of grace, where God has begun to pour out his Spirit.

Verse 27. So the servants—said unto him, Sir, didst not thou sow?] A faithful and vigilant minister of Christ fails not to discover the evil, to lament it, and to address himself to God by prayer, in order to find out the cause of it, and to receive from him proper information how to behave on the occasion.

Verse 28. An enemy hath done this.] It is the interest of Satan to introduce hypocrites and wicked persons into religious societies, in order to discredit the work of God, and to favour his own designs.

Wilt thou then that we go and gather them up?] A zeal which is rash and precipitate is as much to be feared as the total lack of strict discipline.

Verse 29. But he said, Nay.] God judges quite otherwise than men of this mixture of good and evil in the world; he knows the good which he intends to produce from it, and how far his patience towards the wicked should extend, in order to their conversion, or the farther sanctification of the righteous. Men often persecute a true Christian, while they intend only to prosecute an inopious person. “A zeal for the extirpation of heretics and wicked men,” said a pious Papist, “not regulated by these words of our blessed Saviour, allows no time for the one to grow strong in goodness, or to the other to forsake their evil courses. They are of a spirit very opposite to his, who care not if they root up the wheat, provided they can but gather up the tares.” The zeal which leads persons to persecute others for religious opinions is not less a seed of the devil than a bad opinion itself is.

Verse 30. Let both grow together.] Though every minister of God should separate from the Church of

A. M. 4031. the reapers, Gather ye together first
A. D. 27. the tares, and bind them in bundles
An. Olymp. to burn them; but ^y gather the CCI. 3. wheat into my barn.

31 ¶ Another parable put he forth unto them, saying, ^z The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard seed, which a man took and sowed in his field:

32 Which indeed is the least of all seeds: but when it is grown, it is the greatest among herbs, and becometh a tree, so that the birds

^y Chap. iii. 12.—^z Isa. ii. 2, 3; Mic. iv. 1; Mark iv. 30; Luke xiii. 18, 19.—^a Luke xiii. 20.—^b The word in the Greek is a

Christ every incorrigible sinner, yet he should proceed no farther: the man is not to be persecuted in his body or goods, because he is not sound in the faith—God tolerates him; so should men. False doctrines are against God—he alone is the judge and punisher of them—man has no right to interfere in this matter. They who burnt Vanini for atheism usurped the seat of judgment, and thus proved themselves to be not less a diabolical seed than the person they thus, without God's leave, hurried into eternity. MARY, Queen of England, of execrable memory, and the inquisitorial tormentors she employed, were all of this diabolical sowing. See more on this parable at ver. 37, &c.

Verse 31. The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard seed] This parable is a representation of the progress of the Gospel in the world; and of the growth of grace in the soul. That grace which leads the soul to the fulness of glory may begin, and often does, in a single good desire—a wish to escape hell, or a desire to enjoy God in heaven.

Verse 32. Which indeed is the least of all seeds] That is, of all those seeds which produce plants, whose stems and branches, according to the saying of the botanists, are apt ἀειριζειν, arboriseere, to grow into a ligneous or woody substance.

Becometh a tree] That is, it is not only the largest of plants which are produced from such small seeds, but partakes, in its substance, the close woody texture, especially in warm climates, where we are informed it grows to an almost incredible size. The Jerusalem Talmud, tract Peah. fol. 20, says, "There was a stalk of mustard in Sichin, from which sprang out three bouglis; one of which, being broken off, served to cover the tent of a potter, and produced three cabes of mustard seed. Rabbi Simeon ben Chalapha said, A stalk of mustard seed was in my field, into which I was wont to climb, as men are wont to climb into a fig tree." See Lightfoot and Schoettgen. This may appear to be extravagant; and it is probable that, in the case of the three cabes of seed, there is considerable exaggeration; but, if it had not been usual for this plant to grow to a very large size, such relations as these would not have appeared even in the Talmud; and the parable of our Lord sufficiently attests the fact. Some soils being more luxuriant than others, and the climate much warmer, raise the of the air come and lodge in the branches thereof.

33 ¶ ^a Another parable spake he unto them: The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took, and hid in three ^b measures of meal, till the whole was leavened.

34 ^c All these things spake Jesus unto the multitude in parables; and without a parable spake he not unto them:

35 That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, saying, ^d I will open my measure containing about a peck and a half, wanting a little more than a pint.—^c Mark iv. 33, 34.—^d Psa. lxxviii. 2.

same plant to a size and perfection far beyond what a poorer soil, or a colder climate, can possibly do. Herodotus says, he has seen wheat and barley in the country about Babylon which carried a blade full four fingers-breadth; and that the millet and sesamum grew to an incredible size. I have myself seen a field of common cabbages, in one of the Norman isles, each of which was from seven to nine feet in height; and one in the garden of a friend, which grew beside an apple-tree, though the latitude of the place is only about 48 deg. 13 min. north, was fifteen feet high, the stem of which is yet remaining, (September, 1798.) These facts, and several others which might be added, confirm fully the possibility of what our Lord says of the mustard-tree, however incredible such things may appear to those who are acquainted only with the productions of northern regions and cold climates.

Verse 33. The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven] On the nature and effects of leaven, see the note on Exod. xii. 8. As the property of leaven is to change, or assimilate to its own nature, the meal or dough with which it is mixed, so the property of the grace of Christ is to change the whole soul into its own likeness; and God intends that this principle should continue in the soul till all is leavened—till the whole bear the image of the heavenly, as it before bore the image of the earthly. Both these parables are prophetic, and were intended to show, principally, how, from very small beginnings, the Gospel of Christ should pervade all the nations of the world, and fill them with righteousness and true holiness.

Verse 34. All these things spake Jesus—in parables] Christ descends from Divine mysteries to parables, in order to excite us to raise our minds, from and through natural things, to the great God, and the operations of his grace and Spirit. Divine things cannot be taught to man but through the medium of earthly things. If God should speak to us in that language which is peculiar to heaven, clothing those ideas which angelic minds form, how little should we comprehend of the things thus described! How great is our privilege in being thus taught! Heavenly things, in the parables of Christ, assume to themselves a body, and thus render themselves palpable.

Verse 35. By the prophet] As the quotation is taken from Psa. lxxviii. 2, which is attributed to

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.
mouth in parables; ^c I will utter things which have been kept secret from the foundation of the world.

36 ¶ Then Jesus sent the multitude away, and went into the house: and his disciples came unto him, saying, Declare unto us the parable of the tares of the field.

37 He answered and said unto them, He that soweth the good seed is the Son of man;

38 ^f The field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom; but the tares are ^g the children of the wicked one;

^e Rom. xvi. 25, 26; 1 Cor. ii. 7; Eph. iii. 9; Col. i. 26.
^f Chap. xxiv. 14, xxviii. 19; Mark xvi. 15, 20; Luke xxiv. 47; Rom. x. 19; Col. i. 6.

Asaph, he must be the prophet who is meant in the text; and, indeed, he is expressly called a prophet, 1 Chron. xxv. 2. Several MSS. have Isaiah; but this is a manifest error. Jerome supposes that Asaph was first in the text, and that some ignorant transcriber, not knowing who this Asaph was, inserted the word Isaiah; and thus, by attempting to remove an imaginary error, made a real one.

Verse 36. Jesus—went into the house: and his disciples came] Circumstances of this kind should not pass unnoticed: they are instructive and important. Those who attend only to the public preaching of the Gospel of God are not likely to understand fully the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven. To understand clearly the purport of the Divine message, a man must come to God by frequent, fervent, secret prayer. It is thus that the word of God sinks into the heart, is watered, and brings forth much fruit.

Declare (ῥασαύω, explain) unto us the parable of the tares of the field.] To what has already been spoken on this parable, the following general exposition may be deemed a necessary appendage:—

I. What is the cause of EVIL in the world?

1. We must allow that God, who is infinite in holiness, purity, and goodness, could not have done it. Nothing can produce what is not in itself. This is a maxim which every man subscribes to: God then could not have produced sin, forasmuch as his nature is infinite goodness and holiness. He made man at first in his own image, a transcript of his own purity: and, since sin entered into the world, He has done every thing consistent with his own perfections, and the freedom of the human mind, to drive it out, and to make and keep man holy.

2. After a thousand volumes are written on the origin of evil, we shall just know as much of it as Christ has told us here—An enemy hath done it, and this enemy is the devil, verse 39.

1. This enemy is represented as a deceitful enemy: a friend in appearance, soliciting to sin, by pleasure, honour, riches, &c.

2. A vigilant enemy. While men sleep he watches. verse 25.

3. A hidden or secret enemy. After having sown his seed, he disappears, ver. 25. Did he appear as 39 The enemy that sowed them ^{A. M. 4031.}

is the devil; ^{A. D. 27.} the harvest is the ^{An. Olymp.} end of the world; and the reapers ^{CCL. 3.} are the angels.

40 As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire; so shall it be in the end of this world.

41 The Son of man shall send forth his angels, ⁱ and they shall gather out of his kingdom all ^k things that offend, and them which do iniquity;

42 ^l And shall cast them into a furnace of ^e Gen. iii. 13; John viii. 44; Acts xiii. 10; 1 John iii. 8.

^f Joel iii. 13; Rev. xiv. 15.—^g Chap. xxi. 7; 2 Pet. ii. 1, 2.
^h Or, scandals.—ⁱ Chap. iii. 12; Rev. xix. 20; xx. 10.

himself, few would receive solicitations to sin; but he is seldom discovered in evil thoughts, unholy desires, flattering discourses, bad books, &c.

II. Why was evil permitted to enter into the world?

1. There are doubtless sufficient reasons in the Divine Mind for its permission; which, connected with his infinite essence, and extending to eternity, are not only unfathomable by us, but also, from their nature, incommunicable to men.

2. But it may be justly said, that hereby many attributes of the Divine Nature become manifest, which otherwise could not have been known; such as mercy, compassion, long-suffering, &c. All of which endear the Deity to men, and perfect the felicity of those who are saved.

III. But why does he suffer this mixture of the good and bad seed now?

1. Because of the necessary dependence of one part of the creation on the other. Were the wicked all rooted up, society must fail—the earth be nearly desolated—noxious things greatly multiplied—and the small remnant of the godly, not being able to stand against the onsets of wild beasts, &c., must soon be extirpated; and then adieu to the economy of grace!

2. Did not the wicked exist, there would be no room for the exercise of many of the graces of the Spirit, on which our spiritual perfection greatly depends.

3. Nor could the grace of God be so manifest in supporting and saving the righteous; and consequently could not have that honour which now it justly claims.

4. Were not this evil tolerated, how could the wicked be converted! The bastard wheat, by being transplanted to a better soil, may become good wheat; so sinners may be engrafted in Christ, and become sons of God through faith in his name; for the long-suffering of God leads multitudes to repentance.

IV. Observe the end of the present state of things:

1. The wicked shall be punished, and the righteous rewarded.

The wicked are termed bastard-wheat—the children of the wicked one, verse 38, the very seed of the serpent.

A. M. 4031. fire : ^m there shall be wailing and
A. D. 27. gnashing of teeth.
An. Olymp. CCL. 3.

43 ⁿ Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. ^o Who hath ears to hear let him hear.

44 ¶ Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto treasure hid in a field; the which, when ⁿ Chap. viii. 12; ver. 50. — ^a Dan. xii. 3; Wisd. iii. 7; 1 Cor. xv. 42, 43, 58. — ^o Ver. 9.

Observe the place in which the wicked shall be punished,—a FURNACE. The instrument of this punishment, FIRE. This is an allusion to the punishment inflicted only on those supposed to be the very worst of criminals. See Dan. iii. 6. They were cast into a burning fiery furnace. The effect of it, DESPAIR; weeping, wailing, and gnashing of teeth, ver. 42.

2. Observe the character and state of the righteous :

1. They are the children of the kingdom, a seed of God's sowing, ver. 38.

2. As to their persons, they shall be like the sun.

3. The place of their felicity shall be the kingdom of heaven: and,

4. The object of it, God in the relation of FATHER, ver. 43. This is a reference to Dan. xii. 2, 3.

Some learned men are of opinion that the whole of this parable refers to the Jewish state and people; and that the words αἰτέλεια τοῦ αἰῶνος, which are commonly translated the end of the world, should be rendered the end of the age, viz. the end of the Jewish polity. That the words have this meaning in other places there can be no doubt; and this may be their primary meaning here; but there are other matters in the parable which agree far better with the consummation of all things than with the end of the Jewish dispensation and polity. See on Mark iv. 29.

Verse 44. The kingdom of heaven is like unto treasure hid in a field] θησαυρὸς κεκρυμμένω, to a hidden treasure. We are not to imagine that the treasure here mentioned, and to which the Gospel salvation is likened, means a pot or chest of money hidden in the field, but rather a gold or silver mine, which he who found out could not get at, or work, without turning up the field, and for this purpose he bought it. Mr. Wakefield's observation is very just: "There is no sense in the purchase of a field for a pot of money, which he might have carried away with him very readily, and as honestly, too, as by overreaching the owner by an unjust purchase."

He hideth—i. e. he kept secret, told the discovery to no person, till he had bought the field. From this view of the subject, the translation of this verse, given above, will appear proper—a hidden treasure, when applied to a rich mine, is more proper than a treasure hid, which applies better to a pot of money deposited there, which I suppose was our translators' opinion;—and kept secret, or concealed, will apply better to the subject of his discovery till he made the purchase, than hideth, for which there could be no occasion, when the pot was already hidden, and the place known only to himself.

Our Lord's meaning seems to be this. —

A. M. 4031. a man hath found, he hideth, and for
A. D. 27. joy thereof goeth and ^p selleth all
An. Olymp. CCL. 3. that he hath, and ^q buyeth that field.

45 ¶ Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchant man, seeking goodly pearls :

46 Who, when he had found ^r one pearl of ^p Phil. iii. 7, 8. — ^q Isa. lv. 1; Rev. iii. 18. — ^r Prov. ii. 4; iii. 14, 15; viii. 10, 19.

The kingdom of heaven—the salvation provided by the Gospel—is like a treasure—something of inestimable worth—hidden in a field; it is a rich mine, the veins of which run in all directions in the sacred Scriptures; therefore, the field must be dug up, the records of salvation diligently and carefully turned over, and searched. Which, when a man hath found—when a sinner is convinced that the promise of life eternal is to him, he kept secret—pondered the matter deeply in his heart; he examines the preciousness of the treasure, and counts the cost of purchase; for joy thereof—finding that this salvation is just what his needy soul requires, and what will make him presently and eternally happy, went and sold all that he had—renounces his sins, abandons his evil companions, and relinquishes all hope of salvation through his own righteousness; and purchased that field—not merely bought the book for the sake of the salvation it described, but, by the blood of the covenant, buys gold tried in the fire, white raiment, &c.; in a word, pardon and purity, which he receives from God for the sake of Jesus. We should consider the salvation of God, 1. As our only treasure, and value it above all the riches in the world. 2. Search for it in the Scriptures, till we fully understand its worth and excellence. 3. Deeply ponder it in the secret of our souls. 4. Part with all we have in order to get it. 5. Place our whole joy and felicity in it; and 6. Be always convinced that it must be bought, and that no price is accepted for it but the blood of the covenant; the sufferings and death of our only Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

Verse 45. A merchant man, seeking goodly pearls] A story very like this is found in the Talmudical tract Shabbath: "Joseph, who sanctified the Sabbath, had a very rich neighbour; the Chaldeans said, All the riches of this man shall come to Joseph, who sanctifies the Sabbath. To prevent this, the rich man went and sold all that he had, and bought a pearl, and went aboard of a ship; but the wind carried the pearl away, it fell into the sea, and was swallowed by a fish. This fish was caught, and the day before the Sabbath it was brought into the market, and they proclaimed, Who wishes to buy this fish? The people said, Carry it to Joseph, the sanctifier of the Sabbath, who is accustomed to buy things of great value. They carried it to him, and he bought it, and when he cut it up he found the pearl, and sold it for thirteen pounds' weight of golden denarii!" From some tradition of this kind, our Lord might have borrowed the simile in this parable.

The meaning of this parable is the same with the

A. M. 4031.

A. D. 27.

An. Olymp.

CCL. 3.

great price, went and sold all that he had, and bought it.

47 ¶ Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a net, that was cast into the sea, and ^a gathered of every kind ;

48 Which, when it was full, they drew to shore, and sat down, and gathered the good into vessels, but cast the bad away.

49 So shall it be at the end of the world : the angels shall come forth, and ^a sever the wicked from among the just,

50 ^a And shall cast them into the furnace of other, and both were spoken to impress more forcibly this great truth on the souls of the people :—eternal salvation from sin and its consequences is the supreme good of man, should be sought after above all things, and prized beyond all that God has made. Those merchants who compass sea and land for temporal gain, condemn the slothfulness of the majority of those called Christians, who, though they confess that this salvation is the most certain and the most excellent of all treasures, yet seek worldly possessions in preference to it ! Alas, for him who expects to find any thing more amiable than God, more worthy to fill his heart, and more capable of making him happy !

^a Chap. xxii. 10.—¹ Chap. xxv. 32.

Verse 17. Is like unto a net] A drag-net. This is the proper meaning of Σαγηνή, which the Latins translate verriculum, a sweep net ; Quod in aquam jacitur ad pisces comprehendendos ; imprimis, cujus usus est extrahendis iis à fundo. MARTINIUS. “ Which is cast into the water to catch fish, and the particular use of which is to drag them up from the bottom.” As this is dragged along it keeps gathering all in its way, both good and bad, small and great ; and, when it is brought to the shore, those which are proper for use are preserved, and those which are not are either destroyed or thrown back into the water.

By the net may be understood the preaching of the Gospel of the kingdom, which keeps drawing men into the profession of Christianity, and into the fellowship of the visible Church of Christ. By the sea may be represented that abyss of sin, error, ignorance, and wickedness in which men live, and out of which they are drawn, by the truth and Spirit of God, who cordially close in with the offers of salvation made to them in the preaching of the Gospel.

By drawing to shore, may be represented the consummation of all things, see ver. 49, when a proper distinction shall be made between those who served God, and those who served him not : for many shall doubtless be found who shall bear the name without the nature of Christ. By picking out the good, and throwing away the bad, ver. 48, is meant that separation which God shall make between false and true professors, casting the former into hell, and bringing the latter to heaven.

Instead of τα καλα, the good, the Cod. Bezae, and five copies of the old Antehieronymian, or Itala version, read τα καλλιστα, the best, the very best. Every fire : there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth.

51 Jesus saith unto them, Have ye understood all these things ? They say unto him, Yea, Lord.

52 Then said he unto them, Therefore every scribe which is instructed unto the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is a householder, which bringeth forth out of his treasure ^a things new and old.

53 ¶ And it came to pass, that when Jesus had finished these parables, he departed thence, reader would naturally hope that this is not the tr reading, or that it is not to be understood literally, as it seems to intimate that only the very best shall be at last saved.

^a Ver. 12.—^v Cant. vii. 13.

It is probable that this parable also refers, in its primary meaning, to the Jewish state, and that, when Christ should come to judge and destroy them by the Roman power, the genuine followers of Christ only should escape, and the rest be overwhelmed by the general destruction. See chap. xxiv. ver. 30, &c.

Verse 50. Into the furnace of fire] See the note on chap. viii. ver. 12.

Verse 51. Have ye understood all these things ?] Divine truths must not be lightly passed over.—Our Lord's question here shows them to be matters of the utmost weight and importance ; and that they should be considered again and again, till they be thoroughly understood.

Verse 52. Every scribe] Minister of Christ ; who is instructed—taught of God ; in the kingdom of heaven—in the mysteries of the Gospel of Christ ; out of his treasury—his granary or store-house ; things new and old—a Jewish phrase for great plenty. A small degree of knowledge is not sufficient for a preacher of the Gospel. The sacred writings should be his treasure, and he should properly understand them. His knowledge does not consist in being furnished with a great variety of human learning, (though of this he should acquire as much as he can ;) but his knowledge consists in being well instructed in the things concerning the kingdom of heaven, and the art of conducting men thither. Again, it is not enough for a man to have these advantages in possession : he must bring them forth, and distribute them abroad. A good pastor will not, like a miser, keep these things to himself to please his fancy ; nor, like a merchant traffic with them, to enrich himself ; but, like a bountiful father or householder, distribute them with a liberal though judicious hand, for the comfort and support of the whole heavenly family.

A preacher whose mind is well stored with Divine truths, and who has a sound judgment, will suit his discourses to the circumstances and states of his hearers. He who preaches the same sermon to every congregation, gives the fullest proof that, however well he may speak, he is not a scribe who is instructed in the kingdom of heaven. Some have thought that

A. M. 4031. 54 ^w And when he was come
A. D. 27. into his own country, he taught
An. Olymp. them in their synagogues, inso-
CCI. 3. much that they were astonished, and said, Whence hath this man this wisdom, and these mighty works?

55 ^x Is not this the carpenter's son? is not his mother called Mary? and ^y his brethren, ^z James, and Joses, and Simon, and Judas?

^w Chap. ii. 23; Mark vi. 1; Luke iv. 16, 23.—^x Isa. xlix. 7;
Mark vi. 3; Luke iii. 23; John vi. 42.

old and new things here, which imply the produce of the past and the produce of the present year, may also refer to the old and new covenants—a proper knowledge of the Old Testament Scriptures, and of the doctrines of Christ as contained in the New. No man can properly understand the Old Testament but through the medium of the New, nor can the New be so forcibly or successfully applied to the conscience of a sinner as through the medium of the Old. The law is still a schoolmaster to lead men to Christ—by it is the knowledge of sin, and, without it, there can be no conviction—where it ends, the Gospel begins, as by the Gospel alone is salvation from sin. See the whole of the comment on the Pentateuch.

Verse 54. And when he was come into his own country] Probably Nazareth, where his parents lived, and where he had continued till his thirtieth year, though it appears he had a lodging in Peter's house at Capernaum.

They were astonished] It appears, hence, that our blessed Lord had lived in obscurity all the time above specified; for his countrymen appear not to have heard his doctrines, nor seen his miracles, until now. It is a melancholy truth, that those who should know Christ best are often the most ignorant of himself, the doctrines of his word, and the operations of his Spirit.

Verse 55. Is not this the carpenter's son?] Seven copies of the old Itala have, Is not this the son of JOSEPH the carpenter? But it is likely our Lord, during the thirty years of his abode at Nazareth, wrought at the same trade with Joseph; and perhaps this is what is intended, Luke ii. 51. He went down with them (his parents) to Nazareth, and was sub-JECT unto them. An honest trade is no discredit to any man. He who spends his time in idleness is fit for any business in which the devil chooses to employ him.

Is not his mother—Mary, and his brethren. James, &c.] This insulting question seems to intimate that our Lord's family was a very obscure one; and that they were of small repute among their neighbours, except for their piety.

It is possible that brethren and sisters may mean here near relations, as the words are used among the Hebrews in this latitude of meaning; but I confess it does not appear to me likely. Why should the children of another family be brought in here to share a reproach which it is evident was designed for Joseph the carpenter, Mary his wife, Jesus their son, and their other children? Prejudice apart, would not any 56 And his sisters, are they not all with us? Whence then hath this man all these things?

57 And they ^a were offended in him. But Jesus said unto them, ^b A prophet is not without honour, save in his own country, and in his own house.

58 And ^c he did not many mighty works there, because of their unbelief.

^y Chap. xii. 46. —^z Mark xv. 40. —^a Chap. xi. 6; Mark vi. 3, 4.
^b Luke iv. 24; John iv. 44. —^c Mark vi. 5, 6.

person of plain common sense suppose, from this account, that these were the children of Joseph and Mary, and the brothers and sisters of our Lord, according to the flesh? It seems odd that this should be doubted; but, through an unaccountable prejudice, Papists and Protestants are determined to maintain as a doctrine, that on which the Scriptures are totally silent, viz. the perpetual virginity of the mother of our Lord. See chap. i. ver. 25.

Verse 57. And they were offended in him.] They took offence at him, εκαρδάλισαντο εν αυτω, making the meanness of his family the reason why they would not receive him as a prophet, though they were astonished at his wisdom, and at his miracles, ver. 54.—So their pride and their envy were the causes of their destruction.

A prophet is not without honour] This seems to have been a proverbial mode of speech, generally true, but not without some exceptions. The apparent meanness of our Lord was one pretence why they rejected him; and yet, God manifested in the flesh, humbling himself to the condition of a servant, and to the death of the cross, is the only foundation for the salvation of a lost world. Perhaps our Lord means, by prophet in this place, himself alone, as if he had said, My ministry is more generally reputed, and my doctrine better received, in any other part of the land than in my own country, among my own relatives: because, knowing the obscurity of my birth, they can scarcely suppose that I have these things from heaven.

Verse 58. And he did not many mighty works there because of their unbelief.] Δυναμεις, miracles. So the word is used, chap. vii. 22; xi. 20; Acts xix. 11; 1 Cor. xii. 28; Gal. iii. 5; Heb. ii. 4. The Septuagint translates נפלאות אל niphleoth el, the miraculous works of God, by δυναμεις κυρις.

Unbelief and contempt drive Christ out of the heart, as they did out of his own country. Faith seems to put the almighty power of God into the hands of men; whereas unbelief appears to tie up even the hands of the Almighty. A man, generally speaking, can do but little good among his relatives, because it is difficult for them to look with the eyes of faith upon one whom they have been accustomed to behold with the eyes of the flesh.—QUESNEL.

A DISSERTATION ON THE NATURE AND USE OF PARABOLICAL WRITING.

As parables occupy so distinguished a place in the Old and New Testaments, especialy in the latter, and as the most important information relative to the nature of God, the economy of heaven, the state of separate spirits, the punishment of the wicked, the beatification of the godly, and the doctrines of salvation, is conveyed to mankind in parables, it becomes a matter of the utmost importance fully to understand their nature and their use.

The word parable we have from the Greek Παραβολή, which comes either from παρα, near, and βάλλω, I cast or put, or παραβάλλειν to compare, properly, different things together, so as to discover their relations and similarity; in order to which, the things to be compared are placed or put together, or near to each other, that, by a close inspection of both, the relations and likenesses may be the more accurately ascertained.

Parable and proverb are called in Hebrew משל meshal, from משל meshal, to govern or rule, either because the parabolic and proverbial mode of instruction was of general use, and had a sort of universal precedence, which we know was the case among the Hebrews; or because a parable or proverb was the chief or principal illustrative point in the discourse. Hence we may discover the proper meaning of a proverb—it is a word or saying, forming a maxim for the government and regulation of a man's conduct in domestic, civil, religious, or political life.

Parable has been generally defined, "A comparison or similitude, in which one thing is compared with another; especially spiritual things with natural, by which means these spiritual things are better understood, and make a deeper impression on the attentive mind." This definition is pretty correct, especially in reference to the parables of our blessed Lord. Or parable may be more generally defined, "A representation of any matter accommodated in the way of similitude to the real subject, in order to delineate its different parts with the greater force and perspicuity." This definition is applicable to parables in their more general and extended sense.

The method of conveying instruction by parables or moral fictions, sometimes in the form of similitudes, allegories, fables, or apologues, was very common, and in high esteem, among all ancient nations: but the Asiatics used it most frequently, and brought it to a higher degree of perfection than any other people on the earth. The despotic and tyrannical nature of their government led them often to make use of this method. Reproof and censure, which it might not on many occasions be expedient or safe to deliver in explicit language, and which might exasperate, when too plainly spoken, rather than correct, could be conveyed with delicacy and success under the disguise of parable. Even to the present time, information concerning grievances, oppressive acts of government, &c., is conveyed to the despotic Asiatic rulers under the guise of parable. An ancient instance of this we find in the reproof conveyed to the heart of David, by the Prophet Nathan, in the parable of the poor man's ewe lamb.

Persons thus addressed, not perceiving at first the relation, under this artificial form, to be directed against themselves, lost sight of their selfishness and prejudices, and were frequently induced, by their unsuspecting replies, to acknowledge the justice of the re-prehension, and to pronounce the condemnation of their conduct, from their own mouth; as in the case of David above referred to. This, therefore, was one important use of this mode of instruction.

Though fable, similitude, and parable are nearly of the same nature, and have been indifferently applied to the same purposes, yet it may not be amiss to examine the meaning of each distinctly.

SIMILITUDE implies a proper resemblance between two subjects, the one well known, the other not at all, or less known; the leading properties of the one serving clearly to illustrate those of the other. Five rules have been given by the ancients, for the regulation of similitudes.

1. The first is, that the similitude must be clearer than the subject it is brought to illustrate.

2. That it be not in general derived from common or well known things, which are in themselves uninteresting; as it is well known, the more novelty a thing possesses, the more it is calculated to excite the attention and impress the mind.

3. It should not be false in itself, as in this case the mind revolts not only against the thing itself, but against the conclusion drawn from it. On this rule I shall take the liberty of making the following observations: Several of the ancients illustrated and endeavoured to prove the truth and certainty of the resurrection, by the history of the phoenix, a bird supposed to be produced in Arabia once in one hundred years, there never being more than one at a time. It is reported that, when this bird finds its end approaching, it builds itself a nest of the most fragrant spices and aromatic plants, which, being set on fire by the rays of the sun, the bird is consumed in it; but from its ashes a worm or grub is formed, out of which another phoenix, in process of time, arises; others say that it dies in the nest, and a grub is formed out of the marrow of its bones. Both these relations are equally true. Herodotus, Dion Cassius, Tacitus, and Pliny, mention this fabulous animal; and I have met with this account seriously produced by Clemens Alexandrinus, and other Christian fathers, to prove the resurrection of the body. Now, it is well known no such bird ever did, or ever could, exist; that the supposed fact is impossible; and that the conclusion drawn from it is not only not solid and convincing, but absurd, because the premises are all false. The same objections would lie against a similitude which is dubious in its nature; because if it be brought to enforce conviction, and impress truth, this is impossible, as the conclusion must rest on the premises. If, then, the premises be dubious, the conclusion will be uncertain; and, consequently, the hesitancy of the mind must necessarily continue.

In like manner, the similitude must be useless if it be absurd; for as soon as the mind perceives this, it becomes armed both against the similitude and the subject it was intended to illustrate or prove.

4. A fourth rule of similitude is, that the mind should gain real information and useful knowledge from it. Let the similitude be ever so true, clear, and correct; yet, if it convey no more information than was before known, it is useless, and the time is lost which was employed in proposing it.

5. It should be calculated to make deep impressions on the mind, by leaving such images on the imagination as may become, in all cases to which they apply, motives of conduct. As many preachers and public speakers delight in the use of similitudes, I thought it necessary to make these observations on the subject, that we might be preserved from copying bad examples, or that, if we followed the custom at all, we might make it truly useful, by subjecting it to its proper rules.

FABLE is very nearly allied to similitude and parable, and has been applied exactly in the same way, to convey lessons of moral instruction by pleasing images and interesting dialogue.

But fable, in its nature, differs widely from the others. Every subject of inanimate creation may be employed by similitude and parable; but the grand subjects in fable are borrowed from the animate and rational creation only. Of this sort are the Hecetopades commonly called the fables of Pilpay, written originally in Sanscrit, the oldest fables, probably, in the world; and the fables of Lockman, the Arabian Æsop. In all these, human actions, speech, and intelligence, are transferred to brute and irrational animals.

Though the former methods have been long, often, and successfully used to convey miscellaneous instruction, yet the parabolic method has been chiefly employed to illustrate Divine subjects, and to convey instruction to the heart on those matters which concern the salvation of the soul.

The most important truths are by our Lord conveyed both to the disciples and to the multitude in parables; not that they might not be discovered, but that they might be sought earnestly after. In this, our Lord, who was well acquainted with all the springs and secret movements of human nature, consulted a well-known propensity of the mind, which leads a person always to esteem that most which is, or appears to be, a discovery of his own. Christ speaks a parable, and in it gives a clue by which we may discover the will of God. He that loves his soul's prosperity, takes up the thread, and, guided by it through all the labyrinth of error, he safely arrives at the fountain of truth. We must not, however, suppose that the word parable always conveys the same meaning: I have taken some pains on this subject, and, if I mistake not, I find the word has the ten following significations in Scripture:—

1. It means a simple comparison (as I have already noted when defining the Greek word.) Which comparison is intended to show the relation between two dissimilar things; or, how one fact or circumstance may be fitly introduced to illustrate and explain another. Such is that comparison of our Lord, between the state of the Jewish nation, and that of the world in the days of Noah, mentioned Matt. xxiv. 32–38.

2. It signifies an obscure similitude, such as that mentioned Matt. xv. 13–15, where the whole system of Pharisaism, with all its secular and spiritual influence, is represented under the notion of a plantation not planted by God, and which was shortly to be rooted up.

3. A simple allegory, where one thing is represented by another, the leading circumstances and principal design of that one being produced to illustrate and explain the design and leading circumstances of the other. Such is our Lord's parable concerning those invited to a marriage supper—of the sower—tares and wheat—grain of mustard seed—leaven—hidden treasure—precious pearl—drag-net, &c., contained in the preceding chapter, Matt. xiii.

4. A maxim, or wise sentence, to direct and govern a man in civil or religious life. In this sense we have already seen the Hebrew word מִשָּׁל mashal employed. In 1 Kings iv. 32, we are informed that Solomon spoke three thousand of this kind of parables or proverbs; and in this sense the original word is frequently used.

5. It means a by-word, or proverb of reproach: such God threatened to make the disobedient Jewish people. See 2 Chron. vii. 20: I will pluck them up by the roots out of my land—and this house I will cast out of my sight, and will make it a proverb and a by-word among all nations, where the original word for proverb is מִשָּׁל mashal. Such we may conceive the following to be: As rebellious as Corah—as covetous as Judas—as wicked as the Jews—as bad as the devil. In all which parables or proverbs, respect should be paid to the similitude between the object of comparison, and the thing with which it is compared. In this sense it is used Psalm xlv. 14; xix. 11; Jer. xxiv. 9.

6. As parables, proverbs, and useful maxims for the regulation of life, and instruction in righteousness, had, before the Babylonish captivity, lost all their power and influence among the wicked Jews, so they were generally disregarded, and those who made use of them became objects of reproach and contempt; hence, parable, at that time at least, was used to signify a frivolous, uninteresting discourse. In this sense alone, I suppose the word to be used, Ezek. xx. 49, “Then I said, Ah, Lord God! They say of me, Doth he not speak parables?” i. e. He delivers frivolous discourses, of no weight or importance.

7. It seems a simple proverb or adage, where neither comparison nor similitude was intended: such as that mentioned by our Lord, Luke iv. 23, “And he said, Ye will surely say unto me this proverb, ἰατρὴν ἑαυτοῦ ἰάσθαι, this parable, Physician, heal thyself.” In this, neither comparison nor likeness is intended. The same kind of a proverb is found Luke vi. 39, “Can the blind lead the blind,” &c.

8. It means a type, illustration, or representation. See Heb. ix. 9, where the first tabernacle is said to have been a figure, παρομοίωσις, a parable, for the time then present; i. e. a thing which, from the peculiar use to which it was appropriated, shadowed forth or represented the human body of our Lord, and the Christian Church which he should establish.

9. It means a daring exploit, an unusual and severe trial, or a case of imminent danger and jeopardy. In these senses it is used by some of the best and most correct Greek writers, such as Polybius and Xenophon; and by the best Greek lexicographers, such as Heyschius and Suidas; with whom παρὰ λόγον signifies a daring, bold, rash person; and παρὰ τὸν νόμον, things extremely dangerous. In this sense the verb is evidently used 2 Mac. xiv. 38, where it is said, that Razis, one of the Jewish elders, did “boldly jeopard (παρὰ τὸν νόμον) his body and life, with all vehemency, for the eligion of the Jews." I know no place in the sacred writings in which it has this sense, unless it be in Heb. i. 19, where, speaking of the intended sacrifice of Isaac, and his rescue, Abraham is said to have rescued him from the most imminent death, ἐκ χειρὸς θανάτου, which we translate, in a figure. Now, if we may suppose that the death here referred to, is not that metaphorical death implied in the deadness of Sarah's womb, and the superannuation of Abraham, but the imminent death to which he was exposed when Abraham drew his knife to slay his son, Gen. xxii. 10, and was only prevented by the sudden and miraculous interposition of God; then it is probable that the word here has the above meaning, which, I must own, I think likely: if so, the text may be read thus: "By faith Abraham, when he was tried, offered up Isaac: of whom it was said, In Isaac shall thy seed be called; accounting that God was able to raise him up even from the dead, from whence he received him, ἐκ παρὰ θανάτου, he being in the most imminent danger of losing his life."

10. It signifies a very ancient and obscure prophecy, Psalm xlix. 4, I will incline mine ear to a parable: I will open my dark saying upon the harp. Likewise in Psalm lxxviii, I will open my mouth in a parable: I will utter dark sayings of old. Probably this kind of dark, ancient, enigmatical prophecy, is what is spoken of Prov. i. 6, To understand a proverb (or parable) and the interpretation; the words of the wise and their dark sayings. Now, a proverb, in the common acceptation of that word, is neither dark, nor requires any particular interpretation; it being a plain maxim, easily to be understood by the mass of the people, for whose instruction it is chiefly designed. But parable, in this sense, evidently refers to the ancient prophecies which were delivered concerning Christ and the nature of his kingdom. And to this very subject the words are applied, and quoted by the Evangelist Matthew in the preceding chapter. (xiii. 35.)

Having traced the word parable through its different meanings in the sacred writings, it may be now necessary to inquire for what purpose our blessed Lord used that mode of speech so frequently: as many have supposed from his own words, Matt. xiii. 11-13, that he addressed the people in parables merely that they might not understand. To you, said he, addressing his disciples, it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given: therefore I speak to them in parables. &c. Now, to do justice to this passage, we must observe, that by mysteries, here, we are to understand, not only things concerning the scheme of salvation which had not been as yet fully revealed, but also the prophetic declarations concerning the future state of the Christian Church, as they are signified by the different parables mentioned in the succeeding parts of the chapter. It was not given to them to know the purport and design of these things. "They," said our Lord, "are gross of heart: they are earthly and sensual, and do not improve the light they have received; so that, when many of them might have been preachers of this truth to others, they remain found destitute of salvation themselves, notwithstanding the means of it were all within their power: but," said he, "to you it is given:" because I have appointed you, not only to be the first preachers of the Gospel to sinners, but also the persons who shall transmit accounts of all these things to posterity. The knowledge of these mysteries, in the first instance, could be given only to a few, but when these faithfully wrote and published what they had heard and seen unto the world, then the science of salvation, being fully revealed, was addressed to all.

From verse 17 of the same chapter we learn, that many prophets and righteous men had desired to see and hear these things, but had not that privilege: to them it was not given: not because God designed to exclude them from salvation, but because He who knew all things knew either that they were not proper persons, or that that was not the proper time; for the choice of the persons by whom, and the choice of the time in which it is most proper to reveal Divine things, must ever rest with the all-wise God.

But it is not intimated that our Lord spoke to the Jews in parables that they might not understand. the very reverse, I think, is plainly intended. It was to lead them, by a familiar and appropriate mode of instruction, into the knowledge of God and the interests of their souls. I speak to them, said he, in parables, i. e. natural representations of spiritual truths, that they might be allured to inquire, and to find out the spirit which was hidden under the letter. Because, said he, seeing the miracles which I have wrought, they see not, i. e. the end for which I have wrought them; and hearing my doctrines, they hear not, so as to profit by what is spoken: neither do they understand, οὐκ ἐννοοῦν, they do not lay their hearts to it, so as to consider it with that deep attention which such momentous truths require. But that they might not continue in their ignorance, and die in their sins, he adds parable to parable, to make the whole science of salvation as plain and intelligible as possible. Is not this obviously our Lord's meaning? Who that is not most miserably warped and begloomed by some Jewish exclusive system of salvation, can suppose that the wise, the holy, the benevolent Christ, would employ his time in speaking enigmatically to the people, on purpose that they might not understand what was spoken? Could the God of truth and sincerity act thus? If he had designed that they should continue in darkness, he might have saved his time and labour, and not spoken at all, which would have as effectually answered the same purpose, viz. that of leaving them in destructive ignorance, as his speaking in such a way as should render his meaning incomprehensible.

On the whole I conclude, that the grand object of parabolical writing is not to conceal the truth, but to convey information to the hearts of the hearers in the most concise, appropriate, impressive, and effectual manner.

In preaching on parables and similitudes, great care should be taken to discover their object and design, and those grand and leading circumstances by which the author illustrates his subject. There are few, if any, parables, whose every circumstance was designed to apply to the subject in reference to which they were proposed. Maimonides, in his Morah Nevuchim, gives an excellent rule on this head: "Fix it as a principle," says he, "to attach yourself to the grand object of the parable, without attempting to make a particular application of all the circumstances and terms which it comprehends." This shows us that we should not attempt to find a spiritual meaning, or pointed reference, in all the parts of the parable, to the subject which it is intended to illustrate. And this maxim of Maimonides is the more to be regarded, because it comes from a person who was perfectly well acquainted with the subject, and who lived, if

I might so term it, in the very country of parables, and was best qualified to decide on their use in the Sacred Writings, and the proper mode of interpretation. By not attending to this rule, many have disgraced both themselves and the Scriptures. The most dignified subjects, in such hands, have been rendered contemptible by their injudicious modes of elucidation. See the notes at the beginning of this chapter.

CHAPTER XIV.

Herod, having heard the fame of Christ, supposes him to be John the Baptist, risen from the dead, 1, 2. A circumstantial account of the beheading of John the Baptist, 3-12. Five thousand men, besides women and children, fed with five loaves and two fishes, 13-21. The disciples take ship, and Jesus stays behind, and goes privately into a mountain to pray, 22, 23. A violent storm arises, by which the lives of the disciples are endangered, 24. In their extremity, Jesus appears to them, walking upon the water, 25-27. Peter, at the command of his Master, leaves the ship, and walks on the water to meet Christ, 28-31. They both enter the ship, and the storm ceases, 32, 33. They come into the land of Gennesaret; and he heals many diseased people, 34-36.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

AT that time ^aHerod the tetrarch heard of the fame of Jesus,
2 And said unto his servants, This is John the Baptist; he is risen from the dead; and therefore mighty works ^bdo show forth themselves in him.

^a Mark vi. 14; Luke ix. 7.—^b Or, are wrought by him.

NOTES ON CHAP. XIV.

Verse 1. Herod the tetrarch] This was Herod Antipas, the son of Herod the Great. See the notes on chap. ii. 1, where an account is given of the Herod family. The word tetrarch properly signifies a person who rules over the fourth part of a country; but it is taken in a more general sense by the Jewish writers, meaning sometimes a governor simply, or a king; see ver. 9. The estate of Herod the Great were not, at his death, divided into four tetrarchies, but, only into three: one was given by the Emperor Augustus to Archelaus; the second to Herod Antipas, the person in the text; and the third to Philip: all three, sons of Herod the Great.

Verse 2. This is John the Baptist] Οὐ ἐγὼ ἀπεκεφάλισα, Whom I beheaded. These words are added here by the Codex Bezae and several others, by the Saxon, and five copies of the Itala.—See the power of conscience! He is miserable because he is guilty; being continually under the dominion of self-accusation, reproach, and remorse. No need for the Baptist now: conscience performs the office of ten thousand accusers! But, to complete the misery, a guilty conscience offers no relief from God—points out no salvation from sin.

He is risen from the dead] From this we may observe: 1. That the resurrection of the dead was a common opinion among the Jews; and 2. That the materiality of the soul made no part of Herod's creed. Bad and profligate as he was, it was not deemed by him a thing impossible with God to raise the dead; and the spirit of the murdered Baptist had a permanent resurrection in his guilty conscience.

3 ¶ For Herod had laid hold on John, and bound him, and put him in prison, for Herodias' sake, his brother Philip's wife.

4 For John said unto him, ^dIt is not lawful for thee to have her.

^c Mark vi. 17; Luke iii. 19, 20.—^d Lev. xviii. 16; xx. 21.

Verse 3. For Herodias' sake] This infamous woman was the daughter of Aristobulus and Berenice, and grand-daughter of Herod the Great. Her first marriage was with Herod Philip, her uncle, by whom she had Salome: some time after, she left her husband, and lived publicly with Herod Antipas, her brother-in-law, who had been before married to the daughter of Aretas, king of Arabia Petrea. As soon as Aretas understood that Herod had determined to put away his daughter, he prepared to make war on him: the two armies met, and that of Herod was cut to pieces by the Arabians; and this, Josephus says, was supposed to be a judgment of God on him for the murder of John the Baptist. See the account in Josephus, Antiq. lib. xviii. c. 7.

Verse 4. For John said unto him, It is not lawful for thee to have her.] Here is an instance of zeal, fidelity, and courage, highly worthy of imitation. Plainness, mildness, and modesty, are qualifications necessary to be observed when we reprove the great. The best service a subject can render his prince is to lay before him, in the plainest but most respectful manner, what the law of God requires of him, and what it forbids. How unutterable must the punishment of those be who are chaplains to princes, or great men, and who either flatter them in their vices, or wink at their sins!

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.
5 And when he would have put him to death, he feared the multitude, * because they counted him as a prophet.

6 But when Herod's birth-day was kept, the daughter of Herodias danced before them, and pleased Herod.

7 Whereupon he promised with an oath to give her whatsoever she would ask.

8 And she, being before instructed of her mother, said, Give me here John Baptist's head in a charger.

* Chap. xxi. 26; Luke xx. 6.—† Gr. in the midst.

Verse 5. He feared the multitude] Miserable prince! who fears more to offend his people, than to sin against his God, by shedding innocent blood. When a man resists sin only by the help of human motives, he cannot long defend himself.

Verse 6. Herod's birth-day] Either the day in which he was born, or the day on which he began to reign; for both were termed birth-days. See 1 Sam. xiii. 1, and Hos. vii. 5. The kings of Persia were accustomed to reject no petition that was preferred to them during the entertainment. See Herodotus in Calliope, and Esther v. 3.

The daughter—danced] This was Salome, mentioned before. Danced: by a literal rendering of the saltavit of the Vulgate, in my old MS. of the English Bible, the whole of this business seems to be treated with sovereign contempt: for thus says the translator, Shee leped in the myddle.

Verse 8. Give me here John Baptist's head in a charger.] The word charger formerly signified a large dish, bowl, or drinking cup: the Saxon has dirce, a dish, Tindal, a platter; any thing is better than charger, which never conveyed much meaning, and now conveys none. The evangelist says she was instructed before, by her mother, to ask the Baptist's head! What a most infernal mother, to give such instructions to her child! and what a promising daughter to receive them! What a present for a young lady!—the bloody head of the murdered forerunner of Jesus! and what a gratification for an adulterous wife, and incestuous mother! The disturber of her illicit pleasures, and the troubler of her brother-husband's conscience, is no more! Short, however, was their glorying! See on ver. 3.

Verse 9. The king was sorry] He knew John to be a righteous man, and at first did many things gladly which John told him it was his duty to perform: Mark vi. 20.

Nevertheless, for the oath's sake] The OATHS, ορκους—he had probably sworn again and again—one sin begets many.

And them which sat with him at meat] Who were probably such as himself, and would have considered it a breach of honour if he had not fulfilled his sworn promise: he therefore commanded it to be given!

Vers. 11. His head was—given to the damsel: and she brought it to her mother.] There is no person

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.
9 And the king was sorry: nevertheless, for the oath's sake, and them which sat with him at meat, he commanded it to be given her.

10 And he sent and beheaded John in the prison.

11 And his head was brought in a charger, and given to the damsel: and she brought it to her mother.

12 And his disciples came, and took up the body, and buried it, and went and told Jesus

13 ¶ * When Jesus heard of it, he departed

* Chap. x. 23; xii. 15; Mark vi. 32; Luke ix. 10; John vi. 1, 2.

so revengeful as a lascivious woman when reproved and blamed. A preacher of the Gospel has most to fear from this quarter:—the first of this profession lost his life for the sake of truth and chastity; and others, especially those who have any thing to do with men in power who are profligates, may learn what they are to expect in return for a faithful discharge of their duty.

Verse 12. His disciples came, and took up the body The NECRO was in the possession of Herodias, who, 'tis probable, took a diabolic pleasure in viewing that speechless mouth which had often been the cause of planting thorns in her criminal bed; and in offering indignities to that tongue from which she could no longer dread a reproof. Her character justifies every bad conjecture that can well be formed on this head: and St. Jerome positively says that, when she got it, she drew out the tongue, and thrust it through with her bodkin. On the whole we may observe—

That the diversions of the world, feasting and dancing, are but too commonly the occasions of sin. After so fatal an example as this, can we doubt whether balls are not snares for souls; destructive of chastity, modesty, and sometimes even of humanity itself; and a pernicious invention to excite the most criminal passions? How many on such occasions have sacrificed their chastity, and then, to hide their shame, have stifled the feelings of the human being and the parent, and, by direct or indirect means, have put a period to the innocent offspring of their connections! Unhappy mother, who exposes her daughter to the same shipwreck herself has suffered, and makes her own child the instrument of her lust and revenge! Behold here, ye professedly religious parents, the fruits of what was doubtless called in those times, elegant breeding and accomplished dancing? Fix your eyes on that vicious mother, that prostituted daughter, and especially on that murdered ambassador of God, and then send your children to genteel boarding-schools, to learn the accomplishment of dancing! where the fear of God makes no part of the education.

Verse 13. When Jesus heard of it, he departed thence] Had the blessed Jesus continued in that place, it is probable the hand of this impure female murderer would have been stretched out against him also: he withdrew, therefore, not through fear, but to

A. M. 4031. thence by ship into a desert place
A. D. 27. apart: and when the people had
An. Olymp. heard thereof, they followed him
CCL. 3. on foot out of the cities.

14 And Jesus went forth, and saw a great multitude, and ^h was moved with compassion toward them, and he healed their sick.

15 ⁱ And when it was evening, his disciples came to him, saying, 'This is a desert place, and the time is now past; send the multitude away, that they may go into the villages, and buy themselves victuals.'

^h Chap. ix. 36; Mark. vi. 31.—ⁱ Mark vi. 35; Luke ix. 12; teach his messengers rather to yield to the storm than expose themselves to destruction, where, from circumstances, the case is evidently hopeless.

The people—followed him on foot] πρὸς, or, by land, which is a common acceptation of the word in the best Greek writers. See many examples in Kypke.

Verse 14. Jesus—was moved with compassion] Εμπνευσμένος, he was moved with tender compassion, so I think the word should in general be translated: see the note on chap. ix. 36. As a verb, it does not appear to have been used by any but ecclesiastical writers. It always intimates that motion of the bowels, accompanied with extreme tenderness and concern, which is felt at the sight of the miseries of another.

Verse 15. And the multitude away, that they may go—and buy] The disciples of Christ are solicitous for the people's temporal as well as spiritual welfare: and he is not worthy to be called a minister of Christ, who does not endeavour to promote both to the uttermost of his power. The preaching of Christ must have been accompanied with uncommon power to these people's souls, to have induced them to leave their homes to follow him from village to village, for they could never hear enough; and to neglect to make use of any means for the support of their lives, so that they might still have the privilege of hearing him. When a soul is either well replenished with the bread of life, or hungry after it, the necessities of the body are, for the time, little regarded.

Verse 16. They need not depart] He that looks first to the kingdom of heaven is sure to have every temporal requisite. When a man ensures the first, God always takes care to throw the other into the bargain. He who has an interest in Jesus has in him an inexhaustible treasure of spiritual and temporal good. Though the means by which man may help his fellows have failed, we are not to suppose that the bounty of God is exhausted. When we are about to give up all hope of farther supply, the gracious word of Christ still holds good—They need not depart; give ye them to eat.

Give ye them to eat] Should we say, Lord, how shall thy poor feeble ministering servants feed so many hungry souls as attend thy word? Begin at the command of Jesus—make the attempt—divide what you have—and the bread of God shall be multiplied in your hands, and all shall eat and be satisfied.

16 But Jesus said unto them, ^{A. M. 4031.} They need not depart; give ye ^{A. D. 27.} them to eat. ^{An. Olymp.} ^{CCL. 3.}

17 And they say unto him, ^k We have here but five loaves, and two fishes.

18 He said, Bring them hither to me.

19 And he commanded the multitude to sit down on the grass, and took the five loaves and the two fishes, and looking up to heaven, ^l he blessed, and brake, and gave the loaves to his disciples, and the disciples to the multitude.

John vi. 5.—^k John vi. 8, 9; 2 Kings iv. 43.—^l Chap. xv. 36

Verse 17. We have here but five loaves and two fishes.] When we are deeply conscious of our own necessities, we shall be led to depend on Jesus with a firmer faith. God often permits his servants to be brought low, that they may have repeated opportunities of proving the kindness and mercy of their gracious Lord and Master.

Verse 18. Bring them hither to me.] No creature of God should be considered as good or safe without the blessing of God in it. If thou have but even a handful of meal and a few herbs, bring them to Christ by prayer and faith, and he will make them a sufficiency for thy body, and a sacrament to thy soul. Let the minister of the Gospel attend also to this—let him bring all his gifts and graces to his Maker—let him ever know that his word can be of no use, unless the blessing of Christ be in it.

Verse 19. And took the five loaves, &c.] This was the act of the father of a family among the Jews—his business it was to take the bread into his hands, and render thanks to God, before any of the family was permitted to taste of it.

Looking up to heaven] To teach us to acknowledge God as the Supreme Good, and fountain of all excellence.

He blessed] The word God should, I think, be rather inserted here than the word them, because it does not appear that it was the loaves which Christ blessed, but that God who had provided them; and this indeed was the Jewish custom, not to bless the food, but the God who gave it. However, there are others who believe the loaves are meant, and that he blessed them in order to multiply them. The Jewish form of blessing, or what we term grace, before and after meat, was as follows:—

BEFORE MEAT.

ברוך אתה אלהינו כלך העולם המוצא לחם מן הארץ:

Baruc attah Elohinoo melec ha'alam hamotse lechem min haavrets:

Blessed art thou, our God, King of the universe, who bringst bread out of the earth!

AFTER MEAT.

ברוך אתה אלהינו כלך העולם בורא פרי הגפן:

Baruc Elohinoo melec ha'alam boré peri hagephen.

A. M. 4031. 20 And they did all eat, and were
A. D. 27. filled : ^m and they took up of the
An. Olymp. fragments that remained twelve
CCL. 3. baskets full.

21 And they that had eaten were about five thousand men, beside women and children.

22 ¶ And straightway Jesus constrained his disciples to get into a ship, ⁿ and to go before

^m Chap. xvi. 7; Isa. lv. 1; Luke ix. 17.

Blessed be our God, the King of the universe, the Creator of the fruit of the vine!

And brake] We read often in the Scriptures of breaking bread, never of cutting it : because the Jews made their bread broad and thin like cakes, and to divide such, being very brittle, there was no need of a knife.

Verse 20. They did all eat, and were filled] Little or much is the same in the hands of Jesus Christ.—Here was an incontestable miracle—five thousand men, besides women and children, fed with five cakes and two fishes ! Here must have been a manifest creation of substance—the parts of the bread were not dilated to make them appear large, nor was there any delusion in the eating—for they all ate, and were all filled. Here then is one miracle of our Lord attested by at least five thousand persons ! But did not this creation of bread prove the unlimited power of Jesus ? Undoubtedly : and nothing less than eternal power and Godhead could have effected it.

They took up—twelve baskets] It was customary for many of the Jews to carry a basket with them at all times : and Mr. Wakefield's conjecture here is very reasonable :—"By the number here particularized, it should seem that each apostle filled his own bread basket." Some think that the Jews carried baskets in commemoration of their Egyptian bondage, when they were accustomed to carry the clay and stubble to make the bricks, in a basket that was hung about their necks. This seems to be what Sidonius Apollinaris refers to in the following words, Epist. vii. 6. Ordinis res est, ut, (dum in allegorica versamur Ægypto) Phæaræ incedat cum diademate, Israelita cum cophino.

These words of Alcimus Avitus, lib. v. ver. 30, are to the same effect :—

Servitii longo lassatam pondere plebem, Oppressos cophinis humeros, attritaque collo.

It appears that a basket about the neck, and a bunch of hay, were the general characteristic of this long enslaved and oppressed people in the different countries where they sojourned.

Juvenal also mentions the basket and the hay :—

Cum dedit ille locum, cophino fanoque relicto, Arcanum Judæa tremens mendicat in aurem.
Sat. vi. 542.

A gypsy Jewess whispers in your ear—
Her goods a basket, and old hay her bed,
She strolls, and telling fortunes, gains her bread.
Dryden.

him unto the other side, while he sent the multitudes away.

23 ° And when he had sent the multitudes away, he went up into a mountain apart, to pray : ^p and when the evening was come, he was there alone.

24 But the ship was now in the midst of the sea, tossed with waves : for the wind was contrary.

ⁿ Chap. viii. 18.—° Mark vi. 46.—^p John. vi. 16.

And again, Sat. iii. 13 :—

*Nunc sacri fontis nemus, et delubra locantur
Judeis, quorum cophinus, fœnumque supeller.*

Now the once hallowed fountain, grove, and fane,
Are let to Jews, a wretched, wandering train,
Whose wealth is but a basket stuff'd with hay.
Gifford.

The simple reason why the Jews carried baskets with them appears to be this :—When they went into Gentile countries, they carried their own provision with them, as they were afraid of being polluted by partaking of the meat of heathens. This also obliged them probably to carry hay with them to sleep on : and it is to this, in all likelihood, that Juvenal alludes.

After five thousand were fed, twelve times as much, at least, remained, as the whole multitude at first sat down to ! See the note on Luke ix. 16.

Verse 22. Jesus constrained his disciples to get into a ship] Either they were afraid to return into the jurisdiction of Herod, or they were unwilling to embark without their Lord and Protector, and would not enter their boat till Christ had commanded them to embark.

From this verse it appears that Christ gave some advices to the multitudes after the departure of his disciples, which he did not wish them to hear.

Unto the other side] Towards Capernaum, ver. 34. John vi. 16, 17, or Bethsaida. see on Mark vi. 45.

Verse 23. He went up into a mountain apart, to pray] He whom God has employed in a work of mercy had need to return, by prayer, as speedily, to his Maker, as he can, lest he should be tempted to value himself on account of that in which he has no merit—for the good that is done upon earth, the Lord doth it alone. Some make this part of our Lord's conduct emblematic of the spirit and practice of prayer, and observe that the proper dispositions and circumstances for praying well are : 1. Retirement from the world. 2. Elevation of the heart to God. 3. Solitude. 4. The silence and quiet of the night. It is certain that in this also Christ has left us an example that we should follow his steps. Retirement from the world is often a means of animating, supporting, and spiritualizing prayer. Other society should be shut out, when a soul comes to converse with God.

Verse 24. Tossed with waves] Grievously agitated. This is the proper meaning of the word ῥαγισμένον ; but one MS. reads ῥαπτιζόμενον, plunged under the

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

25 And in the fourth watch of the night Jesus went unto them, walking on the sea.

26 And when the disciples saw him ^a walking on the sea, they were troubled, saying, It is a spirit; and they cried out for fear.

27 But straightway Jesus spake unto them, saying, Be of good cheer; it is I; be not afraid.

28 And Peter answered him and said, Lord, if it be thou, bid me come unto thee on the water.

29 And he said, Come. And when Peter was come down out of the ship, he waves, frequently covered with them; the waves often breaking over the vessel.

^a Job ix. 8.—^r Or, strong.—^s Psal. ii. 7; Mark i. 1; ch. xvi. 16; xxvi.

Verse 25. The fourth watch] Anciently the Jews divided the night into three watches, consisting of four hours each. The first watch is mentioned, Lam. ii. 19: the second, Judges vii. 19; and the third, Exod. xiv. 24; but a fourth watch is not mentioned in any part of the Old Testament. This division the Romans had introduced in Judea, as also the custom of dividing the day into twelve hours: see John xi. 9. The first watch began at six o'clock in the evening, and continued till nine; the second began at nine, and continued till twelve; the third began at twelve, and continued till three next morning; and the fourth began at three, and continued till six. It was therefore between the hours of three and six in the morning that Jesus made his appearance to his disciples.

Walking on the sea.] Thus suspending the laws of gravitation was a proper manifestation of unlimited power. Jesus did this by his own power; therefore Jesus showed forth his Godhead. In this one miracle we may discover three:—1. Though at a distance from his disciples, he knew their distress. 2. He found them out on the lake, and probably in the midst of darkness. 3. He walked upon the water. *Job, speaking of those things whereby the omnipotence of God was demonstrated, says particularly, chap. ix. 8, He walketh upon the waves of the sea: intimating that this was impossible to any thing but Omnipotence.

Verse 26. It is a spirit] That the spirits of the dead might and did appear, was a doctrine held by the greatest and holiest of men that ever existed; and a doctrine which the cavillers, free-thinkers and bound-thinkers, of different ages, have never been able to disprove.

Verse 27. It is I; be not afraid] Nothing but this voice of Christ could, in such circumstances, have given courage and comfort to his disciples: those who are grievously tossed with difficulties and temptations require a similar manifestation of his power and goodness. When he proclaims himself in the soul, all sorrow, and fear, and sin are at an end.

Verse 28. Bid me come unto thee on the water.] A weak faith is always wishing for signs and miracles.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

walked on the water, to go to Jesus.

30 But when he saw the wind ^r boisterous, he was afraid; and, beginning to sink, he cried, saying, Lord, save me.

31 And immediately Jesus stretched forth his hand, and caught him, and said unto him, O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt?

32 And when they were come into the ship, the wind ceased.

33 Then they that were in the ship came and worshipped him, saying, Of a truth ^s thou art the Son of God.

63; Luke iv. 41; John i. 49; vi. 69; xi. 27; Acts viii. 37; Rom. i. 4.

To take Christ at his word, argues not only the perfection of faith, but also the highest exercise of sound reason. He is to be credited on his own word, because he is the TRUTH, and therefore can neither lie nor deceive.

Verse 29. Peter—walked on the water] However impossible the thing commanded by Christ may appear, it is certain he will give power to accomplish it to those who receive his word by faith; but we must take care never to put Christ's power to the proof for the gratification of a vain curiosity; or even for the strengthening of our faith, when the ordinary means for doing that are within our reach.

Verse 30. When he saw the wind boisterous, he was afraid] It was by faith in the power of Christ he was upheld; when that faith failed, by which the laws of gravitation were suspended, no wonder that those laws returned to their wonted action, and that he began to sink. It was not the violence of the winds, nor the raging of the waves, which endangered his life, but his littleness of faith.

Verse 31. Jesus stretched forth his hand] Every moment we stand in need of Christ: while we stand, we are upheld by his power only; and when we are falling, or have fallen, we can be saved only by his mercy. Let us always take care that we do not consider so much the danger to which we are exposed, as the power of Christ by which we are to be upheld; and then our mountain is likely to stand strong.

Verse 32. The wind ceased.] Jesus is the Prince of peace, and all is peace and calm where he condescends to enter and abide.

Verse 33. Thou art the Son of God.] It is probable that these words were spoken either by the sailors or passengers, and not by the disciples. Critics have remarked that, when this phrase is used to denominate the MESSIAH, both the articles are used, ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ, and that the words without the articles mean, in the common Jewish phrase, a Divine person. It would have been a strange thing indeed, if the disciples, after all the miracles they had seen Jesus work—after their having left all to follow him, &c., were only now persuaded that he was the promised Messiah. That they had not as yet, clear conceptions concerning his king-

A. M. 4031
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3.

34 ¶ And when they were gone over, they came into the land of Gennesaret.

35 And when the men of that place had knowledge of him, they sent out into all that dom, is evident enough; but that they had any doubts concerning his being the promised Messiah is far from being clear.

¹ Mark vi. 53.—² Mark vi. 56.—³ Num. xv. 38, 39; ch. ix. 20.

Verse 31. The land of Gennesaret.] It was from this country that the sea or lake of Gennesaret had its name. In this district, on the western side of the lake, were the cities of Capernaum and Tiberias.

Verse 35. The men of that place had knowledge of him] i. e. They knew him again. They had already seen his miracles; and now they collect all the diseased people they can find, that he may have the same opportunity of showing forth his marvellous power, and they of being the instruments of relieving their friends and neighbours.

They brought unto him all that were diseased] And Jesus received and healed every man and woman of them. And is not the soul, in the sight of God, of more value than the body? and will he withhold his country round about, and brought unto him all that were diseased;

36 And besought him that they might only touch the hem of his garment: and as many as touched were made perfectly whole healing power from the former, and grant it so freely to the latter! This cannot be. Let a man come himself to Jesus, and he shall be saved; and afterwards let him recommend this Christ to the whole circle of his acquaintance, and they, if they come, shall also find mercy.

⁴ Chap. ix. 20; Mark iii. 10; Luke vi. 19; Acts xix. 12.

Verse 36. That they might only touch the hem of his garment] What mighty influence must the grace and Spirit of Christ have in the soul, when even the border or hem of his garment produced such wonders in the bodies of those who touched it! Here is a man who has turned from sin to God through Christ, and the healing hand of Jesus is laid upon him.—Then, no wonder that he knows and feels his sins forgiven, his soul purified, and his heart filled with the fulness of his Maker. Lord, increase our faith! and we shall see greater manifestations of thy power and glory! Amen.

A. M. 4031
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3.

CHAPTER XV.

The Pharisees accuse the disciples of eating with unwashed hands, 1, 2. Our Lord answers, and convicts them of gross hypocrisy, 3-9. Teaches the people and the disciples what it is that renders men unclean, 10-20. Heals the daughter of a Canaanitish woman, 21-28. Heals many diseased people on a mountain of Galilee, 29-31. With seven loaves, and a few little fishes, he feeds 4,000 men, besides women and children, 32-38. Having dismissed the multitudes, he comes to the coast of Magdala, 39.

A. M. 4032.
A. D. 28.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 4.

THEN ^a came to Jesus scribes and Pharisees, which were of Jerusalem, saying,

2 ^b Why do thy disciples transgress ^c the

^a Mark vii. 1.—^b Mark vii. 5.

NOTES ON CHAP. XV.

Verse 1. The scribes and Pharisees—of Jerusalem] Our Lord was now in Galilee, chap. xiv. 34.

Verse 2. Elders] Rulers and magistrates among the Jews.

For they wash not their hands] What frivolous nonsense! These Pharisees had nothing which their malice could fasten on in the conduct or doctrine of our blessed Lord and his disciples, and therefore they must dispute about washing of hands! All sorts of Pharisees are troublesome people in religious society; and the reason is, they take more pleasure in blaming others than in amending themselves.

The tradition of the elders] The word παράδοσις, tradition, has occupied a most distinguished place, both in the Jewish and Christian Church. Man is ever fond of mending the work of his Maker; and hence he has been led to put his finishing hand even to Divine revelation! This supplementary matter has been called παράδοσις, from παράδιδωαι, to deliver tradition of the elders? for they wash not their hands when they eat bread.

3 But he answered and said unto them, Why

^c Col. ii. 8.

from hand to hand—to transmit; and hence the Latin term, tradition, from trado, to deliver, especially from one to another;—to hand down. Among the Jews, tradition signifies what is also called the oral law, which they distinguish from the written law: this last contains the Mosaic precepts, as found in the Pentateuch: the former, the traditions of the elders, i. e. traditions, or doctrines, that had been successively handed down from Moses through every generation but not committed to writing. The Jews feign that, when God gave Moses the written law, he gave him also the oral law, which is the interpretation of the former. This law, Moses at first delivered to Aaron, then to his sons Eleazar and Ithamar; and, after these, to the seventy-two elders, who were six of the most eminent men chosen out of each of the twelve tribes. These seventy-two, with Moses and Aaron, delivered it again to all the heads of the people, and afterwards to the congregation at large. They say also that before Moses died, he delivered this oral law, or sys-

A. M. 4032
A. D. 28.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 4.

A. M. 4032. do ye also transgress the com-
A. D. 28. mandment of God by your tra-
An. Olymp. dition ?
CCL. 4.

4 For God commanded, saying, ^d Honour thy father and mother : and, ^e He that curseth

^d Exod. xx. 12; Lev. xix. 3; Deut. v. 16; Prov. xxiii. 22; Eph. vi. 2.

tem of traditions, to JOSHUA, and Joshua to the ELDERS which succeeded him—THEY to the Prophets, and the PROPHETS to each other, till it came to JEREMIAH, who delivered it to BARUCH his scribe, who repeated it to EZRA, who delivered it to the men of the great synagogue, the last of whom was SIMON the Just. By Simon the Just it was delivered to ANTIGONUS of Socho; by him to JOSE, the son of Jochanan; by him to JOSE, the son of Joezer; by him to NATHAN the Arbelite, and Joshua the son of Perachiah; and by them to JUDAH the son of Tabbai, and Simeon, the son of Shatah; and by them to SHEMAIAH and ABTALION; and by them to HILLEL; and by Hillel to SIMEON his son, the same who took Christ in his arms when brought to the temple to be presented to the Lord: by SIMEON it was delivered to GAMALIEL his son, the preceptor of St. Paul, who delivered it to SIMEON his son, and he to Rab. JUDAH HAKKODESH his son, who compiled and digested it into the book which is called the MISHNA; to explain which the two Talmuds, called the Jerusalem and Babylonish Talmuds, were compiled, which are also called the Gemara or complement, because by these the oral law or Mishneh is fully explained. The Jerusalem Talmud was completed about A. D. 300; and the Babylonish Talmud about the beginning of the sixth century. This Talmud was printed at Amsterdam in 12 vols. folio. These contain the whole of the traditions of the elders, and have so explained, or rather frittered away, the words of God, that our Lord might well say, Ye have made the word of God of no effect by your traditions. In what estimation these are held by the Jews, the following examples will prove: "The words of the scribes are lovely beyond the words of the law: for the words of the law are weighty and light, but the words of the scribes are all weighty." Hicrus. Berac. fol. 3.

"He that shall say, There are no phylacteries, though he thus transgress the words of the law, he is not guilty; but he that shall say, There are five Totaphot, thus adding to the words of the scribes, he is guilty."

"A prophet and an elder, to what are they likened? To a king sending two of his servants into a province; of one he writes thus: Unless he show you my seal, believe him not; for thus it is written of the prophet, He shall show thee a sign; but of the elders thus: According to the law which they shall teach thee, for I will confirm their words."—See Prideaux. Con. vol. ii. p. 465, and Lightfoot's Hor. Talmud.

They wash not their hands] On washing of hands, before and after meat, the Jews laid great stress: they considered eating with unwashed hands to be no ordinaty crime; and therefore, to induce men to do father or mother, let him die the death.

5 But ye say, Whosoever shall say to his father or his mother, ^fIt is a gift, by whatsoever thou mightest be profited by me, ^e Exod. xxi. 17; Lev. xx. 9; Deut. xxvii. 16; Prov. xx. 20; xxx 17.—^f Mark. vii. 11, 12; Prov. xx. 25; chap. xxiii. 16, 18.

it, they feigned that an evil spirit, called Shibta שִׁבְטָא, who sits on the hands by night, has a right to sit on the food of him who eats without washing his hands, and make it hurtful to him! They consider the person who undervalues this rite to be no better than a heathen, and consequently excommunicate him.—See many examples of this doctrine in Schoettgen and Lightfoot.

Verse 3. Why do ye—transgress the commandment] Ye accuse my disciples of transgressing the traditions of the elders—I accuse you of transgressing the commands of God, and that too in favour of your own tradition; thus preferring the inventions of men to the positive precepts of God. Pretenders to zeal often prefer superstitious usages to the Divine law, and human inventions to the positive duties of Christianity.

Verse 4. Honour thy father and mother] This word was taken in great latitude of meaning among the Jews: it not only meant respect and submission but also to take care of a person, to nourish and support him, to enrich. See Num. xxii. 17; Judg. xiii 17; 1 Tim. v. 17. And that this was the sense of the law, as it respected parents, see Deut. xxvii. 16 and see the note on Exod. xx. 12.

Verse 5. It is a gift] קרבן korban, Mark vii. 11, an offering of approach; something consecrated to the service of God in the temple, by which a man had the privilege of approaching his Maker. This conduct was similar to the custom of certain persons who bequeath the inheritance of their children to Churches or religious uses; either through terror of conscience, thus striving to purchase the kingdom of glory; or through the persuasion of interested hireling priests. It was in this way that, in the days of popish influence, the principal lands in the nation had fallen into the hands of the Church. In these charters, multitudes of which have passed through my hands, a common form was, pro salute meæ, et pro salute antecessorum meorum, et pro salute successorum meorum, et pro salute uxoris meæ, &c., &c., do, et concedo Deo et Ecclesiæ, &c. "For my salvation, and for the salvation of my predecessors, and for the salvation of my successors, and for the salvation of my wife, &c., &c., I give and bequeath to God and his Church, &c."

Though a world of literature was destroyed, and fine buildings ruined, by the suppression of the monasteries in England, yet this step, with the Stat. 23 Hen. VIII. c. 10, together with the Stat. 9 Geo. II. c. 36, were the means of checking an evil that had arrived at a pitch of unparalleled magnitude; an evil that was supplanting the atonement made by the blood of the covenant, and putting death-bed grants of land,

A. M. 4032.

A. D. 29.

An. Olymp.

CCL. 4.

6 And honour not his father or his mother, he shall be free. Thus have ye made the commandment of God of none effect by your tradition.

7 ¶ Ye hypocrites, well did Esaias prophesy of you, saying,

8 ^h 'This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoureth me with their lips; but their heart is far from me.

9 But in vain they do worship me, ⁱ teaching, for doctrines, the commandments of men.

¶ Mark vii. 6.—^h Isa. xxix. 13; Ezek. xxxiii. 31.—ⁱ Isa. xxix. 13; Col. ii. 18-22; Tit. i. 11.

&c., in the place of Jesus Christ, and throwing the whole secular power of the kingdom into the hands of the pope and the priests. No wonder then that they cried out, when the monasteries were suppressed! It is sacrilege to dedicate that to God which is taken away from the necessities of our parents and children; and the good that this pretends to will doubtless be found in the catalogue of that unnatural man's crimes, in the judgment of the great day, who has thus deprived his own family of its due. To assist our poor relatives, is our first duty; and this is a work infinitely preferable to all pious legacies and endowments.

Verse 7. Hypocrites, well did Esaias prophesy of you] In every place where the proper names of the Old Testament occur, in the New, the same mode of orthography should be followed: I therefore write Isaiah with the Hebrew, not Esaias, with the Greek. This prophecy is found chap. xxix. 13. Our blessed Lord unmasks these hypocrites; and we may observe that, when a hypocrite is found out, he should be exposed to all; this may lead to his salvation: if he be permitted to retain his falsely acquired character, how can he escape perdition!

Verse 8. Their heart is far from me.] The true worship of God consists in the union of the heart to him—where this exists not, a particle of the spirit of devotion cannot be found.

This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth] This clause, which is taken from Isa. chap. xxix. 13, is omitted by several excellent MSS., and by several versions and fathers. Erasmus, Mill, Drusus, and Bengel, approve of the omission, and Griesbach has left it out of the text; but as I find it in the prophet, the place from which it is quoted, I dare not omit it, howsoever respectable the above authorities may appear.

Verse 9. In vain they do worship me, &c.] By the traditions of the elders, not only the word of God was perverted, but his worship also was greatly corrupted. But the Jews were not the only people who have acted thus: whole Christian Churches, as well as sects and parties, have acted in the same way. Men must not mould the worship of God according to their fancy—it is not what they think will do—is proper, innocent, &c., but what God himself has prescribed, that he will acknowledge as his worship. However sincere a man may be in a worship of his own invention, or of man's com-

10 ¶ ^k And he called the multitude, and said unto them, Hear, and understand:

11 ^l Not that which goeth into the mouth defileth a man; but that which cometh out of the mouth, this defileth a man.

12 Then came his disciples, and said unto him, Knowest thou that the Pharisees were offended, after they heard this saying?

13 But he answered and said, ^m Every plant, which my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up.

¶ Mark vii. 14.—^l Acts x. 15; Rom. xiv. 11, 17, 20; 1 Tim. iv. 1; Tit. i. 15.—^m John xv. 2; 1 Cor. iii. 12, &c.

mandment, yet it profits him nothing. Christ himself says it is in vain. To condemn such, may appear to some illiberal; but whatever may be said in behalf of sincere heathens, and others who have not had the advantages of Divine Revelation, there is no excuse for the man who has the BIBLE before him.

Verse 10. Hear and understand] A most important command. Hear—make it a point of conscience to attend to the ministry of the word. Understand—be not satisfied with attending places of public worship merely; see that the teaching be of God, and that you lay it to heart.

Verse 11. Not that which goeth into the mouth defileth] This is an answer to the earping question of the Pharisees, mentioned verse 2, Why do thy disciples eat with unwashed hands? To which our Lord here replies, That what goes into the mouth defiles not the man; i. e. that if, in eating with unwashed hands, any particles of dust, &c., cleaving to the hands, might happen to be taken into the mouth with the food, this did not defile, did not constitute a man a sinner; for it is on this alone the question hinges: thy disciples eat with unwashed hands; therefore they are sinners; for they transgress the tradition of the elders, i. e. the oral law, which they considered equal in authority to the written law; and, indeed, often preferred the former to the latter, so as to make it of none effect, totally to destroy its nature and design, as we have often seen in the preceding notes.

That which cometh out of the mouth] That is, what springs from a corrupt unregenerate heart—a perverse will and impure passions—these defile, i. e. make him a sinner.

Verse 12. The Pharisees were offended] None so liable to take offence as formalists and hypocrites, when you attempt to take away the false props from the one, and question the sincerity of the other. Besides, a Pharisee must never be suspected of ignorance, for they are the men, and wisdom must die with them!

Verse 13. Every plant] Every plantation. So I render φτεία, and so it is translated in the Itala version which accompanies the Greek text in the Codex Bezae, omnis plantatio, and so the word is rendered by Suidas. This gives a different turn to the text. The Pharisees, as a religious body, were now a plantation of trees, which God did not plant, water, nor

A. M. 4032. 14 Let them alone: ^a they be blind
A. D. 28. leaders of the blind. And if the
An. Olymp. blind lead the blind, both shall fall
CCI. 4. into the ditch.

15 ^a Then answered Peter and said unto him, Declare unto us this parable.

16 And Jesus said, ^p Are ye also yet without understanding?

17 Do not ye yet understand, that ^a whatso-

^a Isa. ix. 16; Mal. ii. 8; chap. xxii. 16; Luke vi. 39. — ^p Mark vii. 17. — ^p Chap. xvi. 9; Mark vii. 18.

own: therefore, they should be rooted up, not left to wither and die, but the fellers, and those who root up, (the Roman armies,) should come against and destroy them, and the Christian Church was to be planted in their place. Since the general dispersion of the Jews, this sect, I believe, has ceased to exist as a separate body, among the descendants of Jacob. The first of the apostolical constitutions begins thus: Θεου φυτεία η καθολικη εκκλησια, και αμπελων αυτου εκλεκτος. The Catholic Church is the plantation of God, and his chosen vineyard.

Verse 14. Let them alone] Αφετε αυτους, give them up, or leave them. These words have been sadly misunderstood. Some have quoted them to prove that blind and deceitful teachers should not be pointed out to the people, nor the people warned against them; and that men should abide in the communion of a corrupt Church, because that Church had once been the Church of God, and in it they had been brought up; and to prove this they bring Scripture, for, in our present translation, the words are rendered, let them alone: but the whole connection of the place evidently proves that our blessed Lord meant, give them up, have no kind of religious connection with them, and the strong reason for which he immediately adds, because they are blind leaders. This passage does not at all mean that blind leaders should not be pointed out to the people, that they may avoid being deceived by them; for this our Lord does frequently, and warns his disciples, and the people in general, against all such false teachers as the scribes and Pharisees were; and though he bids men do what they heard those say, while they sat in the chair of Moses, yet he certainly meant no more than that they should be observant of the moral law when read to them out of the sacred book: yet neither does he tell them to do all these false teachers said; for he testifies in the 6th verse, that they had put such false glosses on the law, that, if followed, would endanger the salvation of their souls. The Codex Bezae, for αφετε αυτους, has αφετε τους τυφλους, give up these blind men. Amen! A literal attention to these words of our Lord produced the Reformation.

Probably the words may be understood as a sort of proverbial expression for—Don't mind them: pay no regard to them.—"They are altogether unworthy of notice."

And if the blind lead the blind] This was so self-evident a case that an apter parallel could not be found—if the blind lead the blind, both must fall into the ditch. Alas, for the blind teachers, who not only de-ever entereth in at the mouth, goeth into the belly, and is cast out into the draught?

18 But ^r those things which proceed out of the mouth come forth from the heart; and they defile the man.

19 ^s For out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies:

^r 1 Cor. vi. 13. — ^r James iii. 6. — ^s Gen. vi. 5; viii. 21; Prov. vi. 14; Jer. xvii. 9; Mark vii. 21.

stroy their own souls, but those also of their flocks! Like priest, like people. If the minister be ignorant, he cannot teach what he does not know; and the people cannot become wise unto salvation under such a ministry—he is ignorant and wicked, and they are profligate. They who even wish such God speed, are partakers of their evil deeds. But shall not the poor deceived people escape? No: both shall fall into the pit of perdition together; for they should have searched the Scriptures, and not trusted to the ignorant sayings of corrupt men, no matter of what sect or party. He who has the Bible in his hand, or within his reach, and can read it, has no excuse.

Verse 15. Declare unto us this parable.] Is it not strange to hear the disciples asking for the explanation of such a parable as this! The true knowledge of the spirit of the Gospel is a thing more uncommon than we imagine, among the generality of Christians, and even of the learned.

Verse 16. Are ye also yet without understanding?] The word ακμη, which we translate yet, should be here rendered still: Are ye still void of understanding?—and the word is used in this sense by several Greek writers. The authorities which have induced me to prefer this translation may be seen in Kypke.

Verse 17. Cast out into the draught] Ες αφερωρα, γ bys on forðang arend. Anglo-Saxon. And beeth into the forthgoing a sent—what is not fit for nourishment is evacuated; is thrown into the sink. This I believe to be the meaning of this difficult and variously translated word, αφερωρα. Diodati translates it properly, nella latrina, into the privy. And the Persian translator has given a good paraphrase, and appears to have collected the general meaning

هرچه در دهان آید از نشیب بیرون افتد her teche der dehan ander ayeed, az nusheeb ber roon rood, we ber zemeen aftad: "Whatsoever enters into the mouth goes downward, and falls upon the ground." Michaelis, and his annotator, Dr. Marsh, have been much perplexed with this perplexing passage. See Michaelis's Introduction, vol. i. note 35. p. 458.

Verse 19. Out of the heart] In the heart of an unregenerate man, the principles and seeds of all sin are found. And iniquity is always conceived in the heart before it be spoken or acted. Is there any hope that a man can abstain from outward sin till his heart, that abominable fountain of corruption, be thoroughly cleansed? I trow not.

A. M. 4032.

A. D. 28.

An. Olymp.
CCL. 4.

20 These are the things which defile a man: but to eat with unwashen hands defileth not a man.

21 ¶ Then Jesus went thence, and departed into the coasts of Tyre and Sidon.

22 And, behold, a woman of Canaan came out of the same coasts, and cried unto him, saying, Have mercy on me, O Lord, thou son of David; my daughter is grievously vexed with a devil.

23 But he answered her not a word. And † Mark vii. 24.—† Chap. x. 5, 6, Acts iii. 25, 26; xiii. 46;

Evil thoughts] Διαλογισμοὶ πονηροὶ, wicked dialogues—for in all evil surmisings the heart holds a conversation, or dialogue, with itself. For φόνοι, murders, two MSS. have φθόνοι, envyings, and three others have both. Envy and murder are nearly allied: the former has often led to the latter.

Blasphemies] I have already observed, chap. ix. 3, that the verb βλασφημέω, when applied to men, signifies to speak INJURIOUSLY of their persons, characters, &c., and, when applied to God, it means to speak IMPIOUSLY of his nature, works, &c.

Verse 20. These—defile a man] Our Lord's argument is very plain. What goes into the mouth descends into the stomach and other intestines; part is retained for the nourishment of the body, and part is ejected, as being improper to afford nourishment. Nothing of this kind defiles the soul, because it does not enter into it; but the evil principles that are in it, producing evil thoughts, murders, &c., these defile the soul, because they have their seat and operation in it.

Verse 21. Departed into the coasts of Tyre and Sidon.] Εἰς τὰ μέρη, towards the coasts or confines. It is not clear that our Lord ever left the land of the Hebrews; he was, as the apostle observes, Rom. xv. 8, the minister of the circumcision according to the truth of God. Tyre and Sidon are usually joined together, principally because they are but a few miles distant from each other.

Verse 22. A woman of Canaan] Matthew gives her this name because of the people from whom she sprung—the descendants of Canaan, Judg. i. 31, 32; but Mark calls her a Syrophenician, because of the country where she dwelt. The Canaanites and Phœnicians have been often confounded. This is frequently the case in the Septuagint. Compare Gen. xlv. 10, with Exod. vi. 15, where the same person is called a Phœnician in the one place, and a Canaanite in the other. See also the same version in Exod. xvi. 35; Josh. v. 12.

The state of this woman is a proper emblem of the state of a sinner, deeply conscious of the misery of his soul.

Have mercy on me, &c.] How proper is this prayer for a penitent! There are many excellencies contained in it; 1. It is short; 2. humble; 3. full of faith; 4. fervent; 5. modest; 6. respectful; 7. rational; 8. relying only on the mercy of God; 9. persevering. Can he who sees himself a slave of the devil, beg with his disciples came and besought him, saying, Send her away; for she crieth after us.

24 But he answered and said, "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

25 Then came she and worshipped him, saying, Lord, help me.

26 But he answered and said, It is not meet to take the children's bread, and to cast it to † dogs.

Rom. xv. 8.—† Chap. vii. 6; Phil. iii. 2.

too much earnestness to be delivered from his thralldom!

Son of David] An essential character of the true Messiah.

Verse 23. He answered her not a word.] Seemed to take time to consider her request, and to give her the opportunity of exercising her faith, and manifesting her fervour.

Verse 24. I am not sent but unto the lost sheep] By the Divine appointment, I am come to preach the Gospel to the Jews only. There are certain preachers who should learn a lesson of important instruction from this part of our Lord's conduct. As soon as they hear of a lost sheep being found by other ministers, they give all diligence to get that one into their fold; but display little earnestness in seeking in the wilderness for those that are lost. This conduct, perhaps, proceeds from a consciousness of their inability to perform the work of an evangelist; and leads them to sit down in the labours of others, rather than submit to the reproach of presiding over empty chapels. Such persons should either dig or beg immediately, as they are a reproach to the pastoral office; for, not being sent of God, they cannot profit the people.

The wilderness of this world is sufficiently wide and uncultivated. Sinners abound every where; and there is ample room for all truly religious people, who have zeal for God, and love for their perishing fellow creatures, to put forth all their strength, employ all their time, and exercise all their talents, in proclaiming the Gospel of God; not only to the lost sheep of the house of Israel, but to a lost world. Nor can such exertions be unsuccessful. Where the pure truth of God is preached, many will be converted. Where that truth is preached, though with a mixture of error, some will be converted, for God will bless his own truth. But where nothing but false doctrine is preached, no soul is converted: for God will never sanction error by a miracle of his mercy.

Verse 25. Lord, help me.] Let me also share in the deliverance afforded to Israel.

Verse 26. The children's bread] The salvation provided for the Jews, who were termed the children of the kingdom. And cast it to the κύναις, little dogs—to the eurs; such the Gentiles were reputed by the Jewish people, and our Lord uses that form of speech which was common among his countrymen. What terrible repulses! and yet she still perseveres!

A. M. 4032. 27 And she said, Truth, Lord :
A. D. 28. yet the dogs eat of the crumbs
An. Olymp. which fall from their masters' table.
CCL. 4.

28 Then Jesus answered and said unto her,
O woman, great is thy faith : be it unto thee even as thou wilt. And her daughter was made whole from that very hour.

29 ¶ And Jesus departed from thence, and came nigh ^α unto the sea of Galilee ; and went up into a mountain, and sat down there.

30 ^γ And great multitudes came unto him, having with them those that were lame, blind, dumb, maimed, and many others, and cast them down at Jesus' feet ; and he healed them :

31 Insomuch that the multitude wondered,

^α Mark vii. 31. — ^γ Chap. iv. 18. — ^γ Isa. xxxv. 5, 6 ; chap.

Verse 27. Truth, Lord] Ναι, κυριε, Yes, Lord.
This appears to be not so much an assent, as a bold reply to our Lord's reason for apparently rejecting her suit.

The little dogs share with the children, for they eat the crumbs which fall from their masters' table. I do not desire what is provided for these highly favoured children, only what they leave : a single exertion of thy almighty power, in the healing of my afflicted daughter, is all that I wish for ; and this the highly favoured Jews can well spare, without lessening the provision made for themselves. Is not this the sense of this noble woman's reply ?

Verse 28. O woman, great is thy faith] The hinderances thrown in this woman's way only tended to increase her faith. Her faith resembles a river, which becomes enlarged by the dykes opposed to it, till at last it sweeps them entirely away with it.

Her daughter was made whole] Persevering faith and prayer are next to omnipotent. No person can thus pray and believe, without receiving all his soul requires. This is one of the finest lessons in the book of God for a penitent, or for a discouraged believer. Look to Jesus ! As sure as God is in heaven, so surely will he hear and answer thee to the eternal salvation of thy soul ! Be not discouraged at a little delay : when thou art properly prepared to receive the blessing, then thou shalt have it. Look up ; thy salvation is at hand. Jesus admires this faith, to the end that we may admire and imitate it, and may reap the same fruits and advantages from it.

Verse 29. Went up into a mountain] Το ορος, THE mountain. "Meaning," says Wakefield, "some par- ticular mountain which he was accustomed to frequent ; for, whenever it is spoken of at a time when Jesus is in Galilee, it is always discriminated by the article.
Compare chap. iv. 18, with chap. v. 1 ; and chap. xiii.
54, with chap. xiv. 23 ; and xxviii. 16. I suppose it was mount Tabor."

Verse 30. Those that were—maimed] Κυλλους.
Weiststein has fully proved that those who had lost a hand, foot, &c., were termed κυλλοι by the Greeks.

when they saw the dumb to speak, A. M. 4032.
the maimed to be whole, the lame A. D. 28.
to walk, and the blind to see : and An. Olymp.
they glorified the God of Israel. CCL. 4.

32 ¶ ^α Then Jesus called his disciples unto him, and said, I have compassion on the multitude, because they continue with me now three days, and have nothing to eat : and I will not send them away fasting, lest they faint in the way.

33 ^α And his disciples say unto him, Whence should we have so much bread in the wilderness, as to fill so great a multitude ?

34 And Jesus saith unto them, How many loaves have ye ? And they said, Seven, and a few little fishes.

xi. 5 ; Luke vii. 22. — ^α Mark viii. 1. — ^α 2 Kings iv. 43.

Kypke has shown, from Hippocrates, that the word was also used to signify those who had distorted or dislocated legs, knees, hands, &c. Mr. Wakefield is fully of opinion that it means here those who had lost a limb, and brings an incontestable proof from Matt.
xviii. 8 ; Mark ix. 43. "If thy hand cause thee to offend, CUT IT OFF ; it is better for thee to enter into life (κυλλου) WITHOUT A LIMB, than, having thy two hands, to go away into hell." What an astonishing manifestation of omnific and creative energy must the reproduction of a hand, foot, &c., be at the word or touch of Jesus ! As this was a mere act of creative power, like that of multiplying the bread, those who allow that the above is the meaning of the word will hardly attempt to doubt the proper Divinity of Christ.
Creation, in any sense of the word, i. e. causing something to exist that had no existence before, can belong only to God, because it is an effect of an unlimited power ; to say that such power could be delegated to a person is to say that the person to whom it is delegated becomes, for the time being, the omnipotent
God ; and that God, who has thus clothed a creature with his omnipotence, ceases to be omnipotent himself ; for there cannot be two omnipotents, nor can the Supreme Being delegate his omnipotence to another, and have it at the same time. I confess, then, that this is to me an unanswerable argument for the Divinity of our blessed Lord. Others may doubt ; I can't help believing.

Verse 31. The multitude wondered] And well they might, when they had such proofs of the miraculous power and love of God before their eyes. Blessed be God ! the same miracles are continued in their spiritual reference. All the disorders of the soul are still cured by the power of Jesus.

Verse 32. I have compassion, &c.] See a similar transaction explained, chap. xiv. 14—22.

Verse 33. Whence should we have so much bread in the wilderness, &c.] Human foresight, even in the followers of Christ, is very short. In a thousand instances, if we supply not its deficiency by faith, we shall be always embarrassed, and often miserable.

A. M. 4032.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCL 4.

35 And he commanded the multitude to sit down on the ground.

36 And ^b he took the seven loaves and the fishes, and ^c gave thanks, and brake them, and gave to his disciples, and the disciples to the multitude.

37 And they did all eat, and were filled : and

^b Chap. xiv. 19.—^c 1 Sam. ix. 13; Luke xxii. 19.

This world is a desert, where nothing can be found to satisfy the soul of man, but the salvation which Christ has procured.

Verse 37. 'They did all eat, and were filled' Εχοπασθησαν—they were satisfied. The husks of worldly pleasures may fill the man, but cannot satisfy the soul. A man may eat, and not be satisfied : it is the interest therefore of every follower of Christ to follow him till he be fed, and to feed on him till he be satisfied.

Verse 38. Four thousand] Let the poor learn from these miracles to trust in God for support. Whatever his ordinary providence denies, his miraculous power will supply.

Verse 39. He sent away the multitude] But not before he had instructed their souls, and fed and healed their bodies.

The coasts of Magdala.] In the parallel place, Mark viii. 10, this place is called Dalmanutha. Either Magdala was formed by a transposition of letters from Dalman, to which the Syriac termination atha had been added, or the one of these names refers to the country, and the other to a town in that neighbourhood. Jesus went into the country, and proceeded till he came to the chief town or village in that district. Whitby says, "Magdala was a city and territory beyond Jordan, on the banks of Gadara. It reached to the bridge above Jordan, which joined it to the other side of Galilee, and contained within its precincts Dalmanutha." The MSS. and VV. read the name variously—Magada, Mageda, Magdala; and the Syriac has Magdu. In Mark, Dalmanutha is read by many MSS. Melagada, Madegada, Magada, Magidan, and Magedam. Magdala, variously pronounced, seems to have been the place or country; Dalmanutha, the chief town or capital.

In this chapter a number of interesting and instructive particulars are contained.

1. We see the extreme superstition, envy, and incurable ill nature of the Jews. While totally lost to a proper sense of the spirituality of God's law, they are ceremonious in the extreme. They will not eat without washing their hands, because this would be a transgression of one of the traditions of their elders; but they can harbour the worst tempers and passions, and thus break the law of God! The word of man weighs more with them than the testimony of Jehovah; and yet they pretend the highest respect for their God and sacred things, and will let their parents perish for they took up of the broken meat that was left, seven baskets full.

A. M. 4032.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCL 4.

38 And they that did eat were four thousand men, beside women and children.

39 ^d And he sent away the multitude, and took ship, and came into the coasts of Magdala lack of the necessaries of life, that they may have goods to vow to the service of the sanctuary! Pride and envy blind the hearts of men, and cause them often to act not only the most wicked, but the most ridiculous, parts. He who takes the book of God for the rule of his faith and practice can never go astray: but to the mazes and perplexities produced by the traditions of elders, human creeds, and confessions of faith, there is no end. These evils existed in the Christian as well as in the Jewish Church; but the Reformation, thank God! has liberated us from this endless system of uncertainty and absurdity, and the Sun of righteousness shines now unclouded! The plantation, which God did not plant, in the course of his judgments, he has now swept nearly away from the face of the earth! Babylon is fallen!

^d Mark viii. 10.

2. We wonder at the dulness of the disciples, when we find that they did not fully understand our Lord's meaning, in the very obvious parable about the blind leading the blind. But should we not be equally struck with their prying, inquisitive temper? They did not understand, but they could not rest till they did. They knew that their Lord could say nothing that had not the most important meaning in it: this meaning, in the preceding parable, they had not apprehended, and therefore they wished to have it farther explained by himself. Do we imitate their docility and eagerness to comprehend the truth of God? Christ presses every occurrence into a means of instruction. The dulness of the disciples in the present case, has been the means of affording us the fullest instruction on a point of the utmost importance—the state of a sinful heart, and how the thoughts and passions conceived in it defile and pollute it: and how necessary it is to have the fountain purified, that it may cease to send forth those streams of death.

3. The case of the Canaanitish woman is, in itself, a thousand sermons. Her faith—her prayers—her perseverance—her success—the honour she received from her Lord, &c., &c. How instructively—how powerfully do these speak and plead! What a profusion of light does this single case throw upon the manner in which Christ sometimes exercises the faith and patience of his followers! They that seek shall find, is the great lesson inculcated in this short history: God is ever the same. Reader, follow on after God—cry, pray, plead—all in Him is for thee!—Thou canst not perish, if thou continuest to believe and pray. The Lord will help thee.

CHAPTER XVI.

The Pharisees insidiously require our Lord to give them a sign, 1. They are severely rebuked for their hypocrisy and wickedness, 2-5. The disciples are cautioned to beware of them and their destructive doctrine, 6-12. The different opinions formed by the people of Christ, 13, 14. Peter's confession, and our Lord's discourse on it, 15-20. He foretells his sufferings, and reproves Peter, 21-23. Teaches the necessity of self-denial, and shows the reasons on which it is founded, 24-26. Speaks of a future judgment, 27. And promises the speedy opening of the glory of his own kingdom on earth, 28.

A. M. 4032.
A. D. 28.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 4.

THE ^a Pharisees also with the Sadducees came, and tempting, desired him that he would show them ^b a sign from heaven.

A. M. 4032.
A. D. 28.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 4.

2 He answered and said unto

^a Chap. xii. 38; Mark viii. 11; Luke xi. 16; xii. 54-56;

I Cor. i. 22.—^b John vi. 30; chap. xii. 39; John iv. 48.

NOTES ON CHAP. XVI.

Verse 1. The Pharisees also with the Sadducees. Though a short account of these has been already given in a note on chap. iii. 7, yet, as one more detailed may be judged necessary, I think it proper to introduce it in this place.

The PHARISEES were the most considerable sect among the Jews, for they had not only the scribes, and all the learned men of the law of their party, but they also drew after them the bulk of the people. When this sect arose is uncertain. Josephus, Antiq. lib. v. c. xiii. s. 9, speaks of them as existing about 144 years before the Christian era. They had their appellation of Pharisees, from פָּרָשׁ parash, to separate, and were probably, in their rise, the most holy people among the Jews, having separated themselves from the national corruption, with a design to restore and practise the pure worship of the Most High. That they were greatly degenerated in our Lord's time is sufficiently evident; but still we may learn, from their external purity and exactness, that their principles in the beginning were holy. Our Lord testifies that they had cleansed the outside of the cup and the platter, but within they were full of abomination. They still kept up the outward regulations of the institution, but they had utterly lost its spirit; and hypocrisy was the only substitute now in their power for that spirit of piety which I suppose, and not unreasonably, characterized the origin of this sect.

As to their religious opinions, they still continued to credit the being of a God; they received the five books of Moses, the writings of the prophets, and the hagiographa. The hagiographa or holy writings, from ἅγιος holy, and γράφω I write, included the twelve following books—Psalms, Proverbs, Job, Canticles, Ruth, Lamentations, Ecclesiastes, Esther, Daniel, Ezra, Nehemiah, and Chronicles. These, among the Jews, occupied a middle place between the law and the prophets, as divinely inspired. The Pharisees believed, in a confused way, in the resurrection, though they received the Pythagorean doctrine of the metempsychosis, or transmigration of souls. Those, however, who were notoriously wicked, they consigned, on their death, immediately to hell, without the benefit of transmigration, or the hope of future redemption. They held also the predestinarian doctrine of necessity, and the government of the world by fate; and yet, inconsistently, allowed some degree of liberty to the human will. See Prideaux.

The SADDUCEES had their origin and name from one Sadoc, a disciple of Antigonus of Socho, president of the Sanhedrin, and teacher of the law in one of the great divinity schools in Jerusalem, about 264 years before the incarnation.

This Antigonus having often in his lectures informed his scholars, that they should not serve God through expectation of a reward, but through love and filial reverence only, Sadoc inferred from this teaching that there were neither rewards nor punishments after this life, and, by consequence, that there was no resurrection of the dead, nor angel, nor spirit, in the invisible world; and that man is to be rewarded or punished here for the good or evil he does.

They received only the five books of Moses, and rejected all unwritten traditions. From every account we have of this sect, it plainly appears they were a kind of mongrel deists, and professed materialists. See Prideaux, and the authors he quotes, Connex. vol. iii. p. 95, and 471, &c., and see the note on chap. iii. 7.

In chap. xxii. 16, we shall meet with a third sect, called HERODIANS, of whom a few words may be spoken here. It is allowed on all hands that these did not exist before the time of Herod the Great, who died only three years after the incarnation of our Lord. What the opinions of these were is not agreed among the learned. Many of the primitive fathers believed that their distinguishing doctrine was, that they held Herod to be the Messiah; but it is not likely that such an opinion could prevail in our Saviour's time, thirty years after Herod's death, when not one characteristic of Messiahship had appeared in him during his life. Others suppose that they were Herod's courtiers, who flattered the passions of their master, and, being endowed with a convenient conscience, changed with the times; but, as Herod was now dead upwards of thirty years, such a sect could not exist in reference to him; and yet all allow that they derived their origin from Herod the Great.

Our Lord says, Mark viii. 3, that they had the leaven of Herod, i. e. a bad doctrine, which they received from him. What this was may be easily discovered: 1. Herod subjected himself and his people to the dominion of the Romans, in opposition to that law, Deut. xvii. 15, Thou shalt not set a king over thee—which is not thy brother, i. e. one out of the twelve tribes. 2. He built temples, set up images, and joined in heathenish worship, though he professed

A. M. 4032.

A. D. 28.

An. Olymp.

CCL. 4.

them, When it is evening, ye say,

° *It will be fair weather: for the sky is red.*3 And in the morning, It will be foul weather to-day: for the sky is red and lowering.° (ye hypocrites ye can discern the face of the sky; but can ye not discern the signs of the times?)

4 ° A wicked and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given unto it, but the sign of the prophet the Jewish religion; and this was in opposition to all the law and the prophets. From this we may learn that the Herodians were such as, first, held it lawful to transfer the Divine government to a heathen ruler; and, secondly, to conform occasionally to heathenish rites in their religious worship. In short, they appear to have been persons who trimmed between God and the world—who endeavoured to reconcile his service with that of mammon—and who were religious just as far as it tended to secure their secular interests. It is probable that this sect was at last so blended with, that it became lost in, the sect of the Sadducees; for the persons who are called Herodians, Mark viii. 15, are styled Sadducees in ver. 6 of this chapter. See Prideaux, Con. vol. iii. p. 516, &c., and Josephus, Antiq. B. xv. c. viii. s. i. and x. s. iii. But it is very likely that the Herodians, mentioned c. xxii. 10, were courtiers or servants of Herod king of Galilee. See the note there.

° Luke xii. 54, 55.—° Luke xii. 56.—° Chap. xii. 39

Show them a sign] These sects, however opposed among themselves, most cordially unite in their opposition to Christ and his truth. That the kingdom of Satan may not fall, all his subjects must fight against the doctrine and maxims of the kingdom of Christ.

Tempting—him] Feigning a desire to have his doctrine fully proved to them, that they might credit it, and become his disciples; but having no other design than to betray and ruin him.

Verse 2. When it is evening] There are certain signs of fair and foul weather, which ye are in the constant habit of observing, and which do not fail.—The signs of the times: the doctrine which I preach, and the miracles which I work among you, are as sure signs that the day-spring from on high has visited you for your salvation; but if ye refuse to hear, and continue in darkness, the red and gloomy cloud of vindictive justice shall pour out such a storm of wrath upon you as shall sweep you from the face of the earth.

Verse 3. The sky is red and lowering.] The signs of fair and foul weather were observed in a similar manner among the Romans, and indeed among most other people. Many treatises have been written on the subject: thus a poet:—

Cæruleus pluviam denunciant, ignes euros.

Sin maculæ incipient rutilo immiscerier igni,

Omnia tunc pariter vento nimisque videbis

Fervere.

VIRG. Geor. i. l. 453.

Jonas. And he left them, and departed.

A. M. 4032.

A. D. 28.

An. Olymp.

CCL. 4.

5 ¶ And when his disciples were come to the other side, they had forgotten to take bread.

6 Then Jesus said unto them, ° Take heed and beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees.

7 And they reasoned among themselves, saying, It is because we have taken no bread.

8 Which, when Jesus perceived, he said un-

° Mark viii. 14.—° Luke xii. 1.

“If fiery red his glowing globe descends,
High winds and furious tempests he portends:
But if his cheeks are swoll’n with livid blue,
He bodes wet weather, by his watery hue;
If dusky spots are varied on his brow,
And streak’d with red a troubled colour show.
That sullen mixture shall at once declare,
Wind, rain, and storms, and elemental war.”

DRYDEN.

Verse 4. Wicked and adulterous generation] The Jewish people are represented in the Sacred Writings as married to the Most High; but, like a disloyal wife, forsaking their true husband, and uniting themselves to Satan and sin. Seeketh after a sign, ζητειον επισημειον, seeketh sign upon sign, or, still another sign. Our blessed Lord had already wrought miracles sufficient to demonstrate both his Divine mission and his divinity: only one was farther necessary to take away the scandal of his cross and death, to fulfil the Scriptures, and to establish the Christian religion; and that was, his resurrection from the dead, which, he here states, was typified in the case of Jonah.

Verse 5. Come to the other side] Viz. the coast of Bethsaida, by which our Lord passed, going to Cæsarea, for he was now on his journey thither. See ver. 13, and Mark viii. 22, 27.

Verse 6. Beware of the leaven] What the leaven of Pharisees and Sadducees was has been already explained, see ver. 1. Bad doctrines act in the soul as leaven does in meal; they assimilate the whole spirit to their own nature. A man’s particular creed has a greater influence on his tempers and conduct than most are aware of. Pride, hypocrisy, and worldly-mindedness, which constituted the leaven of the Pharisees and Sadducees, ruin the major part of the world.

Verse 7. They reasoned] For, as Lightfoot observes, the term leaven was very rarely used among the Jews to signify doctrine, and therefore the disciples did not immediately apprehend his meaning. In what a lamentable state of blindness is the human mind! Bodily wants are perceived with the utmost readiness, and a supply is sought with all speed. But the necessities of the soul are rarely discovered, though they are more pressing than those of the body, and the supply of them of infinitely more importance.

Verse 8. When Jesus perceived, he said] Ατρος unto them, is wanting in ΒΟΚΛΙΣ, and twenty others,

A. M. 4032.
A. D. 28.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 4.

to them, O ye of little faith, why reason ye among yourselves, because ye have brought no bread?

9 ^b Do ye not yet understand, neither remember the five loaves of the five thousand, and how many baskets ye took up?

10 ^c Neither the seven loaves of the four thousand, and how many baskets ye took up?

11 How is it that ye do not understand that I spake it not to you concerning bread, that ye should beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees?

12 Then understood they how that he bade them not beware of the leaven of bread, but one of the Syriac, the Armenian, Ethiopic, Vulgate, and most of the Itala; also in Origen, Theophylact, and Lucifer Calaritanus. Mill approves of the omission, and Griesbach has left it out of the text.

^b Chap. xiv. 17; John vi. 9. — ^c Chap. xv. 34. — ^k Mark viii. 27; Luke ix. 18. — ^l Chap. xiv. 2; Luke ix. 7, 8, 9.

O ye of little faith] There are degrees in faith, as well as in the other graces of the Spirit. Little faith may be the seed of great faith, and therefore is not to be despised. But many who should be strong in faith have but a small measure of it, because they either give way to sin, or are not careful to improve what God has already given.

Verses 9 and 10. Do ye not yet understand—the five loaves—neither the seven]—See the notes on chap. xiv. 14, &c. How astonishing is it that these men should have any fear of lacking bread, after having seen the two miracles which our blessed Lord alludes to above! Though men quickly perceive their bodily wants, and are querulous enough till they get them supplied, yet they as quickly forget the mercy which they had received; and thus God gets few returns of gratitude for his kindnesses. To make men, therefore, deeply sensible of his favours, he is induced to suffer them often to be in want, and then to supply them in such a way as to prove that their supply has come immediately from the hand of their bountiful Father.

Verse 11. How is it that ye do not understand] We are not deficient in spiritual knowledge, because we have not had sufficient opportunities of acquainting ourselves with God; but because we did not improve the advantages we had. How deep and ruinous must our ignorance be, if God did not give line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little! They now perceived that he warned them against the superstition of the Pharisees, which produced hypocrisy, pride, envy, &c., and the false doctrine of the Sadducees, which denied the existence of a spiritual world, the immortality of the soul, the resurrection of the body, and the providence of God.

Verse 13. Casarea Philippi] A city, in the tribe of Naphtali, near to Mount Libanus, in the province of Iturea. Its ancient name was Dan, Gen. xiv. 14; afterwards it was called Lais, Judg. xviii. 7. But of the doctrine of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees.

13 ¶ When Jesus came into the coasts of Casarea Philippi, he asked his disciples, saying, ^k Whom do men say that I, the Son of man, am?

14 And they said, ^l Some say that thou art John the Baptist; some Elias; and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets.

15 He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am?

16 And Simon Peter answered and said, ^m Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God

17 And Jesus answered and said unto him,

^m Chap. xiv. 33; Mark viii. 29; Luke ix. 20; John vi. 69; xi. 27; Acts viii. 37; ix. 20; 1 John iv. 15; v. 5; Heb. i. 2, 5.

Philip the tetrarch, having rebuilt and beautified it, gave it the name of Casarea, in honour of Tiberus Cæsar, the reigning emperor: but to distinguish it from another Casarea, which was on the coast of the Mediterranean Sea, and to perpetuate the fame of him who rebuilt it, it was called Casarea Philippi, or Casarea of Philip.

When Jesus came] Ελθων δε ο Ιησους—when Jesus was coming. Not, when Jesus came, or was come, for Mark expressly mentions that it happened εν τη οδω, in the way to Casarea Philippi, chap. viii. 27, and he is Matthew's best interpreter.—WAKEFIELD.

Whom do men say] He asked his disciples this question, not because he was ignorant what the people thought and spoke of him; but to have the opportunity, in getting an express declaration of their faith from themselves, to confirm and strengthen them in it: but see on Luke ix. 20. Some, John the Baptist, &c. By this and other passages we learn, that the Pharisæic doctrine of the Metempsychosis, or transmigration of souls, was pretty general; for it was upon this ground that they believed that the soul of the Baptist, or of Elijah, Jeremiah, or some of the prophets, had come to a new life in the body of Jesus.

Verse 16. Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.] Every word here is emphatic—a most concise, and yet comprehensive, confession of faith.

The Christ, or Messiah, points out his divinity, and shows his office; the Son—designates his person; on this account it is that both are joined together so frequently in the new covenant. Of the living God—Του Θεου, του ζωντος, literally, of God the Living One. The C. Bezae has for Του ζωντος the Living One, Του σωτηρος, the Saviour, and the Cant. Dei Salvatoris, of God the Saviour.

Living—a character applied to the Supreme Being, not only to distinguish him from the dead idols of paganism, but also to point him out as the source of life, present, spiritual, and eternal. Probably there is an allusion here to the great name יהוה Yehve, or Yehovah, which properly signifies being or existence.

Verse 17. Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona] Or Simon, son of Jonah; so Bar-jonah should be trans

A. M. 4032.
A. D. 28.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 4.
Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona :
" for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but " my Father which is in heaven.

IS And I say also unto thee, That p thou art

^a Eph. ii. 8.—^o 1 Cor. ii. 10; Gal. i. 16.—^p John i. 42.
^q Eph. ii. 20; Rev. xxi. 14.

lated, and so it is rendered by our Lord, John i. 43. Flesh and blood—i. e. MAN;—no human being hath revealed this; and though the text is literal enough, yet every body should know that this is a Hebrew periphrasis for man; and the literal translation of it here, and in Gal. i. 16, has misled thousands, who suppose that flesh and blood signify earnal reason, as it is termed, or the unregenerate principle in man. Is it not evident, from our Lord's observation, that it requires an express revelation of God in a man's soul, to give him a saving acquaintance with Jesus Christ; and that not even the miracles of our Lord, wrought before the eyes, will effect this? The darkness must be removed from the heart by the Holy Spirit, before a man can become wise unto salvation.

Verse 18. Thou art Peter] This was the same as if he had said, I acknowledge thee for one of my disciples—for this name was given him by our Lord when he first called him to the apostleship. See John i. 42.

Peter, πετρος, signifies a stone, or fragment of a rock; and our Lord, whose constant custom it was to rise to heavenly things through the medium of earthly, takes occasion from the name, the metaphorical meaning of which was strength and stability, to point out the solidity of the confession, and the stability of that cause which should be founded on THE CHRIST, the SON of the LIVING GOD. See the notes at the end of Luke ix.

Upon this very rock, ἐπὶ ταύτῃ τῇ πέτρᾳ—this true confession of thine—that I am THE MESSIAH, that am come to reveal and communicate THE LIVING GOD, that the dead, lost world may be saved—upon this very rock, myself, thus confessed (alluding probably to Psa. cxviii. 22, The Stone which the builders rejected is become the HEAD-STONE of the CORNER: and to Isa. xxviii. 16, Behold I lay a Stone in Zion for a FOUNDATION)—will I build my Church, μον τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ, my assembly, or congregation, i. e. of persons who are made partakers of this precious faith. That Peter is not distinguished in our Lord's words must be evident to all who are not blinded by prejudice. Peter was only one of the builders in this sacred edifice, Eph. ii. 20, who himself tells us, (with the rest of the believers,) was built on this living foundation stone: 1 Pet. ii. 4, 5; therefore Jesus Christ did not say, on thee, Peter, will I build my Church, but changes immediately the expression, and says, upon that very rock, ἐπὶ ταύτῃ τῇ πέτρᾳ, to show that he neither addressed Peter, nor any other of the apostles. So, the supremacy of Peter, and the infallibility of the Church of Rome, must be sought in some other scripture, for they certainly are not to be found in this. On the meaning of the word Church, see at the conclusion of this chapter.

The gates of hell, πύλαι Ἀδου, i. e. the machinations

A. M. 4032.
A. D. 28.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 4.
Peter, and " upon this rock I will build my Church; and " the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.

19 " And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou

^a Job xxxviii. 17; Psa. ix. 13; cvii. 18; Isa. xxxviii. 10.
^b Chap. xviii. 18; John xx. 23.

and powers of the invisible world. In ancient times the gates of fortified cities were used to hold councils in, and were usually places of great strength. Our Lord's expression means, that neither the plots, stratagems, nor strength of Satan and his angels, should ever so far prevail as to destroy the sacred truths in the above confession. Sometimes the gates are taken for the troops which issue out from them: we may firmly believe, that though hell should open her gates, and vomit out her devil and all his angels, to fight against Christ and his saints, ruin and discomfiture must be the consequence on their part; as the arm of the Omnipotent must prevail.

Verse 19. The keys of the kingdom] By the kingdom of heaven, we may consider the true Church, that house of God, to be meant; and by the keys, the power of admitting into that house, or of preventing any improper person from coming in. In other words, the doctrine of salvation, and the full declaration of the way in which God will save sinners: and who they are that shall be finally excluded from heaven; and on what account. When the Jews made a man a doctor of the law, they put into his hand the key of the closet in the temple where the sacred books were kept, and also tablets to write upon; signifying, by this, that they gave him authority to teach, and to explain the Scriptures to the people.—Martin. This prophetic declaration of our Lord was literally fulfilled to Peter, as he was made the first instrument of opening, i. e. preaching the doctrines of the kingdom of heaven to the Jews, Acts ii. 41; and to the Gentiles, Acts x. 44—47; xi. 1; xv. 7.

Whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth] This mode of expression was frequent among the Jews: they considered that every thing that was done upon earth, according to the order of God, was at the same time done in heaven: hence they were accustomed to say, that when the priest, on the day of atonement, offered the two goats upon earth, the same were offered in heaven. As one goat therefore is permitted to escape on earth, one is permitted to escape in heaven, and when the priests cast the lots on earth, the priest also casts the lots in heaven. See Sohar. Lev. fol. 26; and see Lightfoot and Schoettgen. These words will receive considerable light from Lev. xiii. 3, 23: The priest shall look upon him (the leper) and pronounce him unclean. Heb. וְטִמָּא וְטָהַר vetimma otho, he shall pollute him, i. e. shall declare him polluted, from the evidences mentioned before. And in ver. 23: The priest shall pronounce him clean, וְטָהַר וְטָהַר vetiharo hacohen, the priest shall cleanse him, i. e. declare he is clean, from the evidences mentioned in the verse. In the one case the priest declared the person infected with the leprosy, and unfit for civil society, and, in the other, that the suspected person was clean

A. M. 4032.
A. D. 28.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 4.

shalt bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven.

† Chap. xvii. 9; Mark viii. 30; Luke ix. 21;

and might safely associate with his fellows in civil or religious assemblies. The disciples of our Lord, from having the keys, i. e. the true knowledge of the doctrine of the kingdom of heaven, should be able at all times to distinguish between the clean and the unclean, and pronounce infallible judgment; and this binding and loosing, or pronouncing fit or unfit for fellowship with the members of Christ, being always according to the doctrine of the Gospel of God, should be considered as proceeding immediately from heaven, and consequently as Divinely ratified.

That binding and loosing were terms in frequent use among the Jews, and that they meant bidding and forbidding, granting and refusing, declaring lawful or unlawful, &c., Dr. Lightfoot, after having given numerous instances, thus concludes:—

“To these may be added, if need were, the frequent (shall I say!) or infinite use of the phrases, אסור וכוּתֵר, bound and loosed, which we meet with thousands of times over. But from these allegations the reader sees, abundantly enough, both the frequency and the common use of this phrase, and the sense of it also; namely, first, that it is used in doctrine, and in judgments, concerning things allowed or not allowed in the law. Secondly, that to bind is the same with, to forbid, or to declare forbidden. To think that Christ, when he used the common phrase, was not understood by his hearers in the common and vulgar sense, shall I call it a matter of laughter, or of madness?

To this, therefore, do these words amount: When the time was come wherein the Mosaic law, as to some part of it, was to be abolished, and left off, and, as to another part of it, was to be continued and to last for ever, he granted Peter here, and to the rest of the apostles, chap. xviii. 18, a power to abolish or confirm what they thought good, and as they thought good; being taught this, and led by the Holy Spirit: as if he should say, Whatsoever ye shall bind in the law of Moses, that is, forbid, it shall be forbidden, the Divine authority confirming it; and whatsoever ye shall loose, that is, permit, or shall teach that it is permitted and lawful, shall be lawful and permitted. Hence they bound, that is forbade, circumcision to the believers; eating of things offered to idols, of things strangled, and of blood, for a time, to the Gentiles; and that which they bound on earth was confirmed in heaven. They loosed, that is, allowed purification to Paul, and to four other brethren, for the shunning of scandal: Acts xxi. 24: and, in a word, by these words of Christ it was committed to them, the Holy Spirit directing, that they should make decrees concerning religion, as to the use or rejection of Mosaic rites and judgments, and that either for a time, or for ever.

“Let the words be applied by way of paraphrase to the matter that was transacted at present with 20 † Then charged he his disciples that they should tell no man that he was Jesus the Christ.

A. M. 4032.
A. D. 28.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 4.

John xi. 27; I Cor. ii. 8; chap. viii. 4; ix. 30.

Peter: ‘I am about to build a Gentile Church,’ saith Christ, ‘and to thee, O Peter, do I give the keys of the kingdom of heaven, that thou mayest first open the door of faith to them; but if thou askest by what rule that Church is to be governed, when the Mosaic rule may seem so improper for it, thou shalt be so guided by the Holy Spirit, that whatsoever of the law of Moses thou shalt forbid them shall be forbidden; whatsoever thou grantest them shall be granted; and that under a sanction made in heaven.’ Hence, in that instant, when he should use his keys, that is, when he was now ready to open the gate of the Gospel to the Gentiles, Acts x., he was taught from heaven that the consorting of the Jew with the Gentile, which before had been bound, was now loosed; and the eating of any creature convenient for food was now loosed, which before had been bound; and he in like manner looses both these.

“Those words of our Saviour, John xx. 23, Whose sins ye remit, they are remitted to them, for the most part are forced to the same sense with these before us, when they carry quite another sense. Here the business is of doctrine only, not of persons; there of persons, not of doctrine. Here of things lawful or unlawful in religion, to be determined by the apostles; there of persons obstinate or not obstinate, to be punished by them, or not to be punished.

“As to doctrine, the apostles were doubly instructed. 1. So long sitting at the feet of their Master, they had imbibed the evangelical doctrine.

“2. The Holy Spirit directing them, they were to determine concerning the legal doctrine and practice, being completely instructed and enabled in both by the Holy Spirit descending upon them. As to the persons, they were endowed with a peculiar gift, so that, the same Spirit directing them, if they would retain and punish the sins of any, a power was delivered into their hands of delirring to Satan, of punishing with diseases, plagues, yea, death itself, which Peter did to Ananias and Sapphira; Paul to Elymas, Hymeneus, and Philetus, &c.”

After all these evidences and proofs of the proper use of these terms, to attempt to press the words into the service long assigned them by the Church of Rome, would, to use the words of Dr. Lightfoot, be “a matter of laughter or of madness.” No Church can use them in the sense thus imposed upon them, which was done merely to serve secular ends; and least of all can that very Church that thus abuses them.

Verse 20. Then charged he his disciples] Διέτειλετο, he strictly charged them. Some very good MSS. have ἐπειμύνητο, he severely charged—comminatus est,—he threatened. These are the readings of the Cod. Bezae, both in the Greek and Latin.

The Christ.] The common text has Jesus the Christ; but the word Jesus is omitted by fifty-four

A. M. 4032.

A. D. 28.

An. Olymp.

CCL. 4.

21 ¶ From that time forth began Jesus ^u to show unto his disciples, how that he must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders, and chief priests, and scribes, and be killed, and be raised again the third day.

22 Then Peter took him, and began to rebuke him, saying, ^v Be it far from thee, ^u Chap. xx. 17; Mark viii. 31; ix. 31; x. 33; Luke ix. 22; xviii. 31; xxiv. 6, 7.—^v Gr. Pity thyself.—^w See 2 Sam. xix. 22.

MSS., some of which are not only of the greatest authority, but also of the greatest antiquity. It is omitted also by the Syriac, later Persic, later Arabic, Slavonic, six copies of the Itala, and several of the fathers. The most eminent critics approve of this omission, and Griesbach has left it out of the text in both his editions. I believe the insertion of it here to be wholly superfluous and improper; for the question is, Who is this Jesus? Peter answers, He is, ὁ Χριστός, the Messiah. The word Jesus is obviously improper. What our Lord says here refers to Peter's testimony in ver. 16: Thou art the Christ—Jesus here says, Tell no man that I am the Christ, i. e. the MESSIAH; as the time for his full manifestation was not yet come; and he was not willing to provoke the Jewish malice, or the Roman envy, by permitting his disciples to announce him as the Saviour of a lost world. He chose rather to wait, till his resurrection and ascension had set this truth in the clearest light, and beyond the power of successful contradiction.

Verse 21. From that time forth began Jesus, &c.] Before this time our Lord had only spoken of his death in a vague and obscure manner, see chap. xii. 40, because he would not afflict his disciples with this matter sooner than necessity required; but now, as the time of his crucifixion drew nigh, he spoke of his sufferings and death in the most express and clear terms. Three sorts of persons, our Lord intimates, should be the cause of his death and passion: the elders, the chief priests, and the scribes. Pious Quesnel takes occasion to observe from this, that Christ is generally persecuted by these three descriptions of men: rich men, who have their portion in this life; ambitious and covetous ecclesiastics, who seek their ambition in this life; and conceited scholars, who set up their wisdom against the wisdom of God, being more intent on criticising words than in providing for the salvation of their souls. The spirit of Christianity always enables a man to bear the ills of life with patience; to receive death with joy; and to expect, by faith, the resurrection of the body, and the life of the world to come.

Verse 22. Then Peter took him] Προκαταλαβόμενος—took him up—suddenly interrupted him, as it were calling him to order—see Wakefield. Some versions give προκαταλαβόμενος the sense of calling him aside. The word signifies also to receive in a friendly manner—to embrace; but Mr. W.'s translation agrees better with the scope of the place. A man like Peter, who is of an impetuous spirit, and decides without consideration upon every subject, must of necessity be often in the wrong.

Lord: this shall not be unto thee.

A. M. 4032.

A. D. 28.

An. Olymp.

CCL. 4.

23 But he turned, and said unto Peter, Get thee behind me, ^w Satan: ^x thou art an offence unto me: for thou savourest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men.

24 ¶ ^y Then said Jesus unto his disciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny ^x Rom. viii. 7.—^y Chap. x. 38; Mark viii. 34; Luke ix. 23; xiv. 27; Acts xiv. 23; 1 Thess. iii. 3; 2 Tim. iii. 12.

Be it far from thee, Lord] Ἦναι σοι Κύριε. Be merciful to thyself, Lord: see the margin. So I think the original should be rendered. Peter knew that Christ had power sufficient to preserve himself from all the power and malice of the Jews; and wished him to exert that in his own behalf which he had often exerted in the behalf of others. Some critics of great note think the expression elliptical, and that the word Θεός, God, is necessarily understood, as if Peter had said, God be merciful to thee! but I think the marginal reading is the sense of the passage. The French, Italian, and Spanish, render it the same way. Blind and ignorant man is ever finding fault with the conduct of God. Human reason cannot comprehend the incarnation of the Almighty's fellow, (Zech. xiii. 7,) nor reconcile the belief of his divinity with his sufferings and death. How many Peters are there now in the world, who are in effect saying, This cannot be done unto thee—thou didst not give thy life for the sin of the world—it would be injustice to cause the innocent to suffer thus for the guilty. But what saith God? His soul shall be made an offering for sin—he shall taste death for every man—the iniquities of us all were laid upon him. Glorious truth! May the God who published it have eternal praises!

Verse 23. Get thee behind me, Satan] Ὑπαγε οπίσω μου σατανα. Get behind me, thou adversary. This is the proper translation of the Hebrew word שָׂטָן Satan, from which the Greek word is taken. Our blessed Lord certainly never designed that men should believe he called Peter, DEVIL, because he, through erring affection, had wished him to avoid that death which he predicted to himself. This translation, which is literal, takes away that harshness which before appeared in our Lord's words.

Thou art an offence unto me] Σκandalon μου εἰμι—Thou art a stumbling-block in my way, to impede me in the accomplishment of the great design.

Thou savourest not] That is, dost not relish, or ἁρνεῖς, or, thou dost not understand or discern the things of God—thou art wholly taken up with the vain thought that my kingdom is of this world. He who opposes the doctrine of the atonement is an adversary and offence to Christ, though he be as sincere in his profession as Peter himself was. Let us beware of false friendships. Carnal relatives, when listened to, may prove the ruin of those whom, through their mistaken tenderness, they wish to save. When a man is intent on saving his own soul, his adversaries are often those of his own household.

Verse 24. Will come after me] i. e. to be my dis-

A. M. 4032. himself, and take up his cross, and
A. D. 28. follow me.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 4.

25 For ^z whosoever will save his life, shall lose it: and whosoever will lose his life for my sake, shall find it.

26 For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or ^a what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?

^z Luke xvii. 33; John xii. 25.—^a Psa. xlix. 7, 8.—^b Chap. xxvi. 64; Mark viii. 38; Luke ix. 26.—^c Dan. vii. 10; Zech. xiv. 5; chap. xxv. 31; Jude 14.

ciple. This discourse was intended to show Peter and the rest of the disciples the nature of his kingdom; and that the honour that cometh from the world was not to be expected by those who followed Christ.

The principles of the Christian life are: First. To have a sincere desire to belong to Christ—If any man be willing to be my disciple, &c. Secondly. To renounce self-dependence, and selfish pursuits—Let him deny himself. Thirdly. To embrace the condition which God has appointed, and bear the troubles and difficulties he may meet with in walking the Christian road—Let him take up his cross. Fourthly. To imitate Jesus, and do and suffer all in his spirit—Let him follow me.

Let him deny himself] Ἀπαρνησάσθω may well be interpreted, Let him deny, or renounce, himself fully—in all respects—perseveringly. It is a compounded word, and the preposition απο abundantly increases the meaning. A follower of Christ will need to observe it in its utmost latitude of meaning, in order to be happy here, and glorious hereafter. A man's self is to him the prime cause of most of his miseries. See the note on Mark viii. 34.

Verse 25. For whosoever will save his life] That is, shall wish to save his life—at the expense of his conscience, and casting aside the cross, he shall lose it—the very evil he wishes to avoid shall overtake him; and he shall lose his soul into the bargain. See then how necessary it is to renounce one's self! But whatsoever a man loses in this world, for his steady attachment to Christ and his cause, he shall have amplified made up to him in the eternal world.

Verse 26. Lose his own soul] Or, lose his life, τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ. On what authority many have translated the word ψυχὴν, in the 25th verse, life, and in this verse, soul, I know not, but am certain it means life in both places. If a man should gain the whole world, its riches, honours, and pleasures, and lose his life, what would all these profit him, seeing they can only be enjoyed during life? But if the words be applied to the soul, they show the difficulty—the necessity—and importance of salvation. The world, the devil, and a man's own heart are opposed to his salvation; therefore it is difficult. The soul was made for God, and can never be united to him, nor be happy, till saved from sin: therefore it is necessary. He who is saved from his sin, and united to God, possesses the utmost felicity that the human soul can enjoy, either in this or the coming world: therefore, this salvation is important. See also the note on Luke ix. 25.

27 For ^b the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father ^c with his angels; ^d and then he shall reward every man according to his works.

28 Verily I say unto you, ^e There be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the Son of man coming in his kingdom.

^b Job xxxiv. 11; Psa. lxii. 12; Prov. xxiv. 12; Jer. xvii. 10; xxxii. 19; Rom. ii. 6; 1 Cor. iii. 8; 2 Cor. v. 10; 1 Pet. i. 17; Rev. ii. 23; xxii. 12.—^c Mark ix. 1; Luke ix. 23.

Verse 27. For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father] This seems to refer to Dan. vii. 13, 14. "Behold, one like the Son of man came—to the Ancient of Days—and there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, and nations, and languages should serve him." This was the glorious Mediatorial kingdom which Jesus Christ was now about to set up, by the destruction of the Jewish nation and polity, and the diffusion of his Gospel through the whole world. If the words be taken in this sense, the angels or messengers may signify the apostles and their successors in the sacred ministry, preaching the Gospel in the power of the Holy Ghost. It is very likely that the words do not apply to the final judgment, to which they are generally referred: but to the wonderful display of God's grace and power after the day of pentecost.

Verse 28. There be some—which shall not taste of death] This verse seems to confirm the above explanation, as our Lord evidently speaks of the establishment of the Christian Church after the day of pentecost, and its final triumph after the destruction of the Jewish polity; as if he had said, "Some of you, my disciples, shall continue to live until these things take place." The destruction of Jerusalem, and the Jewish economy, which our Lord here predicts, took place about forty-three years after this: and some of the persons now with him doubtless survived that period, and witnessed the extension of the Messiah's kingdom; and our Lord told them these things before, that when they came to pass they might be confirmed in the faith, and expect an exact fulfilment of all the other promises and prophecies which concerned the extension and support of the kingdom of Christ.

To his kingdom, or in his kingdom. Instead of βασιλεία, kingdom, four MSS., later Syriac, Coptic, Ethiopic, Saxon, and one copy of the Itala, with several of the primitive fathers, read δοξή, glory: and to this is added, τοῦ πατρὸς αὐτοῦ, of his Father, by three MSS. and the versions mentioned before. This makes the passage a little more conformable to the passage already quoted from Daniel; and it must appear, very clearly, that the whole passage speaks not of a future judgment, but of the destruction of the Jewish polity, and the glorious spread of Christianity in the earth, by the preaching of Christ crucified by the apostles and their immediate successors in the Christian Church.

1. The disciples, by being constantly with their Master, were not only guarded against error, but were taught the whole truth: we should neglect no opportunity of waiting upon God; while Jesus continues to teach, our ear and heart should be open to receive his instructions. That what we have already received may be effectual, we must continue to hear and pray on. Let us beware of the error of the Pharisees! They minded only external performances, and those things by which they might acquire esteem and reputation among men; thus, humility and love, the very soul of religion, were neglected by them: they had their reward—the approbation of those who were as destitute of vital religion as themselves. Let us beware also of the error of the Sadducees, who, believing no other felicity but what depended on the good things of this world, became the flatterers and slaves of those who could bestow them, and so, like the Pharisees, had their portion only in this life. All false religions and false principles conduct to the same end, however contrary they appear to each other. No two sects could be more opposed to each other than the Sadducees and Pharisees, yet their doctrines lead to the same end—they are both wedded to this world, and separated from God in the next.

2. From the circumstance mentioned in the conclusion of this chapter, we may easily see the nature of the kingdom and reign of Christ: it is truly spiritual and Divine; having for its object the present holiness and future happiness of mankind. Worldly pomp, as well as worldly maxims, were to be excluded from it. Christianity forbids all worldly expectations, and promises blessedness to those alone who bear the cross, leading a life of mortification and self-denial. Jesus Christ has left us an example that we should follow his steps. How did he live!—What views did he entertain?—In what light did he view worldly pomp and splendour! These are questions which the most superficial reader may, without difficulty, answer to his immediate conviction. And has not Christ said that the disciple is not above the Master? If he humbled himself, how can he look upon those who, professing faith in his name, are conformed to the world and mind earthly things? These disciples affect to be above their Lord; and as they neither bear his cross, nor follow him in the regeneration, they must look for another heaven than that in which he sits at the right hand of God. This is an awful subject; but how few of those called Christians lay it to heart!

3. The term church in Greek ἐκκλησία, occurs for the first time in ver. 18 of this chapter. The word simply means an assembly or congregation, the nature of which is to be understood from connecting circumstances; for the word ἐκκλησία, as well as the terms congregation and assembly, may be applied to any concourse of people, good or bad; gathered together for lawful or unlawful purposes. Hence, it is used, Acts xix. 32, for the mob, or confused rabble, gathered together against Paul, ἐκκλησία συγκεχυμένη, which the town-clerk distinguished, ver. 39, from a lawful assembly, εὐνομίᾳ ἐκκλησίᾳ. The Greek word ἐκκλησία seems to be derived from ἐκκαλεῖν, to call out of, or from, i. e. an assembly gathered out of a multitude; and must have some other word joined to it, to determine its nature: viz. the Church of God; the congregation collected by God, and devoted to his service. The Church of Christ: the whole company of Christians wheresoever found; because, by the preaching of the Gospel, they are called out of the spirit and maxims of the world, to live according to the precepts of the Christian religion. This is sometimes called the Catholic or universal Church, because constituted of all the professors of Christianity in the world, to whatever sects or parties they may belong: and hence the absurdity of applying the term Catholic, which signifies universal, to that very small portion of it, the Church of Rome. In primitive times, before Christians had any stated buildings, they worshipped in private houses; the people that had been converted to God meeting together in some one dwelling-house of a fellow-convert, more convenient and capacious than the rest; hence the Church that was in the house of Aquila and Priscilla, Rom. xvi. 3, 5, and 1 Cor. xvi. 19, and the Church that was in the house of Nymphas, Col. iv. 15. Now, as these houses were dedicated to the worship of God, each was termed κυρίου οἶκος kurion oikos, the house of the Lord; which word, in process of time, became contracted into κυριοικ kurioik, and κυριακή, kuriakē; and hence the kirk of our northern neighbours, and cyric kirk of our Saxon ancestors, from which, by corruption, changing the hard Saxon c into ch, we have made the word church. This term, though it be generally used to signify the people worshipping in a particular place, yet by a metonymy, the container being put for the contained, we apply it, as it was originally, to the building which contains the worshipping people.

In the proper use of this word there can be no such thing as THE church, exclusively; there may be a church, and the churches, signifying a particular congregation, or the different assemblies of religious people: and hence, the Church of Rome, by applying it exclusively to itself, abuses the term, and acts as ridiculously as it does absurdly. Church is very properly defined in the 19th article of the Church of England. to be “a congregation of faithful men, in the which the pure word of God is preached, and the sacraments duly administered, according to Christ’s ordinance.”

CHAPTER XVII.

The transfiguration of Christ, 1–8. Christ’s discourse with his disciples on the subject, 9–13. He heals a lunatic, 14–18. His discourse with his disciples on this subject also, 19–21. He foretells his own sufferings and death, 22, 23. He is required to pay tribute at Capernaum, 24–26; and provides the money by a miracle, 27.

A. M. 4032.
A. D. 28.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 4.

AND ^a after six days, Jesus taketh Peter, James, and John his brother, and bringeth them up into a high mountain, apart,

2 And was transfigured before them: ^b and his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light.

3 And, behold, there appeared unto them ^c Moses and Elias talking with him.

^a Mark ix. 2; Luke ix. 28. — ^b Rev. i. 16; Dan. x. 6. — ^c Luke ix. 30; Rev. xi. 3. — ^d Luke ix. 33. — ^e 2 Pet. i. 17.

NOTES ON CHAP. XVII.

Verse 1. After six days] Mark, ix. 2, has the same number; but Luke says, ix. 28, after eight days. The reason of this difference seems to be the following: Matthew and Mark reckon the days from that mentioned in the preceding chapter, to that mentioned in this; Luke includes both days, as well as the six intermediate: hence, the one makes eight, the other six, without any contradiction.

Peter, James, and John] He chose those that they might be witnesses of his transfiguration: two or three witnesses being required by the Scripture to substantiate any fact. Eminent communications of the Divine favour prepare for, and entitle to, great services and great conflicts. The same three were made witnesses of his agony in the garden, chap. xxvi. 37.

A high mountain] This was one of the mountains of Galilee; but whether Mount Tabor or not, is uncertain. Some think it was Mount Hermon. St. Luke says, Christ and his disciples went up into the mountain to pray, chap. ix. 28.

Verse 2. Was transfigured] That fulness of the Godhead, which dwelt bodily in Christ, now shone forth through the human nature, and manifested to his disciples not only that Divinity which Peter had before confessed, chap. xvi. 16, but also the glorious resurrection body, in which they should exist in the presence of God to eternity.

White as the light.] But the Cod. Bezae, some of the ancient versions, and several of the fathers, read ως χιων, as snow; and this is the reading in Mark ix. 3.

Verse 3. Moses and Elias] Elijah came from heaven in the same body which he had upon earth, for he was translated, and did not see death, 2 Kings ii. 11. And the body of Moses was probably raised again, as a pledge of the resurrection; and as Christ is to come to judge the quick and the dead, for we shall not all die, but all shall be changed, 1 Cor. xv. 51, he probably gave the full representation of this in the person of Moses, who died, and was thus raised to life, (or appeared now as he shall appear when raised from the dead in the last day,) and in the person of Elijah, who never tasted death. Both their bodies exhibit the same appearance, to show that the bodies of glorified saints are the same, whether the person had been translated, or whether he had died. It was a constant and prevalent tradition among the Jews, that both Moses and Elijah should appear in the times of the Messiah, and to this very tradition the disciples refer, ver. 10.

4 Then answered Peter, and said A. M. 4032.
A. D. 28.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 4.
unto Jesus, Lord, it is good for us to be here: if thou wilt, let us make here three tabernacles; ^d one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias.

5 ^e While he yet spake, behold, a bright cloud overshadowed them: and behold a voice out of the cloud, which said, ^f This is my beloved Son, ^g in whom I am well pleased; ^h hear ye him.

^f Chap. iii. 17; Mark i. 11; Luke iii. 32. — ^g Isa. xlii. 1. — ^h Deut. xviii. 15, 19; Acts iii. 22, 23.

We may conceive that the law in the person of Moses, the great Jewish legislator, and the prophets in the person of Elijah, the chief of the prophets, came now to do homage to Jesus Christ, and to render up their authority into his hands; as he was the END of the law, and the grand subject of the predictions of the prophets. This appears more particularly from what St. Luke says, chap. ix. 31, that Moses and Elijah conversed with our Lord on his death, which he was about to accomplish, (πληρουν to fulfil.) because in it. all the rites, ceremonies, and sacrifices of the law, as well as the predictions of the prophets, were fulfilled.

Verse 4. Peter said—let us make, &c.] That is, when he saw Moses and Elijah ready to depart from the mount, Luke ix. 33, he wished to detain them, that he might always enjoy their company with that of his Lord and Master, still supposing that Christ would set up a temporal kingdom upon earth.

Verse 5. A bright cloud overshadowed them] Or as six MSS. and Ephraim read it, a cloud of light, νεφελη φωτος; which reading GRIESBACH has admitted into the text. As a bright cloud, or a cloud of light could not overshadow, or cast any kind of shade, the word επεσκιασεν should be translated, surrounded them. A cloud was frequently the symbol of the Divine presence; but such a cloud had always something very remarkable in its appearance. Ezekiel, chap. i. 4, represents it as a great cloud, and a fire unfolding itself, and a brightness about it, and out of the midst thereof, as the colour of amber out of the midst of the fire; and in ver. 28, he tells us that this was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the Lord. See also Exod. xvi. 10: xl. 33, &c.: Ezek. xliii. 2, and 1 Chron. v. 14. But it was generally in a thick, dark cloud, that God manifested himself under the law; see Exod. xix. 9, and xx. 21. This might be designed as emblematical of the old covenant, which was but the shadow of the good things which were to come, Ileb. x. 1; and the cloud of light mentioned here, the emblem of that glorious display of God, in his Gospel, by which life and immortality were brought to light, 2 Tim. i. 10.

This is my beloved Son] Ουτος εστιν ο υιος μου ο αγαπητος. εν ω ευδοκησα, This is my Son, the beloved one, in whom I have delighted, or, been well pleased. God adds his testimony of approbation to what was spoken of the sufferings of Christ by Moses and Elijah; thus showing that the sacrificial economy of the old covenant was in itself of no worth, but as it referred to the grand atonement which Jesus was about

A. M. 4032.

A. D. 28.

An. Olymp.

CCL. 4.

6 ⁱ And when the disciples heard it, they fell on their face, and were sore afraid.

7 And Jesus came and ^k touched them, and said, Arise, and be not afraid.

8 And when they had lifted up their eyes, they saw no man, save Jesus only.

9 And as they came down from the mountain, ^l Jesus charged them, saying, Tell the ¹ 2 Pet. i. 18.—^k Dan. vii. 18; ix. 21; x. 10, 13.—^l Chap. xvi. 20; Mark viii. 30; ix. 9.

to make; therefore he says, In him HAVE I delighted, (ευδοκησα), intimating that it was in him alone, as typified by those sacrifices, that he HAD delighted through the whole course of the legal administration; and that it was only in reference to the death of his Son that he accepted the offerings and oblations made to him under the old covenant. Hear him. The disciples wished to detain Moses and Elijah that they might hear them: but God shows that the law which had been in force, and the prophets which had prophesied, until now, must all give place to Jesus; and he alone must now be attended to, as the way, the truth, and the life; for no man could now come unto the Father but through him. This voice seems also to refer to that prediction in Deut. xviii. 15. The Lord shall raise up a Prophet like unto me: HIM SHALL YE HEAR. Go no more to the law, nor to the prophets, to seek for a coming Messiah; for behold he is come! Hear and obey him, and him only.

This transfiguration must have greatly confirmed the disciples in the belief of a future state, and in the doctrine of the resurrection; they saw Moses and Elijah still EXISTING, though the former had been gathered to his fathers upwards of 1400 years, and the latter had been translated nearly 900.

Verse 6. Fell on their face] Dismayed by the voice, and dazzled by the glory of the cloud. So Daniel, chap. viii. 17, and Saul of Tarsus, Acts ix. 4.

Verse 7. Jesus came and touched them] Exactly parallel to this account is Dan. viii. 18, I was in a deep sleep, i. e. (a trance) on my face towards the ground; but he TOUCHED me, and set me upright. From Jesus alone are we to expect Divine communications, and by his power only are we able to bear and improve them. It is very likely that this transfiguration took place in the night, which was a more proper season to show forth its glory than the day time, in which a part of the splendour must necessarily be lost by the presence of the solar light. Besides, St. Luke, chap. ix. 37, expressly says, that it was on the next day after the transfiguration that our Lord came down from the mount.

Verse 9. Tell the vision to no man] See the note on chap. xvi. 20; and farther observe, that as this transfiguration was intended to show forth the final abolition of the whole ceremonial law, it was necessary that a matter which could not fail to irritate the Jewish rulers and people should be kept secret, till Jesus had accomplished vision and prophecy by his death and resurrection.

vision to no man, until the Son of A. M. 4032 man be risen again from the A. D. 28. dead. An. Olymp.
CCL. 4.

10 ¶ And his disciples asked him, saying, ^m Why then say the scribes that Elias must first come?

11 And Jesus answered and said unto them, Elias truly shall first come, and ⁿ restore all things;

^m Mal. iv. 5; chap. xi. 11; Mark ix. 11.—ⁿ Mal. iv. 6; Luke i. 16, 17; Acts iii. 21.

The whole of this emblematic transaction appears to me to be intended to prove, 1st. The reality of the world of spirits, and the immortality of the soul. 2dly. The resurrection of the body, and the doctrine of future rewards and punishments, see chap. xvi. 27. 3dly. The abolition of the Mosaic institutions, and the fulfilment of the predictions of the prophets relative to the person, nature, sufferings, death, and resurrection of Christ, and the glory that should follow. 4thly. The establishment of the mild, light-bringing, and life-giving Gospel of the Son of God. And 5thly. That as the old Jewish covenant and Mediatorship had ended, Jesus was now to be considered as the sole Teacher, the only availing offering for sin, and the grand Mediator between God and man. There are many very useful remarks on this transaction, by the late venerable Bp. Porteus.

Verse 10. His disciples] Instead of his disciples, some MSS., with the Coptic, Armenian, Vulgate, all the Itala except two, and Origen, read simply, οι μαθηται, THE disciples, i. e. those only who had been with him on the mount, Peter, James, and John.

Why then say the scribes that Elias must first come?] As the disciples saw that Elijah returned to heaven, knowing the tradition of the elders, and the prophecy on which the tradition was founded, Mal. iv. 5, 6, Behold I send you Elijah the prophet, before the great and terrible day of the Lord shall come; and he shall turn the hearts, &c., it was natural enough for them to inquire what the meaning of the tradition, and the intention of the prophecy, were.

Verse 11. Elias—shall first come, and restore all things.] Or will reform, αποκαταστήσει; this word our Lord quotes from the Septuagint; who render the Hebrew והשיב לב אבות על בנים rehesheb leb aboth al banim, he will cause the heart of the fathers to turn to the children, by, ος αποκαταστήσει καρδιαν πατρος προς υιον, who will convert, or restore, the heart of the father to the son. We are not therefore to understand the version of the Septuagint quoted by our Lord in any other sense than the Hebrew will allow. No fanciful restoration of all men, devils and damned spirits, is spoken of as either being done, or begun, by the ministry of John; but merely that he should preach a doctrine tending to universal reformation of manners, and should be greatly successful: see Matt. iii. 1–7, and especially Luke iii. 3–15, where we find that a general reformation had taken place, 1. among the common people; 2. among the tax-gatherers: and 3. among the soldiers. And as John announced the

A. M. 4032.
A. D. 28.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 4.
12 ° But I say unto you, That Elias is come already, and they knew him not, but ^p have done unto him whatsoever they listed : Likewise ^q shall also the Son of man suffer of them.

13 ^r Then the disciples understood that he spake unto them of John the Baptist.

14 ¶ ^s And when they were come to the multitude, there came to him a certain man, kneeling down to him, and saying,

15 Lord, have mercy on my son : for he is coming Christ, who was to baptize with the Holy Ghost, i. e. to enlighten, change, and purify the heart, that the reform might be complete, both outward and inward, he may be said, in the strictest sense of the word, to have fulfilled the prophecy : and that he was the Elijah mentioned by Malachi, the words of (Gabriel to the virgin Mary prove ; Luke i. 17. And he (John) shall go before him (Christ) in the spirit and power of Elijah, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient to the wisdom of the just, &c. ; and that his ministry was powerfully effectual for this purpose, we have already seen.

° Chap. xi. 14; Mark ix. 12, 13.—^p Chap. xiv. 3, 10.—^q Chap. xvi. 21.—^r Chap. xi. 14.

Verse 12. Knew him not] Or, οὐκ ἐγινώσκον αὐτόν, They have not acknowledged him. That is, the Jewish rulers have not acknowledged him, did not receive him as the forerunner of the Messiah. But it appears that all the rest acknowledged him as such ; and some, from the power and demonstration of his preaching, were inclined to think he was more, even the Messiah himself : see Luke iii. 15.

Verse 13. Then the disciples understood] When he spoke of the sufferings of this prophetic Elijah, and also of his own, which had been the subject of the conversation on the mount, during the transfiguration, they clearly apprehended that he spoke of John the Baptist.

Verse 14. When they were come to the multitude] It appears that a congregation had been collected during our Lord's stay on the mount : how great must have been the desire of these people to hear the words of 'Christ !' The assembly is self-collected, and no delay on the preacher's side discourages them—they continue to wait for him. In the present day how rare is this zeal ! How few by the most pathetic invitation can be brought together, even at the most convenient times, to hear the same doctrines, and to get their souls healed by the same wonder-working Christ !

Kneeling down to him] Or falling at his knees, γυνυπετών. The ancients consecrated the EAR to memory ; the FOREHEAD to genius ; the RIGHT HAND to faith ; and the KNEES to mercy : hence those who entreated favour fell on and touched the knees of the person whose kindness they supplicated. See Wakefield's Commentary ; and see the note on Exod. ix. 29 ; where the subject is largely explained.

Verse 15. My son—is lunatic] Σεληνιαζεται. One

A. M. 4032.
A. D. 28.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 4.
lunatic, and sore vexed : ^t for oftentimes he falleth into the fire, and oft into the water.

16 And I brought him to thy disciples, and they could not cure him.

17 Then Jesus answered and said, ^u O faithless and perverse generation, how long shall I be with you ? how long shall I suffer you ? bring him hither to me.

18 And Jesus rebuked the devil ; and he departed out of him : and the child was cured from that very hour.

° Mark ix. 14 ; Luke ix. 37.—^t Chap. iv. 24 ; Acts x. 38 who was most affected with this disorder at the change and full of the moon. See on chap. iv. 24. But this lunacy was occasioned by a demon, see ver. 18, and Mark ix. 17 ; Luke ix. 38. In this case, the devil intended to hide himself under the appearance of a natural disorder, that no supernatural means might be resorted to for his expulsion. See a remarkable account on Luke ix. 39.
^u Mark ix. 19.

Falleth oftentimes into the fire, and oft into the water.] The paroxysms of his disorder frequently recurred ; and among his numerous falls, some were into the fire and some into the water : so that, on this account, his life was in continual danger. Those who are under the influence of the devil are often driven to extremes in every thing. Such are often driven into the fire of presumption, or the waters of despair. Satan takes advantage of our natural temper, state of health, and outward circumstances, to plague and ruin our souls.

Verse 16. Thy disciples—could not cure him.] No wonder, when the cure must be effected by supernatural agency, and they had not faith enough to interest the power of God in their behalf, ver. 20. A spiritual disorder must have a spiritual remedy : natural means, in such cases, signify just—nothing.

Verse 17. O faithless and perverse generation!] These and the following words may be considered as spoken : 1. To the disciples, because of their unbelief, verse 20. 2. To the father of the possessed, who should have brought his son to Christ. 3. To the whole multitude, who were slow of heart to believe in him as the Messiah, notwithstanding the miracles which he wrought. See ΚΥΡΚΕ.

Perverse, διστραμμενη, signifies—1. Such as are influenced by perverse opinions, which hinder them from receiving the truth : and, 2. Such as are profligate in their manners. ΚΥΡΚΕ. This last expression could not have been addressed to the disciples, who were certainly saved from the corruption of the world, and whose minds had been lately divinely illuminated by what passed at and after the transfiguration : but at all times the expression was applicable to the Jewish people.

Verse 18. Jesus rebuked the devil] Deprived him of all power to torment the child ; and obliged him to abandon his present usurped habitation.

There are some souls whose cure God reserves to

A. M. 4032.

A. D. 28.

An. Olymp.

CCL. 4.

19 Then came the disciples to Jesus apart, and said, Why could not we cast him out ?

20 And Jesus said unto them, Because of your unbelief: for verily I say unto you, * If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place; and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible unto you.

* Chap. xxi. 21; Mark xi. 23; Luke xvii. 6; 1 Cor. xii. 9; xiii. 2.

himself alone, and to whom all the applications of his ministers appear to be utterly ineffectual. He sometimes does all without them, that they may know they can never do any good without him. QUESNEL.

Verse 19. Why could not we cast him out ?] They were confounded at their want of success—but not at their want of faith, which was the cause of their miscarriage! When the ministers of the Gospel find their endeavours, with respect to some places or persons, ineffectual, they should come, by private prayer, to Christ, humble themselves before him, and beg to be informed whether some evil in themselves have not been the cause of the unfruitfulness of their labours.

Verse 20. Because of your unbelief] Are we preachers of the Gospel! Do the things of God rest upon our minds with a deep and steady conviction? Can we expect that a doctrine which we do not, from conviction, credit ourselves, can be instrumental in our hands of begetting faith in others! So we preached, and so ye believed. The word preached generally begets in the people the same spirit which the preacher possesses. Instead of ἀπιστιαν, unbelief, the famous Vatican MS. and Cod. Cyprian, six others, Coptic, Ethiopic, Armenian, and Arabic, Origen, and Chrysostom, read ὀλιγοπιστιαν, littleness of faith. The disciples had some faith, but not enough—they believed, but not fully.

As a grain of mustard seed] Some eminent critics think this a proverbial expression, intimating a GREAT DEGREE of faith, because removing mountains, which St. Paul, 1 Cor. xiii. 2, attributes to ALL FAITH; i. e. the greatest possible degree of faith, is attributed here, by our Lord, to that faith which is as a grain of mustard seed. However this may be, there can be no doubt that our Lord means, as BISHOP PEARCE well remarks, a thriving and increasing faith; which like the grain of mustard seed, from being the least of seeds, becomes the greatest of all herbs, even a tree in whose branches the fowls of the air take shelter. See WAKEFIELD'S Comment, and the note on chap. xiii. 32.

Verse 21. This kind goeth not out but by prayer, &c.] Τοῦτο τὸ γένος, this kind, some apply to the faith which should be exercised on the occasion, which goeth not out, doth not exert itself, but by prayer and fasting; but this interpretation is, in my opinion, far from solid. However, there is great difficulty in the text. The whole verse is wanting in the famous Vatican MS., one of the most ancient and most authentic perhaps in the world; and in another one of Colbert's, written in 21 Howbeit this kind goeth not out but by prayer and fasting.

22 ¶ * And while they abode in Galilee, Jesus said unto them, The Son of man shall be betrayed into the hands of men.

23 And they shall kill him, and the third day he shall be raised again. And they were exceeding sorry.

24 ¶ And * when they were come to Ca

* Chap. xvi. 21; xx. 17; Mark viii. 31; ix. 30, 31; x. 33; Luke ix. 22, 44; xviii. 31; xxiv. 6, 7.—Mark ix. 33.

the 11th or 12th century. It is wanting also in the Coptic, Ethiopic, Syriac, Hieros., and in one copy of the Itala. But all the MSS. acknowledge it in the parallel place, Mark ix. 29, only the Vatican MS. leaves out νηστια, fasting. I strongly suspect it to be an interpolation; but, if it be, it is very ancient, as Origen, Chrysostom, and others of the primitive fathers, acknowledged it. But while candour obliges me to acknowledge that I cannot account for the fact here alleged, that a certain class or genus of demons cannot be expelled but by prayer and fasting, while others may be ejected without them, I can give a sense to the passage which all my readers will easily understand: viz. that there are certain evil propensities, in some persons, which pompering the flesh tends to nourish and strengthen; and that self-denial and fasting, accompanied by prayer to God, are the most likely means, not only to mortify such propensities, but also to destroy them. For other remarkable circumstances relative to this case, see the notes on Mark ix. 17, &c.

Verse 22. They abode in Galilee] Lower Galilee, where the city of Capernaum was.

The Son of man shall be betrayed into the hands of men] Μελεῖται—παρὰδοσθαι εἰς χεῖρας—The Son of man is about to be delivered into the hands, &c. I am fully of the mind of two eminent critics, Grotius and Wakefield, that παρὰδοσθαι should be here translated delivered, or delivered up, not betrayed; and that the agency, in this case, should be referred to God, not to Judas. Jesus was delivered up, by the counsel of God, to be an atonement for the sin of the world. See Acts iv. 27 and 28. Against thy holy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed to do what thy hand and thy counsel determined before to be done, Herod and Pontius Pilate—were gathered together.

Verse 23. They were exceeding sorry] Since the conversation on the mount, with Moses and Elijah, Peter, James, and John could have no doubt that their Lord and Master must suffer, and that it was for this end he came into the world; but, while they submitted to the counsel of God, their affection for him caused them to feel exquisite distress.

Verse 24. They that received tribute] This was not a tax to be paid to the Roman government; but a tax for the support of the temple. The law, Exod. xxx. 13, obliged every male among the Jews to pay half a shekel yearly, for the support of the temple; and this was continued by them, wherever dispersed, till after

A. M. 4032.
A. D. 28.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 4.
pernaum, they that received ⁊ tribute money came to Peter, and said, Doth not your master pay tribute?

25 He saith, Yes. And when he was come into the house, Jesus prevented him, saying, What thinkest thou, Simon? of whom do the kings of the earth ⁂ take custom or tribute? of their own children, or of strangers?

26 Peter saith unto him, Of strangers. Jesus

⁂ Called in the original, didrachma, being in value fifteen pence; see Exod. xxx. 13; xxxviii. 26.—⁂ Exod. xxx. 13; Gal. iv. 4; Heb. iv. 15; Neh. x. 32.

the time of Vespasian, see Josephus, WAR, book vii. c. 6, who ordered it afterwards to be paid into the Roman treasury. The word in the text, which is generally translated tribute—ta didrachma, signifies the didrachma, or two drachms. This piece of money was about the value of two Attic drachms, each equal to fifteen pence of our money. The didrachma of the Septuagint, mentioned Exod. xxx. 13, was twice as heavy as the Attic, for it was equal to a whole shekel, this being the value of that piece of money at Alexandria, the place where the Septuagint translation was made; for the half shekel mentioned in the above passage, they render ἡμισιον τοῦ διδραχμοῦ, the half of a didrachma.

Verse 25. He saith, Yes.] From this reply of Peter, it is evident that our Lord customarily paid all taxes, tributes, &c., which were common among the people wherever he came. The children of God are subject to all civil laws in the places where they live—and should pay the taxes levied on them by public authority; and though any of these should be found unjust, THEY rebel not, as their business is not to reform the politics of nations, but the morals of the world.

Verse 26. Then are the children free] As this money is levied for the support of that temple of which I am the Lord, then I am not obliged to pay the tax; and my disciples, like the priests that minister, should be exempted from the necessity of paying.

Verse 27. Lest we—offend them] Be a stumbling-block to the priests, or rulers of the Jews, I will pay the tribute—go thou to the sea—cast a hook, and take the first fish—thou shalt find a piece of money, στράπα, a stater. This piece of money was equal in value to four drachms, or two shekels, (five shillings of our money,) and consequently was sufficient to pay the tribute for our Lord and Peter, which amounted to about half-a-crown each. If the stater was in the mouth or belly of the fish before, who can help admiring the wisdom of Christ, that discovered it there? If it was not before in the mouth of the fish, who can help admiring the power of Christ, that impelled the fish to go where the stater had been lost in the bottom of the sea, take it up, come towards the shore where Peter was fishing, and, with the stater in its mouth or stomach, catch hold of the hook that was to draw it out of the water? But suppose there was no stater there, which is as likely as otherwise, then Jesus created it for the purpose, and here his omnipotence was shown; for to make a thing exist that did not exist before is an act of unlimited power, however saith unto him, Then are the children free.

27 Notwithstanding, ⁂ lest we should offend them, go thou to the sea, and cast a hook, and take up the fish that first cometh up; and when thou hast opened his mouth, thou shalt find ⁂ a piece of money that take, and give unto them for me and thee.

⁂ Rom. xiv. 19; 1 Thess. v. 22; 1 Cor. viii. 13.—⁂ Or, a stater. It is half an ounce of silver, in value 2s. 6d., after 5s. the ounce.

small the thing itself may be. Some suppose that the haddock was the fish caught by Peter, because this fish has a blackish mark on each side of its neck or shoulders, as seems to exhibit the impression of a finger and thumb. The haddock is the gadus egle-sinus. But this, being a sea fish, could not be a native of the sea of Galilee or Tiberias, &c., for the river Jordan runs through the sea of Galilee, and falls into the Dead Sea, which has no outlet to the ocean: no sea fish of any kind can be found there; and we may add to this, that Belzoni, a learned traveller, who examined the produce of the lake of Tiberias, found only trouts, pikes, chevins, and tenches. That it may, besides these, have some fishes peculiar to itself, as most extensive fresh water lakes have, need not be denied; but it could have no sea fish.

THE account of the transfiguration, the peculiar case of the lunatic, with his cure, and the miracle wrought to pay the tribute money, render this one of the most interesting and instructive chapters in the New Testament.

1. To what has already been said on the subject of the transfiguration, nothing need be added: I have given that sense to it which the circumstances of the case, the construction of the words, and the analogy of faith warrant. That others have understood the whole transaction differently, is readily granted. Some of the foreign critics, who are also called divines, have stripped it, by their mode of interpretation, of all its strength, use, and meaning. With them, it is thus to be understood:—"Jesus, with his disciples, Peter, James, and John, went by night into a mountain, for the purpose of prayer and meditation; while thus engaged, the animal spirits of the disciples were overcome by watching and fatigue, and they fell asleep: in this sleep they dreamed, or Peter only dreamed, that he saw his Master encompassed with a glorious light, and that Moses and Elijah were conversing with him. That early in the morning, just as the sun was rising, there happened some electric or thunder-like explosions (a thing not unfrequent near some mountains) by which the disciples were suddenly awake; that Peter, whose mind was strongly impressed with his dream, seeing the rising sun shine gloriously upon his Master, and his strongly impressed senses calling to remembrance his late vision, he for a moment imagined he saw, not only the glory of which he had dreamed, but the persons also—Moses and Elijah, still standing on the mount with Christ; that not being as yet sufficiently awake, finding the images impressed on his imagination fleeting away with his returning exercise of reason, he cried out, before he was aware, Lord! it is good for us to be here, let us make three tabernacles, &c.; but in a short time, having recovered the regular use of his senses, he perceived that it was a dream; and, having told it to our Lord and his brother disciples, lest the Jews might take occasion of jealousy from it, he was desired to tell the vision to no man." This is the substance of that strange explanation given by those learned men to this extraordinary transaction; a mode of interpretation only calculated to support that system which makes it an important point to deny and decry all supernatural and miraculous influence, and to explain away all the spirituality of the New Testament. Whatever ingenuity may be in this pretended elucidation, every unprejudiced person must see that it can never be brought to accord with the letter and concomitant circumstances of this most remarkable case.

2. The cure of the deaf and dumb lunatic has been treated, by the same critics, in nearly the same way, and for the same obvious design, namely, to exclude from the world all supernatural agency; and could they succeed in this, of what value, or, indeed, utility, could the whole New Testament be to mankind! We might be well astonished to find such a history, with such a great variety of curious and apparently interesting circumstances:—a wondrous person, labouring, preaching, suffering, dying, &c., &c., without having scarcely any thing in view, but a sort of merely moral reformation of the outward man! Truly, this "Is like an ocean into tempest toss'd,

To waft a feather, or to drown a fly."

But the truth of God's miraculous interpositions, the miracles of the New Testament, demoniacal possessions and influence, the atonement, the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, the regeneration of the corrupted human heart, &c., &c., must not be given up to please a certain description of persons, who have no commerce with God themselves, and cannot bear that others should either have or pretend to it.

3. The miracle wrought for the paying of the temple tribute money, is exceedingly remarkable. The note on ver. 27, brings this particularly to view. To what is there said, it may be added, that our Lord seems to have wrought this miracle for the following purposes:—

1. More forcibly to impress the minds of his disciples, and his followers in general, with the necessity and propriety of being subject to all the laws of the different states, kingdoms, &c., wheresoever the providence of God might cast their lot.

2. To show forth his own unlimited power and knowledge, that they might be fully convinced that he knew all things, even to the most minute; and could do whatsoever he pleased; and that both his wisdom and power were continually interested in behalf of his true disciples.

3. To teach all believers a firm trust and reliance on Divine Providence, the sources of which can never be exhausted; and which, directed by infinite wisdom and love, will make every provision essentially requisite for the comfort and support of life. How many of the poor followers of Christ have been enabled to discern his kind hand, even in the means furnished them to discharge the taxes laid on them by the staté! The profane and the unprincipled may deride, and mock on, but the people of God know it to be their duty, and their interest, to be subject to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake; and, while his grace and providence render this obedience, in things both spiritual and secular, possible, his love, which their hearts feel, renders their duty their delight. The accomplishment of such ends as these is worthy both of the wisdom and benevolence of Christ.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The disciples inquiring who should be greatest in Christ's kingdom, 1. He takes occasion to recommend humility, simplicity, and disinterestedness, 2-6. Warns them against offences, 7. Recommends mortification and self-denial, 8, 9. Charges them to avoid giving offence, 10, 11. Parable of him who had lost one sheep out of his flock consisting of one hundred, 12-14. How to deal with an offending brother, 15-18. A gracious promise to social prayer, 19, 20. How often an offending brother who expresses sorrow, and promises amendment, is to be forgiven, 21, 22. The parable of the king, who calls his servants to account, and finds one who owed him ten thousand talents, who, being unable to pay, and imploring mercy, is forgiven, 23-27. Of the same person, who treated his fellow-servant unmercifully, who owed him but a small sum, 28-30. Of the punishment inflicted on this unmerciful servant, 31-35.

A. M. 4032.
A. D. 28.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 4.

AT^a the same time came the disciples unto Jesus, saying, ^b Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven?

^a Mark ix. 33; Luke ix. 46; xvii. 21.

NOTES ON CHAP. XVIII.

Verse 1. At the same time] Or hour; but ωρα is frequently used to signify some particular time: however, instead of ωρα, three MSS., all the Itala but

2 And Jesus called a little child unto him, and set him in the midst of them, A. M. 4032.
A. D. 28.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 4.

^b Chap. xxiv. 45; chap. xx. 20, &c.; Mark x. 37; Acts i. 6.

four, and Origen, read ἡμερα, day. Origen says both readings were extant in MSS. in his time.

Who is the greatest] Could these disciples have viewed the kingdom of Christ in any other light than

A. M. 4032
A. D. 28.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 4

3 And said, Verily I say unto you, ^c Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven.

4 ^d Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is that of a temporal one! Hence they wished to know whom he would make his prime minister—whom his general—whom his chief chancellor—whom supreme judge, &c., &c. Is it he who first became thy disciple, or he who is thy nearest relative, or he who has most frequently entertained thee, or he who is the oldest, merely as to years? Could this inquiry have proceeded from any but the nine disciples who had not witnessed our Lord's transfiguration? Peter, James, and John, were surely more spiritual in their views! And yet how soon did even these forget that his kingdom was not of this world! See Mark x. 35, &c.; John xviii. 10, &c. The disciples having lately seen the keys delivered to Peter, and found that he, with James and John, had been privileged with being present at the transfiguration, it is no wonder if a measure of jealousy and suspicion began to work in their minds. From this inquiry we may also learn, that the disciples had no notion of Peter's supremacy; nor did they understand, as the Roman Catholics will have it, that Christ had constituted him their head, either by the conversation mentioned chap. xvi. 18, 19, or by the act mentioned in the conclusion of the preceding chapter. Had they thought that any such superiority had been designed, their present question must have been extremely impertinent. Let this be observed.

^c Psa. cxxxi. 2; chap. xix. 14; Mark x. 14; Luke xviii. 16; 1 Cor. xiv. 20; 1 Pet. ii. 2.

Verse 2. A little child] But this child could walk, for he called him to him. Nicephorus says, this was Ignatius, who was afterwards bishop of Antioch, and suffered martyrdom under, and by command of, the Roman Emperor Trajan, in the 107th year of our Lord. But this good father is not much to be depended on, being both weak and credulous.

Verse 3. Except ye be converted] Unless ye be saved from those prejudices which are at present so baneful to your nation. (seeking a temporal and not a spiritual kingdom.) unless ye be clothed with the spirit of humility, ye cannot enter into the spirit, design, and privileges of my spiritual and eternal kingdom. The name of this kingdom should put you in mind of its nature.—1. The KING is heavenly; 2. His SUBJECTS are heavenly-minded; 3. Their COUNTRY is heavenly, for they are strangers and pilgrims upon earth; 4. The GOVERNMENT of this kingdom is wholly spiritual and divine. See on chap. iii. 2.

And become as little children] i. e. Be as truly without worldly ambition, and the lust of power, as little children are, who act among themselves as if all were equal. The following saying from the Booston of the poet Saady is very appropriate. "The hearts of infants being free from avarice, what care they for a handful of silver more than for a handful of dust?"

Verse 4. Whosoever therefore shall humble himself] greatest in the kingdom of heaven. A. M. 4032.

A. D. 28.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 4.

5 And ^e whoso shall receive one such little child in my name, receiveth me

6 ^f But whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better

^d Chap. xx. 27; xxiii. 11.—^e Chap. x. 42; Luke ix. 48.
^f Mark ix. 42; Luke xvii. 1, 2.

So great is the disparity between the kingdom of Christ and the kingdoms of this world, that there is no way of rising to honours in the former, but by humility of mind, and continual self-abasement.

The same is greatest] Thus our Lord shows them that they were all equal, and that there could be no superiority among them, but what must come from the deepest humility; he intimates also, that wherever this principle should be found, it would save its possessor from seeking worldly honours or earthly profits, and from seeking to be a ruler over his brethren, or a lord in God's heritage.

Verse 5. One such little child] As our Lord in the preceding verses considers a little child an emblem of a genuine disciple, so by the term in this verse he means a disciple only. "Whosoever will receive, i. e. show unto such a child-like, unambitious disciple of mine, any act of kindness for my sake, I will consider it as done to myself."

Verse 6. But whoso shall offend one of these little ones] But, on the contrary, whosoever shall cause one of the least of those who believe in me to be stumbled—to go into the spirit of the world, or give way to sin—such a one shall meet with the most exemplary punishment.

Let those who act the part of the devil, in tempting others to sin, hear this declaration of our Lord, and tremble.

A millstone] Μυλος ονικος, an ass's millstone, be cause in ancient times, before the invention of wind and water mills, the stones were turned sometimes by slaves, but commonly by asses or mules. The most ancient kind of mills among the inhabitants of the northern nations, was the quern, or hand-mill. In some places in Ireland, Scotland, and the Zetland Isles, these still exist.

Drowned in the depth of the sea.] It is supposed that in Syria, as well as in Greece, this mode of punishing criminals was practised; especially in cases of parricide; and when a person was devoted to destruction for the public safety, as in cases of plague, famine, &c. That this was the custom in Greece, we learn from the Scholast on the Equites of Aristophanes, Οταν γαρ καταποντουν τινας, βαρος απο των τραχηλων εκρεμων. When a person was drowned, they hung a weight, (υπερβολον λιθον, Suidas,) a vast stone about his neck. See the ancient Scholia upon the Equites, lin. 1360, and Suidas, in υπερβολον λιθον. We find also that it was a positive institute of the ancient Hindoo law. "If a woman," says the precept, "causes any person to take poison, sets fire to any person's house, or murders a man, then the magistrate, having bound a stone to her neck, shall drown her."—

A. M. 4032.

A. D. 28.

An. Olymp.

CCL. 4.

for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea.

7 ¶ Wo unto the world because of offences! for it must needs be that offences come; but h wo to that man by whom the offence cometh!

8 ⁱ Wherefore, if thy hand or thy foot offend thee, cut them off, and cast them from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life halt or maimed, rather than having two hands or two feet to be cast into everlasting fire.

9 And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life with one eye, rather than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire.

10 ¶ Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones; for I say unto you, That in heaven ^k their angels do always ^l behold the face of my Father which is in heaven.

11 ^m For the Son of man is come to save that which was lost.

12 ⁿ How think ye? if a man have a hundred sheep, and one of them be gone astray, doth he not leave the ninety and nine, and goeth into the mountains, and seeketh that which is gone astray?

^ε Luke xvii. 1; 1 Cor. xi. 19.—^h Chap. xxvi. 21.—ⁱ Chap. v. 29, 30; Mark ix. 43, 45.—^k Psa. xxxiv. 7; Zech. xiii. 7;

Heb. i. 11.—^l Esth. i. 14; Luke i. 19.—^m Luke ix. 56; ⁿ 10; John iii. 17; xii. 47.—ⁿ Luke xv. 4.

Halhead's Code of Gentoo Laws, 4to. edition, page 306.

Verse 7. Wo! Or, alas! ovai. It is the opinion of some eminent critics, that this word is ever used by our Lord to express sympathy and concern.

Because of offences] Scandals, stumbling-blocks, persecutions, &c.

For it must needs be that offences come] Avayke γαρ εστιν ελθειν τα σκανδαλα, for the coming of offences is unavoidable. Such is the wickedness of men, such their obstinacy, that they will not come unto Christ that they may have life, but desperately continue deceiving and being deceived. In such a state of things, offences, stumbling-blocks, persecutions, &c., are unavoidable.

Wo to that man] He who gives the offence, and he who receives it, are both exposed to ruin.

Verses 8 and 9. If thy hand, &c.] See the notes on chap. v. 29, 30.

Verse 10. One of these little ones] One of my simple, loving, humble disciples.

Their angels—always behold] Our Lord here not only alludes to, but, in my opinion, establishes the notion received by almost all nations, viz. That every person has a guardian angel; and that these have always access to God, to receive orders relative to the management of their charge. See Psa. xxxiv. 8; Heb. i. 14.

Always behold the face] Hence, among the Jews, the angels were styled מלאכי פנים, malakey panim, angels of the face, and Michael is said to be משר הפנים, sar ha-panim, the prince of the face. This is an allusion to the privilege granted by eastern monarchs to their chief favourites; a privilege which others were never permitted to enjoy. The seven princes of Media and Persia, who were the chief favourites and privy-counsellors of Ahasuerus, are said to see the king's face. Esth. i. 14; see also 2 Kings xxv. 19, and Jer. li. 25. Our Lord's words give us to understand that humble-hearted, child-like disciples, are objects of his peculiar care, and constant attention. The clause, εν ουρανους, in the heavens, is wanting in several MSS., versions, and fathers.

Verse 11. For the Son of man, &c.] This is added as a second reason, why no injury should be done to his followers. "The Son of man has so loved them as to come into the world to lay down his life for them."

That which was lost.] Απολωλος. In Rev. ix. 11. Satan is called Απολλων, Apolluon, the destroyer, or him who lays waste. This name bears a near relation to that state in which our Lord tells us he finds all mankind—lost, desolated, ruined. So it appears that Satan and men have the nearest affinity to each other—as the destroyer and the destroyed—the desolator and the desolated—the loser and the lost. But the Son of man came to save the lost. Glorious news! May every lost soul feel it! This verse is omitted by five MSS., two versions, and three of the fathers; but of its authenticity there can be no doubt, as it is found in the parallel place, Luke xix. 10, on which verse there is not a single various reading found in any of the MSS. that have ever been discovered, nor in any of the ancient versions.

Verse 12. Doth he not leave the ninety and nine, and goeth into the mountains] So our common translation reads the verse; others, Doth he not leave the ninety and nine upon the mountains, and go, &c. This latter reading appears to me to be the best; because, in Luke xv. 4, it is said, he leaveth the ninety and nine in the desert. The allusion, therefore, is to a shepherd feeding his sheep on the mountains, in the desert; not seeking the lost one on the mountains.

Leaving the ninety and nine, and seeking the one strayed sheep:—This was a very common form of speech among the Jews, and includes no mystery, though there are some who imagine that our Lord refers to the angels who kept not their first estate, and that they are in number, to men, as NINETY are to ONE. But it is likely that our Lord in this place only alludes to his constant solicitude to instruct, heal, and save those simple people of the sea coasts, country villages, &c., who were scattered abroad, as sheep without a shepherd, (chap. ix. 36.) the scribes and Pharisees paying no attention to their present or eternal well-being. This may be also considered as a lesson of

A. M. 4032. 13 And if so be that he find it,
A. D. 28.
An. Olymp. verily I say unto you, He rejoiceth CCI. 4. more of that sheep, than of the ninety and nine which went not astray.

14 Even so it is not the will of your Father which is in heaven, that one of these little ones should perish.

15 ¶ Moreover^o if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, ^pthou hast gained thy brother.

16 But if he will not hear thee, then take

^o Lev. xix. 17; Ecclus. xix. 13; Luke xvii. 3. — ^p Jam. v. 20; 1 Pet. iii. 1. — ^a Deut. xvii. 6; xix. 15; John viii. 17; 2 Cor.

instruction and comfort to backsliders. How hardly does Christ give them up!

Verse 13. He rejoiceth more] It is justly observed by one, on this verse, that it is natural for a person to express unusual joy at the fortunate accomplishment of an unexpected event.

Verse 14. It is not the will of your Father] If any soul be finally lost, it is not because God's will or counsel was against its salvation, or that a proper provision had not been made for it; but that, though light came into the world, it preferred darkness to light, because of its attachment to its evil deeds.

Verse 15. If thy brother] Any who is a member of the same religious society, sin against thee, 1. Go and reprove him alone,—it may be in person; if that cannot be so well done, by thy messenger, or in writing, (which in many cases is likely to be the most effectual.) Observe, our Lord gives no liberty to omit this, or to exchange it for either of the following steps. If this do not succeed, Verse 16. 2. Take with thee one or two more] Men whom he esteems, who may then confirm and enforce what thou sayest; and afterwards, if need require, bear witness of what was spoken. If even this do not succeed, then, and not before,

Verse 17. 3. Tell it unto the Church] Lay the whole matter before the congregation of Christian believers, in that place of which he is a member, or before the minister and elders, as the representatives of the Church or assembly. If all this avail not, then,

Let him be unto thee as a heathen man and a publican.] To whom thou art, as a Christian, to owe earnest and persevering good will, and acts of kindness; but have no religious communion with him, till, if he have been convicted, he acknowledge his fault. Whosoever follows this threefold rule will seldom offend others, and never be offended himself.—Rev. J. WESLEY.

Reproving a brother who had sinned was a positive command under the law. See Lev. xix. 17. And the Jews have a saying, that one of the causes of the ruin of their nation was, "No man reproveth another." On the word Church, see at the end of chap. xvi.

Verse 18. Whatsoever ye shall bind, &c.] Whatever determinations ye make, in conformity to these directions for your conduct to an offending brother, will be with thee one or two more, that A. M. 4032.

A. D. 28.
An. Olymp. in^a the mouth of two or three wit- An. Olymp.
CCI. 4. nesses every word may be established.

17 And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church: but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as a^r heathen man and a publican.

18 Verily I say unto you, ^sWhatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven. and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven.

xiii. 1; Heb. x. 28. — ^r Rom. xvi. 17; 1 Cor. v. 9; 2 Thess iii. 6, 14; 2 John 10. — ^s Chap. xvi. 19; John xx. 23; 1 Cor. v. 4.

accounted just, and ratified by the Lord. See on ch. xvi. 19; and, to what is there said, the following observations may be profitably added.

ὅσα εἰς δέσητε—καὶ ὅσα εἰς λύσητε. Binding and loosing, in this place, and in Matt. xvi. 19, is generally restrained, by Christian interpreters, to matters of discipline and authority. But it is as plain as the sun, by what occurs in numberless places dispersed throughout the Mishna, and from thence commonly used by the later rabbins when they treat of ritual subjects, that binding signified, and was commonly understood by the Jews at that time to be, a declaration that any thing was unlawful to be done; and loosing signified, on the contrary, a declaration that any thing may be lawfully done. Our Saviour spoke to his disciples in a language which they understood, so that they were not in the least at a loss to comprehend his meaning; and its being obsolete to us is no manner of reason why we should conclude that it was obscure to them. The words, bind and loose, are used in both places in a declaratory sense, of things, not of persons. It is ὅ and ὅσα, in the neuter gender, both in chap. xvi. and here in this: i. e. Whatsoever thing or things ye shall bind or loose. Consequently, the same commission which was given at first to St. Peter alone, (chap. xvi. 19,) was afterwards enlarged to all the apostles. St. Peter had made a confession that Jesus was the Christ, the Son of God. His confession of the Divinity of our Lord was the first that ever was made by man; to him, therefore, were given the keys of the kingdom of heaven: i. e. God made choice of him among all the apostles, that the Gentiles should first, by his mouth, hear the word of the Gospel, and believe. He first opened the kingdom of heaven to the Gentiles, when he preached to Cornelius. It was open to the Jews all along before; but if we should suppose that it was not, yet to them also did St. Peter open the kingdom of heaven, in his sermon at the great pentecost. Thus, then, St. Peter exercised his two keys: that for the Jews at the great pentecost; and that for the Gentiles, when he admitted Cornelius into the Church. And this was the reward of his first confession, in which he owned Jesus to be the promised Messiah. And what St. Peter loosed, i. e. declared as necessary to be believed and practised by the disciples here, was ratified above. And what he declared

A. M. 4032.
A. D. 28.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 4.
19 'Again I say unto you, That if two of you shall agree on earth, as touching any thing that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven.

20 For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them.

† Chap. v. 21.—* 1 John iii. 22; v. 14.—† Dan. ii. 17, 18; John xiv. 13-15; xvi. 23; Acts iii. 16; iv. 7; 1 Cor. v. 4.

unlawful to be believed and practised, (i. e. what he bound,) was actually forbidden by God himself.

I own myself obliged to Dr. Lightfoot for this interpretation of the true notion of binding and loosing. It is a noble one, and perfectly agrees with the ways of speaking then in use among the Jews. It is observable that these phrases, of binding and loosing, occur no where in the New Testament but in St. Mattheu, who is supposed to have written his Gospel first in Hebrew, from whence it was translated into Greek, and then the force and use of the expression will better appear. Dr. Wotton's Miscell. Discourses, vol. i. p. 309, &c., &c.

"The phrases to bind and to loose were Jewish, and most frequent in their writers. It belonged only to the teachers among the Jews to bind and to loose. When the Jews set any apart to be a preacher, they used these words, 'Take thou liberty to teach what is bound and what is loose.' " Strype's preface to the Posthumous Remains of Dr. Lightfoot, p. 38.

Verse 19. Again I say unto you] The word αὐν, verily, is added here, in ninety-eight MSS., (many of which are of the greatest antiquity and importance,) seven editions, all the Arabic, the Slavonic, and several of the Itala. The taking in or leaving out such a word may appear to some a matter of indifference; but, as I am fully convinced Jesus Christ never spoke a useless or a needless word, my maxim is, to omit not one syllable that I am convinced (from such authority as the above) he has ever used, and to take in nothing that he did not speak. It makes the passage much more emphatic—Again, VERILY I say unto you,

If two of you shall agree] Συμφωνησωσιν, sympphonize, or harmonize. It is a metaphor taken from a number of musical instruments set to the same key, and playing the same tune: here, it means a perfect agreement of the hearts, desires, wishes, and voices, of two or more persons praying to God. It also intimates that as a number of musical instruments, skillfully played, in a good concert, are pleasing to the ears of men, so a number of persons united together in warm, earnest, cordial prayer, is highly pleasing in the sight and ears of the Lord. Now this conjoint prayer refers, in all probability, to the binding and loosing in the preceding verse: and thus we see what power faithful prayer has with God!

It shall be done for them] What an encouragement to pray! even to two, if there be no more disposed to join in this heavenly work.

Verse 20. For where two—are gathered together in my name] There are many sayings among the Jews almost exactly similar to this, such as, Wherever even

A. M. 4032.
A. D. 28.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 4.
21 ¶ Then came Peter to him, and said, Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? * till seven times?

22 Jesus saith unto him, I say not unto thee Until seven times: * but, Until seventy times seven.

* Luke xvii. 4.—* Chap. vi. 14; Mark xi. 25; Col. iii. 13.

two persons are sitting in discourse concerning the law, the Divine presence is among them. See much more in Schoettgen. And the following, among the ancient Hindoos, is like unto it: "When Brahma, the Lord of creation, had formed mankind, and at the same time appointed his worship, he spoke and said, 'With this worship pray for increase, and let it be that on which ye shall depend for the accomplishment of all your wishes. With this remember God, that God may remember you. Remember one another, and ye shall obtain supreme happiness. God, being remembered in worship, will grant you the enjoyment of your wishes: he who enjoyeth what hath been given unto him by God, and offereth not a portion unto him, is even as a thief. Know that good works come from Brahma, whose nature is incorruptible; wherefore, the omnipresent Brahma is PRESENT IN THE WORSHIP.'" See the Bagvat Geeta, p. 45, 46.

In my name] Seems to refer particularly to a public profession of Christ and his Gospel.

There am I in the midst] None but God could say these words, to say them with truth, because God alone is every where present, and these words refer to his omnipresence. Wherever—suppose millions of assemblies were collected in the same moment, in different places of the creation, (which is a very possible case,) this promise states that Jesus is in each of them. Can any, therefore, say these words, except that God who fills both heaven and earth? But Jesus says these words: ergo—Jesus is God. Let it be observed, that Jesus is not among them to spy out their sins, or to mark down the imperfections of their worship; but to enlighten, strengthen, comfort, and save them.

Verse 21. Till seven times?] Though seven was a number of perfection among the Hebrews, and often meant much more than the units it imply, yet it is evident that Peter uses it here in its plain literal sense, as our Lord's words sufficiently testify. It was a maxim among the Jews never to forgive more than thrice: Peter enlarges this charity more than one half; and our Lord makes even his enlargement septuple, see ver. 22. Revenge is natural to man, i. e. man is naturally a vindictive being, and, in consequence, nothing is more difficult to him than forgiveness of injuries.

Verse 22. Seventy times seven.] There is something very remarkable in these words, especially if collated with Gen. iv. 24, where the very same words are used—"If any man kill LAMECH, he shall be avenged seventy times seven." The just God punishes sin in an exemplary manner. Sinful man, who is exposed to the stroke of Divine justice, should be abun-

A. M. 4032. 23 Therefore is the kingdom of
A. D. 28. heaven likened unto a certain king,
An. Olymp. which would take account of his
CCL. 4. servants.

24 And when he had begun to reckon, one was brought unto him, which owed him ten thousand ^v talents.

25 But forasmuch as he had not to pay, his lord commanded him ^z to be sold, and his wife, and children, and all that he had, and payment to be made.

26 The servant therefore fell down, and ^a worshipped him, saying, Lord, have patience

^v A talent is 750 ounces of silver, which, after five shillings the ounce, is 187l. 10s.—^z 2 Kings iv. 1; Neh. v. 8.—^a Or, besought him.

dant in forgiveness, especially as the merciful only shall find mercy. See the note on chap. v. 7, and on vi. 14, 15. The sum seventy times seven makes four hundred and ninety. Now an offence, properly such, is that which is given wantonly, maliciously, and without ANY PROVOCATION. It is my opinion, that, let a man search ever so accurately, he will not find that he has received, during the whole course of his life, four hundred and ninety such offences. If the man who receives the offence has given any cause for it, in that case, the half of the offence, at least, towards his brother, ceases.

Verse 23. Therefore is the kingdom] In respect to sin, cruelty, and oppressian, God will proceed in the kingdom of heaven (the dispensation of the Gospel) as he did in former times; and every person shall give an account of himself to God. Every sin is a debt contracted with the justice of God; men are all God's own servants; and the day is at hand in which their Master will settle accounts with them, inquire into their work, and pay them their wages. Great Judge! what an awful time must this be, when with multitudes nothing shall be found but sin and insolvency!

By servant, in the text, we are to understand, a petty king, or tributary prince; for no hired servant could possibly owe such a sum as is here mentioned.

Verse 24. Ten thousand talents] Μυρίων ταλάντων, a myriad of talents, the highest number known in Greek arithmetical notation. An immense sum, which, if the silver talent be designed, amounts to 4,500,000 sterling; but if the gold talent be meant, which is by far the most likely, then the amount is 67,500,000 sterling, a sum equal to the annual revenue of the British empire! See the note on Exod. xxv. 34. The margin above is incorrect.

Verse 25. He had not to pay] That is not being able to pay. As there could not be the smallest probability that a servant, wholly dependent on his master, who was now absolutely insolvent, could ever pay a debt he had contracted of more than 67 millions!—so is it impossible for a sinner, infinitely indebted to Divine justice, ever to pay a mite out of the talent.

Commanded him to be sold—his wife—children, &c.] Our Lord here alludes to an ancient custom among with me, and I will pay thee all.

27 Then the lord of that servant was moved with compassion, and loosed him, and forgave him the debt.

28 But the same servant went out, and found one of his fellow-servants, which owed him a hundred ^b pence; and he laid hands on him, and took him by the throat, saying, Pay me that thou owest.

29 And his fellow-servant fell down at his feet, and besought him, saying, ^c Have patience with me, and I will pay thee all.

^b The Roman penny is the eighth part of an ounce, which, after five shillings the ounce, is seven pence halfpenny, chap. xx. 2 ^c Psa. xxxii. 1; lxxviii. 38.

the Hebrews, of selling a man and his family to make payment of contracted debts. See Exod. xxii. 3; Lev. xxv. 39, 47; 2 Kings iv. 1. This custom passed from among the Jews to the Greeks and Romans. I have already remarked (see Gen. xlvii. 19) that in the Burman empire the sale of whole families, to discharge debts, is very common.

Verse 26. Fell down and worshipped him] Προσεκύνει αὐτῷ, crouched as a dog before him, with the greatest deference, submission, and anxiety.

Have patience with me] Μακροθυμήσον ἐπ' ἐμοί, be long-minded towards me—give me longer space.

The means which a sinner should use to be saved, are, 1. Deep humiliation of heart—he fell down. 2. Fervent prayer. 3. Confidence in the mercy of God—have patience. 4. A firm purpose to devote his soul and body to his Maker—I will pay thee all. A sinner may be said, according to the economy of grace, to pay all, when he brings the sacrifice of the Lord Jesus to the throne of justice, by faith; thus offering an equivalent for the pardon he seeks, and paying all he owes to Divine justice, by presenting the blood of the Lamb.

Verse 27. Moved with compassion] Or with tender pity. This is the source of salvation to a lost world, the tender pity, the eternal mercy of God.

Verse 28. A hundred pence] Rather denarii. The denarius was a Roman coin, worth about seven-pence halfpenny English. The original word should be retained, as our word penny does not convey the seventh part of the meaning. A hundred denarii would amount to about 3l. 2s. 6d. British, or, if reckoned as some do, at seven-pence three farthings, the sum would be 3l. 4s. 7d.

Took him by the throat] Κρατήσας αὐτὸν ἐπὶ τῆς τραχείας. There is no word I am acquainted with, which so fully expresses the meaning of the original, ἐπὶ τῆς τραχείας, as the Anglo-saxon term throttle: it signified (like the Greek) to help choke a person, by seizing his throat.

Verse 29. Fell down at his feet] This clause is wanting in several ancient MSS., versions, and fathers. Several printed editions also have omitted it; Griesbach has left it out of the text.

Pay thee all.] Πάντα, all, is omitted by a multitude of MSS., versions, and fathers.

A. M. 4032.

A. D. 28.

An. Olymp.

CCL. 4.

30 And he would not : ^d but went and cast him into prison, till he should pay the debt.

31 So when his fellow-servants saw what was done, they were very sorry, and came and told unto their lord all that was done.

32 Then his lord, after that he had called him, said unto him, O thou wicked servant, I forgave thee all that debt, because thou desiredst me :

^d James ii. 13.—^e Luke vi. 36.—^f Chap. v. 25, 26; vi. 12-14.—^g Prov. xxi. 13; chap. vi. 12; Mark xi. 26; James ii.

Verse 30. And he would not, &c.] To the unmerciful. God will show no mercy; this is an eternal purpose of the Lord, which never can be changed. God teaches us what to do to a fellow-sinner, by what he does to us. Our fellow-servant's debt to us, and ours to God, are as one hundred denarii to ten thousand talents! When we humble ourselves before him, God freely forgives us all this mighty sum! And shall we exact from our brother recompense for the most trifling faults! Reader, if thou art of this unmerciful, unforgiving cast, read out the chapter.

"All the souls that are were forfeit once,
And he who might the vantage best have took,
Found out the remedy. How would you be,
If He, who is the top of judgment, should
But judge you as you are! O! think on that,
And mercy then will breathe within your lips
Like man new made.
Though justice be thy plea, consider this,
That, in the course of justice, none of us
Should see salvation: we do pray for mercy;
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The deeds of Mercy."

Verse 31. His fellow-servants saw what was done] An act of this kind is so dishonourable to all the followers of Christ, and to the spirit of his Gospel, that through the respect they owe to their Lord and Master, and through the concern they feel for the prosperity of his cause, they are obliged to plead against it at the throne of God.

Verse 32. His lord, after that he had called him] Alas! how shall he appear! Confounded. What shall he answer! He is speechless!

Verse 33. Shouldst not thou also have had compassion] Οὐκ εἶδεν καὶ αὐτὸς, Did it not become thee also? What a cutting reproach! It became me to show mercy, when thou didst earnestly entreat me, because I am merciful. It became thee also to have shown mercy, because thou wert so deep in debt thyself, and hadst obtained mercy.

Vers 34. Delivered him to the tormentors] Not only continued captivity is here intended, but the tortures to be endured in it. If a person was suspected of fraud, as there was reason for in such a case as that mentioned here, he was put to very cruel tortures among the Asiatics, to induce him to confess. In the punishments of China, a great variety of these appear;

33 Shouldst not thou also have had compassion on thy fellow-servant, even ^e as I had pity on thee?

34 And his lord was wroth, and delivered him to the tormentors, ^f till he should pay all that was due unto him.

35 ^g So likewise shall my heavenly Father do also unto you, if ye from your hearts ^h forgive not every one his brother their trespasses.

13.—^h Mark xi. 26; Lev. xix. 18; Eph. iv. 2; Col. iii. 13 James ii. 13.

and probably there is an allusion to such torments in this place. Before, he and all that he had, were only to be sold. Now, as he has increased his debt, so he has increased his punishment; he is delivered to the tormentors, to the horrors of a guilty conscience, and to a fearful looking for of fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries. But if this refers to the day of judgment, then the worm that dieth not, and the fire that is not quenched, are the tormentors.

Verse 35. So likewise shall my heavenly Father do also unto you] The goodness and indulgence of God towards us is the pattern we should follow in our dealings with others. If we take man for our exemplar we shall err, because our copy is a bad one; and our lives are not likely to be better than the copy we imitate. Follow Christ; be merciful as your Father who is in heaven is merciful. You cannot complain of the fairness of your copy. Reader, hast thou a child, or servant who has offended thee, and humbly asks forgiveness? Hast thou a debtor, or a tenant, who is insolvent, and asks for a little longer time? And hast thou not forgiven that child or servant? Hast thou not given time to that debtor or tenant? How, then, canst thou ever expect to see the face of the just and merciful God! Thy child is banished, or kept at a distance; thy debtor is thrown into prison, or thy tenant sold up: yet the child offered to fall at thy feet; and the debtor or tenant, utterly insolvent, prayed for a little longer time, hoping God would enable him to pay thee all; but to these things thy stony heart and seared conscience paid no regard! O monster of ingratitude! Scandal to human nature, and reproach to God! If thou canst, go hide thyself—even in hell, from the face of the Lord!

Their trespasses.] These words are properly left out by GRIESHAM, and other eminent critics, because they are wanting in some of the very best MSS., most of the versions, and in some of the chief of the fathers. The words are evidently an interpolation; the construction of them is utterly improper, and the concord false.

In our common method of dealing with insolvent debtors, we in some sort imitate the Asiatic customs: we put them in prison, and all their circumstances there are so many tormentors; the place, the air, the company, the provision, the accommodations, all, all destructive to comfort, to peace, to health, and to every thing that humanity can devise. If the person be poor, or comparatively poor, is his imprisonment likely to lead him to discharge his debt? His creditor may rest assured that he is now farther from his object than ever: the man had no other way of discharging the debt but by his labour; that is now impossible, through his confinement, and the creditor is put to a certain expense towards his maintenance. How foolish is this policy! And how much do such laws stand in need of revision and amendment! Imprisonment for debt, in such a case as that supposed above, can answer no other end than the gratification of the malice, revenge, or inhumanity of the creditor. Better sell all that he has, and, with his hands and feet untied, let him begin the world afresh. Dr. Dodd very feelingly inquires here, "Whether rigour in exacting temporal debts, in treating without mercy such as are unable to satisfy them—whether this can be allowed to a Christian, who is bound to imitate his God and Father? To a debtor, who can expect forgiveness only on the condition of forgiving others? To a servant, who should obey his Master!—and to a criminal, who is in daily expectation of his Judge and final sentence?" Little did he think, when he wrote this sentence, that himself should be a melancholy proof, not only of human weakness, but of the relentless nature of those laws by which property, or rather money, is guarded. The unfortunate Dr. Dodd was hanged for forgery, in 1777, and the above note was written only seven years before!

The unbridled and extravagant appetites of men sometimes require a rigour even beyond the law to suppress them. While, then, we learn lessons of humanity from what is before us, let us also learn lessons of prudence, sobriety, and moderation. The parable of the two debtors is blessedly calculated to give this information.

CHAPTER XIX.

Jesus leaves Galilee, and comes into the coasts of Judea, and is followed by great multitudes, whom he heals, 1, 2. The question of the Pharisees concerning divorce answered, and the doctrine of marriage explained, 3-9. The inquiry of the disciples on this subject, 10. Our Lord's answer, explaining the case of eunuchs, 11, 12. Little children brought to Christ for his blessing, 13-15. The case of the young man who wished to obtain eternal life, 16-22. Our Lord's reflections on this case, in which he shows the difficulty of a rich man's salvation, 23-26. What they shall possess who have left all for Christ's sake and the Gospel, 27-29. How many of the first shall be last, and the last first, 30.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCH. I.

AND it came to pass, ^a that when Jesus had finished these sayings, he departed from Galilee, and came into the coasts of Judæa beyond Jordan.

2 ^b And great multitudes followed him; and he healed them there.

^a Mark x. 1; John x. 40.—^b Chap. xii. 15.

NOTES ON CHAP. XIX.

Verse 1. Beyond Jordan] Or, by the side of Jordan. Matthew begins here to give an account of Christ's journey (the only one he mentions) to Jerusalem, a little before the passover, at which he was crucified. See Mark x. 1; Luke ix. 51.

Jesus came from Galilee (which lay to the north of Judea) into the coasts of Judea; and from thence, in his way to Jerusalem, he went through Jericho, (chap. xx. 17, 29.) which lay at the distance of sixty furlongs, or seven miles and a half from Jordan, to the western side of it. See Joseph. war, book iv. chap. 8. sect. 3. It seems, therefore, most probable, that the course of Christ's journey led him by the side of the river Jordan, not beyond it. That the Greek word παρα, especially with a genitive case as here, has sometimes this signification, see on John vi. 22; see also Bp. Pearce.

Verse 2. Great multitudes followed him] Some to be instructed—some to be healed—some through curiosity—and some to ensnare him.

Verse 3. Tempting him] Trying what answer he would give to a question, which, however decided by him, would expose him to censure.

3 ¶ The Pharisees also came unto him, tempting him, and saying unto him, Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife for every cause?

4 And he answered and said unto them, Have ye not read, ^c that he which made them

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCH. I.

^c Gen. i. 27; v. 2; Mal. ii. 15.

Is it lawful—for every cause?] Instead of αιτιας, fault, cause, reason, three MSS. and the Coptic version read αμαρτιας, sin or transgression: this was probably the original reading—the first syllable being lost, αμαρτιας alone would remain, which a subsequent transcriber would suppose to be a mistake for αιτιας, and so wrote it: hence this various reading. What made our Lord's situation at present so critical in respect to this question was: At this time there were two famous divinity and philosophical schools among the Jews, that of SHAMMAI, and that of HILLEL. On the question of divorce, the school of Shammai maintained, that a man could not legally put away his wife, except for whoredom. The school of Hillel taught that a man might put away his wife for a multitude of other causes, and when she did not find grace in his sight; i. e. when he saw any other woman that pleased him better. See the case of Josephus, mentioned in the note on chap. v. 30, and Calmet's Comment, vol. i. part ii. p. 379. By answering the question, not from Shammai or Hillel, but from Moses, our blessed Lord defeated their malice, and confounded their devices.

Verse 4. He which made them at the beginning] When Adam and Eve were the first of human kind.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCH I.

at the beginning, made them male and female,

5 And said, ^d For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife : and ^e they twain shall be one flesh ?

6 Wherefore they are no more twain, but

^f Gen. ii. 24; Mark x. 5-9; Eph. v. 31.—^e 1 Cor. vi. 16; vii. 2

Made them male and female] Merely through the design of matrimonial union, that the earth might be thus peopled. To answer a case of conscience, a man should act as Christ does here ; pay no regard to that which the corruption of manners has introduced into Divine ordinances, but go back to the original will, purpose, and institution of God. Christ will never accommodate his morality to the times, nor to the inclinations of men. What was done at the beginning is what God judged most worthy of his glory, most profitable for man, and most suitable to nature.

Verse 5. For this cause] Being created for this very purpose, that they might glorify their Maker in a matrimonial connection. A man shall leave (καταλείπει, wholly give up) both father and mother—the matrimonial union being more intimate and binding than even paternal or filial affection ;—and shall be closely united, προσκολληθήσεται, shall be firmly cemented to his wife. A beautiful metaphor, which most forcibly intimates that nothing but death can separate them : as a well-glued board will break sooner in the whole wood, than in the glued joint. So also the Hebrew והיו דבקים debak implies.

And they twain shall be one flesh ?] Not only meaning, that they should be considered as one body, but also as two souls in one body, with a complete union of interests, and an indissoluble partnership of life and fortune, comfort and support, desires and inclinations, joys and sorrows. Farther, it appears to me, that the words in Gen. ii. 24. לֶבָשָׁר אֶחָד lebasar achad, for me flesh, which our Lord literally translates, mean also, that children, compounded as it were of both, should be the product of the matrimonial connection. Thus, they two (man and woman) shall be for the producing of one flesh, the very same kind of human creature with themselves. See the note on Gen. ii. 24.

Verse 6. What therefore God hath joined together] Συνεζευξεν, yoked together, as oxen in the plough, where each must pull equally, in order to bring it on. Among the ancients, when persons were newly married, they put a yoke upon their necks, or chains upon their arms, to show that they were to be one, closely united, and pulling equally together in all the concerns of life. See ΚΥΡΚΕ in loco.

The finest allegorical representation of the marriage union I have met with, is that antique gem representing the marriage of Cupid and Psyche, in the collection of the duke of Marlborough : it may be seen also among Baron Stock's gems, and casts or copies of it in various other collections. 1. Both are represented as winged, to show the alacrity with which the husband and wife should help, comfort and support each other ; preventing, as much as possible, the expressing of a wish or want on either side, by fulfilling it before one flesh. What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCH I.

7 They say unto him, ^f Why did Moses then command to give a writing of divorcement, and to put her away ?

^f Deut. xxiv. 1; chap. v. 31; Mark x. 4; Luke xvi. 18.

it can be expressed. 2. Both are veiled, to show that modesty is an inseparable attendant on pure matrimonial connections. 3. Hymen or Marriage goes before them with a lighted torch, leading them by a chain, of which each has a hold, to show that they are united together, and are bound to each other, and that they are led to this by the pure flame of love, which at the same instant both enlightens and warms them. 4. This chain is not iron nor brass, (to intimate that the marriage union is a state of thralldom or slavery;) but it is a chain of pearls, to show that the union is precious, beautiful, and delightful. 5. They hold a dove, the emblem of conjugal fidelity, which they appear to embrace affectionately, to show that they are faithful to each other, not merely through duty, but by affection, and that this fidelity contributes to the happiness of their lives. 6. A winged Cupid, or Love, is represented as having gone before them, preparing the nuptial feast ; to intimate that active affections, warm and cordial love, are to be to them a continual source of comfort and enjoyment ; and that this is the entertainment they are to meet with at every step of their affectionate lives. 7. Another Cupid, or genius of love comes behind, and places on their heads a basket of ripe fruits ; to intimate that a matrimonial union of this kind will generally be blessed with children, who shall be as pleasing to all their senses as ripe and delicious fruits to the smell and taste. 8. The genius of love that follows them has his wings shrivelled up, or the feathers all curled, so as to render them utterly unfit for flight ; to intimate that love is to abide with them, that there is to be no separation in affection, but that they are to continue to love one another with pure hearts fervently. Thus love begins and continues this sacred union ; as to end, there can be none, for God hath yoked them together.

A finer or more expressive set of emblems has never, I believe, been produced, even by modern refined taste and ingenuity. This group of emblematical figures is engraved upon an onyx by Tryphon, an ancient Grecian artist. A fine drawing was made of this by Cypriani, and was engraved both by Bartolozzi and Sherwin. See one of these plates in the second volume of Bryant's Analysis of Ancient Mythology, page 392.

Verse 7. Why did Moses then command to give a writing of divorcement ?] It is not an unusual case for the impure and unholy to seek for a justification of their conduct from the law of God itself, and to wrest Scripture to their own destruction. I knew a gentleman, so called, who professed deep reverence for the sacred writings, and, strange as it may appear, was outwardly irreproachable in every respect but one ; that was, he kept more women than his wife. This man

A. M. 1033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCH. 1.

8 He saith unto them, Moses, because of the hardness of your hearts, suffered you to put away your wives: but from the beginning it was not so 9 And I say unto you, Whosoever shall put away his wife, except it be for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery: and whoso marrieth her which is put away doth commit adultery.

8 Chap. v. 32; Mark x. 11; Luke xvi. 18; 1 Cor. vii. 10, 11.

frequently read the Bible, and was particularly conversant with those places that spoke of or seemed to legalize the polygamy of the patriarchs!

A writing of divorcement] See the form of it in the note on chap. v. 31.

Verse 8. Moses, because of the hardness of your hearts] It is dangerous to tolerate the least evil, though prudence itself may require it: because toleration, in this case, raises itself insensibly into permission, and permission soon sets up for command. Moses perceived that if divorce were not permitted, in many cases, the women would be exposed to great hardships through the cruelty of their husbands: for so the word σκληροκαρδία, is understood in this place by some learned men.

From the beginning it was not so] The Jews named the books of the law from the first word in each. Genesis they always term Bereshith, בְּרֵאשִׁית, which is the first word in it, and signifies, In the beginning. It is probable that our Lord speaks in this way here, In Bereshith it was not so, intimating that the account given in Genesis is widely different. There was no divorce between Eve and Adam; nor did he or his family practise polygamy. But our Lord, by the beginning, may mean the original intention or design.

Verse 9. Except it be for fornication] See on chap. v. 33. The decision of our Lord must be very unpleasant to these men: the reason why they wished to put away their wives was, that they might take others whom they liked better; but our Lord here declares that they could not be remarried while the divorced person was alive, and that those who did marry, during the life of the divorced, were adulterers; and heavy judgments were denounced, in their law, against such: and as the question was not settled by the schools of Shammai and Hillel, so as to ground national practice on it; therefore they were obliged to abide by the positive declaration of the law, as it was popularly understood, till these eminent schools had proved the word had another meaning. The grand subject of dispute between the two schools, mentioned above, was the word in Deut. xxiv. 1, When a man hath taken a wife—and she find no grace in his sight, because of some uncleanness, עֲרֹוַת eruath:—this the school of Shammai held to mean whoredom or adultery; but the school of Hillel maintained that it signified any corporeal defect, which rendered the person defamed, or any bad temper which made the husband's life uncomfortable. Any of the latter a good man might bear with: but it appears that Moses permitted the offended husband to 10 His disciples say unto him, <sup>A. M. 4033.

A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCH. 1.</sup> If the case of the man be so with his wife, it is not good to marry.

11 But he said unto them, ¹ All men cannot receive this saying, save they to whom it is given.

12 For there are some eunuchs, which were so born from their mother's womb: and there are some eunuchs, which were made eunuchs put away the wife on these accounts, merely to save her from cruel usage.

¹ Gen. ii. 18; Prov. xxi. 9, 19; 1 Cor. vii. 29, 40.—1 Cor. vii. 2, 7, 9, 17.

In this discourse, our Lord shows that marriage, (except in one case,) is indissoluble, and should be so: 1st, By Divine institution, ver. 4. 2dly, By express commandment, ver. 5. 3dly, Because the married couple become one and the same person, ver. 6. 4thly, By the example of the first pair, ver. 8; and 5thly, Because of the evil consequent on separation, ver. 9. The importance of this subject will, I hope, vindicate or excuse, the length of these notes.

Verse 10. If the case of the man] Του ανθρωπου, of a husband, so I think the word should be translated here. The Codex Beza, Armenian, and most of the Itala, have τον ανδρος, which, perhaps, more properly signifies a husband, though both words are used in this sense.

Our word husband comes from the Anglo-Saxon. hus and band: the bond of the house, anciently spelt houseband,—so in my old MS. Bible. It is a lamentable case when the husband, instead of being the bond and union of the family, scatters and ruins it by dissipation, riot, and excess.

It is not good to marry.] That is, if a man have not the liberty to put away his wife when she is displeasing to him. God had said, Gen. ii. 18, It is not good for man to be alone, i. e. unmarried. The disciples seem to say, that if the husband have not the power to divorce his wife when she is displeasing to him, it is not good for him to marry. Here was a flat contradiction to the decision of the Creator. There are difficulties and trials in all states; but let marriage and celibacy be weighed fairly, and I am persuaded the former will be found to have fewer than the latter. However, before we enter into an engagement which nothing but death can dissolve, we had need to act cautiously, carefully consulting the will and word of God. Where an unbridled passion, or a base love of money, lead the way, marriage is sure to be miserable.

Verse 11. All—cannot receive this saying] A very wise answer, and well suited to the present circumstances of the disciples. Neither of the states is condemned. If thou marry, thou dost well—this is according to the order, will, and commandment of God. But if thou do not marry, (because of the present necessity, persecution, worldly embarrassments, or bodily infirmity,) thou dost better. See 1 Cor. vii. 25.

Verse 12. Eunuchs] Ευνουχος, from ευνυν εχει, to have the care of the bed or bedchamber; this being the principal employment of eunuchs in the eastern coun

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCL. I.

of men: and ^k there be eunuchs, which have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it.

13 ¶ Then were there brought unto him little children, that he should put his hands on them, and pray; and the disciples rebuked them.

14 But Jesus said, Suffer little children, and

* 1 Cor. vii. 32, 34; ix. 5, 15.—† Mark x. 13; Luke xviii. 15.

tries, particularly in the apartments of queens and princesses. These are they whom our Lord says are made eunuchs by men, merely for the above purpose.

So born from their mother's womb] Such as are naturally incapable of marriage, and consequently should not contract any.

For the kingdom of heaven's sake.] I believe our Lord here alludes to the case of the Essenes, one of the most holy and pure sects among the Jews. These abstained from all commerce with women, hoping thereby to acquire a greater degree of purity, and be better fitted for the kingdom of God: children they had none of their own, but constantly adopted those of poor people, and brought them up in their own way. PHILO, JOSEPHUS, and PLINY have largely described this very singular sect; and Dean PRIDEAUX, with his usual fidelity and perspicuity, has given the substance of what each has said. CONNEX. vol. iii. p. 483, &c.; edit. 1725. The account is very interesting, and well worthy the attention of every Christian. Among the rabbins we find these different kinds of eunuchs, not only mentioned, but circumstantially described, כריס חמה charis chama, eunuchs of the sun, i. e. eunuchs by the hand of God; men born impotent. כריס אדם charis adam, eunuchs of men, those who were castrated. And they add a third sort; those who make themselves eunuchs, abstain from marriage, &c., that they may give themselves up to the study of the Divine law. See many examples in Schoettgen.

He that is able to receive] Χωρεῖν χωρεῖτω. These words are variously translated: he who can take, let him take it; comprehend, let him comprehend it; admit, let him admit it. The meaning seems to be, Let the man who feels himself capable of embracing this way of life, embrace it; but none can do it but he to whom it is given, who has it as a gift from his mother's womb.

The great ORIGEN, understanding the latter clause of this verse (which I have applied to the Essenes) literally—O human weakness!—went, and literally fulfilled it on himself!

Verse 13. Then were there brought unto him little children] These are termed by Luke, chap. xviii. 15, ἡ ἀρετή, infants, very young children; and it was on this account, probably, that the disciples rebuked the parents, thinking them too young to receive good. See on Mark x. 16.

That he should put his hands] It was a common custom among the Jews to lay their hands on the heads of those whom they blessed, or for whom they prayed.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCL. I.

forbid them not, to come unto me; for ^m of such is the kingdom of heaven.

15 And he laid his hands on them, and departed thence.

16 ¶ And behold, one came and said unto him, ° Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life?

† Chap. xviii. 3.—° Mark x. 17; Luke xviii. 14.—° Luke 25.

This seems to have been done by way of dedication or consecration to God—the person being considered as the sacred property of God ever after. Often God added a testimony of his approbation, by communicating some extraordinary influence of the Holy Spirit. This rite has been long practised among Christians, when persons are appointed to any sacred office. But this consecration of children to God seems to have grown out of use. It is no wonder that the great mass of children are so wicked, when so few are put under the care of Christ by humble, praying, believing parents. Let every parent that fears God bring up his children in that fear; and, by baptism, let each be dedicated to the holy trinity. Whatever is solemnly consecrated to God abides under his protection and blessing.

Verse 14. Of such is the kingdom of heaven.] Or, the kingdom of heaven is composed of such. This appears to be the best sense of the passage, and utterly ruins the whole inhuman diabolic system of what is called non-elect infants' damnation; a doctrine which must have sprung from Moloch, and can only be defended by a heart in which he dwells. A great part of God's kingdom is composed of such literally; and those only who resemble little children shall be received into it: see on chap. xviii. 3. Christ loves little children because he loves simplicity and innocence; he has sanctified their very age by passing through it himself—the holy Jesus was once a little child.

Verse 15. He—departed thence.] That is, from that part of Judea which was beyond Jordan, ver. 1; and then went to Jericho. See chap. xx. 29.

Verse 16. One came] Instead of εἷς one, several MSS., the Slavonic version, and Hilary, read νεανίσκος εἷς, a certain young man.

Good, &c.] Much instruction may be had from seriously attending to the conduct, spirit, and question of this person. 1. He came running, (Mark x. 17.) for he was deeply convinced of the importance of his business, and seriously determined to seek so as to find.

2. He knelt, or caught him by the knees, thus evidencing his humility, and addressing himself only to mercy. See chap. xvii. 14.

3. He came in the spirit of a disciple, or scholar, desiring to be taught a matter of the utmost importance to him—Good teacher.

4. He came in the spirit of obedience; he had worked hard to no purpose, and he is still willing to work, provided he can have a prospect of succeeding—What good thing shall I do?

5. His question was the most interesting and im-

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

17 And he said unto him, Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is God: but if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments.

18 He saith unto him, Which? Jesus said, Thou shalt do no murder, Thou shalt not com-† Exod. xx. 13; Deut. v. 17.—† Chap. xv. 4.—† Lev. xix.

portant that any soul can ask of God—How shall I be saved?

Verse 17. Why callest thou me good?] Or, Why dost thou question me concerning that good thing? τι με ερωτας περι του αγαθου. This important reading is found in BDL, three others, the Coptic, Sahidic, Armenian, Ethiopic, latter Syriac, Vulgate, Saxon, all the Itala but one, Origen, Eusebius, Cyril, Dionysius Areop., Antiochus, Novatian, Jerome, Augustin, and Juvenius. Erasmus, Grotius, Mill, and Bengel approve of this reading. This authority appears so decisive to Griesbach that he has received this reading into the text of his second edition, which in the first he had interlined. And instead of, None is good but the one God, he goes on to read, on nearly the same respectable authorities, εις εστιν ο αγαθος, There is one who is good. Let it be observed also that, in the 16th verse, instead of διδασκαλε αγαθε, good teacher, διδασκαλε only is read by BDL, one other, one Evangelistarium, the Ethiopic, three of the Itala, Origen, and Hilary. The whole passage therefore may be read thus: O teacher! what good thing shall I do that I may have eternal life? And he said unto him, Why dost thou question me concerning that good thing? There is one that is good. (Or he who is good is one.) But if thou art willing to enter into that life, keep the commandments. This passage, as it stood in the common editions, has been considered by some writers as an incontrovertible proof against the Divinity or Godhead of Christ. A very learned person, in his note on this place, thus concludes concerning it: "Therefore our Saviour cannot be God: and the notion of, I know not what, a trinity in unity. THREE Gods in ONE, is here proved beyond all controversy, by the unequivocal declaration of JESUS CHRIST HIMSELF, to be ERRONEOUS and IMPOSSIBLE." Not so. One of the greatest critics in Europe, not at all partial to the Godhead of Christ, has admitted the above readings into his text, on evidence which he judged to be unexceptionable. If they be the true readings, they destroy the whole doctrine built on this text; and indeed the utmost that the enemies of the trinitarian doctrine can now expect from their formidable opponents, concerning this text, is to leave it neuter.

Keep the commandments.] From this we may learn that God's great design, in giving his law to the Jews, was to lead them to the expectation and enjoyment of eternal life. But as all the law referred to Christ, and he became the end of the law for righteousness (justification) to all that believe, so he is to be received, in order to have the end accomplished which the law proposed.

Verse 18. Thou shalt do no murder, &c.] But mit adultery, Thou shalt not steal, A. M. 4033.

A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.
Thou shalt not bear false witness,

19 Honour thy father and thy mother: and, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

20 The young man saith unto him, All these 18; chap. xxii. 39; Rom. xiii. 9; Gal. v. 14; Jam. i. 8.

some say these commandments are not binding on us. Vain, deceived men! Can a murderer, an adulterer, a thief, and a liar enter into eternal life? No. The God of purity and justice has forbidden it. But we are not to keep these commandments in order to purchase eternal life. Right. Neither Jesus Christ, nor his genuine messengers, say you are. To save your souls, Christ must save you from your sins, and enable you to walk before him in newness of life.

Verse 19. Honour thy father and thy mother] Σου θυ, is omitted by almost every MS. of respectability.

Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.] Self-love, as it is generally called, has been grievously declaimed against, even by religious people, as a most pernicious and dreadful evil. But they have not understood the subject on which they spoke. They have denominated that intense propensity which unregenerate men feel to gratify their carnal appetites and vicious passions, self-love; whereas it might be more properly termed self-hatred or self-murder. If I am to love my neighbour as myself, and this "love worketh no ill to its neighbour," then self-love, in the sense in which our Lord uses it, is something excellent. It is properly a disposition essential to our nature, and inseparable from our being, by which we desire to be happy, by which we seek the happiness we have not, and rejoice in it when we possess it. In a word, it is a uniform wish of the soul to avoid all evil, and to enjoy all good. Therefore, he who is wholly governed by self-love, properly and Scripturally speaking, will devote his whole soul to God, and earnestly and constantly seek all his peace, happiness, and salvation in the enjoyment of God. But self-love cannot make me happy. I am only the subject which receives the happiness, but am not the object that constitutes this happiness; for it is that object, properly speaking, that I love, and love not only for its own sake, but also for the sake of the happiness which I enjoy through it. "No man," saith the apostle, "ever hated his own flesh." But he that sinneth against God wrongeth his own soul, both of present and eternal salvation, and is so far from being governed by self-love that he is the implacable enemy of his best and dearest interests in both worlds.

Verse 20. All these have I kept] I have made these precepts the rule of my life. There is a difference worthy of notice between this and our Lord's word. He says, ver. 17, τηρησων, keep, earnestly, diligently, as with watch and ward; probably referring not only to the letter but to the spirit. The young man modestly says, all these (εφωλαξα) have I observed; I have paid attention to, and endeavoured to regulate my conduct by them. I have kept them in custody.

From my youth] Several MSS., versions, and fa-

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1. things have I kept from my youth up: what lack I yet?

21 Jesus said unto him, If thou wilt be perfect, * go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come and follow me.

22 But when the young man heard that saying, he went away sorrowful: for he had great possessions.

23 ¶ Then said Jesus unto his disciples,

* Chap. vi. 20; Luke xii. 33; xvi. 9; Acts ii. 45; iv. 31, 35;
1 Tim. vi. 18, 19.

thers, leave out these words. Grotius and Mill approve of the omission, and Griesbach leaves them in the text with a note of suspicion. Perhaps the young man meant no more than that he had in general observed them, and considered them of continual obligation.

What lack I yet?] He felt a troubled conscience, and a mind unassured of the approbation of God; and he clearly perceived that something was wanting to make him truly happy.

Verse 21. If thou wilt be perfect] Τελειος ειναι, To be complete, to have the business finished, and all hinderances to thy salvation removed, go and sell that thou hast—go and dispose of thy possessions, to which it is evident his heart was too much attached, and give to the poor—for thy goods will be a continual snare to thee if thou keep them; and thou shalt have treasure in heaven—the loss, if it can be called such, shall be made amply up to thee in that eternal life about which thou inquirest; and come and follow me—be my disciple, and I will appoint thee to preach the kingdom of God to others. This was the usual call which Christ gave to his disciples. See Matt. iv. 19; viii. 22; ix. 9; Mark ii. 14; and it is pretty evident, from this, that he intended to make him a preacher of his salvation. How many, by their attachment to filthy lucre, have lost the honour of becoming or continuing ambassadors for the Most High! See on Mark x. 21.

Verse 22. Went away sorrowful] Men undergo great agony of mind while they are in suspense between the love of the world and the love of their souls. When the first absolutely predominates, then they enjoy a factitious rest through a false peace: when the latter has the upper hand, then they possess true tranquillity of mind, through that peace of God that passeth knowledge.

He had great possessions.] And what were these in comparison of peace of conscience, and mental rest? Besides, he had unequivocal proof that these contributed nothing to his comfort, for he is now miserable even while he possesses them! And so will every soul be, who puts worldly good in the place of the supreme God. See on Mark x. 22.

Verse 23. A rich man shall hardly enter] That is, into the spirit and privileges of the Gospel in this world, and through them into the kingdom of glory. Earthly riches are a great obstacle to salvation; because it is almost impossible to possess them, and not to set the heart upon them; and they who love the Verily I say unto you, 'That ' a rich man shall hardly enter into the kingdom of heaven.

A. M. 4033
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1

24 And again I say unto you, It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.

25 When his disciples heard it, they were exceedingly amazed, saying, Who then can be saved?

1 Chap. xiii. 22; Mark x. 24; 1 Cor. i. 26; 1 Tim. vi. 9, 10.

world have not the love of the Father in them. 1 John ii. 15. To be rich, therefore, is in general a great misfortune: but what rich man can be convinced of this? It is only God himself who, by a miracle of mercy, can do this. Christ himself affirms the difficulty of the salvation of a rich man, with an oath, verily; but who of the rich either hears or believes him?

Verse 24. A camel] Instead of καμηλον, camel, six MSS. read καμilon, cable, a mere gloss inserted by some who did not know that the other was a proverb common enough among the people of the east.

There is an expression similar to this in the Koran. "The impious, who in his arrogance shall accuse our doctrine of falsity, shall find the gates of heaven shut. nor shall he enter there till a camel shall pass through the eye of a needle. It is thus that we shall recompense the wicked." Al Koran. Surat vii. ver. 37.

It was also a mode of expression common among the Jews, and signified a thing impossible. Hence this proverb: A camel in Media dances in a cage; a measure which held about three pints. Again, No man sees a palm tree of gold, nor an elephant passing through the eye of a needle. Because these are impossible things. "Rabbi Shesheth answered Rabbi Amram, who had advanced an absurdity, Perhaps thou art one of the Pambidithians who can make an elephant pass through the eye of a needle; that is, says the Aruch, 'who speak things impossible.'" See Lightfoot and Schoettgen on this place.

Go through] But instead of διελθειν, about eighty MSS. with several versions and fathers, have εισελθειν. to enter in; but the difference is of little importance in an English translation, though of some consequence to the elegance of the Greek text.

Verse 25. Who can be saved?] The question of the disciples seemed to intimate that most people were rich, and that therefore scarcely any could be saved. They certainly must have attached a different meaning to what constitutes a rich man, to what we in general do. Who is a rich man in our Lord's sense of the word? This is a very important question, and has not, that I know of, been explicitly answered. A rich man, in my opinion, is not one who has so many hundreds or thousands more than some of his neighbours; but is one who gets more than is necessary to supply all his own wants, and those of his household, and keeps the residue still to himself, though the poor are starving through lack of the necessities of life

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.
26 But Jesus beheld them, and said unto them, With men this is impossible; but ^u with God all things are possible.

27 ¶ Then answered Peter and said unto him, Behold, ^w we have forsaken all, and followed thee; what shall we have therefore?

28 And Jesus said unto them, Verily I say unto you, That ye which have followed me, in the regeneration, when the Son of man shall ^u Gen. xviii. 14; Job xlii. 2; Jer. xxxii. 17; Zech. viii. 6; Luke i. 37; xviii. 27.—^v Mark x. 28; Luke xviii. 28.—^w Deut. xxxiii. 9; chap. iv. 20; Luke v. 11.

In a word, he is a man who gets all he can, saves all he can, and keeps all he has gotten. Speak, reason! Speak, conscience! (for God has already spoken) Can such a person enter into the kingdom of God? ALL, NO!!!

Verse 26. With men this is impossible] God alone can take the love of the world out of the human heart. Therefore the salvation of the rich is represented as possible only to him: and indeed the words seem to intimate, that it requires more than common exertions of Omnipotence to save a rich man.

Verse 27. We have forsaken all] “A poor all,” says one, “a parcel of rotten nets.” No matter—they were their ALL, whether rotten or sound; besides, they were the all they got their bread by; and such an all as was quite sufficient for that purpose: and let it be observed, that that man forsakes much who reserves nothing to himself, and renounces all expectations from this world, taking God alone for his portion. See chap. iv. 20.

To forsake all, without following Christ, is the virtue of a philosopher. To follow Christ in profession, without forsaking all, is the state of the generality of Christians. But to follow Christ and forsake all, is the perfection of a Christian.

What shall we have therefore?] Τι ἀρα ἐστί ημῖν, What REWARD shall we get? This Kypke proves to be the meaning of the words from some of the best Greek writers.

Verse 28. Ye which have followed me, in the regeneration, when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, &c.] The punctuation which I have observed here, is that which is followed by the most eminent critics: the regeneration is thus referred to the time when Jesus shall sit on the throne of his glory, and not to the time of following him, which is utterly improper.

The regeneration, παλιγγενεσία. Some refer this to the time in which the new heavens and the new earth shall be created, and the soul and body united. The Pythagoreans termed that παλιγγενεσία, when, according to their doctrine of the transmigration or metempsychosis, the soul entered into a new body, and got into a new state of being. Clement, in his Epistle to the Corinthians, calls the restoration of the world, after the deluge, by the same name.

Judging the twelve tribes] From the parallel place,

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.
sit in the throne of his glory, ^x ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel.

29 ^y And every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my name's sake, shall receive a hundred-fold, and shall inherit everlasting life.

30 ^z But many that are first shall be last; and the last shall be first.

^x Chap. xx. 21; Luke xxii. 28, 29, 30; 1 Cor. vi. 2, 3; Rev. ii. 26.—^y Mark x. 29, 30; Luke xviii. 29, 30.—^z Chap. xx. 16; xxi. 31, 32; Mark x. 31; Luke xiii. 30.

Luke xxii. 28–30, it is evident that sitting on thrones, and judging the twelve tribes, means simply obtaining eternal salvation, and the distinguishing privileges of the kingdom of glory, by those who continued faithful to Christ in his sufferings and death.

Judging, κρινοντες. Kypke has shown that κρινεσθαι is to be understood in the sense of governing, presiding, holding the first or most distinguished place.—Thus, Gen. xlix. 16, Dan shall judge his people, i. e. shall preside in, or rule over them; shall occupy a chief place among the tribes. It is well known that the Judges among the Jews were moderators, captains, chief, or head men. The sense therefore of our Lord's words appears to be, that these disciples should have those distinguished seats in glory which seem to belong peculiarly to the first confessors and martyrs. See 1 Thess. iv. 14, 16, and particularly Rev. xx. 4–6.

The last-quoted passage brings into view the doctrine of the Millennium, when Jesus, after having formed the new heavens and the new earth, shall reign here gloriously among his ancients 365,000 years; for the thousand years referred to above are certainly prophetical years, in which, it is well known, each day stands for a year.

Others, of no mean note, are of opinion that the regeneration means the conversion of men by the preaching of the Gospel—that sitting on twelve thrones signifies the state of eminent dignity to which the apostles should be raised—and that judging the twelve tribes of Israel, means no more than exercising authority in the Church, and dispensing laws to the people of God. But I confess I do not see the propriety of this application of the terms, as the following verse seems to fix the meaning mentioned above.

Verse 29. Shall receive a hundredfold] Viz. in this life, in value, though perhaps not in kind; and in the world to come everlasting life. A glorious portion for a persevering believer! The fulness of GRACE here, and the fulness of GLORY hereafter! See on Mark x. 30.

Verse 30. But many that are first, &c.] The Jews, who have been the first and most distinguished people of God, will in general reject the Gospel of my grace, and be consequently rejected by me. The Gentiles, who have had no name among the living, shall be brought to the knowledge of the truth, and become the first, the chief, and most exalted people of God.

That this prediction of our Lord has been literally fulfilled, the present state of the Christian and Jewish Churches sufficiently proves. To illustrate this fully, and to demonstrate that the Jews and Gentiles were now put on an equal footing by the Gospel, our Lord speaks the following parable, which has been unhappily divided from its connection by making it the beginning of a new chapter.

CHAPTER XX.

The similitude of the householder hiring labourers into his vineyard, to show that the Gentiles should be preferred to the Jews, according to what was hinted at the close of the last chapter, 1-16. On the way going up to Jerusalem he predicts his sufferings and death, 17-19. The mother of Zebedee's children requests dignities for her sons, 20, 21. Christ, by his answer, shows that sufferings, not worldly honours, are to be the lot of his most faithful followers, and that seats in glory can be given only to those who are prepared for them, 22, 23. From this our Lord takes occasion to teach the necessity of humility, and to show that those who wished to be chief must be servants of all, 24-28. On his coming to Jericho, he restores sight to two blind men, who, being restored, follow him, 29-31.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

FOR the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is a householder, which went out early in the morning to hire labourers into his vineyard.

2 And when he had agreed with the labourers for a ^b penny a day, he sent them into his vineyard.

3 And he went out about the ^c third hour, and saw others standing idle in the market-place,

4 And said unto them: Go ye also into the vineyard, ^d and whatsoever is right I will give you. And they went their way. A. M. 4033.

A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

5 Again he went out about the sixth and ninth hour, and did likewise.

6 And about the eleventh hour he went out, and found others standing idle, and saith unto them, Why stand ye here all the day idle?

7 They say unto him, Because no man hath hired us. He saith unto them, Go ye also into the vineyard; and whatsoever is right, that shall ye receive.

8 So when even was come, the lord of the

^a Chap. xiii. 27; xviii. 23; xxi. 28; John xv. 1; Isa. v. 1-7; Jer. ii. 21.—^b The Roman penny is the eighth part of an ounce, which, after five shillings the ounce, is seven-pence halfpenny, chap. xviii. 28; Hebrews iii. 7.—^c John xi. 9.—^d Colossians iv. 1; 1 Corinthians xv. 58; Romans vi. 23.

NOTES ON CHAP. XX.

Verse 1. For the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man—a householder] The very commencement of this chapter shows it to be connected with the preceding. The manner of God's proceeding under the Gospel dispensation resembles a householder, who went out at day break, ἀπὸ πρωῆς, together with the morning; as the light began to go out of its chambers in the east, so he went out of his bed-room to employ labourers, that they might cultivate his vineyard. This was what was called, among the Jews and Romans, the first hour; answering to six o'clock in the morning.

To hire labourers] Some workmen, τῶν ἐργατῶν—for he had not got all that was necessary, because we find him going out at other hours to hire more.

Verse 2. A penny] A Roman coin, as noted before, chap. xviii. 28, worth about seven-pence halfpenny or seven-pence three farthings of our money, and equal to the Greek drachma. This appears to have been the ordinary price of a day's labour at that time. See Tobit, chap. v. 14. In 1351 the price of labour was regulated in this country by parliament; and it is remarkable that "corn-weeders and hay-makers, without meat, drink, or other courtesy demanded," were to have one penny per day! In 1314 the pay of a chaplain to the Scotch bishops, who were then prisoners in England, was three halfpence per day. See Fleetwood's Chronicon Precios, p. 123, 129. This was miserable wages, though things at that time were so cheap that twenty-four eggs were sold for a penny, p. 72; a pair of shoes for four-pence, p. 71; a fat goose for two-pence halfpenny, p. 72; a hen for a penny, p. 72; eight bushels of wheat for two shillings, and a fat ox for six shillings and eight-pence! Ibid. In 1336, wheat per quarter, 2s.; a fat sheep 6d.; fat goose, 2d.; and a pig, 1d., p. 75.

Verse 3. The third hour] Nine o'clock in the morning.

Market-place] Where labourers usually stood till they were hired. I have often seen labourers standing in the market places of large towns in these countries, waiting to be employed.

Verse 5. The sixth hour] Twelve o'clock. Ninth hour—three o'clock in the afternoon.

Verse 6. Eleventh] Five o'clock in the evening, when there was only one hour before the end of the Jewish day, which, in matters of labour, closed at six.

Verse 7. No man hath hired us.] This was the reason why they were all the day idle.

And whatsoever is right, that shall ye receive.] Ye may expect payment in proportion to your labour, and the time ye spend in it; but this clause is wanting in some of the best MSS., versions, and fathers.

Verse 8. When the even was come] Six o'clock, the

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.
vineyard saith unto his steward, Call the labourers, and give them their hire, beginning from the last unto the first.

9 And when they came that were hired about the eleventh hour, they received every man a penny.

10 But when the first came, they supposed that they should have received more; and they likewise received every man a penny.

11 And when they had received it, they murmured against the good man of the house,

12 Saying, These last ^e have wrought but

^e Or, have continued one hour only.—^f Rom. ix. 21.—^g Deut. xv.

time they ceased from labour, and the workmen came to receive their wages.

Steward] Επιτροπος. A manager of the household concerns under the master. The rabbinical writers use the very same word, in Hebrew letters, for the same office, אפיטרופוס epitropos. See Kypke.

Verse 11. They murmured] The Jews made the preaching of the Gospel to the Gentiles, a pretence why they should reject that Gospel; as they fondly imagined they were, and should be, the sole objects of the Divine approbation. How they murmured because the Gentiles were made partakers of the kingdom of God; see Acts xi. 1, &c., and xv. 1, &c.

There are many similitudes of this kind among the Jews, where the principal part even of the phraseology of our Lord's parable may be found. Several of them may be seen in Schoettgen. Our Lord, however, as in all other cases, has greatly improved the language, scope, design, and point of the similitude. He was, in all cases, an eminent master of the sentences.

Verse 13. Friend, I do thee no wrong] The salvation of the Gentiles can in itself become no impediment to the Jews; there is the same Jesus both for the Jew and for the Greek. Eternal life is offered to both through the blood of the cross; and there is room enough in heaven for all.

Verse 15. Is it not lawful for me] As eternal life is the free gift of God, he has a right to give it in whatever proportions, at whatever times, and on whatever conditions he pleases.

Is thine eye evil] An evil eye among the Jews meant a malicious, covetous, or envious person.

Most commentators have different methods of interpreting this parable. Something was undoubtedly designed by its principal parts, besides the scope and design mentioned at the conclusion of the last chapter. The following, which is taken principally from the very pious Quesnel, may render it as useful to the reader as any thing else that has been written on it.

The Church is a vineyard, because it is a place of labour, where no man should be idle. Each of us is engaged to labour in this vineyard—to work out our salvation through him who worketh in us to will and to perform. Life is but a day, whereof childhood, or the first use of reason, is the day-break or first hour, verse 1, in which we receive the first call.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.
one hour, and thou hast made them equal unto us, which have borne the burden and heat of the day.

13 But he answered one of them, and said, Friend, I do thee no wrong: didst not thou agree with me for a penny?

14 Take that thine is, and go thy way:—^f will give unto this last, even as unto thee.

15 ^f Is it not lawful for me to do what I will with mine own? ^g Is thine eye evil, because I am good?

16 ^h So the last shall be first, and the first last: ⁱ for many be called, but few chosen.

9; Prov. xviii. 6; chap. vi. 23.—^h Ch. xix. 30.—ⁱ Ch. xxii. 14.

The promise of the kingdom of glory is given to all those who are workers together with him, ver. 2.

The second call is in the time of youth, which is most commonly idle, or only employed in dissipation and worldly cares, ver. 3.

The third call is at the age of manhood.

The fourth, in the decline of life, ver. 5.

The fifth, when sickness and the infirmities of life press upon us. How many are there in the world who are just ready to leave it, before they properly consider for what end they were brought into it! Still idle, still unemployed in the things which concern their souls; though eternal life is offered to them, and hell moving from beneath to meet them! ver. 6.

Others consider the morning the first dawn of the Gospel; and the first call to be the preaching of John Baptist.

The second call, the public preaching of our Lord; and that of the apostles when they got an especial commission to the Jews, chap. x. 5, 6, together with that of the seventy disciples mentioned Luke x. 1.

The third call, which was at mid-day, represents the preaching of the fulness of the Gospel after the ascension of Christ, which was the meridian of evangelic glory and excellence.

The fourth call represents the mission of the apostles to the various synagogues of the Jews, in every part of the world where they were scattered; the history of which is particularly given in the Acts of the Apostles.

The fifth call, or eleventh hour, represents the general call of the Gentiles into the Church of Christ, when the unbelieving Jews were finally rejected. What makes this interpretation the more likely is, that the persons who are addressed at ver. 7, say, No man hath hired us, i. e. We never heard the voice of a prophet announcing the true God, nor of an apostle preaching the Lord Jesus, until now. The Jews could not use this as an argument for their carelessness about their eternal interests.

Verse 16. So the last shall be first, and the first last] The GENTILES, who have been long without the true God, shall now enjoy all the privileges of the new covenant; and the Jews, who have enjoyed these from the beginning, shall now be dispossessed of them; for, because they have rejected the Lord, he also hath rejected them.

A. M. 4033.

A. D. 29.

An. Olymp.

CCII. 1.

17 ¶ And Jesus going up to Jerusalem took the twelve disciples apart in the way, and said unto them,

18 ¹ Behold, we go up to Jerusalem; and the Son of man shall be betrayed unto the chief priests and unto the scribes, and they shall condemn him to death,

19 ^m And shall deliver him to the Gentiles

^k Mark x. 32; Luke xviii. 31; John xii. 12.—^l Chap. xvi. 21.

Many are called, &c.] This clause is wanting in BL, one other, and in the Coptic and Sahidic versions. Bishop PEARCE thinks it is an interpolation from chap. xxii. 14. The simple meaning seems to be: As those who did not come at the invitation of the householder to work in the vineyard did not receive the denarius, or wages, so those who do not obey the call of the Gospel, and believe in Christ Jesus, shall not inherit eternal life.

This place seems to refer to the ancient Roman custom of recruiting their armies. Among this celebrated people, no one was forced to serve his country in a military capacity; and it was the highest honour to be deemed worthy of thus serving it. The youth were instructed, almost from their cradle, in military exercises. The Campus Martius was the grand field in which they were disciplined: there, they accustomed themselves to leaping, running, wrestling, bearing burdens, fencing, throwing the javelin, &c., and when, through these violent exercises, they were all besmeared with dust and sweat, in order to refresh themselves, they swam twice or thrice across the Tyber! Rome might at any time have recruited her armies by volunteers from such a mass of well-educated, hardy soldiers; but she thought proper, to use the words of the Abbé Mably, that the honour of being chosen to serve in the wars should be the reward of the accomplishments shown by the citizens in the Campus Martius, that the soldier should have a reputation to save; and that the regard paid him, in choosing him to serve, should be the pledge of his fidelity and zeal to discharge his duty. The age of serving in the army was from seventeen to forty-five, and the manner in which they were chosen was the following:—

After the creation of consuls, they every year named twenty-four military tribunes, part of whom must have served five years at least, and the rest eleven. When they had divided among them the command of the four legions to be formed, the consuls summoned to the capitol, or Campus Martius, all the citizens who, by their age, were obliged to bear arms. They drew up by tribes, and lots were drawn to determine in what order every tribe should present its soldiers. That which was the first in order chose the four citizens who were judged the most proper to serve in the war; and the six tribunes who commanded the first legion chose one of these four, whom they liked best. The tribunes of the second and third likewise made their choice one after another; and he that remained entered into the fourth legion. A new tribe presented other four soldiers, and the second legion chose first. The to mock, and to scourge, and to crucify him: and the third day he shall rise again.

20 ¶ Then came to him the mother of Zebedee's children with her sons, worshipping him, and desiring a certain thing of him.

21 And he said unto her, What wilt thou? She saith unto him, Grant that these my two third and fourth legions had the same advantage in their turns. In this manner, each tribe successively chose four soldiers, till the legions were complete. They next proceeded to the creation of subaltern officers, whom the tribunes chose from among the soldiers of the greatest reputation. When the legions were thus completed, the citizens who had been called, but not chosen, returned to their respective employments, and served their country in other capacities. None can suppose that these were deemed useless, or that, because not now chosen to serve their country in the field, they were proscribed from the rights and privileges of citizens, much less destroyed, because others were found better qualified to serve their country at the post of honour and danger. Thus many are called by the preaching of the Gospel, but few are found who use their advantages in such a way as to become extensively useful in the Church—and many in the Church militant behave so ill as never to be admitted into the Church triumphant. But what a mercy that those who appear now to be rejected may be called in another muster, enrolled, serve in the field, or work in the vineyard! How many millions does the long-suffering of God lead to repentance!

^m Chap. xxvii. 2; Mark xv. 1, 16, &c.; Luke xxiii. 1; John xviii. 28, &c.; Acts iii. 13.—ⁿ Mark x. 35.—^o Chap. iv. 21.

Verse 17. And Jesus going up] From Jericho to Jerusalem, chap. xix. 15.

Verse 18. The Son of man shall be betrayed] Or, will be delivered up. This is the third time that our Lord informed his disciples of his approaching sufferings and death. This was a subject of the utmost importance, and it was necessary they should be well prepared for such an awful event.

Verse 19. Deliver him to the Gentiles to mock] This was done by Herod and his Roman soldiers. See Luke xxiii. 11.

To scourge, and to crucify] This was done by Pilate, the Roman governor. The punishment of the cross was Roman not Jewish; but the chief priests condemned him to it, and the Romans executed the sentence. How little did they know that they were, by this process, jointly offering up that sacrifice which was to make an atonement for the Gentiles and for the Jews; an atonement for the sin of the whole world! How often may it be literally said, The wrath of man shall praise thee!

Verse 20. The mother of Zebedee's children] This was Salome.

Verse 21. Grant that these my two sons] James and John. See Mark xv. 40. In the preceding chapter, ver. 28, our Lord had promised his disciples, that they should sit on twelve thrones, judging the twelve

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.
sons ^p may sit, the one on thy right hand, and the other on the left, in thy kingdom.

22 But Jesus answered and said, Ye know not what ye ask. Are ye able to drink of ^a the cup that I shall drink of, and to be baptized with ^r the baptism that I am baptized with? They say unto him, We are able.

23 And he saith unto them, ^s Ye shall drink

^p Chap. xix. 28.—^a Chap. xxvi. 39, 42; Mark xiv. 36; Luke xxii. 42; John xviii. 11.—^r Luke xii. 50.

tribes. Salome, probably hearing of this, and understanding it literally, came to request the chief dignities in this new government for her sons; and it appears it was at their instigation that she made this request, for Mark, chap. x. 35, informs us that these brethren themselves made the request, i. e. they made it through the medium of their mother.

One on thy right hand, and the other on (thy) left] I have added the pronoun in the latter clause on the authority of almost every MS. and version of repute.

That the sons of Zebedee wished for ecclesiastical, rather than secular honours, may be thought probable, from the allusion that is made here to the supreme dignities in the great Sanhedrin. The prince of the Sanhedrin (HA-NASI) sat in the midst of two rows of senators or elders; on his right hand sat the person termed AB (the father of the Sanhedrin;) and on his left hand the CHACHAM, or sage. These persons transacted all business in the absence of the president. The authority of this council was at some periods very great, and extended to a multitude of matters both ecclesiastical and civil. These appear to have been the honours which James and John sought. They seem to have strangely forgot the lesson they had learned from the transfiguration.

Verse 22. Ye know not what ye ask.] How strange is the infatuation, in some parents, which leads them to desire worldly or ecclesiastical honours for their children! He must be much in love with the cross who wishes to have his child a minister of the Gospel; for, if he be such as God approves of in the work, his life will be a life of toil and suffering; he will be obliged to sip, at least, if not to drink large γ, of the cup of Christ. We know not what we ask, when, in getting our children into the CHURCH, we take upon ourselves to answer for their call to the sacred office, and for the salvation of the souls that are put under their care. Blind parents! rather let your children beg their bread than thrust them into an office to which God has not called them; and in which they will not only ruin their souls, but be the means of damnation to hundreds; for if God has not sent them, they shall not profit the people at all.

And to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized, &c.] This clause in this, and the next verse, is wanting in BDL, two others, (7 more in ver. 23,) Coptic, Sahidic, Ethiopic, Mr. WHEELOCK'S Persic, Vulgate, Saxon, and all the Itala, except two. Grotius, Mill, and Bengel, think it should be omitted, and indeed of my cup, and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with: but to sit on my right hand, and on my left, is not mine to ^t give, but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared of my Father.

24 ^u And when the ten heard it, they were moved with indignation against the two brethren.

25 But Jesus called them unto him, and said,

^s Acts xii. 2; Rom. viii. 17; 2 Cor. i. 7; Rev. i. 9.—^t Chap. xxv. 34.—^u Mark x. 41; Luke xxii. 24, 25.

Griesbach has left it out of the text in both his editions. It is omitted also by Origen, Epiphanius, Hilary, Jerome, Ambrose, and Juvenius. According to the rules laid down by critics to appreciate a false or true reading, this clause cannot be considered as forming a part of the sacred text. It may be asked, Does not drink of my cup, convey the same idea? Does the clause add any thing to the perspicuity of the passage? And, though found in many good MSS., is not the balance of evidence in point of antiquity against it? Baptism among the Jews, as it was performed in the coldest weather, and the persons were kept under water for some time, was used not only to express death, but the most cruel kind of death. See Lightfoot. As to the term cup, it was a common figure, by which they expressed calamities, judgments desolation, &c.

They say unto him, We are able.] Strange blindness! You can? No: one drop of this cup would sink you into utter ruin, unless upheld by the power of God. However, the man whom God has appointed to the work he will preserve in it.

Verse 23. Is not mine to give, but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared of my Father.] The common translation, in which the words, it shall be given to them, are interpolated by our translators, utterly changes and destroys the meaning of the passage. It represents Christ (in opposition to the whole Scriptures) as having nothing to do in the dispensing of rewards and punishments; whereas, our Lord only intimates that, however partial he may be to these two brethren, yet seats in glory can only be given to those who are fitted for them. No favour can prevail here; the elevated seat is for him who is filled with the fullness of God. The true construction of the words is this:—οὐκ ἐστὶν ἐμὸν δοῦναι, ἀλλ' ὅς τις ἡτοιμασάτω ὑπο τοῦ πατρὸς μου. To sit on my right hand and on my left, is not mine to give, except to them for whom it is prepared of my Father. According to the prediction of Christ, these brethren did partake of his afflictions: James was martyred by Herod, Acts xii. 2; and John was banished to Patmos, for the testimony of Christ, Rev. i. 9.

Verse 24. When the ten heard it, they were moved] The ambition which leads to spiritual lordship is one great cause of murmurings and animosities in religious societies, and has proved the ruin of the most flourishing Churches in the universe.

Verse 25. Exercise dominion—and—exercise au

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1. Ye know that the princes of the Gentiles exercise dominion over them, and they that are great exercise authority upon them.

26 But ^v it shall not be so among you: but ^w whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister;

27 ^x And whosoever will be chief among

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1. you, let him be your servant:

28 ^y Even as the ^z Son of man came not to be ministered unto, ^a but to minister, and ^b to give his life a ransom ^c for many.

29 ¶ ^d And as they departed from Jericho, a great multitude followed him.

^v 1 Pet. v. 3.—^w Chap. xxiii. 11; Mark ix. 35; x. 43.
^x Chap. xviii. 4.—^y John xiii. 4.—^z Phil. ii. 7.—^a Luke xxii. 27; John xiii. 14.

^b Isa. liii. 10, 11; Dan. ix. 24, 26; John xi. 51, 52; 1 Tim. ii. 6; Tit. ii. 14; 1 Pet. i. 19.—^c Chap. xxvi. 29; Rom. v. 15. 19; Heb. ix. 28.—^d Mark x. 46; Luke xviii. 35.

thority upon them.] They tyrannized and exercised arbitrary power over the people. This was certainly true of the governments in our Lord's time, both in the east and in the west. I have endeavoured to express, as nearly as possible, the meaning of the two Greek verbs, κατακρίνειν, and καρτεροῦναι; and those who understand the genius of the language will perceive that I have not exhausted their sense, however some may think that no emphasis was intended, and that these compound verbs are used for the simple κυρινεῖν and εξουσιάζειν. See Wakefield and Rosenmüller.

The government of the Church of Christ is widely different from secular governments. It is founded in humility and brotherly love: it is derived from Christ, the great Head of the Church, and is ever conducted by his maxims and spirit. When political matters are brought into the Church of Christ, both are ruined. The Church has more than once ruined the State; the State has often corrupted the Church: it is certainly for the interests of both to be kept separate. This has already been abundantly exemplified in both cases, and will continue so to be, over the whole world, wherever the Church and State are united in secular matters.

Verse 26. It shall not be so among you] Every kind of lordship and spiritual domination over the Church of Christ, like that exercised by the Church of Rome, is destructive and anti-christian.

Your minister] Or, deacon, διακονός. I know no other word which could at once convey the meaning of the original, and make a proper distinction between it and δούλος, or servant, in ver. 27. The office of a deacon, in the primitive Church, was to serve in the agapæ, or love feasts, to distribute the bread and wine to the communicants; to proclaim different parts and times of worship in the churches; and to take care of the widows, orphans, prisoners, and sick, who were provided for out of the revenues of the Church. Thus we find it was the very lowest ecclesiastical office. Deacons were first appointed by the apostles, Acts vi. 1-6; they had the care of the poor, and preached occasionally.

Verse 27. Your servant] Δούλος, the lowest secular office, as deacon was the lowest ecclesiastical office: δούλος is often put for slave.

From these directions of our Lord, we may easily discern what sort of a spirit his ministers should be of. 1. A minister of Christ is not to consider himself a lord over Christ's flock. 2. He is not to conduct the concerns of the Church with an imperious spirit. 3.

He is to reform the weak, after Christ's example, more by loving instruction than by reproof or censure. 4. He should consider that true apostolic greatness consists in serving the followers of Christ with all the powers and talents he possesses. 5. That he should be ready, if required, to give up his life unto death, to promote the salvation of men.

Verse 28. A ransom for many.] Λύτρον ἂντι πολλῶν, or a ransom instead of many,—one ransom, or atonement, instead of the many prescribed in the Jewish law. Mr. Wakefield contends for the above translation, and with considerable show of reason and probability.

The word λύτρον is used by the Septuagint for the Hebrew פְּדִיּוֹן, pidion, the ransom paid for a man's life: see Exod. xxi. 30; Num. iii. 49-51; and λύτρα is used Num. xxxv. 31, where a satisfaction (Hebrew כֹּפֶר, copher, an atonement) for the life of a murderer is refused. The original word is used by Lucian in exactly the same sense, who represents Ganymede promising to sacrifice a ram to Jupiter, λύτρον ὑπὲρ ἐμοῦ, as a ransom for himself, provided he would dismiss him.

The whole Gentile world, as well as the Jews, believed in vicarious sacrifices. Virgil, Æn. v. 85, has nearly the same words as those in the text. "UNUM PRO MULTIS dabitur CAPUT,"—One man must be given for many. Jesus Christ laid down his life as a ransom for the lives and souls of the children of men. In the Codex Beza, and in most of the Itala, the Saxon, and one of the Syriac, Hilary, Leo Magnus, and Juvencus, the following remarkable addition is found: "But seek ye to increase from a little, and to be lessened from that which is great. Moreover, when ye enter into a house, and are invited to sup, do not recline in the most eminent places, lest a more honourable than thou come after, and he who invited thee to supper come up to thee and say, Get down yet lower; and thou be put to confusion. But if thou sit down in the lowest place, and one inferior to thee come after, he who invited thee to supper will say unto thee. Go and sit higher: now this will be advantageous to thee." This is the largest addition found in any of the MSS., and contains not less than sixty words in the original, and eighty-three in the Anglo-Saxon. It may be necessary to remark, that Mr. Marshall, in his edition of the Gothic and Saxon Gospels, does not insert these words in the text, but gives them, p. 496 of his observations. This addition is at least as ancient as the fourth century, for it is quoted by Hilary, who did not die till about A. D. 367.

A. M. 4033. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CCII. 1. 30 And, behold, * two blind men sitting by the way side, when they heard that Jesus passed by, cried out, saying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou Son of David.

31 And the multitude rebuked them, because they should hold their peace: but they cried the more, saying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou Son of David.

A. M. 4033. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CCII. 1. 32 And Jesus † stood still, and called them, and said, What will ye that I shall do unto you?

33 They say unto him, * Lord, that our eyes may be opened.

34 So Jesus had compassion on them, and touched their eyes: † and immediately their eyes received sight, † and they followed him.

* Ch. ix. 27.—† Mark x. 49; Luke xviii. 40; Psa. lxxv. 2.—‡ Ch.

ix. 30.—‡ Mark viii. 22-25; x. 52; chap xi. 5.—§ Psa. cxvi. 1.

Verse 30. Two blind men] Mark, chap. x. 46, and Luke xviii. 35, mention only one blind man, Bartimeus. Probably he was mentioned by the other evangelists, as being a person well known before and after his cure. Blindness of heart is a disorder of which men seldom complain, or from which they desire to be delivered; and it is one property of this blindness, to keep the person from perceiving it, and to persuade him that his sight is good.

Sitting by the way side] In the likeliest place to receive alms, because of the multitudes going and coming between Jerusalem and Jericho.

Cried out] In the midst of judgments God remembers mercy. Though God had deprived them, for wise reasons, of their eyes, he left them the use of their speech. It is never so ill with us, but it might be much worse: let us, therefore, be submissive and thankful.

Have mercy on us] Hearing that Jesus passed by, and not knowing whether they should ever again have so good an opportunity of addressing him, they are determined to call, and call earnestly. They ask for mercy, conscious that they deserve nothing, and they ask with faith—Son of David, acknowledging him as the promised Messiah.

Verse 31. The multitude rebuked them] Whenever a soul begins to cry after Jesus for light and salvation, the world and the devil join together to drown its cries, or force it to be silent. But let all such remember, Jesus is now passing by; that their souls must perish everlastingly, if not saved by him, and they may never have so good an opportunity again. While there is a broken and a contrite heart, let it sigh its complaints to God, till he hear and answer.

They cried the more] When the world and the devil begin to rebuke, in this case, it is a proof that the salvation of God is nigh; therefore, let such cry out a great deal the more.

Verse 32. Jesus stood] “The cry of a believing penitent,” says one, “is sufficient to stop the most merciful Jesus, were he going to make a new heaven and a new earth; for what is all the irrational part of God’s creation in worth, when compared with the value of one immortal soul?” See on Mark x. 50.

What will ye that I shall do] Christ is at all times infinitely willing to save sinners: when the desire of the heart is turned towards him, there can be little delay in the salvation. What is thy wish? If it be a good one, God will surely fulfil it.

Verse 33. That our eyes may be opened.] He who feels his own sore, and the plague of his heart, has no great need of a prompter in prayer. A hungry man can easily ask bread; he has no need to go to a book to get expressions to state his wants in; his hunger tells him he wants food, and he tells this to the person from whom he expects relief. Helps to devotion, in all ordinary cases, may be of great use; in extraordinary cases they can be of little importance; the afflicted heart alone can tell its own sorrows, with appropriate pleadings.

Verse 34. So Jesus had compassion on them] Σπλαγχνισθεῖς, He was moved with tender pity. The tender pity of Christ met the earnest cry of the blind men, and their immediate cure was the result.

They followed him.] As a proof of the miracle that was wrought, and of the gratitude which they felt to their benefactor. For other particulars of this miraculous cure, see the notes on Mark x. 46, &c.

Reader, whosoever thou art, act in behalf of thy soul as these blind men did in behalf of their sight, and thy salvation is sure. Apply to the Son of David; lose not a moment; he is passing by, and thou art passing into eternity, and probably wilt never have a more favourable opportunity than the present. The Lord increase thy earnestness and faith!

CHAPTER XXI.

Christ rides into Jerusalem upon an ass, and the multitude receive him joyfully, 1-11. He enters the temple, and expels the money-changers, &c. 12, 13. The blind and the lame come to him and are healed, 14. The chief priests and scribes are offended, 15. Our Lord confounds them, and goes to Bethany, 16, 17. The barren fig-tree blasted, 18-22. While teaching in the temple, the chief priests and elders question his authority; he answers and confutes them, 23-27. The parable of the man and his two sons, 28-32. The parable of a vineyard let out to husbandmen, 33-42; applied to the priests and Pharisees, 43-45; who wish to kill him, but are restrained by the fear of the people, who acknowledge Christ for a prophet, 46

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

AND ^a when they drew nigh unto Jerusalem, and were come to Bethphage, unto ^b the mount of Olives, then sent Jesus two disciples,

2 Saying unto them, Go into the village over against you, and straightway ye shall find an ass tied, and a colt with her: loose them, and bring them unto me.

3 And if any man say aught unto you, ye shall say, The Lord hath need of them; and straightway he will send them.

4 All this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, saying,

^a Mark xi. 1; Luke xix. 29.—^b Zech. xiv. 4.—^c Isa. lii. 11; Zech. ix. 9; John xii. 15.

NOTES ON CHAP. XXI.

Verse 1. Bethphage] A place on the west declivity of Mount Olivet, from which it is thought the whole declivity and part of the valley took their name. It is supposed to have derived its name from the fig-trees which grew there; בית beeth, signifying a region as well as a house, and פֶּחַג phag, a green fig.

Verse 2. Ye shall find an ass tied, and a colt] Asses and mules were in common use in Palestine: horses were seldom to be met with. Our blessed Lord takes every opportunity to convince his disciples that nothing was hidden from him: he informs them of the most minute occurrence; and manifested his power over the heart in disposing the owner to permit the ass to be taken away.

Verse 3. The Lord (the proprietor of all things) hath need of them] Jesus is continually humbling himself, to show us how odious pride is in the sight of God: but in his humility he is ever giving proofs of his almighty power, that the belief of his divinity may be established.

Verse 4. All this was done] The word all, in this clause, is omitted by some MSS., versions, and fathers.

Which was spoken] The Spirit of God, which predicted those things that concerned the Messiah, took care to have them literally fulfilled: 1. To show the truth of prophecy in general; and, 2. To designate Christ as the person intended by that prophecy. See the note on chap. ii. 23.

Verse 5. Tell ye the daughter of Sion] The quotation is taken from Zech. ix. 9, but not in the precise words of the prophet.

This entry into Jerusalem has been termed the triumph of Christ. It was indeed the triumph of humility over pride and worldly grandeur; of poverty over affluence; and of meekness and gentleness over rage and malice.

He is coming now meek, full of kindness and compassion to those who were plotting his destruction! He comes to deliver up himself into their hands; their king comes to be murdered by his subjects, and to make his death a ransom price for their souls!

Verse 7. And put on them their clothes] Thus acknowledging him to be their king, for this was a 5 ^a Tell ye the daughter of Sion, Behold, thy king cometh unto thee, meek, and sitting upon an ass, and a colt the foal of an ass.

6 ^d And the disciples went, and did as Jesus commanded them,

7 And brought the ass, and the colt, and ^e put on them their clothes, and they set him thereon.

8 And a very great multitude spread their garments in the way; ^f others cut down branches from the trees, and strewed them in the way.

^d Mark xi. 4.—^e 2 Kings ix. 13.—^f See Lev. xxiii. 40; 1 Mac. xiii. 51, &c.; 2 Mac. x. 7; John xii. 13.

eustom observed by the people when they found that God had appointed a man to the kingdom. When Jehu sat with the captains of the army, and Elisha the prophet came, by the order of God, to anoint him king over Israel, as soon as he came out of the inner chamber into which the prophet had taken him to anoint him, and they knew what was done, every man took his garment, and spread it under him on the top of the steps, and blew the trumpets, saying, "Jehu is king." 2 Kings ix. 13.

And they set him thereon.] Καὶ ἐπεκαθίσεν ἐπ' αὐτῶν, and he sat upon them; but instead of ἐπ' αὐτῶν, upon THEM, the Codex Bezae, seven copies of the Itala, some copies of the Vulgate, and some others, read ἐπ' αὐτοῦ, upon him, i. e. the colt. This is most likely to be the true reading; for we can scarcely suppose that he rode upon both by turns.—this would appear childish; or that he rode upon both at once, for this would be absurd. Some say he sat on both; for "the ass that was tied up was an emblem of the Jews bound under the yoke of the law; and the colt that had not been tied represented the Gentiles who were not under the law; and that Jesus Christ's sitting on both represented his subjecting the Jews and the Gentiles to the sway of his evangelical seceptre." He who can receive this saying, let him receive it.

Verse 8. Cut down branches from the trees] Carrying palm and other branches was emblematical of victory and success. See 1 Mac. xiii. 51; 2 Mac. x. 7; and Rev. vii. 9.

The rabbins acknowledge that the prophecy in Zechariah refers to the Messiah; so Rab. Tancum, and Yalcut Rubeni has a strange story about the ass. "This ass is the colt of that ass which was created in the twilight of the sixth day. This is the ass which Abraham found when he went to sacrifice his son. This is the ass on which Moses rode when he went to Egypt; and this is the ass on which the Messiah shall ride." Some of the Jews seem to think that the zebra is intended; for according to Bab. Sanhedr. fol. 98, when Shapoor, king of Persia, said to Rabbi Samuel: "You say your Messiah will come upon an ass; I will send him a noble horse." To which the rabbi replied, "You have not a horse with a hundred spots (query streaks) like his ass." See Lightfoot and Schoettgen

A. M. 4033. 9 And the multitudes that went
A. D. 29. before, and that followed, cried, say-
An. Olymp. ing, ^ε Hosanna to the son of David :
CCII. 1.

^h Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord : Hosanna in the highest.

10 ⁱ And when he was come into Jerusalem, all the city was moved, saying, Who is this ?

11 And the multitude said, This is Jesus ^k the prophet of Nazareth of Galilee.

^ε Psa. cxviii. 25.—^h Psa. cxviii. 26; chap. xxiii. 39.
ⁱ Mark xi. 15; Luke xix. 45; John ii. 13, 15.—^k Chap. ii. 23;
Luke vii. 16; John vi. 14; vii. 40; ix. 17.

Verse 9. Hosanna to the son of David] When persons applied to the king for help, or for a redress of grievances, they used the word hosanna, or rather from the Hebrew הוֹשִׁי'עָה נָא HOSHIAH NA! Save now! or, Save, we beseech thee!—redress our grievances, and give us help from oppression! Thus both the words and actions of the people prove that they acknowledged Christ as their king, and looked to him for deliverance. How easily might he have assumed the sovereignty at this time, had he been so disposed! For instances of the use of this form of speech, see 2 Sam. xiv. 4; 2 Kings vi. 26; Psa. cxviii. 25.

Son of David] A well-known epithet of the Messiah. He who cometh in the name, &c. He who comes in the name and authority of the Most High.

Hosanna in the highest] Either meaning, Let the heavenly hosts join with us in magnifying this august Being!—or, Let the utmost degrees of hosanna, of solatation, and deliverance, be communicated to thy people! Probably there is an allusion here to the custom of the Jews in the feast of tabernacles. During the first seven days of that feast, they went once round the altar, each day, with palm and other branches in their hands, singing HOSANNA: but on the eighth day of that feast they walked seven times round the altar, singing the hosanna; and this was termed the hosanna rabba, the GREAT hosanna: i. e. Assist with the greatest succour. Probably answering to the tour whistous of the evangelist, for on this day they beg the most speedy and powerful help against their enemies, and likewise pray for a prosperous and fruitful year. See STEHLIN'S Jewish Traditions, vol. ii. p. 322.

Verse 10. All the city was moved] Or, the whole city was in motion. Εσεισθη, was in a tumult—they saw and heard plainly that the multitude had proclaimed Christ king, and Messiah. Who is this? Who is accounted worthy of this honour?

Verse 11. This is Jesus THE PROPHET] Ο προφητης, THAT prophet whom Moses spoke of, Deut. xviii. 18. I will raise them up a prophet—like unto thee, &c. Every expression of the multitude plainly intimated that they fully received our blessed Lord as the promised Messiah.—How strange is it that these same people (if the creatures of the high priest be not only intended) should, about five days after, change their hosannas for, Away with him! crucify him! crucify him! How fickle is the multitude! Even when they get right, there is but little hope that they will continue so long.

12 ¶ ^l And Jesus went into the temple of God, and cast out all them that sold and bought in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the ^m money-changers, and the seats of them that sold doves, 13 And said unto them, It is written, ⁿ My house shall be called the house of prayer; ^o but ye have made it a den of thieves.

^l Mark xi. 11; Luke xix. 45; John ii. 15.—^m Deut. xiv. 25.—ⁿ Isa. lvi. 7.—^o Jer. vii. 11; Mark xi. 17; Luke xix. 46.

Verse 12. Jesus went into the temple of God, &c.] “Avarice,” says one, “covered with the veil of religion, is one of those things on which Christ looks with the greatest indignation in his Church. Merchandize of holy things, simoniacal presentations, fraudulent exchanges, a mercenary spirit in sacred functions; ecclesiastical employments obtained by flattery, service, or attendance, or by any thing which is instead of money; collations, nominations, and elections made through any other motive than the glory of God; these are all fatal and damnable profanations, of which those in the temple were only a shadow.” QUESNEL.

Money-changers] Persons who furnished the Jews and proselytes who came from other countries, with the current coin of Judea, in exchange for their own.

Verse 13. My house shall be called the house of prayer] This is taken from Isa. lvi. 7.

But ye have made it a den of thieves.] This is taken from Jer. vii. 11.

Our Lord alludes here to those dens and caves in Judea, in which the public robbers either hid or kept themselves fortified.

They who are placed in the Church of Christ to serve souls, and do it not, and they who enjoy the revenues of the Church, and neglect the service of it, are thieves and robbers in more senses than one.

Our Lord is represented here as purifying his temple; and this we may judge he did in reference to his true temple, the Church, to show that nothing that was worldly or unholy should have any place among his followers, or in that heart in which he should condescend to dwell. It is marvellous that these interested vile men did not raise a mob against him: but it is probable they were overawed by the Divine power, or, seeing the multitudes on the side of Christ, they were afraid to molest him. I knew a case something similar to this, which did not succeed so well. A very pious clergyman of my acquaintance, observing a woman keeping a public standing to sell nuts, gingerbread, &c., at the very porch of his Church, on the Lord's day, “desired her to remove thence, and not defile the house of God, while she profaned the Sabbath of the Lord.” She paid no attention to him. He warned her the next Sabbath, but still to no purpose. Going in one Lord's day to preach, and finding her still in the very entrance, with her stall, he overthrew the stall, and scattered the stuff into the street. He was shortly after summoned to appear before the royal court, which, to its eternal

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCL. I. 14 And the blind and the lame came to him in the temple; and he healed them.

15 ¶ And when the chief priests and scribes saw the wonderful things that he did, and the children crying in the temple, and saying, Hosanna to the son of David: they were sore displeased,

16 And said unto him, Hearest thou what these say? And Jesus saith unto them, Yea; have ye never read, ^ψ Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise?

17 ¶ And he left them, and went out of the city into ^α Bethany; and he lodged there.

18 ^ν Now in the morning, as he returned into the city, he hungered.

19 ^α And when he saw ^α a fig tree in the way, he came to it, and found nothing thereon, but leaves only, and said unto it, Let no fruit grow on thee henceforward for ever. And presently the fig tree withered away.

20 ^α And when the disciples saw it, they marvelled, saying, How soon is the fig tree withered away!

† Psa. viii. 2.—^α Mark xi. 11; John xi. 13.—^ν Mark xi. 12.

^α Mark xi. 13.—^ν Gr. one fig tree.—^α Mark xi. 20.

reproach, condemned the action, and fined the man of God in a considerable sum of money!

Verse 14. The blind and the lame came] Having condemned the profane use of the temple, he now shows the proper use of it. It is a house of prayer, where God is to manifest his goodness and power in giving sight to the spiritually blind, and feet to the lame. The Church or chapel in which the blind and the lame are not healed has no Christ in it, and is not worthy of attendance.

Verse 15. The chief priests—were sore displeased] Or, were incensed. Incensed at what! At the purification of the profaned temple! This was a work they should have done themselves, but for which they had neither grace nor influence; and their pride and jealousy will not suffer them to permit others to do it. Strange as it may appear, the priesthood itself, in all corrupt times, has been ever the most forward to prevent a reform in the Church. Was it because they were conscious that a reformer would find them no better than money-changers in, and profaners of, the house of God, and that they and their system must be overturned, if the true worship of God were restored? Let him who is concerned answer this to his conscience.

Verse 16. Out of the mouth of babes] The eighth Psalm, out of which these words are quoted, is applied to Jesus Christ in three other places in the new covenant, 1 Cor. xv. 27; Eph. i. 22; Heb. ii. 6. Which proves it to be merely a prophetic psalm, relating to the Messiah.

It was a common thing among the Jews for the children to be employed in public acclamations; and thus they were accustomed to hail their celebrated rabbins. This shouting of the children was therefore no strange thing in the land: only they were exasperated, because a person was celebrated against whom they had a rooted hatred. As to the prophecy that foretold this, they regarded it not. Some imagine that babes and sucklings in the prophecy have a much more extensive meaning, and refer also to the first preachers of the Gospel of Christ.

Verse 17. And he left them (καταλιπων, finally leaving them) and went—into Bethany; and he lodged ^αhere.] Bethany was a village about two miles distant from Jerusalem, by Mount Olivet, John xi. 18; and it is remarkable that from this day till his death, which happened about six days after, he spent not one night in Jerusalem, but went every evening to Bethany, and returned to the city each morning. See Luke xxi. 37; xxii. 39; John viii. 1, 2. They were about to murder the Lord of glory; and the true light, which they had rejected, is now departing from them.

Lodged there.] Not merely to avoid the snares laid for him by those bad men, but to take away all suspicion of his affecting the regal power. To the end of this verse is added by the Saxon, ¶ lænde in þan be lǿðer rice. And taught them of the kingdom of God. This same reading is found in some MSS., Missals, and one copy of the Itala. It appears also in Wicliff, and my old folio English MS. Bible, and taught hem of the kyngdom of God; and in two MS. copies of the Vulgate, in my possession: one, duodecimo, very fairly written, in 1300; the other a large folio, probably written in the 11th or 12th century, in which the words are, IBIQUE docebat eos de regno Dei. AND THERE he taught them concerning the kingdom of God.

Verse 18. Now in the morning, as he returned into the city] Which was his custom from the time he wholly left Jerusalem, spending only the day time teaching in the temple; see ver. 17. This was probably on Thursday, the 12th day of the month Nisan. He hungered—Probably neither he, nor his disciples, had any thing but what they got from public charity; and the hand of that seems to have been cold at this time.

Verse 19. He saw a fig tree in the way] Επὶ τῆς οδοῦ, By the road side. As this fig tree was by the way side, it was no private property; and on this account our Lord, or any other traveller, had a right to take of its fruit. For a full explanation of this difficult passage, relative to this emblematic fig tree, see on Mark xi. 13, &c.

Let no fruit grow on thee] Can a professor, who affords Christ nothing but barren words and wishes, expect any thing but his malediction? When the soul continues in unfruitfulness, the influences of grace are removed, and then the tree speedily withers from the very root.

Verse 20. How soon is the fig tree withered away!] We often say to our neighbours, "How suddenly this

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCH. 1.

21 Jesus answered and said unto them, Verily I say unto you, ^v If ye have faith, and ^w doubt not, ye shall not only do this which is done to the fig tree, ^z but also if ye shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; it shall be done.

22 And ^y all things, whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive.

23 ¶ ^z And when he was come into the temple, the chief priests and the elders of the people came unto him as he was teaching, and ^a said, By what authority doest thou these things? and who gave thee this authority?

24 And Jesus answered and said unto them, I also will ask you one thing, which if ye tell

^v Chap. xvii. 20; Luke xvii. 6.—^w James i. 6.—^x 1 Cor. xiii. 2.—^y Chap. vii. 7; Mark xi. 24; Luke xi. 9; James v. 16;

man died! Who could have expected it so soon?" But who takes warning by these examples? What we say to-day of OTHERS, may be said to-morrow of OURSELVES. Be ye also ready! Lord, increase our faith!

Verse 21. If ye have faith, and doubt not] See on chap. xvii. 20. Removing mountains, and rooting up of mountains, are phrases very generally used to signify the removing or conquering great difficulties—getting through perplexities. So, many of the rabbins are termed rooters up of mountains, because they were dexterous in removing difficulties, solving cases of conscience, &c. In this sense our Lord's words are to be understood. He that has faith will get through every difficulty and perplexity; mountains shall become mole-hills or plains before him. The saying is neither to be taken in its literal sense, nor is it hyperbolic: it is a proverbial form of speech, which no Jew could misunderstand, and with which no Christian ought to be puzzled.

Verse 22. All things—ye shall ask in prayer, believing] In order to get salvation, there must be, 1. a conviction of the want of it: this hegets, 2. prayer, or warm desires, in the heart: then 3. the person asks, i. e. makes use of words expressive of his wants and wishes: 4. believes the word of promise, relative to the fulfilment of his wants: and 5. receives, according to the merciful promise of God, the salvation which his soul requires.

Verse 23. By what authority doest thou these things?] The things which the chief priests allude to, were his receiving the acclamations of the people as the promised Messiah, his casting the traders out of the temple, and his teaching the people publicly in it.

Who gave thee this authority?] Not them: for, like many of their successors, they were neither teachers nor cleansers; though they had the name and the profits of the place.

Verse 24. I also will ask you one thing] Our Lord was certainly under no obligation to answer their question: he had already given them such proofs of his Divine mission as could not possibly be exceeded, in me, I, in like wise, will tell you ^{A. M. 4033.} by what authority I do these ^{A. D. 29.} things. ^{An. Olymp.} ^{CCH. 1.}

25 The baptism of John, whence was it? from heaven, or of men? And they reasoned with themselves, saying, If we shall say, From heaven; he will say unto us, Why did ye not then believe him?

26 But if we shall say, Of men; we fear the people; ^b for all hold John as a prophet.

27 And they answered Jesus, and said, We cannot tell. And he said unto them, Neither tell I you by what authority I do these things.

28 ¶ But what think ye? A certain man had two sons; and he came to the first, and said, Son, go work to-day in my vineyard.

1 John iii. 22; v. 14.—^z Mark xi. 27; Luke xx. 1.—^a Exod. ii. 14; Acts iv. 7; vii. 27.—^b Chap. xiv. 5; Mark vi. 20; Luke xx. 6.

the miracles which he wrought before their eyes, and before all Judea; and, as they would not credit him on this evidence, it would have been in vain to have expected their acknowledgment of him on any profession he would make.

Verse 25. The baptism of John] Had John a Divine commission or not, for his baptism and preaching? Our Lord here takes the wise in their own cunning. He knew the estimation John was in among the people; and he plainly saw that, if they gave any answer at all, they must convict themselves: and so they saw, when they came to examine the question. See ver. 25, 26.

Verse 27. We cannot tell.] Simplicity gives a wonderful confidence and peace of mind; but double dealing causes a thousand inquietudes and troubles. Let a man do his utmost to conceal in his own heart the evidence he has of truth and innocence, to countenance his not yielding to it; God, who sees the heart, will, in the light of the last day, produce it as a witness against him, and make it his judge.

We cannot tell, said they; which, in the words of truth, should have been, We will not tell, for we will not have this man for the Messiah: because, if we acknowledge John as his forerunner, we must, of necessity, receive Jesus as the Christ.

They who are engaged against the truth are abandoned to the spirit of falsity, and scruple not at a lie. Pharisaical pride, according to its different interests, either pretends to know every thing, or affects to know nothing. Among such, we may meet with numerous instances of arrogance and affected humility. God often hides from the wise and prudent what he reveals unto babes; for, when they use their wisdom only to invent the most plausible excuses for rejecting the truth when it comes to them, it is but just that they should be punished with that ignorance to which, in their own defence, they are obliged to have recourse.

Verse 28. A certain man had two sons] Under the emblem of these two sons, one of whom was a libertine, disobedient, and insolent, but who afterwards

A. M. 4033. 29 ^e He answered and said, I will
A. D. 29. not : but afterward he repented, and An. Olymp. CCH. I. went.

30 And he came to the second, and said likewise. And he answered and said, I go, sir: and went not.

31 Whether of them twain did the will of his father? They say unto him, The first. Jesus saith unto them, ^d Verily I say unto you, That the publicans and the harlots go into the kingdom of God before you.

^e Eccus. xix. 21.—^d Luke vii. 29, 50.—^e Chap. iii. 1, &c.
^f Luke iii. 12, 13.

thought on his ways, and returned to his duty; and the second, a hypocrite, who promised all, and did nothing; our Lord points out, on the one hand, the tax-gatherers and *sinner*s of all descriptions, who, convicted by the preaching of John and that of Christ, turned away from their iniquities and embraced the Gospel; and, on the other hand, the scribes, Pharisees, and self-righteous people, who, pretending a zeal for the law, would not receive the salvation of the Gospel.

Verse 29. I will not] This is the general reply of every sinner to the invitations of God; and, in it, the Most High is treated without ceremony or respect. They only are safe who persist not in the denial.

Verse 30. I go, sir] This is all respect, complaisance, and professed obedience: but he went not: he promised well, but did not perform. What a multitude of such are in the world, professing to know God, but denying him in their works! Alas! what will such professions avail, when God comes to take away the soul!

Verse 31. The publicans and the harlots] In all their former conduct they had said no. Now they yield to the voice of truth when they hear it, and enter into the kingdom, embracing the salvation brought to them in the Gospel. The others, who had been always professing the most ready and willing obedience, and who pretended to be waiting for the kingdom of God, did not receive it when it came, but rather chose, while making the best professions, to continue members of the synagogue of Satan.

Verse 32. John came unto you in the way of righteousness] Proclaiming the truth, and living agreeably to it. Or, John came unto you, who are in the way of righteousness. This seems rather to be the true meaning and construction of this passage. The Jews are here distinguished from the Gentiles. The former were in the way of righteousness, had the revelation of God, and the ordinances of justice established among them; the latter were in the way of unrighteousness, without the Divine revelation, and iniquitous in all their conduct: John came to both, preaching the doctrine of repentance, and proclaiming Jesus the Christ. To say that it was John who came in the way of righteousness, and that to him the words refer, is, in my opinion, saying nothing: for this was necessarily implied: as he professed to come from God, he must not only preach righteousness, but walk in it.

32 For ^e John came unto you in the way of righteousness, and ye believed him not: ^f but the publicans and the harlots believed him: and ye, when ye had seen it, repented not afterward, that ye might believe him.

33 ¶ Hear another parable: There was a certain householder, ^g which planted a vineyard, and hedged it round about, and digged a wine-press in it, and built a tower, and let it out to husbandmen, and ^h went into a far country.

^g Psal. lxxx. 9; Cant. viii. 11; Isa. v. 1; Jer. ii. 21; Mark xii. 1; Luke xx. 9.—^h Chap. xxv. 14, 15.

It is very difficult to get a worldly minded and self-righteous man brought to Christ. Examples signify little to him. Urge the example of an eminent saint, he is discouraged at it. Show him a profligate sinner converted to God, him he is ashamed to own and follow; and, as to the conduct of the generality of the followers of Christ, it is not striking enough to impress him. John, and Christ, and the apostles preach; but, to multitudes, all is in vain.

Verse 33. There was a certain householder] Let us endeavour to find out a general and practical meaning for this parable. A householder—the Supreme Being. The family—the Jewish nation. The vineyard—the city of Jerusalem. The fence—the Divine protection. The wine-press—the law and sacrificial rites. The tower—the temple, in which the Divine presence was manifested. The husbandmen—the priests and doctors of the law. Went from home—entrusted the cultivation of the vineyard to the priests, &c., with the utmost confidence; as a man would do who had the most trusty servants, and was obliged to absent himself from home for a certain time. Our Lord takes this parable from Isa. v. 1, &c.; but whether our blessed Redeemer quote from the law, the prophets, or the rabbins, he reserves the liberty to himself to beautify the whole, and render it more pertinent.

Some apply this parable also to Christianity, thus:—The master or father—our blessed Lord. The family—professing Christians in general. The vineyard—the true Church, or assembly of the faithful. The hedge—the true faith, which keeps the sacred assembly enclosed and defended from the errors of heathenism and false Christianity. The wine-press—the atonement made by the sacrifice of Christ, typified by the sacrifices under the law. The tower—the promises of the Divine presence and protection. The husbandmen—the apostles and all their successors in the ministry. The going from home—the ascension to heaven. But this parable cannot go on all fours in the Christian cause, as any one may see. In the case of the husbandmen, especially it is applicable; unless we suppose our Lord intended such as those inquisitorial Bonners, who always persecuted the true ministers of Christ, and consequently Christ himself in his members; and to these may be added the whole train of St. Bartholomew executors, and all the fire and faggot men of a certain Church, who think they de

A. M. 4033. 34 And when the time of the fruit
A. D. 29. drew near, he sent his servants to
An. Olymp. the husbandmen, ¹ that they might CCII. 1. receive the fruits of it.

35 ^k And the husbandmen took his servants, and beat one, and killed another, and stoned another.

36 Again, he sent other servants more than the first; and they did unto them likewise.

37 But last of all he sent unto them his son, saying, They will reverence my son.

38 But when the husbandmen saw the son, they said among themselves, ¹ This is the heir; ^m come, let us kill him, and let us seize on his inheritance.

¹ Cant. viii. 11, 12.—^k 2 Chron. xxiv. 21; xxxvi. 16; Neh. ix. 26; chap. v. 12; xxiii. 34, 37; Acts vii. 52; 1 Thess. ii. 15; Heb. xi. 36, 37.—¹ Ps. ii. 8; Heb. i. 2.—^m Ps. ii. 2; chap. xxvii. 3; xxvii. 1; John xi. 53; Acts iv. 27.—^a Chap. xxvi. 50, &c.; Mark xiv. 46, &c.; Luke xxii. 54, &c.; John xviii.

God service by murdering his saints. But let the persecuted take courage: Jesus Christ will come back shortly, and then he will miserably destroy those wicked men: indeed, he has done so already to several, and let out his vineyard to more faithful husbandmen.

Dugged a wine-press] ὤρυξε ληνον. St. Mark has υποληνιον, the pit under the press, into which the liquor ran, when squeezed out of the fruit by the press.

Verse 34. He sent his servants] Prophets, which, from time to time, he sent to the Jewish nation to call both priests and people back to the purity of his holy religion.

Receive the fruits of it.] Alluding to the ancient custom of paying the rent of a farm in kind; that is, by a part of the produce of the farm. This custom anciently prevailed in most nations; and still prevails in the highlands of Scotland, and in some other places. The Boldon book, a survey made of the state of the bishopric of Durham in 1183, shows how much of the rents was paid in cows, sheep, pigs, fowls, eggs, &c., the remaining part being made up chiefly by manual labour.

Verse 35. Beat one] Εδριψαν, took his skin off, flayed him: probably alluding to some who had been excessively scourged.

Killed another, &c.] Rid themselves of the true witnesses of God by a variety of persecutions.

Verse 36. Other servants] There is not a moment in which God does not shower down his gifts upon men, and require the fruit of them. Various instruments are used to bring sinners to God. There are prophets, apostles, pastors, teachers: some with his gift after this manner, and some after that. The true disciples of Christ have been persecuted in all ages, and the greatest share of the persecution has fallen upon the ministers of his religion: for there have always been good and bad husbandmen, and the latter have persecuted the former.

More than the first] Or, more honourable. so I think πλησιονας should be translated; for, as the fulness of

39 ^a And they caught him, and ^{A. M. 4033.}
^{A. D. 29.} cast him out of the vineyard, and ^{An. Olymp.}
^{CCII. 1.} slew him.

40 When the lord therefore of the vineyard cometh, what will he do unto those husbandmen?

41 ^o They say unto him, ^p He will miserably destroy those wicked men, ^q and will let out his vineyard unto other husbandmen, which shall render him the fruits in their seasons.

42 Jesus saith unto them, ^r Did ye never read in the scriptures, The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner: this is the Lord's doing, and it is marvellous in our eyes?

12, &c.; Acts ii. 23.—^o See Luke xx. 16.—^p Luke xxi. 24; Heb. ii. 3.—^q Acts xiii. 46; xv. 7; xviii. 6; xxviii. 25; Rom. ix. x, xi.—^r Ps. cxviii. 22; Isa. xxviii. 16; Mark xii. 10; Luke xx. 17; Acts iv. 11; Eph. ii. 20; 1 Pet. ii. 6, 7.

the time approached, each prophet more clearly and fully pointed out the coming of Christ.

Our translation, which says, more than the first, conveys no meaning at all. Πλειον is the meaning I have given it above, in chap. vi. 25. πλειον της τροφης, of MORE VALUE than food; and in Num. xxii. 15. πλειους και ιερισμοτερους, persons higher in dignity and office.

Verse 37. Last of all he sent—his son] This requires no comment. Our Lord plainly means himself.

They will reverence] Εὐτραπήσουται, they will reflect upon their conduct and blush for shame because of it, when they see my son. So the Syric and Persic.

Verse 38. Said among themselves] Alluding to the conspiracies which were then forming against the life of our blessed Lord, in the councils of the Jewish elders and chief priests. See chap. xxvii. 1.

Verse 39. Cast him out of the vineyard] Utterly rejected the counsel of God against themselves; and would neither acknowledge the authority of Christ, nor submit to his teaching. What a strange and unaccountable case is this!—a sinner, to enjoy a little longer his false peace, and the gratification of his sinful appetites, rejects Jesus, and persecutes that Gospel which troubles his sinful repose.

Verse 41. He will miserably destroy those wicked men] So, according to this evangelist, our Lord caused them to pass that sentence of destruction upon themselves which was literally executed about forty years after. But Luke relates it differently: according to him, they said μη γενοιτο, God forbid! The Codex Bezae Cantabrigiae omits οι λεγουσιν, they say; so that the following words appear to be spoken by our Lord. Michaelis supposes that in the Hebrew original the word was ויאמר waiaomer, he said; for which the Greek translator might have read ויאמרו waiaomeru, they said.

Verse 42. The stone] R. Solom. Jarchi, on Micah v., says, this stone means the Messiah, אבן משיח: Abarbanel is of the same opinion. This seems to have

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

43 Therefore say I unto you, ^sThe kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof.

44 And whosoever ^tshall fall on this stone shall be broken: but on whomsoever it shall fall, ^uit will grind him to powder.

Chap. viii. 12.—^tIsa. viii. 11, 15; Zech. vi. 3; Luke xx. 18; Rom. ix. 33; 1 Pet. ii. 8.—^uIsa. lx. 12; Dan. ii. 41.

been originally spoken of David, who was at first rejected by the Jewish rulers, but was afterwards chosen by the Lord to be the great ruler of his people Israel. The quotation is taken from Psa. cxviii. 22.

As the Church is represented in Scripture under the name of the temple and house of God, in allusion to the temple of Jerusalem, which was a type of it, 1 Cor. iii. 16; Heb. iii. 6; 1 Pet. ii. 5: so Jesus Christ is represented as the foundation on which this edifice is laid, 1 Cor. iii. 11: Eph. ii. 20, 21.

The builders] The chief priests and elders of the people, with the doctors of the law.

Rejected] An expression borrowed from masons, who, finding a stone, which being tried in a particular place, and appearing improper for it, is thrown aside, and another taken; however, at last, it may happen that the very stone which had been before rejected, may be found the most suitable as the head stone of the corner.

This passage, as applied by our Lord to himself, contains an abridgment of the whole doctrine of the Gospel.

1. The Lord's peculiar work is astonishingly manifested in the mission of Jesus Christ.

2. He, being rejected and crucified by the Jews, became an atonement for the sin of the world.

3. He was raised again from the dead, a proof of his conquest over death and sin, and a pledge of immortality to his followers.

4. He was constituted the foundation on which the salvation of mankind rests, and the corner stone which unites Jews and Gentiles, beautifies, strengthens, and completes the whole building, as the head stone, or uppermost stone in the corner does the whole edifice.

5. He is hereby rendered the object of the joy and admiration of all his followers and the glory of man. This was done by the Lord, and is marvellous in our eyes.

Verse 44.—The 44th verse should certainly come before ver. 43, otherwise the narration is not consecutive. Verse 42, The stone which the builders rejected, is become the head of the corner. &c. Verse 44, Whosoever shall fall on this stone shall be broken, &c. This is an allusion to the punishment of stoning among the Jews. The place of stoning was twice as high as a man; while standing on this, one of the witnesses struck the culprit on the loins, so that he fell over this scaffold; if he died by the stroke and fall, well; if not, the other witness threw a stone upon his heart, and despatched him. The stone thrown on the culprit was, in some cases, as much as two men could lift up. Tract Sanhed. and Bab. Gemara, and Lightfoot. See also the note on John viii. 7.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

45 And when the chief priests and Pharisees had heard his parables, ^vthey perceived that he spake of them.

46 But when they sought to lay hands on him, they feared the multitude, because ^wthey took him for a prophet.

^vLuke xx. 19; John vii. 26; Rom. ii. 15. ^wVer. 11; Mark xi. 18; xii. 12; Luke vii. 16; John vii. 40.

He, whether Jew or Gentile, who shall not believe in the Son of God, shall suffer grievously in consequence; but on whomsoever the stone (Jesus Christ) falls in the way of judgment, he shall be ground to powder, λεκμήσει αὐτόν—it shall make him so small as to render him capable of being dispersed as chaff by the wind. This seems to allude, not only to the dreadful crushing of the Jewish state by the Romans, but also to that general dispersion of the Jews through all the nations of the world, which continues to the present day. This whole verse is wanting in the Codex Bezae one other, five copies of the Itala, and Origen; but it is found in the parallel place, Luke xx. 18, and seems to have been quoted from Isa. viii. 14, 15. He shall be for a stone of stumbling, and for a rock of offence to both the houses of Israel—and many among them shall stumble and fall, and be broken.

Verse 43. Therefore say I] Thus showing them, that to them alone the parable belonged. The kingdom of God shall be taken from you—the Gospel shall be taken from you, and given to the Gentiles, who will receive it, and bring forth fruit to the glory of God.

Bringing forth the fruits] As in verse 34 an allusion is made to paying the landlord in kind, so here the Gentiles are represented as paying God thus. The returns which He expects for his grace are the fruits of grace; nothing can ever be acceptable in the sight of God that does not spring from himself.

Verse 45. The chief priests—perceived that he spake of them.] The most wholesome advice passes for an affront with those who have shut their hearts against the truth. When that which should lead to repentance only kindles the flame of malice and revenge, there is but little hope of the salvation of such persons.

Verse 46. They sought to lay hands on him, they feared the multitude] Restraining and preventing grace is an excellent blessing, particularly where it leads to repentance and salvation; but he who abstains from certain evils, only through fear of scandal or punishment, has already committed them in his heart, and is guilty before God. The intrepidity of our Lord is worthy of admiration and imitation; in the very face of his most inveterate enemies, he bears a noble testimony to the truth, reproves their iniquities, denounces the Divine judgments, and, in the very teeth of destruction, braves danger and death! A true minister of Christ fears nothing but God, when his glory is concerned: a hireling fears every thing, except Him whom he ought to fear.

This last journey of our Lord to Jerusalem is a subject of great importance; it is mentioned by all the four evangelists, and has been a subject of criticism and caril to some unsanctified minds. He has been accused of "attempting, by this method, to feel how far the populace were disposed to favour his pretensions in establishing himself as a king in the land; or, at least, by his conduct in this business, he gave much cause for popular seditions." Every circumstance in the case refutes this calumny. 1. His whole conduct had proved that his kingdom was not of this world, and that he sought not the honour that cometh from man. 2. He had in a very explicit manner foretold his own premature death, and particularly at this time. 3. It is evident, from what he had said to his disciples, that he went up to Jerusalem at this time for the express purpose of being sacrificed, and not of erecting a secular kingdom. 4. What he did at this time was to fulfil a declaration of God delivered by two prophets, upwards of 700 years before, relative to his lowliness, poverty, and total deadness to all secular rule and pomp. See Isa. lxii. 11; Zech. ix. 9. 5. All the time he spent now in Jerusalem, which was about five days, he spent in teaching, precisely in the same way he had done for three years past; nor do we find that he uttered one maxim dissimilar to what he formerly taught, or said a word calculated to produce any sensation on the hearts of the populace, but that of piety towards God; and in the parable of the man and his two sons, the husbandmen and the vineyard, he spoke in such a way to the rulers of the people as to show that he knew they were plotting his destruction; and that, far from fleeing from the face of danger, or strengthening his party against his enemies, he was come to wait at the foot of the altar till his blood should be poured out for the sin of the world! 6. Had he affected any thing of a secular kind, he had now the fairest opportunity to accomplish his designs. The people had already received him as Jesus the prophet; now they acknowledge him as the Christ or Messiah, and sing the hosannah to him, as immediately appointed by Heaven to be their deliverer. 7. Though, with the character of the Messiah, the Jews had connected that of secular royalty, and they now, by spreading their clothes in the way, strewing branches, &c., treat him as a royal person, and one appointed to govern the kingdom; yet of this he appears to take no notice, farther than to show that an important prophecy was thus fulfilled: he went as usual into the temple, taught the people pure and spiritual truths, withdrew at night from the city, lodged in private at Mount Olivet; and thus most studiously and unequivocally showed that his sole aim was to call the people back to purity and holiness, and prepare them for that kingdom of righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost, which he was about, by his passion, death, resurrection, ascension, and the mission of the Holy Spirit, to set up in the earth. 8. Could a person who worked such miracles as he was in the daily habit of working—miracles which proved he possessed unlimited power and unerring wisdom, need subterfuges, or a colouring for any design he wished to accomplish? He had only to put forth that power essentially resident in himself, and all resistance to his will must be annihilated. In short, every circumstance of the case shows at once the calumny and absurdity of the charge. But, instead of lessening, or rendering suspicious this or any other part of our Lord's conduct, it shows the whole in a more luminous and glorious point of view; and thus the wrath of man praises him. 9. That he was a king, that he was born of a woman and came into the world for this very purpose, he took every occasion to declare; but all these declarations showed that his kingdom was spiritual: he would not even interfere with the duty of the civil magistrate to induce an avaricious brother to do justice to the rest of the family, Luke xii. 13, when probably a few words from such an authority would have been sufficient to have settled the business; yet to prevent all suspicion, and to remove every cause for offence, he absolutely refused to interfere, and took occasion from the very circumstance to declaim against secular views, covetousness, and worldly ambition! O how groundless does every part of his conduct prove this charge of secular ambition to be!

Such was the spirit of the Master: such must be the spirit of the disciple. He that will reign with Christ, must be humbled and suffer with him. This is the royal road. The love of the world, in its power and honours, is as inconsistent with the spirit of the Gospel as the love of the grossest vice. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. Reader, take occasion from this refuted calumny, to imitate thy Lord in the spirituality of his life, to pass through things temporal so as not to lose those that are eternal, that thou mayest reign with him in the glory of his kingdom. Amen.

CHAPTER XXII.

The parable of the marriage of a king's son, 1-14. The Pharisees and Herodians question him concerning the lawfulness of paying tribute to Caesar, 15-22. The Sadducees question him concerning the resurrection, 23-33. A lawyer questions him concerning the greatest commandment in the law, 34-40. He asks them their opinion of the Christ, and confounds them, 41-46.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

AND Jesus answered ^a and spake unto them again by parables, and said,

^a Luke xiv. 16;

2 'The kingdom of heaven is like unto a certain king, which made a marriage for his son,

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

Rev. xix. 7, 9.

NOTES ON CHAP. XXII.

Verse 2. The kingdom of heaven] In Bereshith Rabba, sect. 62. fol. 60, there is a parable very similar to this, and another still more so in Sohar. Levit. fol. 40. But these rabbinical parables are vastly ennobled by passing through the hands of our Lord

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCH. I. 3 And ^b sent forth his servants to call them that were bidden to the wedding : and they would not come.

4 Again, he sent forth other servants, saying, ^c Tell them which are bidden, Behold, I have prepared my dinner : ^d my oxen and my fatlings are killed, and all things are ready : come unto the marriage.

5 But they made light of it, ^e and went their

^b Mark vi. 12 ; Luke iii. 3 ; iv. 2, 6. — ^c Prov. ix. 2, 3.
^d Prov. ix. 2 ; Isa. xxv. 6.

It appears from Luke, chap. xiv. 15, &c., that it was at an entertainment that this parable was originally spoken. It was a constant practice of our Lord to take the subjects of his discourses from the persons present, or from the circumstances of times, persons, and places. See chap. xvi. 6 ; John iv. 7-10 ; vi. 26, 27 ; vii. 37. A preacher that can do so can never be at a loss for text or sermon.

A marriage for his son] A marriage feast, so the word γαμος properly means. Or a feast of inauguration, when his son was put in possession of the government, and thus he and his new subjects became married together. See 1 Kings i. 5-9, 19, 25, &c., where such a feast is mentioned.

From this parable it appears plain, 1. That the KING means the great God. 2. His SON, the Lord Jesus. 3. The MARRIAGE, his incarnation, or espousing human nature, by taking it into union with himself. 4. The MARRIAGE FEAST, the economy of the Gospel, during which men are invited to partake of the blessings purchased by, and consequent on, the incarnation and death of our blessed Lord. 5. By those who HAD BEEN bidden, or invited, ver. 3, are meant the Jews in general, who had this union of Christ with human nature, and his sacrifice for sin, pointed out by various rites, ceremonies, and sacrifices under the law ; and who, by all the prophets, had been constantly invited to believe in and receive the promised Messiah. 6. By the SERVANTS, we are to understand the first preachers of the Gospel, proclaiming salvation to the Jews. JOHN the Baptist and the seventy disciples, (Luke x. 1,) may be here particularly intended. 7. By the OTHER SERVANTS, ver. 4, the apostles seem to be meant, who, though they were to preach the Gospel to the whole world, yet were to begin at JERUSALEM (Luke xxiv. 47) with the first offers of mercy. 8. By their making light of it, &c., ver. 5, is pointed out their neglect of this salvation, and their preferring secular enjoyments, &c., to the kingdom of Christ. 9. By injuriously using some, and slaying others, of his servants, ver. 6, is pointed out the persecution raised against the apostles by the Jews, in which some of them were martyred. 10. By sending forth his troops, ver. 7, is meant the commission given to the Romans against Judea ; and, burning up their city, the total destruction of Jerusalem by Titus, the son of Vespasian, which happened about forty-one years after.

On this parable it is necessary to remark, 1. That man was made at first in union with God. 2. That ways, one to his farm, another to his merchandise :

6 And the remnant took his servants, and entreated them spitefully, and slew them

7 But when the king heard thereof, he was wroth : and he sent forth his armies, and destroyed those murderers, and burned up their city.

8 Then saith he to his servants, The wed-

^e Luke xiv. 18-20 ; 1 Tim. vi. 10 ; 1 Heb. ii. 3 — ^f Acts v. 40
^g Dan. ix. 26 ; Luke xix. 27.

sin entered in, and separated between God and man.

3. That as there can be no holiness but in union with God, and no heaven without holiness, therefore he provided a way to reconcile and reunite man to himself.

4. This was effected by Christ's uniting himself to human nature, and giving his Spirit to those who believe. 5. That as the marriage union is the closest, the most intimate, solemn, and excellent, of all the connections formed among mortals, and that they who are thus united in the Lord are one flesh ; so that mystical union which is formed between God and the soul through Jesus Christ, by the Eternal Spirit, is the closest, most intimate, solemn, and excellent, that can be conceived ; for he who is thus joined unto the Lord is one spirit. 6. This contract is made freely : no man can be forced to it, for it is a union of will to will, heart to heart ; and it is by willing and consenting that we come unto God through his Son. 7. That if this marriage do not take place here, an eternal separation from God, and from the glory of his power, shall be the fearful consequence. 8. That there are three states in which men run the risk of living without God and losing their souls. 1st. That of a soft, idle, voluptuous life, wherein a man thinks of nothing but quietly to enjoy life, conveniences, riches, private pleasures, and public diversions. They made light of it. 2dly. That of a man wholly taken up with agricultural or commercial employments, in which the love of riches, and application to the means of acquiring them, generally stifle all thoughts of salvation. One went to his own field, and another to his traffic. 3dly. That of a man who is openly unjust, violent, and outrageously wicked, who is a sinner by profession, and not only neglects his salvation, but injuriously treats all those who bring him the Gospel of reconciliation. Seizing his servants, they treated them injuriously, &c.

Verse 4. Fatlings] Τα αυτα properly, fatted rams, or wethers, 2 Sam. vi. 13 ; 1 Chron. xv. 26. Verse 7. But when the king] HIMSELF : or, this very king. I have added ἐκείνος on the authority of nine of the most ancient MSS. and nearly one hundred others ; the later Syriac, six copies of the Itala, and some of the fathers. Several printed editions have it, and Griesbach has received it into the text.

Verse 8. Were not worthy.] Because they made light of it, and would not come ; preferring earthly things to heavenly blessings. Among the Mohammedans, refusal to come to a marriage feast, when invited, is considered a breach of the law of God. HE

A. M. 4033. ding is ready, but they which were
A. D. 29. bidden were not ^h worthy.
An. Olymp. CCII. 1.

9 Go ye therefore into the highways, and as many as ye shall find, bid to the marriage.

10 So those servants went out into the highways, and ⁱ gathered together all, as many as they found, both bad and good: and the ^h Chap. x. 11, 13; Acts xiii. 46.—ⁱ Chap. xiii. 36, 47; Isa. xlix. 22; lx. 3, 4.

ΔΑΥΑΗ, vol. iv. p. 91. Any one that shall be invited to a dinner, and does not accept the invitation, disobeys God, and his messenger: and any one who comes uninvited, you may say is a thief, and returns a plunderer.—Mischat ul Mesabih. It was probably considered in this light among all the oriental nations. This observation is necessary, in order to point out more forcibly the iniquity of the refusal mentioned in the text. A man may be said to be worthy of, or fit for, this marriage feast, when, feeling his wretchedness and misery, he comes to God in the way appointed, to get an entrance into the holiest, by the blood of Jesus.

Verse 9. Go ye therefore into the highways] Διεξόδους τῶν ὁδῶν, cross or by-paths; the places where two or more roads met in one, leading into the city, where people were coming together from various quarters of the country. St. Luke adds hedges, to point out the people to whom the apostles were sent, as either miserable vagabonds, or the most indigent poor, who were wandering about the country, or sitting by the sides of the ways and hedges, imploring relief. This verse points out the final rejection of the Jews, and the calling of the Gentiles. It was a custom among the Jews, when a rich man made a feast, to go out and invite in all destitute travellers. See in Rab. Beratoth, fol. 43.

As many as ye shall find, bid to the marriage] God sends his salvation to every soul, that all may believe and be saved.

Verse 10. Gathered together all—both bad and good] By the preaching of the Gospel, multitudes of souls are gathered into what is generally termed the visible Church of Christ. This Church is the FLOOR, where the wheat and the chaff are often mingled, chap. iii. 12. The FIELD, where the bastard wheat and the true grain grow together, chap. xiii. 26, 27. The NET, which collects of all kinds, both good and bad, chap. xiii. 48. The HOUSE in which the wise and foolish are found, chap. xxv. 1, &c. And the FOLD, in which there are both sheep and goats, chap. xxv. 33, &c.

Verse 11. When the king came] When God shall come to judge the world.

Wedding garment] Among the orientals, long white robes were worn at public festivals; and those who appeared on such occasions with any other garments were esteemed, not only highly culpable, but worthy of punishment. Our Lord seems here to allude to Zeph. i. 7, 8, The Lord hath prepared a sacrifice, he hath bidden his guests. And it shall come to pass, in the day of the Lord's sacrifice, that I will punish the princes, and the king's children, and all such as are clothed with STRANGE APPAREL. The person who wedding was furnished with guests. A. M. 4033. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CCII. 1.

11 And when the king came in to see the guests, he saw there a man ^h which had not on a wedding garment:

12 And he saith unto him, Friend, how camest thou in hither, not having a wedding garment? And he was speechless.

^h 2 Cor. v. 3; Eph. iv. 24; Col. iii. 10, 12; Rev. iii. 4; xvi. 15; xix. 8.

invited the guests prepared such a garment for each, for the time being; and with which he was furnished on his application to the ruler of the feast. It was this which made the conduct of the person mentioned in the text inexcusable; he might have had a proper marriage garment, if he had applied for it.

To afford accidental guests clothing suitable to a marriage feast, was a custom among the ancient Greeks. Homer relates that Telemachus, and the son of Nestor, arriving at Lacedæmon when Menelaus was making a marriage feast for his son and daughter, were accommodated with garments suited to the occasion, after having been bathed and anointed.

Τους δ' ἐπει οὖν ὄρωμαι λουσαν καὶ χρίσαν ἐλαίῳ,
Ἀμφὶ δ' ἀρα χλαίνας στήλας ἱάλον ἤδε χιτῶνας,
Ἐς ῥα θρόνους ἐζόντα παρ' Ἀτρεΐδην Μενέλαον
Odys. l. iv. ver. 49–51.

They entered each a bath, and by the hands
Of maidens laved, and oiled, and clothed again
With shaggy mantles and resplendent vests,
Sat both enthroned at Menelaus' side. Cowper.

Among the Asiatics, garments called caftans, great numbers of which each nobleman has ordinarily ready in his wardrobe, are given to persons whom he wishes to honour: to refuse to accept or wear such a dress would be deemed the highest insult.

This marriage feast or dinner (the communication of the graces of the Gospel in this life) prepares for the marriage supper of the Lamb, Rev. xix. 7, 8, 9, the enjoyment of eternal blessedness in the kingdom of glory. Now, as without holiness no man can see the Lord, we may at once perceive what our Lord means by the marriage garment—it is HOLINESS of heart and life: the text last quoted asserts that the fine, white, and clean linen (alluding to the marriage garment above mentioned) was an emblem of the RIGHTEOUSNESS of the SAINTS. Mark this expression: the righteousness, the whole external conduct, regulated according to the will and word of God. Of the SAINTS, the holy persons, whose souls were purified by the blood of the Lamb.

Verse 12. He saith unto him, Friend] Rather, companion: so εταίρε should be translated. As this man represents the state of a person in the visible Church, who neglects to come unto the master of the feast for a marriage garment, for the salvation which Christ has procured, he cannot be with any propriety called a friend, but may well be termed a companion, as being a member of the visible Church, and present at all those ordinances where Christ's presence and blessing are

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII.1.

13 Then said the king to the servants, Bind him hand and foot, and take him away, and cast him into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

14 ^m For many are called, but few are chosen.

15 ¶ ^a Then went the Pharisees, and took ¹ Chap. viii. 12.—^m Chap. xx. 16.

found, by all those who sincerely wait upon him for salvation.

How camest thou in hither] Why profess to be called by my name while living without a preparation for my kingdom?

He was speechless.] Εἰρωδῆ, he was muzzled, or gagged. He had nothing to say in vindication of his neglect. There was a garment provided, but he neither put it on, nor applied for it. His conduct, therefore, was in the highest degree insulting and indecorous. As this man is the emblem, by general consent, of those who shall perish in the last day, may we not ask, without offence, Where does the doctrine of absolute reprobation or preterition appear in his case? If Christ had never died for him, or if he had applied for the garment, and was refused, might he not well have alleged this in behalf of his soul!—and would not the just God have listened to it? But there is not the smallest excuse for him: Christ died, the sacrifice was offered, for him; the ministers of the Gospel invited him; the Holy Spirit strove with him; he might have been saved, but he was not: and the fault lies so absolutely at his own door that the just God is vindicated in his conduct, while he sends him to hell, not for the lack of what he could not get, but for the lack of what he might have had, but either neglected or refused it.

Then said the king to the servants] To the ministering angels, executors of the Divine will.

Cast him into outer darkness] The Jewish marriages were performed in the night season, and the hall where the feast was made was superbly illuminated; the outer darkness means, therefore, the darkness on the outside of this festal hall; rendered still more gloomy to the person who was suddenly thrust out into it from such a profusion of light. See all this largely treated of on chap. viii. 12.

Verse 14. Many are called, &c.] This verse is wanting in one of Colbert's MSS., marked 33 in Griesbach. See the note on chap. xx. 16. Many are called by the preaching of the Gospel into the outward communion of the Church of Christ; but few, comparatively, are chosen to dwell with God in glory, because they do not come to the master of the feast for a marriage garment—for that holiness without which none can see the Lord. This is an allusion to the Roman custom of raising their militia; all were mustered, but only those were chosen to serve, who were found proper. See the note on chap. xx. 16. Reader! examine thy soul, and make sure work for eternity!

Verse 15. In his talk.] Εν λόγῳ, by discourse: intending to ask him subtle and ensnaring questions; his answers to which might involve him either with the Roman government, or with the great Sanhedrin.

counsel how they might entangle him in his talk.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII.1.

16 And they sent out unto him their disciples with the Herodians, saying, Master, we know that thou art true, and teachest the way of God in truth, neither carest thou for any man: for thou regardest not the person of men

^a Mark xii. 13; Luke xx. 20.

Verse 16. The Herodians] For an account of this sect, see the note on chap. xvi. 1. The preceding parable had covered the Pharisees with confusion: when it was ended they went out, not to humble themselves before God, and deprecate the judgments with which they were threatened; but to plot afresh the destruction of their teacher. The depth of their malice appears, 1. In their mode of attack. They had often questioned our Lord on matters concerning religion; and his answers only served to increase his reputation, and their confusion. They now shift their ground, and question him concerning state affairs, and the question is such as must be answered; and yet the answer, to all human appearance, can be none other than what may be construed into a crime against the people, or against the Roman government. 2. Their profound malice appears farther in the choice of their companions in this business, viz. the Herodians. Herod was at this very time at Jerusalem, whither he had come to hold the passover. Jesus, being of Nazareth, which was in Herod's jurisdiction, was considered as his subject. Herod himself was extremely attached to the Roman emperor, and made a public profession of it: all these considerations engaged the Pharisees to unite the Herodians, who, as the Syriac intimates, were the domestics of Herod, in this infernal plot. 3. Their profound malice appears, farther, in the praises they gave our Lord. Teacher, we know that thou art true, and teachest the way of God. This was indeed the real character of our blessed Lord; and now they bear testimony to the truth, merely with the design to make it subserve their bloody purposes. Those whose hearts are influenced by the spirit of the wicked one never do good, but when they hope to accomplish evil by it. Men who praise you to your face are ever to be suspected. The Italians have a very expressive proverb on this subject:—

Chè ti fa carezze più che non suole,
O t' ha ingannato, o ingannar ti vuole.

He who caresses thee more than he was wont to do, has either DECEIVED thee, or is ABOUT TO DO IT.

I have never known the sentiment in this proverb to fail; and it was notoriously exemplified in the present instance. Flatterers, though they speak the truth, ever carry about with them a base or malicious soul. 4. Their malice appears still farther in the question they propose. Is it lawful to give tribute to Caesar, or not?—ver. 17. The constitution of the Jewish republic, the expectations which they had of future glory and excellence, and the diversity of opinions which divided the Jews on this subject, rendered an answer to this question extremely difficult:—

A. M. 4033. 17 Tell us therefore, What think-
A. D. 29. est thou? Is it lawful to give tribute
An. Olymp. unto Cæsar, or not?
CCII. 1.

18 But Jesus perceived their wickedness, and said, Why tempt ye me, ye hypocrites?

19 Show me the ^ptribute money. And they brought unto him a ^apenny.

^o Luke ii. 1; John viii. 33; Acts v. 37.—^p Chap. xvii. 24; Mark xii. 15, 16.

1. In the presence of the people, who professed to have no other king but God, and looked on their independence as an essential point of their religion.

2. In the presence of the Pharisees, who were ready to stir up the people against him, if his decision could be at all construed to be contrary to their prejudices, or to their religious rights.

3. In the presence of the Herodians, who, if the answer should appear to be against Cæsar's rights, were ready to inflame their master to avenge, by the death of our Lord, the affront offered to his master the emperor.

4. The answer was difficult, because of the different sentiments of the Jews on this subject; some maintaining that they could not lawfully pay tribute to a heathen governor: while others held that as they were now under this strange government, and had no power to free themselves from it, it was lawful for them to pay what they had not power to refuse.

5. The answer was difficult, when it is considered that multitudes of the people had begun now to receive Jesus as the promised Messiah, who was to be the deliverer of their nation from spiritual and temporal oppression, and therefore had lately sung to him the Hosanna Rabba: see chap. xxi. 9. If then he should decide the question in Cæsar's favour, what idea must the people have of him, either as zealous for the law, or as the expected Messiah? If against Cæsar, he is ruined. Who that loved Jesus, and was not convinced of his sovereign wisdom, could help trembling for him in these circumstances?

Jesus opposes the depth of his wisdom to the depth of their malice, and manifests it:—1. By unmasking them, and showing that he knew the very secrets of their hearts. YE HYPOCRITES! why tempt ye me? i. e. why do ye try me thus? This must cover them with confusion, when they saw their motives thus discovered; and tend much to lessen their influence in the sight of the people, when it was manifest that they acted not through a desire to receive information, by which to regulate their conduct, but merely to ensnare and ruin him.

2. Christ shows his profound wisdom in not attempting to discuss the question at large; but settled the business by seizing a maxim that was common among all people, and acknowledged among the Jews, That the prince who causes his image and titles to be stamped on the current coin of a country, is virtually acknowledged thereby as the governor. See Maimon. Gezel. c. v. in Wetstein. When Sultan MAHMOUD, king of Maverannahar, Turkistan, and the Indies, wished to seize on the dominions of SEIDEH, queen of Persia,

20 And he saith unto them, A. M. 4033.
Whose is this image and ^rsuper- A. D. 29.
scription? An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

21 They say unto him, Cæsar's. Then saith he unto them, ^rRender therefore unto Cæsar, the things which are Cæsar's; and unto God, the things that are God's.

^a In value seven-pence halfpenny: chap. xx. 2.—^r Or, inscription.—^s Chap. xvii. 25; Rom. xiii. 7.

who governed in the place of her young son Meged-edde-vlet, about A. D. 999, he sent an ambassador to her with the following order: You must acknowledge me for your KING, cause the kootbah to be read, i. e. pray for me in all the mosques of the kingdom, and GET YOUR MONEY recoined, with the IMPRESSION THAT IS ON MINE: thus denoting that she must become absolutely subject to him. See Bibliot. Orient. de Galand. p. 453. Esau Afghan carried his conquest into Bhatta, into the viceroyalty of Bengal, and caused the kootbah to be read, and coin to be struck in the name of the Emperor Akbar. Ayeen Akbery, vol. ii p. 5. See also p. 38, 92, 94, 130, 139, 187.

Verse 19. They brought unto him a penny.] A denarius: probably the ordinary capitation tax, though the poll tax in the law, Exod. xxx. 13, 14, was half a shekel, about twice as much as the denarius. The Roman denarius had the emperor's image with a proper legend stamped on one side of it. It was not therefore the sacred shekel which was to be paid for the repairs of the temple which was now demanded, but the regular tribute required by the Roman government.

Verse 20. Whose is this image and superscription?] He knew well enough whose they were; but he showed the excellency of his wisdom, 3dly, in making them answer to their own confusion. They came to ensnare our Lord in his discourse, and now they are ensnared in their own. He who digs a pit for his neighbour ordinarily falls into it himself.

Verse 21. They say unto him, Cæsar's.] The image was the head of the emperor; the superscription, his titles. JULIUS CÆSAR was the first who caused his image to be struck on the Roman coin. Tiberius was emperor at this time.

Render therefore unto Cæsar] The conclusion is drawn from their own premises. You acknowledge this to be Cæsar's coin; this coin is current in your land; the currency of this coin shows the country to be under the Roman government; and your acknowledgment that it is Cæsar's proves you have submitted. Don't therefore be unjust; but render to Cæsar the things which you acknowledge to be his; at the same time, be not impious, but render unto God the things which belong to God.

This answer is full of consummate wisdom. It establishes the limits, regulates the rights, and distinguishes the jurisdiction of the two empires of heaven and earth. The image of princes stamped on their coin denotes that temporal things belong all to their government. The image of God stamped on the soul denotes that all its faculties and powers belong to the Most High, and should be employed in his service.

A. M. 4033. 22 When they had heard these
A. D. 29. words, they marvelled, and left him,
An. Olymp. CCH. I. and went their way.

23 ¶ The same day came to him the Sadducees, ^u which say that there is no resurrection, and asked him,

24 Saying, Master, ^v Moses said, If a man die, having no children, his brother shall marry his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother.

25 ^w Now there were with us seven brethren: and the first, when he had married a wife, deceased; and, having no issue, left his wife unto his brother:

A. M. 4033. 26 Likewise the second also, and
A. D. 29. the third, unto the ^x seventh:

27 And last of all, the woman [—]
An. Olymp. CCH. I. died also:

28 Therefore, in the resurrection, whose wife shall she be of the seven? for they all had her.

29 Jesus answered and said unto them, Ye do err, ^y not knowing the scriptures, nor the power of God.

30 For in the resurrection, they neither marry, nor are given in marriage, but ^z are as the angels of God in heaven.

^u Mark xii. 18; Luke xx. 27.—^v Acts xxiii. 8.—^w Deut. xxv. 5.

^x Tob. iii. 8.—^y Gr. seven.—^y John xx. 9.—^z 1 John iii. 2.

But while the earth is agitated and distracted with the question of political rights and wrongs, the reader will naturally ask, What does a man owe to Cæsar?—to the civil government under which he lives? Our Lord has answered the question—That which is Cæsar's. But what is it that is Cæsar's? 1. Honour. 2. Obedience. And 3. Tribute. 1. The civil government under which a man lives, and by which he is protected, demands his honour and reverence. 2. The laus which are made for the suppression of evil doers, and the maintenance of good order, which are calculated to promote the benefit of the whole, and the comfort of the individual should be religiously obeyed. 3. The government that charges itself with the support and defence of the whole, should have its unavoidable expenses, however great, repaid by the people, in whose behalf they are incurred; therefore we should pay tribute. But remember, if Cæsar should intrude into the things of God, coin a new creed, or broach a new Gospel, and affect to rule the conscience, while he rules the state, in these things Cæsar is not to be obeyed; he is taking the things of God, and he must not get them. Give not therefore God's things to Cæsar, and give not Cæsar's things to God. That which belongs to the commonwealth should, on no account whatever, be devoted to religious uses; and let no man think he has pleased God, by giving that to charitable or sacred uses which he has purloined from the state. The tribute of half a shekel, which the law, (Exod. xxx. 13, 14,) required every person above twenty years of age to pay to the temple, was, after the destruction of the temple, in the time of Vespasian, paid into the emperor's exchequer. This sum, Melanethon supposes, amounted annually to THREE TONS OF GOLD.

Verse 22. When they had heard these words, they marvelled] And well they might—never man spake like this man. By this decision, CÆSAR is satisfied—he gets his own to the uttermost farthing. God is glorified—his honour is in every respect secured. And the people are edified—one of the most difficult questions that could possibly come before them is answered in such a way as to relieve their consciences, and direct their conduct. See L'Évangile Médité, and see my discourse entitled, The Rights of God and Cæsar.

Verse 23. The same day] Malice is ever active; let it be defeated ever so often, it returns to the charge. Jesus and his Gospel give no quarter to vice; the vicious will give no quarter to him or it.

The Sadducees] For an account of these see on chap. xvi. 1.

Verse 24. Raise up seed unto his brother.] This law is mentioned Deut. xxv. 5. The meaning of the expression is, that the children produced by this marriage should be reckoned in the genealogy of the deceased brother, and enjoy his estates. The word seed should be always translated children or posterity. There is a law precisely similar to this among the Hindoos.

Verse 25. Seven brethren] It is very likely that the Sadducees increased the number, merely to make the question the more difficult.

Verse 28. Whose wife shall she be of the seven?] The rabbins have said, That if a woman have two husbands in this world, she shall have the first only restored to her in the world to come. Sohar. Genes. fol. 24. The question put by these bad men is well suited to the mouth of a libertine. Those who live without God in the world have no other god than the world; and those who have not that happiness which comes from the enjoyment of God have no other pleasure than that which comes from the gratification of sensual appetites. The stream cannot rise higher than the spring: these men, and their younger brethren, atheists, deists, and libertines of all sorts, can form no idea of heaven as a place of blessedness, unless they can hope to find in it the gratification of their sensual desires. On this very ground Mohammed built his paradise.

Verse 29. Ye do err] Or, Ye are deceived—by your impure passions: not knowing the scriptures, which assert the resurrection:—nor the miraculous power of God (την δύναμιν τοῦ Θεοῦ) by which it is to be effected. In Avoda Sara, fol. 18, Sanhedrin, fol. 90, it is said: "These are they which shall have no part in the world to come: Those who say, the Lord did not come from heaven; and those who say, the resurrection cannot be proved out of the law."

Their deception appeared in their supposing, that if there were a resurrection, men and women were to marry and be given in marriage as in this life; which

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.
31 But as touching the resurrection of the dead, have ye not read that which was spoken unto you by God, saying,

32 ^a I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob? God is not the God of the dead, but of the living.

33 And when the multitude heard this, ^b they were astonished at his doctrine.

^a Exod. iii. 6, 16; Mark xii. 26; Luke xx. 37; Acts vii. 32; Heb. xi. 16.—^b Chap. vii. 28.—^c Mark xii. 28.—^d Luke x. 25.

our Lord shows is not the case: for men and women there shall be like the angels of God, immortal, and free from all human passions, and from those propensities which were to continue with them only during this present state of existence. There shall be no death; and consequently no need of marriage to maintain the population of the spiritual world.

Verse 31. Have ye not read] This quotation is taken from Exod. iii. 6, 16; and as the five books of Moses were the only part of Scripture which the Sadducees acknowledged as Divine, our Lord, by confuting them from those books, proved the second part of his assertion, "Ye are ignorant of those very scriptures which ye profess to hold sacred."

Verse 32. I am the God of Abraham] Let it be observed, that Abraham was dead upwards of 300 years before these words were spoken to Moses: yet still God calls himself the God of Abraham, &c. Now Christ properly observes that God is not the God of the dead, (that word being equal, in the sense of the Sadducees, to an eternal annihilation.) but of the living; it therefore follows that, if he be the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, these are not dead, but alive; alive with God, though they had ceased, for some hundreds of years, to exist among mortals. We may see, from this, that our Lord combats and confutes another opinion of the Sadducees, viz. that there is neither angel nor spirit; by showing that the soul is not only immortal, but lives with God, even while the body is detained in the dust of the earth, which body is afterwards to be raised to life, and united with its soul by the miraculous power of God, of which power they showed themselves to be ignorant when they denied the possibility of a resurrection.

Verse 33. The multitude—were astonished at his doctrine.] God uses the infidelity of some for the edification of others. Had no false doctrine been broached in the world, we had not seen the full evidence of the true teaching. The opposition of deists and infidels has only served to raise up men in behalf of the truth of God, who not only have refuted them, but shown, at the same time, that the sacred testimonies are infinitely amiable in themselves, and worthy of all acceptance. Truth always gains by being opposed.

Verse 34. They were gathered together.] Ἐπὶ το αὐτο—they came together with one accord, or, for the same purpose; i. e. of ensnaring him in his discourse, as the Sadducees had done, verse 23. The Codex Bezae and several of the Itala have ἐπ' αὐτον, against him. Camen togförr into con.—Old MS. Eng. Bib.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.
34 ¶ ^c But when the Pharisees had heard that he had put the Sadducees to silence, they were gathered together.

35 Then one of them, which was ^d a lawyer, asked him a question, tempting him, and saying,

36 Master, which is the great commandment in the law?

37 Jesus said unto him, ^e Thou shalt love

^e Deut. vi. 5; x. 12; xxx. 6; Luke x. 27; 1 Sam. vii. 3; 2 Kings x. 31; Psa. cxix. 2; 1 Tim. i. 5; 1 John iv. 7, 8, 17, 18, 20, 21.

Verse 35. A lawyer] Νόμικος, a teacher of the law. What is called lawyer, in the common translation, conveys a wrong idea to most readers: my old MS. renders the word in the same way I have done. These teachers of the law were the same as the scribes, or what Dr. Wotton calls letter-men, whom he supposes to be the same as the Karaïtes, a sect of the Jews who rejected all the traditions of the elders, and admitted nothing but the written word. See Wotton's Mishna, vol. i. p. 78. These are allowed to have kept more closely to the spiritual meaning of the law and prophets than the Pharisees did; and hence the question proposed by the lawyer, (Mark xii. 28, calls him one of the scribes.) or Karaïte, was of a more spiritual or refined nature than any of the preceding.

Verse 36. Which is the great commandment] We see here three kinds of enemies and false accusers of Christ and his disciples; and three sorts of accusations brought against them. 1. The Herodians, or politicians and courtiers, who form their questions and accusations on the rights of the prince, and matters of state, ver. 16. 2. The Sadducees, or libertines, who found theirs upon matters of religion, and articles of faith, which they did not credit, ver. 23. 3. The Pharisees, lawyers, scribes, or Karaïtes, hypocritical pretenders to devotion, who found theirs on that vital and practical godliness (the love of God and man) of which they wished themselves to be thought the sole proprietors, ver. 36.

Verse 37. Thou shalt love the Lord] This is a subject of the greatest importance, and should be well understood, as our Lord shows that the whole of true religion is comprised in thus loving God and our neighbour.

It may not be unnecessary to inquire into the literal meaning of the word love. Ἀγαπή, from ἀγαπᾶω, I love, is supposed to be compounded either of ἀγαν and πουν, to act vehemently or intensely; or, from ἀγειν κατα παν, because love is always active, and will act in every possible way; for he who loves is, with all his affection and desire, carried forward to the beloved object, in order to possess and enjoy it. Some derive it from ἀγαν and παύσθαι, to be completely at rest, or, to be intensely satisfied; because he who loves is supremely contented with, and rests completely satisfied in, that which he loves. Others, from ἀγαν and πᾶω, because a person eagerly embraces, and vigorously holds fast, that which is the object of his love. Lastly, others suppose it to be compounded of αἶω, I admire, and παύωμαι, I rest, because that which a man loves

A. M. 4033. the LORD thy God with all thy heart,
A. D. 29. and with all thy soul, and with all
An. Olymp. thy mind.
CCH. I.

38 This is the first and great commandment.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp
CCH. I.

39 And the second is like unto intensely he rests in, with fixed admiration and contemplation. So that genuine love changes not, but always abides steadily attached to that which is loved.

Whatever may be thought of these etymologies, as being either just or probable, one thing will be evident to all those who know what love means, that they throw much light upon the subject, and manifest it in a variety of striking points of view. The ancient author of a MS. Lexicon in the late French king's library, under the word αγαπη, has the following definition:—Λογαριος προθεσις επι τη φιλια του διδουμενου—Συμψυχη. "A pleasing surrender of friendship to a friend:—an identity or sameness of soul." A sovereign preference given to one above all others, present or absent: a concentration of all the thoughts and desires in a single object, which a man prefers to all others. Apply this definition to the love which God requires of his creatures, and you will have the most correct view of the subject. Hence it appears that, by this love, the soul eagerly cleaves to, affectionately admires, and constantly rests in God, supremely pleased and satisfied with him as its portion: that it acts from him, as its author; for him, as its master; and to him, as its end. That, by it, all the powers and faculties of the mind are concentrated in the Lord of the universe. That, by it, the whole man is willingly surrendered to the Most High: and that, through it, an identity, or sameness of spirit with the Lord is acquired—the man being made a partaker of the Divine nature, having the mind in him which was in Christ, and thus dwelling in God, and God in him.

But what is implied in loving God with all the heart, soul, mind, strength, &c., and when may a man be said to do this? 1. He loves God with all his heart, who loves nothing in comparison of him, and nothing but in reference to him:—who is ready to give up, do, or suffer any thing in order to please and glorify him:—who has in his heart neither love nor hatred, hope nor fear, inclination, nor aversion, desire, nor delight, but as they relate to God, and are regulated by him.

2. He loves God with all his soul, or rather, εν οη τη ψυχη, with all his life, who is ready to give up life for his sake—to endure all sorts of torments, and to be deprived of all kinds of comforts, rather than dishonour God:—who employs life with all its comforts, and conveniences, to glorify God in, by, and through all:—to whom life and death are nothing, but as they come from and lead to God. From this Divine principle sprang the blood of the martyrs, which became the seed of the Church. They overcame through the blood of the Lamb, and loved not their lives unto the death. See Rev. xii. 11.

3. He loves God with all his strength (Mark xii. 30: Luke x. 27) who exerts all the powers of his body and soul in the service of God:—who, for the glory of his Maker, spares neither labour nor cost—who sacrifices his time, body, health, ease, for the honour of God his Divine Master:—who employs in his ser-vise all his goods, his talents, his power, credit, authority, and influence.

4. He loves God with all his mind (intellect—διανοια) who applies himself only to know God, and his holy will:—who receives with submission, gratitude, and pleasure, the sacred truths which God has revealed to man:—who studies no art nor science but as far as it is necessary for the service of God, and uses it at all times to promote his glory:—who forms no projects nor designs but in reference to God and the interests of mankind:—who banishes from his understanding and memory every useless, foolish, and dangerous thought, together with every idea which has any tendency to defile his soul, or turn it for a moment from the centre of eternal repose. In a word, he who sees God in all things—thinks of him at all times—having his mind continually fixed upon God, acknowledging him in all his ways—who begins, continues, and ends all his thoughts, words, and works, to the glory of his name:—this is the person who loves God with all his heart, life, strength, and intellect. He is crucified to the world, and the world to him: he lives, yet not he, but Christ lives in him. He beholds as in a glass the glory of the Lord, and is changed into the same image from glory to glory. Simply and constantly looking unto Jesus, the author and perfecter of his faith, he receives continual supplies of enlightening and sanctifying grace, and is thus fitted for every good word and work. O glorious state! far, far, beyond this description! which comprises an ineffable communion between the ever-blessed Trinity and the soul of man!

Verse 38. This is the first and great commandment.] It is so, 1. In its antiquity, being as old as the world, and engraven originally on our very nature.

2. In dignity; as directly and immediately proceeding from and referring to God.

3. In excellence; being the commandment of the new covenant, and the very spirit of the Divine adoption.

4. In justice; because it alone renders to God his due, prefers him before all things, and secures to him his proper rank in relation to them.

5. In sufficiency; being in itself capable of making men holy in this life, and happy in the other.

6. In fruitfulness; because it is the root of all commandments, and the fulfilling of the law.

7. In virtue and efficacy; because by this alone God reigns in the heart of man, and man is united to God.

8. In extent; leaving nothing to the creature, which it does not refer to the Creator.

9. In necessity; being absolutely indispensable.

10. In duration; being ever to be continued on earth, and never to be discontinued in heaven.

Verse 39. Thou shalt love thy neighbour] The love of our neighbour springs from the love of God as its source; is found in the love of God as its principle, pattern, and end; and the love of God is found in the

A. M. 4033. it, 'Thou shalt love thy neighbour
A. D. 29. as thyself.
An. Olymp. CCH. I.

40 ^ε On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets.

41 ¶ ^h While the Pharisees were gathered together, Jesus asked them, 42 Saying, What think ye of Christ? whose son is he? They say unto him, The son of David.

43 He saith unto them, How then doth

^f Lev. xix. 18; chap. xix. 19; Mark xii. 31; Luke x. 27; Rom. xiii. 9; Gal. v. 14; James ii. 8.—^ε Chap. vii. 12; 1 Tim. i. 5.—^h Mark xii. 35; Luke xx. 41.

love of our neighbour, as its effect, representation, and infallible mark. This love of our neighbour is a love of equity, charity, succour, and benevolence. We owe to our neighbour what we have a right to expect from him—"Do unto all men as ye would they should do unto you," is a positive command of our blessed Saviour. By this rule, therefore, we should speaking, thinking, and writing, concerning every soul of man:—put the best construction upon all the words and actions of our neighbour that they can possibly bear. By this rule we are taught to bear with, love, and forgive him; to rejoice in his felicity, mourn in his adversity, desire and delight in his prosperity, and promote it to the utmost of our power: instruct his ignorance, help him in his weakness, and risk even our life for his sake, and for the public good. In a word, we must do every thing in our power, through all the possible varieties of circumstances, for our neighbours, which we would wish them to do for us, were our situations reversed.

This is the religion of Jesus! How happy would society be, were these two plain, rational precepts properly observed! Love me, and love thy fellows! Be unutterably happy in me, and be in perfect peace, unanimity, and love, among yourselves. Great fountain and dispenser of love! fill thy creation with this sacred principle, for his sake who died for the salvation of mankind!

On the nature of self-love, see chap. xix. 19.

Verse 40. On these two—hang all the law and the prophets.] They are like the first and last links of a chain, all the intermediate ones depend on them. True religion begins and ends in love to God and man. These are the two grand links that unite God to man, man to his fellows, and men again to God.

Love is the fulfilling of the law, says St. Paul, Rom. xiii. 10; for he who has the love of God in him delights to obey the Divine precepts, and to do all manner of kindness to men for God's sake.

Verse 41. While the Pharisees were gathered together] Jesus asks a question in his turn, utterly to confound them, and to show the people that the source of all the captious questions of his opponents was their ignorance of the prophecies relative to the Messiah.

Verse 42. What think ye of Christ?] Or, What are your thoughts concerning THE CHRIST—the Messiah; for to this title the emphatic article should always be added.

David in spirit ⁱ call him Lord A. M. 4033. saying, A. D. 29.
An. Olymp. CCH. I.

44 ^k The LORD said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footstool?

45 If David then call him Lord, how is he his son?

46 ^l And no man was able to answer him a word, ^m neither durst any man from that day forth ask him any more questions.

^l Eccclus. li. 10.—^k Psal. cx. 1; Acts ii. 34; 1 Cor. xv. 25; Heb. i. 13; x. 12, 13.—^j Luke xiv. 6.—^m Mark xii. 34; Luke xx. 40.

[Whose son is he?] From what family is he to spring?

They say unto him, The son of David.] This was a thing well known among the Jews, and universally acknowledged, see John vii. 42; and is a most powerful proof against them that the Messiah is come. Their families are now so perfectly confounded that they cannot trace back any of their genealogies with any degree of certainty: nor have they been capable of ascertaining the different families of their tribes for more than sixteen hundred years. Why, then, should the spirit of prophecy assert so often, and in such express terms, that Jesus was to come from the family of David; if he should only make his appearance when the public registers were all demolished, and it would be impossible to ascertain the family? Is it not evident that God designed that the Messiah should come at a time when the public genealogies might be inspected, to prove that it was he who was prophesied of, and that no other was to be expected? The evangelists, Matthew and Luke, were so fully convinced of the conclusiveness of this proof that they had recourse to the public registers; and thus proved to the Jews, from their own records, that Jesus was born of the family mentioned by the prophets. Nor do we find that a scribe, Pharisee, or any other, ever attempted to invalidate this proof, though it would have essentially subverted their cause, could they have done it. But as this has not been done, we may fairly conclude it was impossible to do it.

Verse 43. How then doth David in spirit (or by the Spirit—by the inspiration of the Spirit of God) call him Lord? saying, Verse 44. The Lord (יהוה Yeh or Jehovah) said unto my Lord, (אדני Adni or Adonai, my prop, stay, master, support,) Sit thou on my right hand] Take the place of the greatest eminence and authority. Till I make thine enemies thy footstool—till I subdue both Jews and Gentiles under thee, and cause them to acknowledge thee as their sovereign and Lord. This quotation is taken from Psal. cx. 1; and, from it, these two points are clear: 1. That David wrote it by the inspiration of God; and 2. That it is a prophetic declaration of the Messiah.

Verse 45. How is he his son?] As the Jews did not attempt to deny the conclusion of our Lord's question, which was, the Messiah is not only the son of David according to the flesh, but he is the Lord of David according to his Divine nature, then it is evident they could not. Indeed, there was no other way of invalidating the argument, but by denying that the prophecy in question related to Christ: but it seems the prophecy was so fully and so generally understood to belong to the Messiah that they did not attempt to do this; for it is immediately added, No man was able to answer him a word—they were completely nonplussed and confounded.

Verse 46. Neither durst any—ask him any more questions.] “Thus,” says Dr. Wotton, “our Lord put the four great sects of the Jews to silence, in one day, successively. The Herodians and Pharisees wanted to know whether they might lawfully pay tribute to Caesar or not. The Sadducees were inquisitive to know whose wife the woman should be of the seven brethren, in the resurrection, who had her to wife. Then comes the scribe, (or karaites,) who owned no authority beyond or besides the written law, and asked which was the great commandment in the law. This lawyer deserves to be mentioned here, because he not only acquiesced in, but commended, what our Lord had said in answer to his question.” Wotton’s Miscellaneous Discourses, vol. i. p. 78.

The Pharisees and Herodians were defeated, ver. 15–22. The Sadducees were confounded, ver. 29–33. The lawyers or karaites nonplussed, ver. 37–40. And the Pharisees, &c., finally routed, ver. 41–46. Thus did the wisdom of God triumph over the cunning of men.

From this time, we do not find that our Lord was any more troubled with their captious questions: their whole stock, it appears, was expended, and now they coolly deliberate on the most effectual way to get him murdered. He that resists the truth of God is capable of effecting the worst purpose of Satan.

The very important subjects of this chapter have been so amply discussed in the notes, and applied so particularly to their spiritual uses, that it does not appear necessary to add any thing by way of practical improvement. The explanation of the great command of the law is particularly recommended to the reader’s notice. See on verses 36–40.

CHAPTER XXIII.

The character of the scribes and Pharisees, and directions to the people and the disciples to receive the law from them, but not to follow their bad example. 1–7. The disciples exhorted to humility, 8–12. Different woes pronounced against the scribes and Pharisees for their intolerance, 13; rapacity, 14; false zeal, 15; superstition in oaths and tithes, 16–23; hypocrisy, 24–28. Their cruelty, 29–32. Their persecution of the apostles, &c. Their destruction foretold, 33–36. Christ’s lamentation over Jerusalem, 37–39.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

THEN spake Jesus to the multitude, and to his disciples,

2 Saying, ^a The scribes and the Pharisees sit in Moses’ seat:

3 All therefore whatsoever they bid you observe, that observe and do; but do not ye after their works: for ^b they say, and do not.

^a Neh. viii. 4, 8; Mal. ii. 7; Mark xii. 39; Luke xx. 45.
^b Rom. ii. 19, &c.

NOTES ON CHAP. XXIII.

Verse 2. The scribes and the Pharisees sit in Moses’ seat] Εκαθίσαν.—They sat there formerly by Divine appointment: they sit there now by Divine permission. What our Lord says here refers to their expounding the Scriptures, for it was the custom of the Jewish doctors to sit while they expounded the law and prophets, (chap. v. 1; Luke iv. 20–22,) and to stand up when they read them.

By the seat of Moses, we are to understand authority to teach the law. Moses was the great teacher of the Jewish people; and the scribes, &c., are here represented as his successors.

Verse 3. All therefore whatsoever] That is, all those things which they read out of the law and prophets, and all things which they teach consistently with them. This must be our Lord’s meaning: he could not have desired them to do every thing, without restriction, which the Jewish doctors taught; because himself

4 ^c For they bind heavy burdens and grievous to be borne, and lay them on men’s shoulders; but they themselves will not move them with one of their fingers.

5 But ^d all their works they do for to be seen of men: ^e they make broad their phylacteries, and enlarge the borders of their garments,

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

^c Luke xi. 46; Acts xv. 10; Gal. vi. 13.—^d Chap. vi. 1, 2, 5, 16.
^e Num. xv. 38; Deut. vi. 8; xxii. 12; Prov. iii. 3.

warns his disciples against their false teaching, and testifies that they had made the word of God of none effect by their traditions. See chap. xv. 6, &c. Besides, as our Lord speaks here in the past tense—whatsoever they have commanded, ὅσα ἐπαύον, he may refer to the teaching of a former period, when they taught the way of God in truth, or were much less corrupted than they were now.

Verse 4. They bind heavy burdens] They are now so corrupt that they have added to the ceremonies of the law others of their own invention, which are not only burdensome and oppressive, but have neither reason, expediency, nor revelation, to countenance them. In a word, like all their successors in spirit to the present day, they were severe to others, but very indulgent to themselves.

Verse 5. All their works they do for to be seen of men] In pointing out the corruptions of these men, our Lord gives us the distinguishing character-

A. M. 4033. 6 † And love the uppermost rooms
A. D. 29. at feasts, and the chief seats in the
An. Olymp. synagogues,
CCII. 1.

† Mark xii. 38, 39; Luke xi. 43; xx. 46; 3 John 9.

istics of all false teachers, whether Jewish or Christian.

1. They live not according to the truths they preach. They say, and do not, ver. 3.

2. They are severe to others, point out the narrowest road to heaven, and walk in the broad road themselves. They bind on burdens, &c., ver. 4.

3. They affect to appear righteous, and are strict observers of certain rites, &c., while destitute of the power of godliness. They make broad their phylacteries, &c., ver. 5.

4. They love worldly entertainments, go to feast wherever they are asked, and seek Church preferments. They love the chief places at feasts, and chief seats in the synagogues, ver. 6.

5. They love and seek public respect and high titles, salutations in the market-place, (for they are seldom in their studies,) and to be called of men rabbi—eminent teacher, though they have no title to it, either from the excellence or fruit of their teaching. When these marks are found in a man who professes to be a minister of Christ, charity itself will assert he is a thief and a robber—he has climbed over the wall of the sheepfold, or broken it down in order to get in.

Phylacteries] Φυλακτήρια, from φυλάσσω, to keep or preserve. These were small slips of parchment or vellum, on which certain portions of the law were written. The Jews tied these about their foreheads and arms, for three different purposes. 1. To put them in mind of those precepts which they should constantly observe. 2. To procure them reverence and respect in the sight of the heathen. And 3. To act as amulets or charms to drive away evil spirits.

The first use of these phylacteries is evident from their name.

The second use appears from what is said on the subject from the Gemara, Beraoth, chap. i., quoted by Kypke. “Whence is it proved that phylacteries, (תפילין, tephilin,) are the strength of Israel?”—Ans. From what is written, Deut. xxviii. 10. All the people of the earth shall see that thou art called by the name [of יהוה Jehovah]—and they shall be afraid of thee.

The third use of them appears from the Targum, on Cant. viii. 3. His left hand is under my head, &c. “The congregation of Israel hath said, I am elect above all people, because I bind my phylacteries on my left hand, and on my head, and the scroll is fixed to the right side of my gate, the third part of which looks to my bed-chamber, that DÆMONS may not be permitted to INJURE me.”

An original phylactery lies now before me. It is a piece of fine vellum, about eighteen inches long, and an inch and quarter broad. It is divided into four unequal compartments: in the first is written, in a very fair character, with many apices, after the mode of the German Jews, the first ten verses of Exod. xiii.; in the second compartment is written, from the eleventh to the sixteenth verse of the same chapter, inclusive;

7 And greetings in the markets, and A. M. 4033.
to be called of men, Rabbi, Rabbi. A. D. 29.
8 ‡ But be not ye called Rabbi: An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

‡ James iii. 1; see 2 Cor. i. 24; 1 Pet. v. 3.

in the third, from the fourth to the ninth verse, inclusive, of Deut. vi., beginning with, Hear, O Israel, &c.; in the fourth, from the thirteenth to the twenty-first verse, inclusive, of Deut. xi.

These passages seem to be chosen in vindication of the use of the phylactery itself, as the reader will see on consulting them: Bind them for a sign upon thy HAND—and for FRONTLETS between thy EYES—write them upon the POSTS of thy HOUSE, and upon thy GATES; all which commands the Jews took in the most literal sense.

Even the phylactery became an important appendage to a Pharisee's character, inasmuch that some of them wore them very broad, either that they might have the more written on them, or that, the characters being larger, they might be the more visible, and that they might hereby acquire greater esteem among the common people, as being more than ordinarily religious. For the same reason, they wore the fringes of their garments of an unusual length. Moses had commanded (Num. xv. 38, 39) the children of Israel to put fringes to the borders of their garments, that, when they looked upon even these distinct threads, they might remember, not only the law in general, but also the very minutiae, or smaller parts of all the precepts, rites, and ceremonies, belonging to it. As these hypocrites were destitute of all the life and power of religion within, they endeavoured to supply its place by phylacteries and fringes without. See the note on Exod. xiii. 9.

Verse 7. To be called of men, Rabbi, Rabbi.] רַבִּי רַבִּי, i. e. My teacher! my teacher! The second rabbi is omitted by several excellent MSS., by most of the ancient versions, and by some of the fathers. Griesbach has left it in the text, with the note of doubtfulness.

There are three words used among the Jews as titles of dignity, which they apply to their doctors—Rabh, Rabbi, and Rabban; each of these terms has its particular meaning: rabban implies much more than rabbi, and rabbi much more than rabh.

They may be considered as three degrees of comparison: rabh great, rabbi greater, and rabban greatest. These rabbins were looked up to as infallible oracles in religious matters, and usurped not only the place of the law, but of God himself.

Verse 8. But be not ye called Rabbi] As our Lord probably spoke in Hebrew, the latter word rabbi, in this verse, must have been in the plural; but as the contracted form of the plural sounds almost exactly like the singular, the Greek writer would naturally express them both in the same letters.

None of the prophets had ever received this title, nor any of the Jewish doctors before the time of Hillel and Shammai, which was about the time of our Lord; and, as disputes on several subjects had run high between these two schools, the people were of course divided; some acknowledging Hillel as rabbi,—infallible teacher, and others giving this title to Sham-

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

for one is your Master, even Christ ;
and all ye are brethren.

9 And call no man your father upon the earth : ^h for one is your Father, which is in heaven.

10 Neither be ye called masters : for one is your Master, even Christ.

11 But ⁱ he that is greatest among you shall be your servant.

12 ^k And whosoever shall exalt himself shall

^h Mal. i. 6.—ⁱ Chap. xx. 26, 27.—^k Job xxiii. 29 ; Prov. xv. 33 ; xxix. 23 ; Luke xiv. 11 ; xviii. 11 ; James iv. 6 ; 1 Pet.

mai. The Pharisees, who always sought the honour that comes from men, assumed the title, and got their followers to address them by it. See on chap. xix. 3.

[One is your Master] Instead of καθηγῆτης, guide or leader, (the common reading here, and which occurs in verse 10,) the famous Vatican MS., upwards of fifty others, and most of the ancient versions, read διδάσκαλος, master. The most eminent critics approve of this reading ; and, independently of the very respectable authority by which it is supported, it is evident that this reading is more consistent with the context than the other,—Be not ye called MASTERS, for one is your MASTER.

Even Christ] Griesbach has left this out of the text, because it is wanting in many of the most excellent MSS., versions, and fathers. Mill and Bengel approve of the omission. It might have been brought into this verse from verse 10. Our Lord probably alludes to Isa. liv. 13, All thy children shall be taught of the Lord.

[Ye are brethren.] No one among you is higher than another, or can possibly have from me any jurisdiction over the rest. Ye are, in this respect, perfectly equal.

Verse 9. Call no man your FATHER] Our Lord probably alludes to the AB, or father of the Sanhedrin, who was the next after the nasi, or president. See on chap. xx. 21. By which he gives his disciples to understand that he would have no SECOND, after himself, established in his Church, of which he alone was the head ; and that perfect equality must subsist among them.

Verse 10. Neither be ye called masters] Καθηγῆται, leaders. God is in all these respects jealous of his honour. To him alone it belongs to guide and lead his Church, as well as to govern and defend it. Jesus is the sole teacher of righteousness. It is he alone, (who is the word, light, and eternal truth,) that can illuminate every created mind ; and who, as Saviour and Redeemer, speaks to every heart by his Spirit.

Though the title of Rabbi, mentioned above, was comparatively recent in the time of our Lord, yet it was in great vogue, as were the others—father and master, mentioned in this and the following verse : some had all three titles, for thus in Bab. Maccoth, fol. 24 : “ It is feigned,” says Dr. Lightfoot, “ that when King Jehosaphat saw a disciple of the wise men, he rose up out of his throne, and embraced him, and said, כִּרְבִּי כִּרְבִּי אֲבִי אֲבִי רַבִּי רַבִּי ! Abbi Abbi ! Rabbi, Rabbi !

be abased ; and he that shall humble himself shall be exalted.

13 ¶ But ^l two unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites ! for ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men : for ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in.

14 Wo unto you, scribes and Pharisees hypocrites ! ^m for ye devour widows' houses, and for a pretence make long prayer : therefore

v. 5.—^l Luke xi. 52.—^m Mark xii. 40 ; Luke ix. 17 ; 2 Tim. iii. 6 ; Tit. i. 11.

Mori, Mori !—Father, Father ! Rabbi, Rabbi ! Master, Master ! Here then are the three titles which, in the 7th, 9th, and 10th verses, our blessed Lord condemns ; and these were titles that the Jewish doctors greatly affected.

Verse 11. Your servant.] Διακονος, deacon. See on chap. xx. 26.

Verse 12. Whosoever shall exalt himself, &c.] The way to arrive at the highest degree of dignity, in the sight of God, is by being willing to become the servant of all. Nothing is more hateful in his sight than pride ; to bring it into everlasting contempt, God was manifest in the flesh. He who was in the likeness of God took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of man, and humbled himself unto death. After this, can God look upon any proud man without abasing him ? Spiritual lordship and domination, ecclesiastical luxury, pomp, and pride, must be an abhorrence in the sight of that God who gave the above advices to his followers.

Another lesson, which our blessed Lord teaches here, is, that no man is implicitly to receive the sayings, doctrines, and decisions of any man, or number of men, in the things which concern the interests of his immortal soul. Christ, his Spirit, and his word, are the only infallible teachers. Every man who wishes to save his soul must search the Scriptures, by prayer and faith. Reader, take counsel with the pious ; hear the discourses of the wise and holy : but let the book of God ultimately fix thy creed.

Verses 14 and 13. Wo unto you, scribes] I think the fourteenth and thirteenth verses should be transposed. This transposition is authorized by some of the best MSS., versions, and fathers. The fourteenth is wanting in the BDL., and in many others of inferior note, as well as in several of the versions. Griesbach has left it out of the text, in his first edition : I hesitated, and left it in, thus transposed. I am happy to find that a more extensive collation of MSS., &c., has afforded proof to that eminent critic that it should be restored to its place. In the second edition, he has transposed the two, just as I had done. The fifteenth reads best after the thirteenth.

Verse 14. Ye devour widows' houses] On this subject I am in possession of nothing better than the following note of Dr. Whithy.

“ This sect,” says Josephus, (Ant. l. xvii. chap. 3,) “ pretended to a more exact knowledge of the law, on

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

ye shall receive the greater damnation.

15 Wo unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte, and when he is made, ye make him twofold more the child of hell than yourselves.

16 Wo unto you, ^a ye blind guides, which say, ^o Whosoever shall swear by the temple, it is nothing; but whosoever shall swear by the gold of the temple, he is a debtor!

17 Ye fools and blind: for whether is greater,

^o Chap. xv. 11; ver. 21.—^o Chap. v. 33, 34.—^p Exod. xxx. 29.—^a Or, debtor, or, bound.

which account the women were subject to them, as pretending to be dear to God. And when Alexandra obtained the government, (Jewish War, b. i. ch. 4.) they insinuated themselves into her favour, as being the exactest sect of the Jews, and the most exact interpreters of the law, and, abusing her simplicity, did as they listed, remove and dispose, bind and loose, and even cut off men. They were in vogue for their long prayers, which they continued sometimes three hours; that perhaps they sold them, as do the Roman priests their masses, or pretended others should be more acceptable to God for them; and so might spoil devout widows by the gifts or salaries they expected from them. Now this being only a hypocritical pretence of piety, must be hateful to God, and so deserve a greater condemnation."

Long prayer] For proofs of long prayers and vain repetitions among Jews, Mohammedans, and heathens, see the notes on chap. vi. 7.

Verse 13. Ye shut up the kingdom] As a key by opening a lock gives entrance into a house, &c., so knowledge of the sacred testimonies, manifested in expounding them to the people, may be said to open the way into the kingdom of heaven. But where men who are termed teachers are destitute of this knowledge themselves, they may be said to shut this kingdom; because they occupy the place of those who should teach, and thus prevent the people from acquiring heavenly knowledge.

In ancient times the rabbins carried a key, which was the symbol or emblem of knowledge. Hence it is written in Semachoth, chap. viii., "When Rab. Samuel the little died, his key and his tablets were hung on his tomb, because he died childless." See Schoettgen.

The kingdom of heaven here means the Gospel of Christ; the Pharisees would not receive it themselves, and hindered the common people as far as they could.

Verse 15. Compass sea and land] A proverbial expression, similar to ours, You leave no stone unturned; intimating that they did all in their power to gain converts, not to God, but to their sect. These we may suppose were principally sought for among the Gentiles, for the bulk of the Jewish nation was already on the side of the Pharisees.

Proselyte] Προσηλυτος, a stranger, or foreigner; one who is come from his own people and country, to the gold, ^p or the temple that sanctifieth the gold?

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

18 And, Whosoever shall swear by the altar, it is nothing; but whosoever sweareth by the gift that is upon it, he is ^a guilty.

19 Ye fools and blind: for whether is greater, the gift, or ^r the altar that sanctifieth the gift?

20 Whoso therefore shall swear by the altar, sweareth by it, and by all things thereon.

21 And whoso shall swear by the temple, sweareth by it, and by ^s him that dwelleth therein.

^r Exod. xxix. 37.—^s 1 Kings viii. 13; 2 Chron. vi. 2; Psa. xxvi. 8; cxxxii. 14.

sojourn with another. See the different kinds of proselytes explained in the note on Exod. xii. 43.

The child of hell] A Hebraism for an excessively wicked person, such as might claim hell for his mother, and the devil for his father.

Twofold—the child of] The Greek word διπλοτερον, which has generally been translated twofold, ΚΥΡΚΕ has demonstrated to mean more deceitful. Απλοῦς is used by the best Greek writers for simple, sincere, απλότης for simplicity, sincerity; so διπλοῦς, deceitful, dissembling, and διπλόη, hypocrisy, fraudulence, and διπλοτερον, more fraudulent, more deceitful, more hypocritical. See also Suidas in Διπλοη.

Dr. Lightfoot, and others, observe, that the proselytes were considered by the Jewish nation as the scabs of the Church, and hindered the coming of the Messiah; and Justin Martyr observes, that "the proselytes did not only disbelieve Christ's doctrine, but were abundantly more blasphemous against him than the Jews themselves, endeavouring to torment and cut off the Christians wherever they could; they being in this the instruments of the scribes and Pharisees."

Verse 16. Whosoever shall swear by the gold] The covetous man, says one, still gives preference to the object of his lust; gold has still the first place in his heart. A man is to be suspected when he recommends those good works most from which he receives most advantage.

Is bound thereby, i. e. to fulfil his oath.

Verse 20. Whoso—shall swear by the altar] As an oath always supposes a person who witnesses it, and will punish perjury; therefore, whether they swore by the temple or the gold, (ver. 16.) or by the altar or the gift laid on it, (ver. 18.) the oath necessarily supposes the God of the temple, of the altar, and of the gifts, who witnessed the whole, and would, even in their exempt cases, punish the perjury.

Verse 21. Whoso shall swear by the temple] Perhaps it is to this custom of swearing by the temple, that Martial alludes, lib. xi. epist. 95.

*Ecce negas, jurasque mihi per templa Tonantis;
Non credo: jura, Verpe, per Anchialum.*

"Behold, thou deniest, and swearest to me by the temples of Jupiter; I will not credit thee: swear, O Jew, by the temple of Jehovah." This word probably

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1. 22 And he that shall swear by heaven, sweareth by ' the throne of God, and by him that sitteth thereon.

23 Wo unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites ! * for ye pay tithe of mint and * anise and cummin, and * have omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith : these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone.

[†] Chap. v. 31; Psa. xi. 4; Acts vii. 49.—[‡] Luke xi. 42.
[§] Gr. ἀνθρώποι, dill.

comes from יהוה הכל heveal Yah, the temple of Jehovah. This seems a better derivation than אלהים im chai Elohim, as God liveth, though the sound of the latter is nearer to the Latin.

[By him that dwelleth therein.] The common reading is κατοικουντι, dwelleth or INHABITETH, but κατοικησαντι, dwelt or did inhabit, is the reading of CDEFGHKLM, eighty-six others; this reading has been adopted in the editions of Complutum, Colneus, Bengel, and Griesbach. The importance of this reading may be perceived by the following considerations. In the first Jewish temple, God had graciously condescended to manifest himself—he is constantly represented as dwelling between the cherubim, the two figures that stood at each end of the ark of the covenant; between whom, on the mercy seat, the lid of the ark, a splendour of glory was exhibited, which was the symbol and proof of the Divine presence. This the Jews called שכניה Shekinah, the habitation of Jehovah. Now the Jews unanimously acknowledge that five things were wanting in the second temple, which were found in the first, viz., 1. The ark; 2. The holy spirit of prophecy; 3. The Urim and Thummim; 4. The sacred fire; and 5. The שכניה Shekinah. As the Lord had long before this time abandoned the Jewish temple, and had now made the human nature of Jesus the Shekinah, (see John i. 14, the Logos was made flesh, ἐσκηνωσεν, and made his tabernacle—made the Shekinah,—among us,) our Lord could not, with any propriety, say that the supreme Being did now inhabit the temple; and therefore used a word that hinted to them that God had forsaken their temple, and consequently the whole of that service which was performed in it, and had now opened the new and living way to the holiest by the Messiah. But all this was common swearing; and, whether the subject was true or false, the oath was unlawful. A common swearer is worthy of no credit, when, even in the most solemn manner he takes an oath before a magistrate; he is so accustomed to stake his truth, perhaps even his soul, to things whether true or false, that an oath cannot bind him, and indeed is as little respected by himself as it is by his neighbour. Common swearing, and the shocking frequency and multiplication of oaths in civil cases, have destroyed all respect for an oath; so that men seldom feel themselves bound by it; and thus it is useless in many cases to require it as a confirmation, in order to end strife or ascertain truth. See the note on chap. v. 37.

Verse 23. Ye pay tithe of mint, &c.] They were 24 Ye blind guides, which strain at a gnat, and swallow a camel.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

25 Wo unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites ! * for ye make clean the outside of the cup and of the platter, but within they are full of extortion and excess.

26 Thou blind Pharisee, cleanse first that which is within the cup and platter, that the outside of them may be clean also.

[†] 1 Sam. xv. 22; Hos. vi. 6, Mic vi. 8; chap. ix. 13; xii. 7.
[‡] Mark vii. 1; Luke xi. 39.

remarkably scrupulous in the performance of all the rites and ceremonies of religion, but totally neglected the soul, spirit, and practice of godliness.

[Judgment] Acting according to justice and equity towards all mankind. Mercy—to the distressed and miserable. And faith in God as the fountain of all righteousness, mercy, and truth. The scribes and Pharisees neither began nor ended their works in God, nor had they any respect unto his name in doing them. They did them to be seen of men, and they had their reward—human applause.

[These ought ye to have done, &c.] Our Lord did not object to their paying tithe even of common pot-herbs—this did not affect the spirit of religion; but while they did this and such like, to the utter neglect of justice, mercy, and faith, they showed that they had no religion, and knew nothing of its nature.

Verse 24. Blind guides, which strain at a gnat, and swallow a camel.] This clause should be thus translated: Ye strain out the gnat, but ye swallow down the camel. In the common translation, Ye strain at a gnat, conveys no sense. Indeed, it is likely to have been at first an error of the press, AT for OUT, which, on examination, I find escaped in the edition of 1611, and has been regularly continued since. There is now before me, "The New Testament, (both in Englyshe and in Laten.) of Mayster Erasmus translation, imprinted by Wyllyam Powell, dwellynge in Fleete strete: the yere of our Lorde M.CCCC.XLVII. the fyrste yere of the kynges (Edwd. VI.) moste gracious reygne:" in which the verse stands thus: "Ye blinde guides, which strayne out a gnat, and swalowe a cammel." It is the same also in Edmund Beeke's Bible, printed in London 1549, and in several others.—Cleasynge a gnatte.—MS. Eng. Bib. So Wicliff. Similar to this is the following Arabic proverb بقتن لبقة ياكل بالفيل

He eats an elephant and is choked by a gnat.

Verse 25. Ye make clean the outside] The Pharisees were exceedingly exact in observing all the washings and purifications prescribed by the law; but paid no attention to that inward purity which was typified by them. A man may appear clean without, who is unclean within; but outward purity will not avail in the sight of God, where inward holiness is wanting.

[Extortion and excess.] Ἀρπαγῆς καὶ ἀσπαρίας, rapine and intemperance; but instead of ἀσπαρίας, intemperance, many of the very best MSS., CDEFGHKS, and more than a hundred others, the Syriac, Arabic, Ethi

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCH. 1. 27 Wo unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! ¹ for ye are like unto whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanness.

28 Even so ye also outwardly appear righteous unto men, but within ye are full of hypocrisy and iniquity.

29 ² Wo unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! because ye build the tombs of the opic, Slavonic, with Chrysostom. Euthym., and Theophylact, have ἀδικίας, injustice, which Griesbach has admitted into the text instead of ἀκαθαρσίας. The latter Syriac has both. Several MSS. and versions have ἀκαθαρσίας, uncleanness; others have πλεονεξίας, covetousness; some have πονηρίας, wickedness; and two of the ancients have iniquitate, iniquity. Suppose we put them all together, the character of the Pharisee will not be overcharged. They were full of rapine and intemperance, injustice and uncleanness, covetousness, wickedness, and iniquity.

¹ Luke xi. 41. Acts xxi. 3.—² Luke xi. 47.—³ Acts vii. 51, 52; 1 Thess. ii. 15.

Verse 27. For ye are like] Παρομοιάζετε, ye exactly resemble—the parallel is complete.

Whited sepulchres] White-washed tombs. As the law considered those unclean who had touched any thing belonging to the dead, the Jews took care to have their tombs white-washed each year, that, being easily discovered, they might be consequently avoided.

Verse 28. Even so ye also—appear righteous unto men] But what will this appearance avail a man, when God sits in judgment upon his soul? Will the fair reputation which he had acquired among men, while his heart was the seat of unrighteousness, screen him from the stroke of that justice which impartially sends all impurity and unholiness into the pit of destruction? No. In the sin that he hath sinned, and in which he hath died, and according to that, shall he be judged and punished; and his profession of holiness only tends to sink him deeper into the lake which burns with unquenchable fire. Reader! see that thy heart be right with God.

Verse 29. Ye build the tombs of the prophets] It appears that, through respect to their memory, they often repaired, and sometimes beautified, the tombs of the prophets. M. De la Vallé, in his Journey to the Holy Land, says, that when he visited the cave of Machpelah, he saw some Jews honouring a sepulchre, for which they have a great veneration, with lighting at it wax candles and burning perfumes. See Harmer, vol. iii. p. 416. And in ditto, p. 424, we are informed that building tombs over those reputed saints, or beautifying those already built, is a frequent custom among the Mohanmedans.

Verse 30. We would not have been partakers] They imagined themselves much better than their ancestors; but our Lord, who knew what they would do, uncovers their hearts, and shows them that they are about to be prophets, and garnish the sepulchres of the righteous,

30 And say, If we had been in the days of our fathers, we would not have been partakers with them in the blood of the prophets.

31 Wherefore ye be witnesses unto yourselves, that ^a ye are the children of them which killed the prophets.

32 ^b Fill ye up then the measure of your fathers.

33 Ye serpents, ye ^c generation of vipers,

^b Gen. xv. 16; 1 Thess. ii. 16.—^c Chap. iii. 7; xii. 34.

more abundantly vile than all who had ever preceded them.

Verse 31. Ye be witnesses] Ye acknowledge that ye are the children of those murderers, and ye are about to give full proof that ye are not degenerated.

There are many who think that, had they lived in the time of our Lord, they would not have acted towards him as the Jews did. But we can scarcely believe that they who reject his Gospel, trample under foot his precepts, do despite to the Spirit of his grace, love sin, and hate his followers, would have acted otherwise to him than the murdering Jews, had they lived in the same times.

Verse 32. Fill ye up then] Notwithstanding the profession you make, ye will fill up the measure of your fathers—will continue to walk in their way, accomplish the fulness of every evil purpose by murdering me; and then, when the measure of your iniquity is full, vengeance shall come upon you to the uttermost, as it did on your rebellious ancestors. The 31st verse should be read in a parenthesis, and then the 32d will appear to be, what it is, an inference from the 30th.

Ye will fill up, or fill ye up—πληρωσατε but it is manifest that the imperative is put here for the future, a thing quite consistent with the Hebrew idiom, and frequent in the Scriptures. So John ii. 19, Destroy this temple, &c., i. e. Ye will destroy or pull down this temple, and I will rebuild it in three days—Ye will crucify me, and I will rise again the third day. Two good MSS. have the word in the future tense: and my old MS. Bible has it in the present—Ετε (ye) fulfilless the measure of your (your) fathers.

Verse 33. Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers] What a terrible stroke!—Ye are serpents, and the offspring of serpents. This refers to ver. 31: they confessed that they were the children of those who murdered the prophets; and they are now going to murder Christ and his followers, to show that they have not degenerated—an accursed seed, of an accursed breed. My old MS. translates this passage oddly—Ετε σερπεντίς, fructus of burrowing of adders that slither her modis. There seems to be here an allusion to a common opinion, that the young of the adder or viper which are brought forth alive eat their way through the womb of their mothers. Hence that ancient enigma attributed to LACTANTIUS:—

A. M. 4033. how can ye escape the damnation
A. D. 29. of hell?
An. Olymp.
CCL. 1.

34 ¶^d Wherefore, behold, I send unto you prophets, and wise men, and scribes: ^e and some of them ye shall kill and crucify; and ^f some of them shall ye scourge in your synagogues, and persecute them from city to city:

35 ^g That upon you may come all the right-

^c Chap. xxi. 34, 35; Luke. xi. 49.—^e Acts v. 40; vii. 58, 59; xxii. 19.—^f Chap. x. 17; 2 Cor. xi. 24, 25.

*Non possum nasci, si non occidero matrem.
Occidi matrem: sed me manet exitus idem.
Id mea mors faciet, quod jam mea fecit origo.*
Cæd. Firm. Symposium, N. xv.

I never can be born, nor see the day,
Till through my parent's womb I eat my way.
Her I have slain; like her must yield my breath;
For that which gave me life, shall cause my death.

Every person must see with what propriety this was applied to the Jews, who were about to murder the very person who gave them their being and all their blessings.

Verse 34. [Wherefore] To show how my prediction, Ye will fill up the measure of your fathers, shall be verified, Behold, I send (I am just going to commission them) prophets, &c.; and some ye will kill, (with legal process,) and some ye will crucify, pretend to try and find guilty, and deliver them into the hands of the Romans, who shall, through you, thus put them to death. See on Luke xi. 49. By prophets, wise men, and scribes, our Lord intends the evangelists, apostles, deacons, &c., who should be employed in proclaiming his Gospel: men who should equal the ancient prophets, their wise men, and scribes, in all the gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit.

Verse 35. [Upon the earth] Ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, upon this land, meaning probably the land of Judea; for thus the word is often to be understood. The national punishment of all the innocent blood which had been shed in the land, shall speedily come upon you, from the blood of Abel the just, the first prophet and preacher of righteousness, Heb. xi. 4; 2 Pet. ii. 5, to the blood of Zachariah, the son of Barachiah. It is likely that our Lord refers to the murder of Zachariah, mentioned 2 Chron xxiv. 20, who said to the people, Why transgress ye the commandments of God, so that ye cannot prosper? Because ye have forsaken the Lord, he hath forsaken you. And they conspired against him and stoned him—at the commandment of the king, in the court of the house of the Lord. And when he died, he said, The Lord look upon and require it: ver. 21, 22.

But it is objected, that this Zachariah was called the son of Jehoiada, and our Lord calls this one the son of Barachiah. Let it be observed, 1. That double names were frequent among the Jews; and sometimes the person was called by one, sometimes by the other.—Compare 1 Sam. ix. 1, with 1 Chron. viii. 33, where it appears that the father of Kish had two names, Abiel and Ner. So Matthew is called Levi; commons blood shed upon the earth, A. M. 4033.

^h from the blood of righteous Abel, A. D. 29.
unto ⁱ the blood of Zacharias, son — An. Olymp.
of Barachias, whom ye slew between the CCL. 1. temple and the altar.

36 Verily I say unto you, All these things shall come upon this generation.

37 ^k O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, ^l and stonest them which

^m Rev. xviii. 21.—ⁿ Gen. iv. 8; 1 John iii. 12 — 2 Chron. xxiv. 20, 21.—^k Luke xiii. 34.—^l 2 Chron. xxiv. 21.

pare Matt. ix. 9, with Mark ii. 14. So Peter was also called Simon, and Lebbeus was called Thaddeus. Matt. x. 2, 3.

2. That Jerome says that, in the Gospel of the Nazarenes, it was Jehoiada, instead of Barachiah.

3. That Jehoiada and Barachiah have the very same meaning, the praise or blessing of Jehovah.

4. That as the Lord required the blood of Zachariah so fully that in a year all the princes of Judah and Jerusalem were destroyed by the Syrians, and Joash, who commanded the murder, slain by his own servants, 2 Chron. xxiv. 23–25, and their state grew worse and worse, till at last the temple was burned, and the people carried into captivity by Nebuzaradan:—so it should also be with the present race. The Lord would, after the crucifixion of Christ, visit upon them the murder of all those righteous men, that their state should grow worse and worse, till at last the temple should be destroyed, and they finally ruined by the Romans. See this prediction in the next chapter: and see Dr. Whitby concerning Zachariah, the son of Barachiah.

Some think that our Lord refers, in the spirit of prophecy, to the murder of Zacharias, son of Baruch, a rich Jew, who was judged, condemned, and massacred in the temple by Idumean zealots, because he was rich, a lover of liberty, and a hater of wickedness. They gave him a mock trial; and, when no evidence could be brought against him of his being guilty of the crime they laid to his charge, viz. a design to betray the city to the Romans, and his judges had pronounced him innocent, two of the stoutest of the zealots fell upon him and slew him in the middle of the temple. See Josephus, WAR, b. iv. chap. v. s. 5. See Crevier, vol. vi. p. 172, History of the Roman Emperors. Others imagine that Zachariah, one of the minor prophets, is meant, who might have been massacred by the Jews; for, though the account is not come down to us, our Lord might have it from a well known tradition in those times. But the former opinion is every way the most probable.

[Between the temple and the altar.] That is, between the sanctuary and the altar of burnt-offerings.

Verse 36. [Shall come upon this generation] Ἐπὶ τὴν γενεάν ταύτην, upon this race of men, viz. the Jews. This phrase often occurs in this sense in the evangelists.

Verse 37. O Jerusalem, Jerusalem] 1. It is evident that our blessed Lord seriously and earnestly wished the salvation of the Jews. 2. That he did

A. M. 4033. arc sent unto thee, how often would
A. D. 29. " I have gathered thy children
An. Olymp. together, even as a hen gather-CCII. 1. eth her chickens " under her wings, and ye would not.

" Deut. xxxii. 11, 12; 2 Esdr. i. 30.

every thing that could be done, consistently with his own perfections, and the liberty of his creatures, to effect this. 3. That his tears over the city, Luke xix. 41, sufficiently evince his sincerity. 4. That these persons nevertheless perished. And 5. That the reason was, they would not be gathered together under his protection: therefore wrath, i. e. punishment, came upon them to the uttermost. From this it is evident that there have been persons whom Christ wished to save, and bled to save, who notwithstanding perished, because they would not come unto him, John v. 40. The metaphor which our Lord uses here is a very beautiful one. When the hen sees a beast of prey coming, she makes a noise to assemble her chickens, that she may cover them with her wings from the danger. The Roman eagle is about to fall upon the Jewish state—nothing can prevent this but their conversion to God through Christ—Jesus cries throughout the land, publishing the Gospel of reconciliation—they would not assemble, and the Roman eagle came and destroyed them. The hen's affection to her brood is so very strong as to become proverbial. The following beautiful Greek epigram, taken from the Anthologia, affords a very fine illustration of this text.

Χειμεριαὶς νιφάδεσαι παλιννομένα τιδας ὀρνίς
Τεκνοὶς εὐναιᾶς ἀμφέχει πτερύγας.
Μεσφα μὲν οὐρανίον κρυὸς ὤλεσεν ἡ γὰρ εἰμύινει
Λιθέρους οὐρανίον ἀντιπαλὸς νιφάδι.
Πρόκνη καὶ Μεδεία, κατ' αἰδὸς αἰδισθῆτε,
Μητέρες, ὀρνίδων ἐργὰ διδασκόμεναι.
Anthol. lib. i. Tit. lxxxvii. edit. Bosch. p. 344.

Beneath her fostering wing the HEN defends
Her darling offspring, while the snow descends;
Throughout the winter's day unmoved defies
The chilling fleeces and inclement skies;
Till, vanquish'd by the cold and piercing blast,
True to her charge, she perishes at last!
O Fame! to hell this fowl's affection bear;
Tell it to Progné and Medea there:—
To mothers such as those the tale unfold,
And let them blush to hear the story told!—T. G.

This epigram contains a happy illustration, not only of our Lord's simile, but also of his own conduct. How long had these thankless and unholy people been the objects of his tenderest cares! For more than 2000 years, they engrossed the most peculiar regards of the most beneficent Providence: and during the three years of our Lord's public ministry, his preaching and miracles had but one object and aim, the instruction and salvation of this thoughtless and disobedient people. For their sakes, he who was rich became poor, that they through his poverty might be rich:—for their sakes, he made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and became obedient unto 38 Behold, your house is left A. M. 4033. unto you desolate. A. D. 29.

An. Olymp. CCII. 1.

39 For I say unto you, Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, ° Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.

° Psal. xvii. 8; xci. 4.—° Psal. cxviii. 26; chap. xxi. 9.

death, even the death of the cross! He died, that THEY might not perish, but have everlasting life. Thus, to save their life, he freely abandoned his own.

Verse 38. Behold, your house] Ο οἶκος, the temple:—this is certainly what is meant. It was once the Lord's temple. God's own house; but now he says, your temple or house—to intimate that God had abandoned it. See the note on ver. 21; see also on Luke xiii. 35.

Verse 39. Ye shall not see me] I will remove my Gospel from you, and withdraw my protection.

Till ye shall say, Blessed] Till after the fulness of the Gentiles is brought in, when the word of life shall again be sent unto you; then will ye rejoice, and bless, and praise him that cometh in the name of the Lord, with full and final salvation for the lost sheep of the house of Israel. See Rom. xi. 26, 27.

Our Lord plainly foresaw that, in process of time, a spiritual domination would arise in his Church; and to prevent its evil influence, he leaves the strong warnings against it which are contained in the former part of this chapter. As the religion of Christ is completely spiritual, and the influence by which it is produced and maintained must come from heaven; therefore, there could be no master or head but himself for as the Church (the assemblage of true believers) is his body, all its intelligence, light, and life, must proceed from him alone. Our forefathers noted this well: and this was one of the grand arguments by which they overturned the papal pretensions to supremacy in this country. In a note on ver. 9, in a Bible published by Edmund Becke in 1549, the 2nd of Edward VI., we find the following words:—Call no man your father upon the earth. Where is the Bishoppe of Rome declared a plaine Antichriste, in that he would be called the most holyc father; and that all Christen men shoulde acknowledge hym for no lesse then their spirituall father, notwithstandinge these playne wordes of Christe. It is true, nothing can be plainer; and yet, in the face of these commands, the pope has claimed the honour; and millions of men have been so stupid as to conccede it. May those days of darkness, tyranny, and disgrace, never return!

From the 13th to the 39th verse, our Lord pronounces eight woes, or rather pathetic declarations, against the scribes and Pharisees. 1. For their unwillingness to let the common people enjoy the pure word of God, or its right explanation: Ye shut up the kingdom, &c., ver. 13.

2. For their rapacity, and pretended sanctity in order to secure their secular ends: Ye devour widows' houses, &c., ver. 14.

3. For their pretended zeal to spread the kingdom of God by making proselytes, when they had no other end in view than forming instruments for the purposes of their oppression and cruelty: Ye compass sea and land, &c., ver. 15.

1. For their bad doctrine and false interpretations of the Scriptures, and their dispensing with the most solemn oaths and vows at pleasure: Ye blind guides, which say, Whosoever shall swear by the temple, it is nothing, &c., ver. 16-22.

5. For their superstition in scrupulously attending to little things, and things not commanded, and omitting matters of great importance, the practice of which God had especially enjoined: Ye pay tithe of mint and cummin, &c., ver. 23, 24.

6. For their hypocrisy, pretended saintship, and endeavouring to maintain decency in their outward conduct, while they had no other object in view than to deceive the people, and make them acquiesce in their oppressive measures: Ye make clean the outside of the cup, ver. 25, 26.

7. For the depth of their inward depravity and abomination, having nothing good, fair, or supportable, but the mere outside.—Most hypocrites and wicked men have some good: but these were radically and totally evil: Ye are like unto whited sepulchres—within full—of all uncleanness, ver. 27, 28.

8. For their pretended concern for the holiness of the people, which proceeded no farther than to keep them free from such pollutions as they might accidentally and innocently contract, by casually stepping on the place where a person had been buried: and for their affected regret that their fathers had killed the prophets, while themselves possessed and cultivated the same murderous inclinations: Ye—garnish the sepulchres of the righteous, and say, If we had been, &c., ver. 29, 30.

It is amazing with what power and authority our blessed Lord reproves this bad people. This was the last discourse they ever heard from him; and it is surprising, considering their wickedness, that they waited even for a mock trial, and did not rise up at once and destroy him. But the time was not yet come in which he was to lay down his life, for no man could take it from him.

While he appears in this last discourse with all the authority of a lawgiver and judge, he at the same time shows the tenderness and compassion of a friend and a father: he beholds their awful state—his eye affects his heart, and he weeps over them! Were not the present hardness and final perdition of these ungodly men entirely of themselves? Could Jesus, as the Supreme God, have fixed their reprobation from all eternity by any necessitating decree; and yet weep over the unavoidable consequences of his own sovereign determinations? How absurd as well as shocking is the thought! This is Jewish exclusion: Credat Judæus Apella—non ego.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Christ foretells the destruction of the temple, 1, 2. His disciples inquire when and what shall be the signs of this destruction, 3. Our Lord answers, and enumerates them—false Christs, 5. Wars, famines, pestilences, and earthquakes, 6-8. Persecution of his followers, 9. Apostasy from the truth, 10-13. General spread of the Gospel, 14. He foretells the investment of the city by the Romans, 15-18. The calamities of those times, 19-22. Warns them against seduction by false prophets, 23-26. The suddenness of these calamities, 27, 28. Total destruction of the Jewish polity, 29-31. The whole illustrated by the parable of the fig-tree, 32, 33. The certainty of the event, though the time is concealed, 34-36. Careless state of the people, 37-41. The necessity of watchfulness and fidelity, illustrated by the parable of the two servants, one faithful, the other wicked, 42-51.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

AND ^a Jesus went out, and departed from the temple: and his disciples came to him for to show him the buildings of the temple.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

2 And Jesus said unto them, ^b See

^a Chap. xxiii. 39; Hag. ii. 9; Mal. iii. 1; Mark xiii. 1;

Luke xxi. 5.—^b Mic. iii. 12; Luke xxi. 5, &c.

NOTES ON CHAP. XXIV.

This chapter contains a prediction of the utter destruction of the city and temple of Jerusalem, and the subversion of the whole political constitution of the Jews; and is one of the most valuable portions of the new covenant Scriptures, with respect to the evidence which it furnishes of the truth of Christianity. Every thing which our Lord foretold should come on the temple, city, and people of the Jews, has been fulfilled in the most correct and astonishing manner; and witnessed by a writer who was present during the whole, who was himself a Jew, and is acknowledged to be an historian of indisputable veracity in all those transactions which concern the destruction of Jerusalem. Without having designed it, he has written a commentary on our Lord's words, and shown how every title was punctually fulfilled, though he knew nothing of the Scripture which contained this remarkable prophecy. His account will be frequently referred to in the course of these notes; as also the admirable work of Bishop Newton on the prophecies.

Verse 1. And Jesus went out, and departed from the temple] Or, And Jesus, going out of the temple, was going away. This is the arrangement of the words in several eminent manuscripts, versions, and fathers; and is much clearer than that in the common translation. The Jews say the temple was built of white and green-spotted marble. See Lightfoot. Josephus says the stones were white and strong; fifty feet long, twenty-four broad, and sixteen thick. Antiq. b. 15. c. xi. See Mark xiii. 1.

Verse 2. See ye not all these things?] The common

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.
ye not all these things? Verily I say unto you, ^c There shall not be left here one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down.

3 ¶ And as he sat upon the mount of Olives, the ^d disciples came unto him privately, saying, ^e Tell us, when shall these things be?

^c 1 Kings ix. 7; Jer. xxvi. 18; Mic. iii. 12; Luke xix. 44.
^d Mark xiii. 3.—^e 1 Thess. v. 1.

text, and many manuscripts, have οὐ βλέπετε, Do ye not see, or consider? But the negative particle is omitted by several excellent manuscripts, by the Coptic, Sahidic, Armenian, Ethiopic, Slavonic, Vulgate, and Itala versions, and by some of the primitive fathers, who all read it thus, see, or consider all these things.

There shall not be left here one stone] These seem to have been the last words he spoke as he left the temple, into which he never afterwards entered; and, when he got to the mount of Olives, he renewed the discourse. From this mount, on which our Lord and his disciples now sat, the whole of the city, and particularly the temple, were clearly seen. This part of our Lord's prediction was fulfilled in the most literal manner. Josephus says, War, book vii. c. 1: "Cæsar gave orders that they should now demolish the whole city and temple, τε πόλιν αἰσάν και τον νεων κατασκεπτειν, except the three towers, Phaselus, Hippicus, and Mariamne, and a part of the western wall, and these were spared; but, for all the rest of the wall, it was laid so completely even with the ground, by those who dug it up to the foundation, that there was left nothing to make those that came thither believe it had ever been inhabited." Maimonides, a Jewish rabbin, in Tract. Taanith, c. 4, says, "That the very foundations of the temple were digged up, according to the Roman custom." His words are these: "On that ninth day of the month Ab, fatal for vengeance, the wicked Turnus Rufus, of the children of Edom, ploughed up the temple, and the places round about it, that the saying might be fulfilled, Zion shall be ploughed as a field." This Turnus, or rather Terentius Rufus, was left general of the army by Titus, with commission, as the Jews suppose, to destroy the city and the temple, as Josephus observes.

The temple was destroyed 1st. Justly; because of the sins of the Jews. 2dly. Mercifully; to take away from them the occasion of continuing in Judaism: and 3dly. Mysteriously; to show that the ancient sacrifices were abolished, and that the whole Jewish economy was brought to an end, and the Christian dispensation introduced.

Verse 3. Tell us, when shall these things be? There appear to be three questions asked here by the disciples. 1st. When shall these things be? viz. the destruction of the city, temple, and Jewish state. 2dly. What shall be the sign of thy coming? viz. to execute these judgments upon them, and to establish thy own Church: and 3dly. When shall this world end? When wilt thou come to judge the quick and the dead? But there are some who maintain that these are but three parts of the same question, and that our Lord's answers and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world? A. M. 4033.

A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

4 And Jesus answered and said unto them, ^f Take heed that no man deceive you.

5 For ^g many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; ^h and shall deceive many.

6 And ye shall hear of wars, and rumours

^f Eph. v. 6; Col. ii. 8, 18; 2 Thess. ii. 3; 1 John iv. 1.—^g Jer. xiv. 14; xxiii. 21, 25; ver. 24; John v. 43.—^h Ver. 11.

only refer to the destruction of the Jewish state, and that nothing is spoken here concerning the LAST or judgment day.

End of the world] Του αἰωνος; or, of the age, viz. the Jewish economy, which is a frequent accummodated meaning of the word Αἰων, the proper meaning of which is, as Aristotle (De Cælo) observes, ETERNAL. Αἰων, quasi æi ων continual being: and no words can more forcibly point out eternity than these. See the note on Gen. xxi. 33.

Verse 4. Take heed that no man deceive you.] The world is full of deceivers, and it is only by taking heed to the counsel of Christ that even his followers can escape being ruined by them. From this to ver. 31, our Lord mentions the signs which should precede his coming.

The FIRST sign is false Christs.

Verse 5. For many shall come in my name] 1. Josephus says, (War, b. ii. c. 13,) that there were many who, pretending to Divine inspiration, deceived the people, leading out numbers of them to the desert, pretending that God would there show them the signs of liberty, meaning redemption from the Roman power; and that an Egyptian false prophet led 30,000 men into the desert, who were almost all cut off by Felix. See Acts xxi. 38. It was a just judgment for God to deliver up that people into the hands of false Christs who had rejected the true one. Soon after our Lord's crucifixion, Simon Magus appeared, and persuaded the people of Samaria that he was the great power of God, Acts viii. 9, 10; and boasted among the Jews that he was the son of God.

2. Of the same stamp and character was also Dositheus, the Samaritan, who pretended that he was the Christ foretold by Moses.

3. About twelve years after the death of our Lord, when Cuspius Fadus was procurator of Judea, arose an impostor of the name of Theudas, who said he was a prophet, and persuaded a great multitude to follow him with their best effects to the river Jordan, which he promised to divide for their passage; and saying these things, says Josephus, he deceived many: almost the very words of our Lord.

4. A few years afterwards, under the reign of Nero, while Felix was procurator of Judea, impostors of this stamp were so frequent that some were taken and killed almost every day. Jos. Ant. b. xx. c. 4. and 7.

The SECOND sign, wars and commotions.

Verse 6. The next signs given by our Lord are wars and rumours of wars, &c.] These may be seen in Josephus, Ant. b. xviii. c. 9; War, b. ii. c. 10;

A. M. 4033. of wars: see that ye be not
A. D. 29. troubled: for all these things must
An. Olymp. come to pass, but the end is CCII. 1. not yet.

7 For a nation shall rise against a nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places.

12 Chron. xv. 6; Isa. xix. 2;

Hag. ii. 22; Zech. xiv. 13.

especially as to the rumours of wars, when Caligula ordered his statue to be set up in the temple of God, which the Jews having refused, had every reason to expect a war with the Romans, and were in such consternation on the occasion that they even neglected to till their land.

Verse 7. Nation shall rise against nation] This portended the dissensions, insurrections, and mutual slaughter of the Jews, and those of other nations, who dwelt in the same cities together; as particularly at Cesarra, where the Jews and Syrians contended about the right of the city, which ended there in the total expulsion of the Jews, above 20,000 of whom were slain. The whole Jewish nation being exasperated at this, flew to arms, and burnt and plundered the neighbouring cities and villages of the Syrians, making an immense slaughter of the people. The Syrians, in return, destroyed not a less number of the Jews. At Scythopolis they murdered upwards of 13,000. At Ascalon they killed 2,500. At Ptolemais they slew 2000, and made many prisoners. The Tyrians also put many Jews to death, and imprisoned more: the people of Gadara did likewise; and all the other cities of Syria in proportion, as they hated or feared the Jews. At Alexandria the Jews and heathens fought, and 50,000 of the former were slain. The people of Damascus conspired against the Jews of that city, and, assaulting them unarmed, killed 10,000 of them. See Bishop Newton, and Dr. Lardner.

Kingdom against kingdom] This portended the open wars of different tetrarchies and provinces against each other. 1st. That of the Jews and Galileans against the Samaritans, for the murder of some Galileans going up to the feast of Jerusalem, while Cumanus was procurator. 2dly. That of the whole nation of the Jews against the Romans and Agrippa, and other allies of the Roman empire; which began when Gessius Florus was procurator. 3dly. That of the civil war in Italy, while Otho and Vitellius were contending for the empire. It is worthy of remark, that the Jews themselves say, "In the time of the Messiah, wars shall be stirred up in the world; nation shall rise against nation, and city against city." Sohar Kadash. "Again, Rab. Eleazar, the son of Abina, said, When ye see kingdom rising against kingdom, then expect the immediate appearance of the Messiah." Bereshith Rabba, sect. 42.

The THIRD sign, pestilence and famine.

It is farther added, that There shall be famines, and pestilences] There was a famine foretold by Agabus, (Acts xi. 28.) which is mentioned by Suctonius, Tacitus, and Eusebius; which came to pass in the days of Claudius Caesar, and was so severe at Jerusalem that Josephus says (Ant. b. xx. c. 2.) many died for lack of food. Pestilences are the usual attendants of famines: as the scarcity and badness of provisions generally produce epidemic disorders.

The FOURTH sign, earthquakes or popular commotions.

Earthquakes, in divers places.] If we take the word σεισμοι from σειω to shake, in the first sense, then it means particularly those popular commotions and insurrections which have already been noted; and this I think to be the true meaning of the word: but if we confine it to earthquakes, there were several in those times to which our Lord refers; particularly one at Crete in the reign of Claudius, one at Smyrna, Miletus, Chios, Samos. See Grotius. One at Rome, mentioned by Tacitus; and one at Laodicea in the reign of Nero, in which the city was overthrown, as were likewise Hierapolis and Colosse. See Tacit. Annal. lib. xii. and lib. xiv. One at Campania, mentioned by Seneca; and one at Rome, in the reign of Galba, mentioned by Suetonius in the life of that emperor. Add to all these, a dreadful one in Judea, mentioned by Josephus (War, b. iv. c. 4.) accompanied by a dreadful tempest, violent winds, vehement showers, and continual lightnings and thunders; which led many to believe that these things portended some uncommon calamity.

The FIFTH sign, fearful portents.

To these St. Luke adds that there shall be fearful sights and great signs from heaven (chap. xxi. 11.) Josephus, in his preface to the Jewish war, enumerates these. 1st. A star hung over the city like a sword; and a comet continued a whole year. 2d. The people being assembled at the feast of unleavened bread, at the ninth hour of the night, a great light shone about the altar and the temple, and this continued for half an hour. 3d. At the same feast, a cow led to sacrifice brought forth a lamb in the midst of the temple! 4th. The eastern gate of the temple, which was of solid brass, and very heavy, and could hardly be shut by twenty men, and was fastened by strong bars and bolts, was seen at the sixth hour of the night to open of its own accord! 5th. Before sun-setting there were seen, over all the country, chariots and armies fighting in the clouds, and besieging cities. 6th. At the feast of pentecost, when the priests were going into the inner temple by night, to attend their service, they heard first a motion and noise, and then a voice, as of a multitude, saying, LET US DEPART HENCE! 7th. What Josephus reckons one of the most terrible signs of all was, that one Jesus, a country fellow, four years before the war began, and when the city was in peace and plenty, came to the feast of tabernacles, and ran crying up and down the streets, day and night: "A voice from the east! a voice from the west! a voice from the four winds! a voice against Jerusalem and the temple! a voice against the bridegrooms and the brides! and a voice against all the people!" Though the

A. M. 4033. 8 All these are the beginning of
A. D. 29. sorrows.
An. Olymp. CCII. 1.

9 ^k Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you; and ye shall be hated of all nations for my name's sake.

10 And then shall many ^l be offended, and shall betray one another, and shall hate one another.

^k Chap. x. 17; Mark xiii. 9; Luke xxi. 12; John xv. 20; xvi. 2; Acts iv. 2, 3; vii. 59; xii. 1, &c.; 1 Pet. iv. 16; Rev. ii. 10, 13.

magistrates endeavoured by stripes and tortures to restrain him, yet he still cried, with a mournful voice, "Wo, wo to Jerusalem!" And this he continued to do for several years together, going about the walls and crying with a loud voice: "Wo, wo to the city, and to the people, and to the temple!" and as he added, "Wo, wo to myself!" a stone from some sling or engine struck him dead on the spot! It is worthy of remark that Josephus appeals to the testimony of others, who saw and heard these fearful things. Tacitus, a Roman historian, gives very nearly the same account with that of Josephus. Hist. lib. v.

Verse 8. All these are the beginning of sorrows.] Ὀδύρων, travailing pains. The whole land of Judea is represented under the notion of a woman in grievous travail; but our Lord intimates, that all that had already been mentioned were only the first pangs and throes, and nothing in comparison of that hard and death-bringing labour, which should afterwards take place.

From the calamities of the nation in general, our Lord passes to those of the Christians; and, indeed, the sufferings of his followers were often occasioned by the judgments sent upon the land, as the poor Christians were charged with being the cause of these national calamities, and were cruelly persecuted on that account.

Verse 9. Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted] Rather, Then they will deliver you up to affliction, εἰς θλίψιν. By a bold figure of speech, affliction is here personified. They are to be delivered into affliction's own hand, to be harassed by all the modes of inventive torture.

Ye shall be hated of all nations] Both Jew and Gentile will unite in persecuting and tormenting you. Perhaps παντων των εθνων means all the Gentiles, as in the parallel places in Mark xiii. 9–11, and in Luke xxi. 12–15, the Jewish persecution is mentioned distinctly. Ye shall be delivered up to councils and be beaten in synagogues, and ye shall stand before governors and kings for my name's sake—he not anxiously careful beforehand what ye shall speak—for ye are not the speakers, but the Holy Spirit will speak by you—I will give you utterance and wisdom, which all your adversaries shall not be able to contradict or resist. We need go no farther than the Acts of the Apostles for the completion of these particulars. Some were delivered to councils, as Peter and John, Acts iv. 5. Some were brought before rulers and kings, as Paul before Gallio, chap. xviii. 12, before Felix, xxiv., before Festus and Agrippa, xxv. Some had utterance and wisdom which their adversaries were not able to resist: so Stephen, chap. vi. 10, and Paul, 11 And ^m many false prophets shall rise, and ⁿ shall deceive many. A. M. 4033. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CCII. 1.

12 And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold.

13 ^o But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved.

^l Chap. xi. 6; xiii. 57; 2 Tim. i. 15; iv. 10, 16.—^m Chap. vii. 15; Acts xx. 29; 2 Pet. ii. 1.—ⁿ 1 Tim. iv. 1; ver. 5, 24. ^o Chap. x. 22; Mark xiii. 13; Heb. iii. 6, 14; Rev. ii. 10.

who made even Felix himself tremble, chap. xxiv. 25. Some were imprisoned, as Peter and John, chap. iv. 3. Some were beaten, as Paul and Silas, chap. xvi. 23. Some were put to death, as Stephen, chap. vii. 59, and James the brother of John, chap. xii. 2. But if we look beyond the book of the Acts of the Apostles, to the bloody persecutions under Nero, we shall find these predictions still more amply fulfilled: in these, numberless Christians fell, besides those two champions of the faith, Peter and Paul. And it was, as says Tertullian, nominis prælium, a war against the very name of Christ; for he who was called Christian had committed crime enough, in bearing the name, to be put to death. So true were our Saviour's words, that they should be hated of all men for his NAME's sake.

But they were not only to be hated by the Gentiles, but they were to be betrayed by apostates.

Verse 10. Then shall many be offended, and shall betray one another] To illustrate this point, one sentence out of Tacitus (Annal. l. xv.) will be sufficient, who, speaking of the persecution under Nero, says, At first several were seized, who confessed, and then by THEIR DISCOVERY a great multitude of others were convicted and executed.

Verse 11. False prophets] Also were to be raised up; such as Simon Magus and his followers; and the false apostles complained of by St. Paul, 2 Cor. xi. 13, who were deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ. Such also were Hymeneus and Philetus, 2 Tim. ii. 17, 18.

Verse 12. The love of many shall wax cold] By reason of these trials and persecutions from without, and those apostasies and false prophets from within, the love of many to Christ and his doctrine, and to one another, shall grow cold. Some openly deserting the faith, as ver. 10; others corrupting it, as ver. 11; and others growing indifferent about it, as verse 12. Even at this early period there seems to have been a very considerable defection in several Christian Churches; see Gal. iii. 1–4; 2 Thess. iii. 1, &c.; 2 Tim. i. 15.

Verse 13. But he that shall endure] The persecutions that shall come—unto the end; to the destruction of the Jewish polity, without growing cold or apostatizing—shall be saved, shall be delivered in all imminent dangers, and have his soul at last brought to an eternal glory. It is very remarkable that not a single Christian perished in the destruction of Jerusalem, though there were many there when Cestius Gallus invested the city; and, had he persevered in the siege, he would soon have rendered himself master of it; but, when he unexpectedly and unaccountably raised the siege, the Christians took that opportunity to escape.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

14 And this ^p Gospel of the kingdom ^q shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come.

15 ^r When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by ^s Daniel the prophet, stand in the holy place, (^t whose readeth, let him understand:)

^p Chap. iv. 23; ix. 35.—^q Rom. x. 18; Col. i. 6, 23.—^r Mark

See Eusebius, Hist. Eccles. lib. iii. c. 5, and Mr. Reading's note there; and see the note here on ver. 20.

Verse 14. And this Gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world] But, notwithstanding these persecutions, there should be a universal publication of the glad tidings of the kingdom, for a testimony to all nations. God would have the iniquity of the Jews published every where, before the heavy stroke of his judgments should fall upon them; that all mankind, as it were, might be brought as witnesses against their cruelty and obstinacy in crucifying and rejecting the Lord Jesus.

In all the world, εν ολη τη οικουμενη. Perhaps no more is meant here than the Roman empire; for it is beyond controversy that πασαν την οικουμενην, Luke ii. 1, means no more than the whole Roman empire: as a decree for taxation or enrolment from Augustus Cæsar could have no influence but in the Roman dominions; but see on Luke ii. 1. Tacitus informs us, Annal. l. xv., that, as early as the reign of Nero, the Christians were grown so numerous at Rome as to excite the jealousy of the government; and in other parts they were in proportion. However, we are under no necessity to restrain the phrase to the Roman empire, as, previously to the destruction of Jerusalem, the Gospel was not only preached in the lesser Asia, and Greece, and Italy, the greatest theatres of action then in the world; but was likewise propagated as far north as SCYTHIA; as far south as ETHIOPIA; as far east as PARTHIA and INDIA; and as far west as SPAIN and BRITAIN. On this point, Bishop Newton goes on to say, That there is some probability that the Gospel was preached in the British nations by St. Simon the apostle; that there is much greater probability that it was preached here by St. Paul; and that there is an absolute certainty that it was planted here in the times of the apostles, before the destruction of Jerusalem. See his proofs. Dissert. vol. ii. p. 235, 236. edit. 1758. St. Paul himself speaks, Col. i. 6, 23, of the Gospel's being come into ALL THE WORLD, and preached to EVERY CREATURE under heaven. And in his Epistle to the Romans, chap. x. 18, he very elegantly applies to the lights of the Church, what the psalmist said of the lights of heaven. Their sound went into ALL THE EARTH, and their words unto the END of the WORLD. What but the wisdom of God could foretell this! and what but the power of God could accomplish it?

Then shall the end come.] When this general publication of the Gospel shall have taken place, then a period shall be put to the whole Jewish economy, by the utter destruction of their city and temple.

16 Then let them which be in Judea flee into the mountains:

A. M. 4033
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

17 Let him which is on the house top not come down to take any thing out of his house:

18 Neither let him which is in the field return back to take his clothes.

xiii. 14; Luke xxi. 20.—¹ Dan. ix. 27; xii. 11.—² Dan. ix. 23, 25.

Verse 15. The abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel] This abomination of desolation, St. Luke, (chap. xxi. 20, 21,) refers to the Roman army; and this abomination standing in the holy place is the Roman army besieging Jerusalem; this, our Lord says, is what was spoken of by Daniel the prophet, in the ninth and eleventh chapters of his prophecy; and so let every one who reads these prophecies understand them; and in reference to this very event they are understood by the rabbins. The Roman army is called an abomination, for its ensigns and images, which were so to the Jews. Josephus says, (War, b. vi. chap. 6,) the Romans brought their ensigns into the temple, and placed them over against the eastern gate, and sacrificed to them there. The Roman army is therefore fitly called the abomination, and the abomination which maketh desolate, as it was to desolate and lay waste Jerusalem; and this army besieging Jerusalem is called by St. Mark, chap. xiii. 14, standing where it ought not, that is, as in the text here, the holy place; as not only the city, but a considerable compass of ground about it, was deemed holy, and consequently no profane persons should stand on it.

Verse 16. Then let them which be in Judea flee into the mountains] This counsel was remembered and wisely followed by the Christians afterwards. Eusebius and Epiphanius say, that at this juncture, after Cestius Gallus had raised the siege, and Vespasian was approaching with his army, all who believed in Christ left Jerusalem and fled to Pella, and other places beyond the river Jordan; and so they all marvellously escaped the general shipwreck of their country: not one of them perished. See on ver. 13.

Verse 17. Let him which is on the house top] The houses of the Jews, as well as those of the ancient Greeks and Romans, were flat-roofed, and had stairs on the outside, by which persons might ascend and descend without coming into the house. In the eastern walled cities, these flat-roofed houses usually formed continued terraces from one end of the city to the other; which terraces terminated at the gates. He, therefore, who is walking on the house top, let him not come down to take any thing out of his house; but let him instantly pursue his course along the tops of the houses, and escape out at the city gate as fast as he can.

Any thing] Instead of τι, any thing, we should read τα, the things; which reading is supported by all the best MSS., versions, and fathers.

Verse 18. Neither let him which is in the field return back] Because when once the army of the

A. M. 4033. 19 And ^u wo unto them that are
A. D. 29. with child, and to them that give
An. Olymp. suck in those days !
CCII. 1.

20 But pray ye that your flight be not in the winter, neither on the Sabbath-day :

21 For ^v then shall be great tribulation, such ^u Luke xxiii. 29.—^v Dan. ix. 26 ; xii. 1 ; Joel ii. 2.

Romans sits down before the city, there shall be no more any possibility of escape, as they shall never remove till Jerusalem be destroyed.

Verse 19. And wo unto them (alas ! for them) that are with child, &c. For such persons are not in a condition to make their escape ; neither can they bear the miseries of the siege. Josephus says the houses were full of women and children that perished by the famine ; and that the mothers snatched the food even out of their own children's mouths. See WAR, b. v. c. 10. But he relates a more horrid story than this, of one Mary, the daughter of Eliezar, illustrious for her family and riches, who, being stripped and plundered of all her goods and provisions by the soldiers, in hunger, rage, and despair, killed and boiled her own sucking child, and had eaten one half of him before it was discovered. This shocking story is told, WAR, b. vi. c. 3, with several circumstances of aggravation.

Verse 20. But pray ye that your flight be not in the winter For the hardness of the season, the badness of the roads, the shortness of the days, and the length of the nights, will all be great impediments to your flight. Rabbi Tanchum observes, " that the favour of God was particularly manifested in the destruction of the first temple, in not obliging the Jews to go out in the winter, but in the summer." See the place in Lightfoot.

Neither on the Sabbath-day That you may not raise the indignation of the Jews by travelling on that day, and so suffer that death out of the city which you had endeavoured to escape from within. Besides, on the Sabbath-days the Jews not only kept within doors, but the gates of all the cities and towns in every place were kept shut and barred ; so that if their flight should be on a Sabbath, they could not expect admission into any place of security in the land.

Our Lord had ordered his followers to make their escape from Jerusalem when they should see it encompassed with armies ; but how could this be done ?—God took care to provide amply for this. In the twelfth year of Nero, Cestius Gallus, the president of Syria, came against Jerusalem with a powerful army. He might, says Josephus, WAR, b. ii. c. 19, have assaulted and taken the city, and thereby put an end to the war ; but without any just reason, and contrary to the expectation of all, he raised the siege and departed. Josephus remarks, that after Cestius Gallus had raised the siege, " many of the principal Jewish people, πολλοὶ τῶν ἐπιφανῶν Ἰουδαίων, forsook the city, as men do a sinking ship." Vespasian was deputed in the room of Cestius Gallus, who, having subdued all the country, prepared to besiege Jerusalem, and invested it on every side. But the news of Nero's death, and soon after that of Galba, and the disturbances that followed, and as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be.

22 And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved ; ^w but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened.

^w Isa. lrv. 8, 9 ; Zech. xiv. 2, 3.

the civil wars between Otho and Vitellius, held Vespasian and his son Titus in suspense. Thus the city was not actually besieged in form till after Vespasian was confirmed in the empire, and Titus was appointed to command the forces in Judea. It was in those incidental delays that the Christians, and indeed several others, provided for their own safety, by flight. In Luke xix. 43, our Lord says of Jerusalem, Thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee, and compass thee round, and keep thee in on every side. Accordingly, Titus, having made several assaults without success, resolved to surround the city with a wall, which was, with incredible speed, completed in three days ! The wall was thirty-nine furlongs in length, and was strengthened with thirteen forts at proper distances, so that all hope of safety was cut off ; none could make his escape from the city, and no provisions could be brought into it. See Josephus, WAR, book v. c. 12.

Verse 21. For then shall be great tribulation No history can furnish us with a parallel to the calamities and miseries of the Jews :—rapine, murder, famine, and pestilence within : fire and sword, and all the horrors of war, without. Our Lord wept at the foresight of these calamities ; and it is almost impossible for any humane person to read the relation of them in Josephus without weeping also. St. Luke, chap. xxi. 22, calls these the days of vengeance, that all things which were written might be fulfilled. 1. These were the days in which all the calamities predicted by Moses, Joel, Daniel, and other prophets, as well as those predicted by our Saviour, met in one common centre, and were fulfilled in the most terrible manner on that generation. 2. These were the days of vengeance in another sense, as if God's judgments had certain periods and revolutions ; for it is remarkable that the temple was burned by the Romans in the same month, and on the same day of the month, on which it had been burned by the Babylonians. See Josephus, WAR, b. vi. c. 4.

Verse 22. Except those days should be shortened Josephus computes the number of those who perished in the siege at eleven hundred thousand, besides those who were slain in other places, WAR, b. vi. c. 9 ; and if the Romans had gone on destroying in this manner, the whole nation of the Jews would, in a short time, have been entirely extirpated ; but, for the sake of the elect, the Jews, that they might not be utterly destroyed, and for the Christians particularly, the days were shortened. These, partly through the fury of the zealots on one hand, and the hatred of the Romans on the other ; and partly through the difficulty of subsisting in the mountains, without houses or provisions, would in all probability have been all destroyed, either by the sword or famine, if the days had not been shortened

A. M. 4033.

A. D. 29.

An. Olymp.

CCII. 1.

23 *Then if any man shall say unto you, Lo, here is Christ, or there; believe it not.

24 For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect.

25 Behold, I have told you before.

26 Wherefore if they shall say unto you,

* Mark xiii. 21; Luke xvii. 23; xxi. 8.—† Deut. xiii. 1; ver. 5, 11; 2 Thess. ii. 9, 10, 11; Rev. xiii. 13.

The besieged themselves helped to shorten those days by their divisions and mutual slaughters; and by fatally deserting their strong holds, where they never could have been subdued, but by famine alone. So well fortified was Jerusalem, and so well provided to stand a siege, that the enemy without could not have prevailed, had it not been for the factions and seditions within. When Titus was viewing the fortifications after the taking of the city, he could not help ascribing his success to God. "We have fought," said he, "with God on our side; and it is God who pulled the Jews out of these strong holds: for what could machines or the hands of men avail against such towers as these?" WAR, b. vi. c. 9.

Verse 23. Then if any man shall say unto you, Lo here is Christ] Our Lord had cautioned his disciples against false Christs and prophets before, ver. 11; but he seems here to intimate that there would be especial need to attend to this caution about the time of the siege. And in fact many such impostors did arise about that time, promising deliverance from God; and the lower the Jews were reduced, the more disposed they were to listen to such deceivers. Like a man drowning, they were willing to catch even at a straw, while there was any prospect of being saved. But as it was to little purpose for a man to take upon him the character of the Christ, without miracles to avouch his Divine mission, so it was the common artifice of these impostors to show signs and wonders, σημεια και τερατα; the very words used by Christ in this prophecy, and by Josephus in his history: ANT. b. xx. c. 7. Among these Simon Magus, and Dosithcus, mentioned before; and Barcocab, who, St. Jerome says, pretended to vomit flames. And it is certain these and some others were so dexterous in imitating miraculous works that they deceived many; and such were their works, that if the elect, the chosen persons, the Christians, had not had the fullest evidence of the truth of Christ's mission and miracles, they must have been deceived too: but, having had these proofs, they could not possibly be deceived by these impostors. This is simply the meaning of this place; and it is truly astonishing that it should be brought as a proof for the doctrine (whether true or false is at present out of the question) of the necessary and eternal perseverance of the saints! How abundant the Jews were in magic, divination, sorcery, incantation, &c., see proved by Dr. Lightfoot on this place.

Vers. 25. Behold, I have told you before.] That is, I have forewarned you.

Behold, he is in the desert; go not forth: behold, he is in the secret chambers; believe it not.

A. M. 4033.

A. D. 29.

An. Olymp.

CCII. 1.

27 *For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.

28 ^bFor wheresoever the carcass is, there will the eagles be gathered together.

* John vi. 37; x. 23, 29; Rom. viii. 28, 29, 30; 2 Tim. ii. 19.
^a Luke xvii. 24.—^b Job xxxix. 30; Luke xvii. 37.

Verse 26. If they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the desert] Is it not worthy of remark that our Lord not only foretold the appearance of these impostors, but also the manner and circumstances of their conduct? Some he mentions as appearing in the desert. Josephus says, ANT. b. xx. c. 7, and WAR, book ii. c. 13: That many impostors and cheats persuaded the people to follow them to the desert, promising to show them signs and wonders done by the providence of God, is well attested. An Egyptian false prophet, mentioned by Josephus, ANT. b. xx. c. 7, and in the Acts, chap. xxi. 38, led out into the desert four thousand men, who were murderers, but these were all taken or destroyed by Felix. Another promised salvation to the people, if they would follow him to the desert, and he was destroyed by Festus, ANT. b. xx. c. 7. Also, one Jonathan, a weaver, persuaded a number to follow him to the desert, but he was taken and burnt alive by Vespasian. See WAR, b. vii. c. 11.

As some conducted their deluded followers to the desert, so did others to the secret chambers. Josephus mentions a false prophet, WAR, b. vi. c. 5, who declared to the people in the city, that God commanded them to go up into the temple, and there they should receive the signs of deliverance. A multitude of men, women, and children, went up accordingly; but, instead of deliverance, the place was set on fire by the Romans, and 6,000 perished miserably in the flames, or in attempting to escape them.

Verse 27. For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west] It is worthy of remark that our Lord, in the most particular manner, points out the very march of the Roman army: they entered into Judea on the east, and carried on their conquest westward, as if not only the extensiveness of the ruin, but the very route which the army would take, were intended in the comparison of the lightning issuing from the east, and shining to the west.

Verse 28. For wheresoever the carcass is] Πτωμα, the dead carcass. The Jewish nation, which was morally and judicially dead.

There will the eagles] The Roman armies, called so partly from their strength and fierceness, and partly from the figure of these animals which was always wrought on their ensigns, or even in brass, placed on the tops of their ensign-staves. It is remarkable that the Roman fury pursued these wretched men wheresoever they were found. They were a dead carcass doomed to be devoured; and the Roman eagles were

A. M. 4033. 29 ° Immediately after the tribu-
 A. D. 29. lation of those days, ^d shall the sun
 An. Olymp. be darkened, and the moon shall CCII. 1. not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken:

30 ° And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven: ^f and then shall all the ^c Dan. vii. 11, 12.—^d Isa. xiii. 10; Ezek. xxxii. 7; Joel ii. 10, 31; iii. 15; Amos v. 20; viii. 9; Mark xiii. 24; Luke xxi. 25; Acts ii. 20; Rev. vi. 12.—^e Dan. vii. 13.

the commissioned devourers. See the pitiful account in Josephus, WAR, b. vii. c. 2, 3, 6, 9, 10, and 11.

Verse 29. Immediately after the tribulation, &c. Commentators generally understand this, and what follows, of the end of the world and Christ's coming to judgment: but the word immediately shows that our Lord is not speaking of any distant event, but of something immediately consequent on calamities already predicted: and that must be the destruction of Jerusalem. "The Jewish heaven shall perish, and the sun and moon of its glory and happiness shall be darkened—brought to nothing. The sun is the religion of the Church; the moon is the government of the state; and the stars are the judges and doctors of both. Compare Isa. xiii. 10; Ezek. xxxii. 7, 8, &c." Lightfoot.

In the prophetic language, great commotions upon earth are often represented under the notion of commotions and changes in the heavens:—

The fall of Babylon is represented by the stars and constellations of heaven withdrawing their light, and the sun and moon being darkened. See Isa. xiii. 9, 10.

The destruction of Egypt, by the heaven being covered, the sun enveloped with a cloud, and the moon withholding her light. Ezek. xxxii. 7, 8.

The destruction of the Jews by Antiochus Epiphanes, is represented by casting down some of the host of heaven, and the stars to the ground. See Dan. viii. 10.

And this very destruction of Jerusalem is represented by the Prophet Joel, chap. ii. 30, 31, by showing wonders in heaven and in earth—darkening the sun, and turning the moon into blood. This general mode of describing these judgments leaves no room to doubt the propriety of its application in the present case.

The falling of stars, i. e. those meteors which are called falling stars by the common people, was deemed an omen of evil times. The heathens have marked this:—

*Sape etiam stellas, vento impendente videbis
 Præcipites cælo labi, noctisque per umbram
 Flammæ longos à tergo albescere tractus.*

VIRG. GEOR. i. ver. 365.

And oft before tempestuous winds arise
 The seeming stars fall headlong from the skies,
 And, shooting through the darkness, gild the night
 With sweeping glories, and long trails of light.

Dryden.

Again the same poet thus sings:—

Sol tibi signa dabit: solem quis dicere falsum Audeat? Ille etiam cæcos instare tumultus tribes of the earth mourn; ^g and A. M. 4033.

232

 they shall see the Son of man com- A. D. 29.
 ing in the clouds of heaven, with An. Olymp.
 power and great glory. CCII. 1.

31 ^h And he shall send his angels ⁱ with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other.

^f Zech. xii. 12.—^g Chap. xvi. 27; Mark xiii. 26; Rev. i. 7.
^h Chap. xiii. 41; 1 Cor. xv. 52; 1 Thess. iv. 16.—ⁱ Or, with a trumpet, and a great voice.

*Sape monet: fraudemque et operta tumescere bella
 Ille etiam extincto miseratus Casare Roman,
 Cum caput obscurâ nitidum ferrugine textit,
 Impiæque æternam timuerunt sæcula noctem.*
 Ibid. ver. 462.

The sun reveals the secrets of the sky,
 And who dares give the source of light the lie?
 The change of empires often he declares,
 Fierce tumults, hidden treasons, open wars.
 He first the fate of Cæsar did foretell,
 And pitied Rome, when Rome in Cæsar fell:
 In iron clouds concealed the public light,
 And impious mortals found eternal night.

Dryden.

Verse 30. Then shall appear the sign of the Son of man] The plain meaning of this is, that the destruction of Jerusalem will be such a remarkable instance of Divine vengeance, such a signal manifestation of Christ's power and glory, that all the Jewish tribes shall mourn, and many will, in consequence of this manifestation of God, be led to acknowledge Christ and his religion. By τῆς γῆς, of the land, in the text, is evidently meant here, as in several other places, the land of Judea and its tribes, either its then inhabitants, or the Jewish people wherever found.

Verse 31. He shall send his angels] Τοὺς ἀγγέλους, his messengers, the apostles, and their successors in the Christian ministry.

With a great sound of a trumpet] Or, a loud-sounding trumpet—the earnest affectionate call of the Gospel of peace, life, and salvation.

Shall gather together his elect] The Gentiles, who were now chosen or elected, in place of the rebellious, obstinate Jews, according to our Lord's prediction, Matt. viii. 11, 12, and Luke xiii. 28, 29. For the children of the kingdom, (the Jews who were born with a legal right to it, but had now finally forfeited that right by their iniquities) should be thrust out. It is worth serious observation, that the Christian religion spread and prevailed mightily after this period: and nothing contributed more to the success of the Gospel than the destruction of Jerusalem happening in the very time and manner, and with the very circumstances, so particularly foretold by our Lord. It was after this period that the kingdom of Christ began, and his reign was established in almost every part of the world.

To St. Matthew's account, St. Luke adds, chap. xxi. 24, They shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden down by the Gentiles, till the times of

A. M. 4033. 32 ¶ Now learn ^a a parable of
A. D. 29. the fig tree: When his branch is
An. Olymp. yet tender, and putteth forth leaves,
CCII. 1. we know that summer is nigh:

33 So likewise ye, when ye shall see all

^a Luke xxi. 29.—¹ James v. 9.—^m Or, he.

the Gentiles be fulfilled. The number of those who fell by the sword was very great. ELEVEN HUNDRED THOUSAND perished during the siege. Many were slain at other places, and at other times. By the commandment of Florus, the first author of the war, there were slain at Jerusalem 3,600, Jos. WAR, b. ii. c. 11. By the inhabitants of Cæsarea, above 20,000. At Scythopolis, above 13,000. At Ascalon, 2,500. At Ptolemais, 2,000. At Alexandria, 50,000. At Joppa, when taken by Cestius Gallus, 8,400. In a mountain called Asamon, near Sepporis, above 2,000. At Damascus, 10,000. In a battle with the Romans at Ascalon, 10,000. In an ambuscade near the same place, 8,000. At Japha, 15,000. Of the Samaritans, on Mount Gerizim, 11,600. At Jotapa, 40,000. On Joppa, when taken by Vespasian, 1,200. At Tarichea, 6,500. And after the city was taken, 1,200. At Gamala, 4,000, besides 5,000 who threw themselves down a precipice. Of those who fled with John, of Gischala, 6,000. Of the Gadarenes, 15,000 slain, besides countless multitudes drowned. In the village of Idumæa, above 10,000 slain. At Gerasa, 1,000. At Macherus, 1,700. In the wood of Jardes, 3,000. In the castle of Masada, 960. In Cyrene, by Catullus the governor, 3,000. Besides these, many of every age, sex, and condition, were slain in the war, who are not reckoned; but, of those who are reckoned, the number amounts to upwards of 1,357,660, which would have appeared incredible, if their own historian had not so particularly enumerated them. See Josephus, WAR, book ii. c. 18, 20; book iii. c. 2, 7, 8, 9; book iv. c. 1, 2, 7, 8, 9; book vii. c. 6, 9, 11; and Bp. Newton, vol. ii. p. 288–290.

Many also were led away captives into all nations. There were taken at Japha, 2,130. At Jotapa, 1,200. At Tarichea, 6,000 chosen young men, who were sent to Nero; others sold to the number of 30,400, besides those who were given to Agrippa. Of the Gadarenes were taken 2,200. In Idumæa above 1,000. Many besides these were taken in Jerusalem; so that, as Josephus says, the number of the captives taken in the whole war amounted to 97,000. Those above seventeen years of age were sent to the works in Egypt; but most were distributed through the Roman provinces, to be destroyed in their theatres by the sword, and by the wild beasts; and those under seventeen years of age were sold for slaves. Eleven thousand in one place perished for want. At Cæsarea, Titus, like a thorough-paced infernal savage, murdered 2,500 Jews, in honour of his brother's birthday; and a greater number at Berytus in honour of his father's. See Josephus, WAR, b. vii. c. 3. s. 1. Some he caused to kill each other; some were thrown to the wild beasts; and others burnt alive. And all this was done by a man who was styled, The darling of mankind! Thus were the Jews miserably tormented, and these things, know that ¹ it is ^m near, ^a even at the doors.

A. M. 4033
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

34 Verily I say unto you, ^a This generation shall not pass, till all these things be fulfilled.

^a Chap. xvi. 28; xxiii. 36; Mark xiii. 30; Luke xxi. 32.

distributed over the Roman provinces; and continue to be distressed and dispersed over all the nations of the world to the present day. Jerusalem also was, according to the prediction of our Lord, to be trodden down by the Gentiles. Accordingly it has never since been in the possession of the Jews. It was first in subjection to the Romans, afterwards to the Saracens, then to the Franks, after to the Mamalukes, and now to the Turks. Thus has the prophecy of Christ been most literally and terribly fulfilled, on a people who are still preserved as continued monuments of the truth of our Lord's prediction, and of the truth of the Christian religion. See more in Bp. Newton's Dissert. vol. ii. p. 291, &c.

Verse 32. Learn a parable of the fig-tree] That is, These signs which I have given you will be as infallible a proof of the approaching ruin of the Jewish state as the budding of the trees is a proof of the coming summer.

Verse 34. This generation shall not pass] If yevea avrē, this race; i. e. the Jews shall not cease from being a distinct people, till all the counsels of God relative to them and the Gentiles be fulfilled. Some translate η yevea avrē, this generation, meaning the persons who were then living, that they should not die before these signs, &c., took place: but though this was true, as to the calamities that fell upon the Jews, and the destruction of their government, temple, &c., yet as our Lord mentions Jerusalem's continuing to be under the power of the Gentiles till the fulness of the Gentiles should come in, i. e. till all the nations of the world should receive the Gospel of Christ, after which the Jews themselves should be converted unto God, Rom. xi. 25, &c., I think it more proper not to restrain its meaning to the few years which preceded the destruction of Jerusalem; but to understand it of the care taken by Divine providence to preserve them as a distinct people, and yet to keep them out of their own land, and from their temple service. See on Mark xiii. 30. But still it is literally true in reference to the destruction of Jerusalem. John probably lived to see these things come to pass; compare Matt. xvi. 28, with John xxi. 22; and there were some rabbins alive at the time when Christ spoke these words who lived till the city was destroyed, viz. Rabban Simeon, who perished with the city; R. Jochanan ben Zaccai, who outlived it; R. Zadoch, R. Ismael, and others. See Lightfoot.

The war began, as Josephus says, Ant. b. xx. c. 11. s. 1, in the second year of the government of Gessius Florus, who succeeded Albinus, successor of Porcius Festus, mentioned Acts xxiv. 27, in the month of May, in the twelfth year of Nero, and the seventeenth of Agrippa, mentioned Acts xxv. and xxvi., that is, in May, A. D. 66.

The temple was burnt August 10, A. D. 70, the

A. M. 4033. 35 ° Heaven and earth shall pass
A. D. 29. away, but my words shall not pass
An. Olymp. away.
CCH. 1.

36 ¶ But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, ° but my Father only.

37 But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.

38 ° For as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying ° Psa. cii. 26; Isa. li. 6; Jer. xxxi. 35, 36; chap. v. 18; Mark xiii. 31; Luke xxi. 33; Heb. i. 11.—° Mark xiii. 32; Acts i. 7; 1 Thess. v. 2; 2 Pet. iii. 10.

same day and month on which it had been burnt by the king of Babylon: Josephus, Ant. b. xx. c. 11. s. 8.

The city was taken September 8, in the second year of the reign of Vespasian, or the year of Christ 70. Ant. b. vi. c. 10.

That was the end of the siege of Jerusalem, which began, as Josephus several times observes, about the fourteenth day of the month Nisan, or our April. See War, b. v. c. 3. s. 1, c. 13. s. 7; b. vi. c. 9. s. 3.

Dr. Lardner farther remarks, There is also an ancient inscription to the honour of Titus, "who, by his father's directions and counsels, had subdued the Jewish nation and destroyed Jerusalem, which had never been destroyed by any generals, kings, or people, before." The inscription may be seen in GRUTER, vol. i. p. 244. It is as follows:—

IMP. TITO. CÆSARI. DIVI. VESPASIANI. F
VESPASIANO. AUG. PONTIFICI. MAXIMO
TRIB. POT. X. IMP. XVII. COS. VIII. P. P
PRINCIPI. SUO. S. P. Q. R

QUOD. PRÆCEPTIS. PATRIS. CONSILIISQUE. ET AUSPICIIIS. GENTEM. JUDÆORUM. DOMUIT. ET URBEM. HIEROSOLYMAM. OMNIBUS. ANTE. SE
DUCIBUS. REGIBUS. GENTIBUSQUE. AUT. FRUSTRA
PETITAM. AUT. OMNINO. INTENTATAM. DELEVIT.

For this complete conquest of Jerusalem, Titus had a triumphal arch erected to his honour, which still exists. It stand on the Via Sacra, leading from the forum to the amphitheatre. On it are represented the spoils of the temple of God, such as the golden table of the show-bread, the golden candlestick with its seven branches, the ark of the covenant, the two golden trumpets, &c., &c.; for a particular account see the note on Exod. xxv. 31. On this arch, a correct model of which, taken on the spot, now stands before me, is the following inscription:—

SENATUS
POPULUSQUE ROMANUS
DIVO TITO. DIVI VESPASIANI. F
VESPASIANO AUGUSTO.

"The Senate and People of Rome, to the Divine Titus, son of the Divine Vespasian; and to Vespasian the Emperor."

On this occasion, a medal was struck with the following inscription round a laureated head of the emperor:—IMP.erator J.ulus CÆsar VESP.asianus and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, A. M. 4033.

A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCH. 1.

39 And knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.

40 ° Then shall two be in the field; the one shall be taken, and the other left.

41 Two women shall be grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken, and the other left.

42 ¶ Watch therefore: for ye know not

° Zech. xiv. 7.—° Gen. vi. 3, 4, 5; vii. 5; Luke xvii. 26; 1 Pet. iii. 20.—° Luke xvii. 34, &c.—° Chap. xxv. 13; Mark xiii. 33, &c.; Luke xxi. 36.

AUG.ustus. P.ontifex M.aximus, TR.ibunitia, P.o-testate P.ater P.atriæ CO.nsul VIII.—On the obverse are represented a palm tree, the emblem of the land of Judæa; the emperor with a trophy standing on the left; Judea, under the figure of a distressed woman, sitting at the foot of the tree weeping, with her head bowed down, supported by her left hand, with the legend JUDAEA CAPTA. S.enatus C.on-sultus. at the bottom. This is not only an extraordinary fulfilment of our Lord's prediction, but a literal accomplishment of a prophecy delivered about 800 years before, Isa. iii. 26, And she, desolate, shall sit upon the ground.

Verse 36. But of that day and hour] Ωπα, here, is translated season by many eminent critics, and is used in this sense by both sacred and profane authors. As the day was not known, in which Jerusalem should be invested by the Romans, therefore our Lord advised his disciples to pray that it might not be on a Sabbath; and as the season was not known, therefore they were to pray that it might not be in the winter; ver. 20. See on Mark xiii. 32.

Verses 37, 38. As the days of Noah—they were eating and drinking] That is, they spent their time in rapine, luxury, and riot. The design of these verses seems to be, that the desolation should be as general as it should be unexpected.

Verse 39. And knew not] They considered not—did not lay Noah's warning to heart, till it was too late to profit by it: so shall it be—and so it was in this coming of the Son of man.

Verses 40, 41. Then shall two men—two women—one shall be taken, and the other left.] The meaning seems to be, that so general should these calamities be, that no two persons, wheresoever found, or about whatsoever employed, should be both able to effect their escape; and that captivity and the sword should have a complete triumph over this unhappy people.

Two women shall be grinding] Women alone are still employed in grinding the corn in the east; and it is only when despatch is required, or the uppermost millstone is heavy, that a second woman is added. See Wakefield, and Harmer, Obs. vol. i. 253. That they were formerly thus employed, see Exod. xi. 5, and the note there. See also Isa. xlvii. 2.

Verse 42. Watch therefore] Be always on your guard, that you may not be taken unawares, and that you may be properly prepared to meet God in the

A. M. 4033. what hour your Lord doth
A. D. 29. come.
An. Olymp. CCl. i.

43 "But know this, that if the good man of the house had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched, and would not have suffered his house to be broken up.

44 "Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh.

45 "Who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his lord hath made ruler over his household, to give them meat in due season?

46 "Blessed is that servant, whom his lord,

^a Luke xii. 39; 1 Thess. v. 2; 2 Pet. iii. 10; Rev. iii. 3; xvi. 15
^c Chap. xxv. 13; 1 Thess. v. 6.—^w Luke xii. 42; Acts xx. 28;

way either of judgment or mercy, whensoever he may come. This advice the followers of Christ took, and therefore they escaped; the miserable Jews rejected it, and were destroyed. Let us learn wisdom by the things which they suffered.

Verse 43. If the good man of the house had known] "As a master of a family, who expected a thief at any time of the night, would take care to be awake, and ready to protect his house; so do ye, who know that the Son of man will come. Though the day and hour be uncertain, continue always in a state of watchfulness, that he may not come upon you unawares." WAKEFIELD.

Verse 45. Who then is a faithful and wise servant] All should live in the same expectation of the coming of Christ, which a servant has with respect to the return of his master, who, in departing for a season, left the management of his affairs to him; and of which management he is to give an exact account on his master's return.

Here is an abstract of the duties of a minister of Christ. 1. He is appointed, not by himself, but by the vocation and mission of his Master. 2. He must look on himself, not as the master of the family, but as the servant. 3. He must be scrupulously faithful and exact in fulfilling the commands of his Master. 4. His fidelity must be ever accompanied by wisdom and prudence. 5. He must give the domestics—the sacred family, their food; and this food must be such as to afford them true nourishment. And 6. This must be done in its season. There are certain portions of the bread of life which lose their effect by being administered out of proper season, or to improper persons.

Verse 46. Blessed is that servant] His blessedness consists in his master's approbation.

Verse 47. He shall make him ruler over all his goods.] O heavenly privilege of a faithful minister of Christ! He shall receive from God a power to dispense all the blessings of the new covenant; and his word shall ever be accompanied with the demonstration of the Holy Ghost to the hearts of all that hear it. Much of a preacher's usefulness may be lost by his unfaithfulness.

when he cometh, shall find so doing.

A. M. 4033
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCl. i.

47 Verily I say unto you, That he shall make him ruler over all his goods.

48 But, and if that evil servant shall say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming;

49 And shall begin to smite his fellow-servants, and to eat and drink with the drunken,

50 The lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of,

51 And shall cut him asunder, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

1 Cor. iv. 2; Heb. iii. 5.—^a Rev. xvi. 15.—^r Chap. xxv. 21, 23; Luke xxii. 29.—² Or, cut him off.—³ Chap. viii. 12; xxv. 30.

Verse 48. But, and if that evil servant] Here are three characters of a bad minister. 1. He has little or no faith in the speedy coming of Christ, either to punish for wickedness, or to pardon and sanctify those who believe. It may be, he does not outwardly profess this, but he says it in his heart, and God searches his heart, and knows that he professes to teach what he does not believe. 2. He governs with an absolute dominion, oppressing his colleagues and doing violence to the followers of Christ. And shall begin to smite, &c. 3. He leads an irregular life—does not love the company of the children of God, but eats and drinks with the drunkards, preferring the tables of the great and the rich, whose god is their belly, and thus feeds himself without fear. Great God! save thine inheritance from being ravaged by such wolves!

Verse 50. The lord of that servant] Here are three punishments which answer to the three characteristics of the bad minister. 1. A sudden death, and the weight of God's judgments falling upon him, without a moment to avert it: this answers to his infidelity and forgetfulness. He shall come in a day in which he looked not for him. 2. A separation from the communion of saints, and from all the gifts which he has abused: this answers to the abuse of his authority in the Church of Christ. 3. He shall have tears and eternal pains, in company with all such hypocrites as himself: and this answers to his voluptuous life, pampering the flesh at the expense of his soul.

Verse 51. Cut him asunder] This refers to an ancient mode of punishment used in several countries. Isaiah is reported to have been sawed ASUNDER. That it was an ancient mode of punishment is evident from what Herodotus says: that Sabacus, king of Ethiopia, had a vision, in which he was commanded μεσον διαραιεν, to cut in two, all the Egyptian priests, lib. ii. And in lib. vii. where Xerxes ordered one of the sons of Pythius μεσον διαραιεν, to be cut in two, and one half placed on each side of the way, that his army might pass through between them. See Raphelius also, in his notes from Herodotus and Polybius. This kind of punishment was used among the Persians: see Dan. ii. 5; iii. 29. Story of Susannah. ver. 55, 59

See also 2 Sam. xii. 31, and 1 Chron. xx. 3. It may also have reference to that mode of punishment in which the different members were chopped off seriatim, first the feet, then the hands, next the legs, then the arms, and lastly the head. This mode of punishment is still in use among the Chinese. But we find an exact parallel among the Turks, in the following passage from W. Lithgow's Travels, p. 153. London 4to. edit. "If a Turk should happen to kill another Turk, his punishment is thus: After he is adjudged to death, he is brought forth to the market place; and a block being brought hither of four foot high, the malfactor is stript naked, and then laid thereon with his belly downward; they draw in his middle together so small with running cords that they strike his body a-two with one blow: his hinder parts they cast to be eaten by hungry dogs kept for the same purpose; and the fore-quarters and head they throw into a grievous fire, made there for the same end. And this is the punishment for manslaughter."

This is the very same punishment, and for the same offence, as that mentioned by our Lord, the killing of a fellow servant—one of the same nation, and of the same religion.

THE reader has no doubt observed, in the preceding chapter, a series of the most striking and solemn predictions, fulfilled in the most literal, awful, and dreadful manner. Christ has foretold the ruin of the Jewish people, and the destruction of their polity; and in such a circumstantial manner as none else could do, but He, under whose eye are all events, and in whose hands are the government and direction of all things. Indeed he rather declared what he would do, than predicted what should come to pass. And the fulfilment has been as circumstantial as the prediction. Does it not appear that the predicted point was so literally referred to by the occurring fact, by which it was to have its accomplishment, as to leave no room to doubt the truth of the prediction, or the certainty of the event by which it was fulfilled? Thus the wisdom of God, as also his justice and providence, have had a plenary manifestation.

But this wisdom appears, farther, in preserving such a record of the prediction, and such evidence of its accomplishment, as cannot possibly be doubted. The New Testament, given by the inspiration of God, and handed down uncorrupted from father to son, by both friends and enemies, perfect in its credibility and truth, inexpugnable in its evidences, and astonishingly circumstantial in details of future occurrences, which the wisdom of God alone could foreknow—that New Testament is the record of these predictions. The history of the Romans, written by so many hands; the history of the Jews, written by one of themselves; triumphal arches, coins, medals, and public monuments of different kinds, are the evidence by which the fulfilment of the record is demonstrated. Add to this the preservation of the Jewish people; a people scattered through all nations, yet subsisting as a distinct body, without temple, sacrifices, or political government; and who, while they attempt to suppress the truth, yet reluctantly stand forth as an unimpeachable collateral evidence, that the solemn record, already alluded to, is strictly and literally true! Who that has ever consulted the Roman historians of the reigns of Vespasian and Titus, the history of Josephus, and the 24th chapter of St. Matthew's Gospel, and who knows any thing of the present state of the Jews over the face of the earth, or even of those who sojourn in England, can doubt for a moment the truth of this Gospel, or the infinite and all-comprehensive knowledge of Him who is its author! Here then is one portion of Divine Revelation that is incontrovertibly and absolutely proved to be the truth of God. Reader! if he, who, while he predicted the ruin of this disobedient and refractory people, wept over their city and its inhabitants, has so minutely fulfilled the threatenings of his justice on the unbelieving and disobedient, will he not as circumstantially fulfil the promises of his grace to all them that believe? The existence of his revelation, the continuance of a Christian Church upon earth, the certainty that there is one individual saved from his sins by the grace of the Gospel, and walking worthy of his vocation are continued proofs and evidences that he is still the same; that he will fulfil every jot and tittle of that word on which he has caused thee to trust; and save to the uttermost all that come unto the Father by him. The word of the Lord endureth for ever: and they who trust in him shall never be confounded.

CHAPTER XXV.

The parable of the ten virgins, five of whom were wise, and five foolish, 1–12. The necessity of being constantly prepared to appear before God, 13. The parable of the talents, 14–30. The manner in which God shall deal with the righteous and the wicked in the judgment of the great day, 31–46.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

THEN shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten ^a virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth to meet ^b the bridegroom.

^a Lev. xxi. 14; Psa. xlv. 9–11; 2 Cor. xi. 2; Rev. xiv. 5.

NOTES ON CHAP. XXV.

Verse 1. Then shall the kingdom of heaven] The state of Jews and professing Christians—or the state

2 ° And five of them were wise, and five were foolish. A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

3 They that were foolish took their lamps, and took no oil with them:

^b Eph. v. 29, 30; Rev. xix. 7; xxi. 2, 9.—° Chap. xiii. 47; xxii. 10 of the visible Church at the time of the destruction of Jerusalem, and in the day of judgment: for the parable appears to relate to both those periods. And particu-

A. M. 4033. 4 But the wise took oil in their
A. D. 29. vessels with their lamps.
An. Olymp. CCH. 1.

5 While the bridegroom tarried,
d they all slumbered and slept.

d 1 Thess. v. 6.

larly at the time in which Christ shall come to judge the world, it shall appear what kind of reception his Gospel has met with. This parable, or something very like it, is found in the Jewish records: so in a treatise entitled RESHITH CHOCMAH, the beginning of wisdom, we read thus: "Our wise men of blessed memory say, Repent whilst thou hast strength to do it, whilst thy lamp burns, and thy oil is not extinguished; for if thy lamp be gone out, thy oil will profit thee nothing."—Our doctors add, in MEGRASH: "The holy blessed God said to Israel, My sons, repent whilst the gates of repentance stand open; for I receive a gift at present, but when I shall sit in judgment, in the age to come, I will receive none." Another parable, mentioned by Kimchi, on Isa. lxx. 13. "Rabbi Yuchanan, the son of Zachai, spoke a parable concerning a king, who invited his servants, but set them no time to come: the prudent and wary among them adorned themselves, and, standing at the door of the king's house, said, Is any thing wanting in the house of the king? (i. e. Is there any work to be done?) But the foolish ones that were among them went away, and working said, When shall the feast be in which there is no labour? Suddenly the king sought out his servants: those who were adorned entered in, and they who were still polluted entered in also. The king was glad when he met the prudent, but he was angry when he met the foolish: he said, Let the prudent sit down and eat—let the others stand and look on." Rabbi Eliezer said, "Turn to God one day before your death." His disciples said, "How can a man know the day of his death?" He answered them, "Therefore you should turn to God to-day, perhaps you may die to-morrow; thus every day will be employed in returning." See Kimchi in Isa. lxx. 13.

Virgins] Denoting the purity of the Christian doctrine and character. In this parable, the bridegroom is generally understood to mean Jesus Christ. The feast, that state of felicity to which he has promised to raise his genuine followers. The wise, or prudent, and foolish virgins, those who truly enjoy, and those who only profess the purity and holiness of his religion. The oil, the grace and salvation of God, or that faith which works by love. The vessel, the heart in which this oil is contained. The lamp, the profession of enjoying the burning and shining light of the Gospel of Christ. Going forth, the whole of their sojourning upon earth.

Verse 2. Five of them were wise] Or, provident, ῥοιωνοῦντες—they took care to make a proper provision beforehand, and left nothing to be done in the last moment.

Five were foolish] Μαροῖ, which might be translated careless, is generally rendered foolish; but this does not agree so well with ῥοιωνοῖ, provident, or prudent, in the first clause, which is the proper meaning of the word. Μαρος, in the Etymologicon, is thus de-

6 And at midnight * there was A. M. 4033.
a cry made, Behold, the bride- A. D. 29.
groom cometh; go ye out to meet An. Olymp.
him. CCH. 1.

* Chap. xxiv 31, 1 Thess. iv. 16.

fined, μη ὁρᾷ το δειν, he who sees not what is proper or necessary. These did not see that it was necessary to have oil in their vessels, (the salvation of God in their souls,) as well as a burning lamp of religious profession, ver. 3, 4.

Verse 1. Took oil in their vessels] They not only had a sufficiency of oil in their lamps, but they carried a vessel with oil to recruit their lamps, when it should be found expedient. This the foolish or improvident neglected to do: hence, when the oil that was in their lamps burned out, they had none to pour into the lamp to maintain the flame.

Verse 5. The bridegroom tarried] The coming of the bridegroom to an individual may imply his death: his coming to the world—the final judgment. The delay—the time from a man's birth till his death, in the first case; in the second, the time from the beginning to the end of the world.

Slumbered and slept.] Or, ενθαζαν και εκαθενον, they became drowsy and fell asleep. As sleep is frequently used in the sacred writings for death, so drowsiness, which precedes sleep, may be considered as pointing out the decays of the constitution, and the sicknesses which precede death. The other explanations which are given of this place must be unsatisfactory to every man who is not warped by some point in his creed, which must be supported at every expense. Carelessness disposed them to drowsiness, drowsiness to sleep, deep sleep, which rendered them as unconscious of their danger as they were before inattentive to their duty. The Anglo-Saxon has hit the meaning of the original well—pa hnappuðon hig ealle 7 slepu; of which my old MS. Bible gives a literal version, in the English of the 14th century: forsothe—alle nappeden and sleptyn.

Verse 6. At midnight there was a cry] The Jewish weddings were generally celebrated in the night; yet they usually began at the rising of the evening star; but in this case there was a more than ordinary delay.

Behold, the bridegroom cometh] What an awful thing to be summoned to appear before the Judge of quick and dead! The following is an affecting relation, and fas est ab hoste doceri. "When Rabbi Jochanan ben Zachai was sick, his disciples came to visit him; and when he saw them he began to weep. They say to him, Rabbi! the light of Israel, the right hand pillar, the strong hammer, wherefore dost thou weep? He answered them, If they were carrying me before a king of flesh and blood, who is here to-day, and to-morrow in the grave; who, if he were angry with me, his anger would not last for ever: if he put me in prison, his prison would not be everlasting; if he condemned me to death, that death would not be eternal; whom I could soothe with words or bribe with riches; yet even in these circumstances I should weep. But now I am going before the King of kings, the holy and the blessed God, who liveth

A. M. 4033. 7 Then all those virgins arose,
A. D. 29. and ¹ trimmed their lamps.
An. Olymp. CCH. 1.

8 And the foolish said unto the wise,
Give us of your oil; for our lamps are ² gone out.

9 But the wise answered, saying, Not so; lest there be not enough for us and you: ³ but

² Luke xii. 35.—³ Or, going out.—⁴ Isa. lv. 1; Hab. ii. 4;
Rom. i. 17; Gal. vi. 4.

and endureth for ever and for ever; who, if he be angry with me, his anger will last for ever; if he put me in prison, his bondage will be everlasting; if he condemn me to death, that death will be eternal; whom I cannot soothe with words nor bribe with riches:—when, farther, there are before me two ways, the one to hell and the other to paradise, and I know not in which they are carrying me, shall I not weep?" TALMUD Beracoth, fol. 28.

Verse 7. Trimmed their lamps.] Εκοσμησαν, adorned them. I have seen some of the eastern lamps or lanterns, the body of which was a skeleton of wood and threads, covered with a very thin transparent membrane, or very fine gauze, and decorated with flowers painted on it. It is probable that the nuptial lamps were highly decorated in this way; though the act mentioned here may mean no more than preparing the lamps for burning.

The following account of the celebration of a wedding in Persia, taken from the Zend Avesta, vol. ii. p. 558, &c., may cast some light on this place.

"The day appointed for the marriage, about five o'clock in the evening, the bridegroom comes to the house of the bride, where the mobed, or priest, pronounces for the first time the nuptial benediction. He then brings her to his own house, gives her some refreshment, and afterwards the assembly of her relatives and friends reconduct her to her father's house. When she arrives, the mobed repeats the nuptial benediction, which is generally done about MIDNIGHT; immediately after, the bride, accompanied with a part of her attending troop, (the rest having returned to their own homes,) is reconducted to the house of her husband, where she generally arrives about three o'clock in the morning. Nothing can be more brilliant than these nuptial solemnities in India. Sometimes the assembly consists of not less than two thousand persons, all richly dressed in gold and silver tissue; the friends and relatives of the bride, encompassed with their domestics, are all mounted on horses richly harnessed. The goods, wardrobe, and even the bed of the bride, are carried in triumph. The husband, richly mounted and magnificently dressed, is accompanied by his friends and relatives, the friends of the bride following him in covered carriages. At intervals, during the procession, guns and rockets are fired, and the spectacle is rendered grand beyond description, by a prodigious number of LIGHTED TORCHES, and by the sound of a multitude of musical instruments."

There are certain preparations which most persons believe they must make at the approach of death; but, alas! it is often too late. The lamp is defiled, the light almost out, and the oil expended; and what adorning go ye rather to them that sell, and ⁴ buy for yourselves.

10 And while they went to buy, the bridegroom came; ¹ and they that were ready went in with him to the marriage; and ² the door was shut.

¹ Luke xiii. 25; xix. 42; xii. 35, 36.—² Luke xiii. 25.

is a wretched sinner, struggling in the agonies of death, capable of preparing for his guilty soul!

Verse 8. Our lamps are gone out.] Σβεννυσται, are going out. So then it is evident that they were once lighted. They had once hearts illuminated and warmed by faith and love; but they had backslidden from the salvation of God, and now they are excluded from heaven, because, through their carelessness, they have let the light that was in them become darkness, and have not applied in time for a fresh supply of the salvation of God.

A Jewish rabbin supposes God addressing man thus:—I give thee my lamp, give thou me thy lamp; if thou keep my lamp I will keep thy lamp; but if thou extinguish my lamp I will extinguish thy lamp. That is, I give thee my word and testimonies to be a light unto thy feet and a lantern to thy steps, to guide thee safely through life; give me thy soul and all its concerns, that I may defend and save thee from all evil: keep my word, walk in my ways, and I will keep thy soul that nothing shall injure it; but if thou trample under foot my laws, I will cast thy soul into outer darkness.

Verse 9. Lest there be not enough for us and you] These had all been companions in the Christian course, and there was a time when they might have been helpful to each other; but that time is now past for ever—none has a particle of grace to spare, not even to help the soul of the dearest relative! The grace which every man receives is just enough to save his own soul; he has no merits to bequeath to the Church; no work of supererogation which can be placed to the account of another.

Go ye rather to them that sell, and buy] By leaving out the particle de, but, (on the indisputable authority of ABDGIKS, and HV, of Mathai, with sixteen others, the Armenian, Vulgate, and all the Itala but one,) and transposing a very little the members of the sentence, the sense is more advantageously represented, and the reading smoother: Rather go to them that sell, and buy for yourselves, lest there be not enough for us and you. Beza, Mill, Bengel, and Griesbach, approve of the omission of the particle de.

Verse 10. While they went to buy, the bridegroom came] What a dismal thing it is, not to discover the emptiness of one's heart of all that is good, till it is too late to make any successful application for relief! God alone knows how many are thus deceived.

And they that were ready] They who were prepared—who had not only a burning lamp of an evangelical profession, but had oil in their vessels, the faith that works by love in their hearts, and their lives adorned with all the fruits of the Spirit.

A. M. 4033.

A. D. 29.

An. Olymp.

CCII. 1.

11 Afterward came also the other virgins, saying, ' Lord, Lord, open to us.

12 But he answered and said, Verily I say unto you, ^m I know you not.

13 ⁿ Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh.

¹ Ch. vii. 21, 22, 23. — ^m Psa. v. 5; Hab. i. 13; John ix. 31. ^a Chap. xxiv. 42, 41; Mark xiii. 33, 35; Luke xxi. 36; 1 Cor. xvi. 13; 1 Thess. v. 6; 1 Pet. v. 8; Rev. xvi. 15.

The door was shut.] Sinners on a death-bed too often meet with those deceitful merchants, who promise them salvation for a price which is of no value in the sight of God. Come unto me, says Jesus, and buy: there is no salvation but through his blood—no hope for the sinner but that which is founded upon his sacrifice and death. The door was shut—dreadful and fatal words! No hope remains. Nothing but death can shut this door; but death may surprise us in our sins, and then despair is our only portion.

Verse 11. Afterwards came also the other virgins, saying, Lord, Lord] Earnest prayer, when used in time, may do much good: but it appears, from this parable, that there may come a time when prayer even to Jesus may be too late!—viz. when the door is shut—when death has separated the body and the soul.

Verse 12. I know you not.] As if he had said, Ye are not of my company—ye were neither with the bride nor the bridegroom: ye slept while the others were in procession. I do not acknowledge you for my disciples—ye are not like him who is love—ye refused to receive his grace—ye sinned it away when ye had it; now you are necessarily excluded from that kingdom where nothing but love and purity can dwell.

Verse 13. Watch therefore] If to watch be to employ ourselves chiefly about the business of our salvation, alas! how few of those who are called Christians are there who do watch! How many who slumber! How many who are asleep! How many seized with a lethargy! How many quite dead!

Wherein the Son of man cometh.] These words are omitted by many excellent MSS., most of the versions, and several of the fathers. Griesbach has left them out of the text: Grotius, Hammond, Mill, and Bengel, approve of the omission.

Verse 14. Called his own servants] God never makes the children of men proprietors of his goods. They are formed by his power, and upheld by his bounty; and they hold their lives and their goods, as in many of our ancient tenures, quamdiu domino placuerit—at the will of their Lord.

Verse 15. Unto one he gave five talents—to every man according to his several ability] The duties men are called to perform are sui to their situations, and the talents they receive. The good that any man has he has received from God, as also the ability to improve that good. God's graces and temporal mercies are sui to the power which a man has of improving them. To give eminent gifts to persons incapable of properly improving them, would be only to lead into a 14 ¶ ° For the kingdom of heaven is ^p as a man travelling into a far country, who called his own servants, and delivered unto them his goods.

15 And unto one he gave five ^a talents, to another two, and to another one; ^r to every man according to his several ability; and straightway took his journey.

° Luke xix. 12. — ^p Chap. xxi. 33. — ^a A talent is 187l. 10s. chap. xviii. 24. — ^r Rom. xii. 6; 1 Cor. xii. 7, 11, 29; Eph. iv. 11.

snare. The talent which each man has suits his own state best; and it is only pride and insanity which lead him to desire and envy the graces and talents of another. Five talents would be too much for some men: one talent would be too little. He who receives much, must make proportionate improvement; and, from him who has received little, the improvement only of that little will be required. As five talents, in one case, are sufficient to answer the purpose for which they were given; so also are two and one.

The man who improves the grace he has received, however small, will as surely get to the kingdom of God, as he who has received most from his master, and improved all.

There is a parable something like this in Sohar Chadash, fol. 47: "A certain king gave a deposit to three of his servants: the first kept it; the second lost it; the third spoiled one part of it, and gave the rest to another to keep. After some time, the king came and demanded the deposit. Him who had preserved it, the king praised, and made him governor of his house. Him who had lost it, he delivered to utter destruction, so that both his name and his possessions were blotted out. To the third, who had spoiled a part and given the rest to another to keep, the king said, Keep him, and let him not go out of my house, till we see what the other shall do, to whom he has entrusted a part: if he shall make a proper use of it, this man shall be restored to liberty; if not, he also shall be punished." See Schoettgen. I have had already occasion to remark how greatly every Jewish parable is improved that comes through the hands of Christ.

In this parable of our Lord, four things may be considered:—

- I. The master who distributes the talents.
- II. The servants who improved their talents.
- III. The servant who buried his talent. And
- IV. His punishment.

1. The master's kindness. The servants had nothing—deserved nothing—had no claim on their master, yet he, in his KINDNESS, delivers unto them his goods, not for his advantage, but for their comfort and salvation.

2. The master distributes these goods diversely;—giving to one five, to another two, and to another one. No person can complain that he has been forgotten; the master gives to each. None can complain of the diversity of the gifts; it is the master who has done it. The master has an absolute right over his own goods,

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCH. 1.

16 Then he that had received the five talents went and traded with the same, and made them other five talents.

17 And likewise he that had received two, he also gained other two.

18 But he that had received one, went and digged in the earth, and hid his lord's money.

19 After a long time ^s the lord of those servants cometh, and reckoneth with them.

20 And so he that had received five talents came, and brought other five talents, saying, ' Lord, thou deliveredst unto me five talents :

^s Hab. ii. 3; Luke xvi. 2; Heb. x. 37.—^t 1 Cor. xv. 10; 2 Tim. iv. 7, 8.

and the servants cannot find fault with the distribution. He who has little should not envy him who has received much, for he has the greater labour, and the greater account to give. He who has much should not despise him who has little, for the sovereign master has made the distinction; and his little, suited to the ability which God has given him, and fitted to the place in which God's providence has fixed him, is sufficiently calculated to answer the purpose of the master, in the salvation of the servant's soul.

3. The master distributes his talents with wisdom. He gave to each according to his several ability, i. e. to the power he had to improve what was given. It would not be just to make a servant responsible for what he is naturally incapable of managing; and it would not be proper to give more than could be improved. The powers which men have, God has given; and as he best knows the extent of these powers, so he suits his graces and blessings to them in the most wise and effectual way. Though he may make one vessel for honour, (i. e. a more honourable place or office,) and another for dishonour, (a less honourable office,) yet both are for the master's use—both are appointed and capacitated to show forth his glory.

II. The servants who improved their talents.

These persons are termed δουλοι, slaves, such as were the property of the master, who might dispose of them as he pleased. Then he that had received the five talents went and traded, ver. 16. 1. The work was speedily begun—as soon as the master gave the talents and departed, so soon they began to labour. There is not a moment to be lost—every moment has its grace, and every grace has its employment, and every thing is to be done for eternity.

2. The work was perseveringly carried on; after a long time the lord of those servants cometh, ver. 19. The master was long before he returned, but they did not relax. The longer time, the greater improvement. God gives every man just time enough to live, in this world, to glorify his Maker, and to get his soul saved. Many begin well, and continue faithful for a time—but how few persevere to the end! Are there none who seem to have outlived their glory, their character, their usefulness?

3. Their work was crowned with success. They behold, I have gained, beside them, five talents more.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCH. 1.

21 His lord said unto him, Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, ^u I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into ^v the joy of thy lord.

22 He also that had received two talents came and said, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me two talents: behold, I have gained two other talents beside them.

23 His lord said unto him, ^w Well done, good and faithful servant: thou hast been ^u Chap. xxiv. 47; ver. 34, 46; Luke xii. 41; xxii. 29, 30.

^v Heb. xii. 2; 2 Tim. ii. 12; 1 Pet. i. 8.—^w Ver. 21.

doubled the sum which they had received. Every grace of God is capable of great improvement. Jesus himself, the pure, immaculate Jesus, grew in wisdom and favour with God, Luke ii. 52.

4. They were ready to give in a joyful account when their master came and called for them. 1st. They come without delay: they expected his coming; and it was with an eye to this that they continued their labour—they endured as seeing him who is invisible. 2dly. They come without fear; the master before whom they appear has always loved them, and given them the fullest proofs of his affection for them: his love to them has begotten in them love to him; and their obedience to his orders sprung from the love they bore to him. He that loveth me, says Jesus, will keep my words. 3d. They render up their accounts without confusion: he who received five brought five others; and he who had received two brought two more: nothing was to be done when their master called; all their business was fully prepared. 4th. They gave up every thing to their master, without attempting to appropriate any thing. Their ability was his, the talents his, and the continued power to improve them, his. All is of God, and all must be returned to him.

5. Their recompense from their gracious master. 1st. They receive praise. Well done, good and faithful servants, ver. 21. What a glorious thing to have the approbation of God, and the testimony of a good conscience! They were good, pure and upright within—faithful, using to God's glory the blessings he had given. 2d. They receive gracious promises. Ye have been faithful over a little, I will set you over much. These promises refer not only to a future glory, but to an increase of God's grace and mercy here; for the more faithfully a man improves what God has already given him, the more he shall have from his gracious Master: for he giveth more grace, till he fills the faithful soul with his own fulness. 3d. They receive glory. Enter into the joy of your Lord. As ye were partakers of my nature on earth, be ye sharers of my glory in heaven. The joy, the happiness wherewith I am happy, shall be your eternal portion! O, what is all we can do, all we can suffer, even the most lingering and cruel martyrdom, in comparison of this unbounded, eternal joy!

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord.

21 Then he which had received the one talent came and said, Lord, I knew thee that thou art a hard man, reaping where thou hast not sown, and gathering where thou hast not strewed:

25 And I was afraid, and went and hid thy talent in the earth: lo, there thou hast that is thine.

26 His lord answered and said unto him, Thou wicked and slothful servant, thou knowest that I reap where I sowed not, and gather where I have not strewed:

* Chap. xiii. 12; Mark iv. 25; Luke viii. 19; xix. 26;

III. Of the servant who buried his talent.

He that had received one went and digged in the earth, and hid his Lord's money, ver. 18. 1. See the ingratitude of this servant. His master gave him a talent, capable of being improved to his own present and eternal advantage; but he slights the mercy of his lord.

2. See his idleness. Rather than exert himself to improve what he has received, he goes and hides it.

3. See his gross error. He digs to hide it—puts himself to more trouble to render the mercy of God to him of none effect, than he would have had in combating and conquering the world, the devil, and the flesh.

4. See his injustice. He takes his master's money, and neither improves nor designs to improve it, even while he is living on and consuming that bounty which would have been sufficient for a faithful servant. How much of this useless lumber is to be found in the Church of Christ! But suppose the man be a preacher—what a terrible account will he have to give to God!—consuming the provision made for a faithful pastor, and so burying, or misusing his talent, as to do no good, to immortal souls!

5. Hear the absurdity of his reasoning. Lord, I knew thee that thou art a hard (or avaricious) man, reaping where thou hast not sown, &c., ver. 24. See this meaning of καλῶς proved by Kypke. The wicked excuse of this faithless servant confused itself, and condemned him. Nevertheless it is on this very model that sinners in general seek to justify themselves; and the conclusion turns always against them. I knew thee to be a hard man. How awfully deceived and deeply depraved must that person be, who not only attempts to excuse his follies, but to charge his crimes on GOD himself!

I was afraid—Why? Because thou wert an enemy to thy soul, and to thy God.—I was afraid—of what? that he would require more than he did give. How could this be! Did he not give thee the talent freely, to show thee his benevolence? And did he not suit it to thy ability, that he might show thee his wisdom, justice, and goodness, in not making thee responsible for more than thou couldst improve?

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

27 Thou oughtest therefore to have put my money to the exchangers, and then at my coming I should have received mine own with usury.

28 Take therefore the talent from him, and give it unto him which hath ten talents:

29 * For unto every one that hath, shall be given, and he shall have abundance: but from him that hath not, shall be taken away, even that which he hath.

30 And cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

John xv. 2.—7 Chap. viii. 12; xxiv. 51.

IV. Behold the awful punishment of this faithless servant.

1. He is reproached. Thou wicked and slothful servant! Wicked—in thy heart: slothful—in thy work. Thou knewest that I reap where I sowed not. Thou art condemned by thy own mouth—whose is the unemployed talent? Did I not give thee this? And did I require the improvement of two when I gave thee but one?—Thou knowest I did not.

2. He is stripped of what he possessed. Take—the talent from him. O terrible word!—Remove the candlestick from that slothful, worldly-minded Church: take away the inspirations of the Holy Spirit from that lukewarm, Christless Christian, who only lives to resist them and render them of none effect. Dispossess that base, man-pleasing minister of his ministerial gifts; let his silver become brass, and his fine gold, dross.—He loved the present world more than the eternal world, and the praise of men more than the approbation of God. Take away the talent from him!

3. He is punished with an everlasting separation from God and the glory of his power. Cast forth the unprofitable servant, ver. 30. Let him have nothing but darkness, who refused to walk in the light: let him have nothing but misery—weeping and gnashing of teeth, who has refused the happiness which God provided for him.

Reader, if the careless virgin, and the unprofitable servant, against whom no flagrant iniquity is charged be punished with an outer darkness, with a hell of fire of what sorer punishment must he be judged worthy, who is a murderer, an adulterer, a fornicator, a blasphemer, a thief, a liar, or in any respect an open violator of the laws of God! The careless virgins, and the unprofitable servants, were saints in comparison of millions, who are, notwithstanding, dreaming of an endless heaven, when fitted only for an endless hell!

Verse 27. With usury.] Σὺν τόκῳ, with its produce—not usury; for that is unlawful interest, more than the money can properly produce.

Verse 29. Unto every one that hath shall be given? See on chap. xiii. 12.

Verse 30. Weeping and gnashing of teeth.] See on

A. M. 4033. 31 ¶ When the Son of man
A. D. 29. shall come in his glory, and all the
An. Olymp. holy angels with him, then shall he CCII. 1. sit upon the throne of his glory:

32 And ^a before him shall be gathered all nations: and ^b he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats:

^a Zech. xiv. 5; chap. xvi. 27; xix. 28; Mark viii. 38; Acts i. 11; 1 Thess. iv. 16; 2 Thess. i. 7; Jude 14; Rev. i. 7. — ^b Rom. xiv. 10; 2 Cor. v. 10; Rev. xx. 12. — ^c Ezek. xx. 38; xxxiv.

chap. viii. 12, a note necessary for the illustration of this, and the foregoing parable.

Verse 31. When the Son of man shall come] This must be understood of Christ's coming at the last day, to judge mankind: though all the preceding part of the chapter may be applied also to the destruction of Jerusalem.

Holy angels] The word αγιοι is omitted by many excellent manuscripts, versions, and fathers. Mill and Bengel approve of the omission, and Griesbach has left it out of the text. It is supposed by some that our Lord will have other angels (messengers) with him in that day, besides the holy ones. The evil angels may be in attendance to take, as their prey, those who shall be found on his left hand.

The throne of his glory] That glorious throne on which his glorified human nature is seated, at the right hand of the Father.

Verse 32. All nations] Literally, all the nations—all the Gentile world; the Jews are necessarily included, but they were spoken of in a particular manner in the preceding chapter.

He shall separate them] Set each kind apart by themselves.

As a shepherd divideth, &c.] It does not appear that sheep and goats were ever penned or housed together, though they might feed in the same pasture; yet even this was not done but in separate flocks; so Virgil, Eclog. vii. v. 2.

Compulerantque greges Corydon et Thyrsis in unum; Thyrsis oves, Corydon distentas lacte CAPELLAS.

"Thyrsis and Corydon drove their flocks together: Thyrsis his sheep; and Corydon his goats, their udders distended with milk."

These two shepherds had distinct flocks, which fed in the same pasture, but separately; and they are only now driven together, for the convenience of the two shepherds, during the time of their musical contest.

Verse 33. He shall set the sheep, &c.] The right hand signifies, among the rabbins, approbation and eminence: the left hand, rejection, and disapprobation. Hence in Sohar Chadash it is said, "The right hand is given, the left also is given—to the Israelites and the Gentiles are given paradise and hell—this world, and the world to come." The right and left were emblematical of endless beatitude and endless misery among the Romans. Hence Virgil:—

Hic locus est, partes ubi se via findit in ambas,
Dextera, quæ Dilis magni sub mœnia tendit:

33 And he shall set the sheep ^{A. M. 4033.}
on his right hand, but the goats on ^{A. D. 29.}
the left. ^{An. Olymp.}
^{CCII. 1.}

34 Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, ^cinherit the kingdom ^dprepared for you from the foundation of the world:

35 ^e For I was an hungered, and ye gave 17, 20; chap. xiii. 49. — ^c Rom. viii. 17; 1 Pet. i. 4, 9; iii. 9; Rev. xxi. 7. — ^d Chap. xx. 23; Mark x. 40; 1 Cor. ii. 9; Heb. xi. 16. — ^e Isa. lviii. 7; Ezek. xviii. 7; James i. 27.

Hac iter Elysium nobis; at læva malorum
Exercent pœnas, et ad impia Tartara mittit.

Æn. vi. 540.

Here in two ample roads the way divides,
The right direct, our destined journey guides.
By Pluto's palace, to the Elysian plains;
The left to Tartarus, where bound in chains Loud howl the damn'd in everlasting pains. PITT.

Of the good and faithful servants he approves, and therefore exalts them to his glory; of the slothful and wicked he disapproves, and casts them into hell.

SHEEP, which have ever been considered as the emblems of mildness, simplicity, patience, and usefulness, represent here the genuine disciples of Christ.

GOATS, which are naturally quarrelsome, lascivious, and excessively ill-scented, were considered as the symbols of riotous, profane, and impure men. They here represent all who have lived and died in their sins. See Ezek. xxxiv. 17, and Zech. x. 3.

Verse 34. Ye blessed of my Father] This is the king's address to his followers; and contains the reason why they were found in the practice of all righteousness, and were now brought to this state of glory—they were blessed—came as children, and received the benediction of the Father, and became, and continued to be, members of the heavenly family.

Inherit] The inheritance is only for the children of the family—if sons, then heirs, Gal. iv. 7, but not otherwise. The sons only shall enjoy the father's estate.

Prepared for you] That is, the kingdom of glory is designed for such as you—you who have received the blessing of the Father, and were holy, harmless, undefiled, and separated from sinners.

From the foundation of the world] It was God's purpose and determination to admit none into his heaven but those who were made partakers of his holiness, Heb. xii. 14. The rabbins say, Seven things were created before the foundation of the world. 1. The law. 2. Repentance. 3. Paradise. 4. Hell. 5. The throne of God. 6. The temple; and 7. The name of the Messiah.

Verse 35. I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat] Every thing which is done to a follower of Christ, whether it be good or evil, he considers as done to himself, see ver. 40; Acts ix. 4, 5; Heb. vi. 10. Of all the fruits of the Spirit, none are mentioned here but those that spring from love, or mercy; because these give men the nearest conformity to God. Jesus had said, Blessed are the merciful, for they shall ob-

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An Olymp.
CCH. I. me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: ^fI was a stranger, and ye took me in:

36 ^gNaked, and ye clothed me: I was sick, and ye visited me: ^hI was in prison, and ye came unto me.

37 Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, and fed thee? or thirsty, and gave thee drink?

38 When saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in? or naked, and clothed thee?

^fHeb. xiii. 2; 3 John 5.—^gJames ii. 15, 16.—^h2 Tim. i. 16.
ⁱProv. xiv. 31; xix. 17; chap. x. 42; Mark ix. 41; Heb. vi. 10.

tain mercy; and he here shows how this promise shall be fulfilled. The rabbins say: "As often as a poor man presents himself at thy door, the holy blessed God stands at his right hand: if thou give him alms, know that he who stands at his right hand will give thee a reward. But if thou give him not alms, he who stands at his right hand will punish thee." Vaiyikra Rabba, s. 34, fol. 178.

A stranger, and ye took me in] Συνναγῆτε με, ye entertained me: Κυρκε has fully proved that this is the meaning of the original. Literally, συνναγῆτε signifies to gather together. Strangers are sometimes so destitute as to be ready to perish for lack of food and raiment: a supply of these things keeps their souls and bodies together, which were about to be separated through lack of the necessaries of life. The word may also allude to a provision made for a poor family, which were scattered abroad, perhaps begging their bread, and who by the ministry of benevolent people are collected, relieved, and put in a way of getting their bread. O blessed work! to be the instruments of preserving human life, and bringing comfort and peace into the habitations of the wretched!

While writing this, (Nov. 13, 1798,) I hear the bells loudly ringing in commemoration of the birth-day of E. Colson, Esq., a native of this city, (Bristol,) who spent a long life and an immense fortune in relieving the miseries of the distressed. His works still praise him in the gates; his name is revered, and his birth-day held sacred, among the inhabitants. Who has heard the bells ring in commemoration of the birth of any deceased hero or king? Of so much more value, in the sight even of the multitude, is a life of public usefulness than one of worldly glory or secular state. But how high must such a person rank in the sight of God, who, when Christ in his representatives was hungry, gave him food; when thirsty, gave him drink; when naked clothed him; when sick and in prison, visited him! Thou blessed of my Father! come. Thou hast been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, and now thou shalt eternally enjoy the true riches.

The Supreme God is represented in the Bhagrat Geeta as addressing mankind, when he had just formed them, thus: "Those who dress their meat but for themselves, eat the bread of sin." Geeta, p. 46.

Verse 36. I was sick, and ye visited me] Relieving the strangers, and visiting the sick, were in high esti-39 Or when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee? A. M. 4033.

A. D. 29.
An Olymp.
CCH. I.

40 And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, ⁱInasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.

41 Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, ^kDepart from me, ye cursed, ^linto everlasting fire, prepared for ^mthe devil and his angels:

^kPsa. vi. 8; chap. vii. 23; Luke xiii. 27.—^lChap. xiii. 40, 42.
^m2 Pet. ii. 4; Jude 6.

mation among the Jews. One of their sayings on this head is worthy of notice: "He who neglects to visit the sick is like him who has shed blood." That is, as he has neglected, when it was in his power, to preserve life, he is as guilty in the sight of the Lord as he is who has committed murder. See Kypke in loco.

Verse 37. Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, &c.] This barbarous expression, an hungered, should be banished out of the text, wheresoever it occurs, and the simple word hungry substituted for it. Whatever is done for Christ's sake, is done through Christ's grace; and he who does the work attributes to Jesus both the will and the power by which the work was done, and seeks and expects the kingdom of heaven not as a reward, but as a gift of pure unmerited mercy. Yet, while workers together with his grace, God attributes to them that which they do through his influence, as if they had done it independently of him. God has a right to form what estimate he pleases of the works wrought through himself: but man is never safe except when he attributes all to his Maker.

Verse 40. Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren] The meanest follower of Christ is acknowledged by him as his brother! What infinite condescension! Those, whom many would scorn to set with the dogs of their flock, are brothers and sisters of the blessed Jesus, and shall soon be set among the princes of his people.

Verse 41. Depart from me, ye cursed] Or, Ye cursed! depart.—These words are the address of the king to the sinners; and contain the reason why they are to be separated from blessedness: Ye are cursed, because ye have sinned, and would not come unto me that ye might have life.—No work of piety has proceeded from your hand, because the carnal mind, which is enmity against me, reigned in your heart; and ye would not have me to reign over you. Depart! this includes what some have termed the punishment of loss or privation. Ye cannot, ye shall not be united to me—Depart! O terrible word! and yet a worse is to come.

Into everlasting fire] This is the punishment of sense. Ye shall not only be separated from me, but ye shall be tormented, awfully, everlastingly tormented in that place of separation.

Prepared for the devil and his angels] The devil and his angels sinned before the creation of the world,

A. M. 4033. 42 For I was an hungered, and
A. D. 29. ye gave me no meat : I was thirsty,
An. Olymp. and ye gave me no drink :
CCII. 1.

43 I was a stranger, and ye took me not in : naked, and ye clothed me not : sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not.

44 Then shall they also answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, or athirst, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in and the place of torment was then prepared for them : it never was designed for human souls ; but as the wicked are partakers with the devil and his angels in their iniquities, in their rebellion against God, so it is right that they should be sharers with them in their punishment. We see here, plainly, why sinners are destroyed, not because there was no salvation for them, but because they neglected to receive good, and do good. As they received not the Christ who was offered to them, so they could not do the work of righteousness which was required of them. They are cursed, because they refused to be blessed ; and they are damned, because they refused to be saved.

^a Prov. xiv. 31 ; xvii. 5 ; Zech. ii. 8 ; Acts ix. 5.

Verse 42. I was an hungered, and ye gave me no meat] I put it in your power to do good, and ye would not. A variety of occasions offered themselves to you, but ye neglected them all, so that my blessings in your hands, not being improved, according to my order, became a curse to you.

Verse 43. I was a stranger] If men were sure that Jesus Christ was actually somewhere in the land, in great personal distress, hungry, thirsty, naked, and confined, they would doubtless run unto and relieve him. Now Christ assures us that a man who is hungry, thirsty, naked, &c., is his representative, and that whatever we do to such a one he will consider as done to himself ; yet this testimony of Christ is not regarded ! Well, he will be just when he judges, and righteous when he punishes.

Verse 44. Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, &c.] It is want of faith which in general produces hard-heartedness to the poor. The man who only sees with eyes of flesh is never likely to discover Christ in the person of a man destitute of the necessities of life. Some pretend not to know the distressed, because they have no desire to relieve them ; but we find that this ignorance will not avail them at the bar of God.

Verse 46. And these shall go away into everlasting punishment] No appeal, no remedy, to all eternity ! No end to the punishment of those whose final impenitence manifests in them an eternal will and desire to sin. By dying in a settled opposition to God, they cast themselves into a necessity of continuing in an eternal aversion from him.

But some are of opinion that this punishment shall have an end : this is as likely as that the glory of the righteous shall have an end : for the same word is used to express the duration of the punishment, κολασιν αἰωνιον, as is used to express the duration of the state of glory : ζωην αἰωνιον. I have seen the best things prison, and did not minister unto thee ?

45 Then shall he answer them, saying, Verily I say unto you, ^a Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me.

46 And ^o these shall go away into everlasting punishment : but the righteous into life eternal.

^o Dan. xii. 2 ; John v. 29 ; Rom. ii. 7, &c.

that have been written in favour of the final redemption of damned spirits ; but I never saw an answer to the argument against that doctrine, drawn from this verse, but what sound learning and criticism should be ashamed to acknowledge. The original word αἰων is certainly to be taken here in its proper grammatical sense, continued being, αἰων, NEVER ENDING. Some have gone a middle way, and think that the wicked shall be annihilated. This, I think, is contrary to the text ; if they go into punishment, they continue to exist ; for that which ceases to be, ceases to suffer. See the note on Gen. xxi. 33, where the whole subject is explained.

A very good improvement of the parable of the wise and foolish virgins is made by Salvian, a very pious writer of the fifth century, (Epist. ad. Eccles. Cath. lib. ii.) the substance of which, in Mr. Bulkley's translation, is as follows :—

Ego unum scia, &c. “ One thing I know, that the lamps of the foolish virgins are said to have gone out for want of the oil of good works ; but thou, whoever thou art, thinkest that thou hast oil in abundance, and so did they ; for, if they had not believed themselves to have had it, they would have provided themselves with it ; for since afterwards, as the Lord says, they would gladly have borrowed, and sought it so eagerly, no doubt they would have done so before, had they not been deceived by the confidence of having it. Thou thinkest thyself wise, and these did not imagine themselves to be foolish : thou thinkest that thy lamp has light, and they lost their light because they thought they should have it. For why did they prepare their lamps if they did not think they should be lighted ? In a word, their lamps, I suppose, must have afforded some degree of light ; for since we read of their being afraid that their lamps should go out, they certainly had something which they feared would be extinguished. Nor was it a groundless fear ; their lamps did go out, and that pure light of virginity which appeared profited them nothing, for want of a supply of oil. From whence we understand that what is but a little, is in a manner nothing. You have therefore need of a lamp plentifully filled, that your light may be lasting. And if those which we light up here for a short time so soon fail, unless copiously supplied with oil, how much must thou stand in need of that thy lamp may shine to eternity ! ”

This writer was a priest of Marseilles, in 430. He bewailed the profligacy of his times so much, and so pathetically, that he has been styled the Jeremiah of the fifth century. Were he still upon earth, he would find equal reason to deplore the wickedness and carelessness of mankind.

From what our Lord has here said, we may see that God indispensably requires of every man to bring forth good fruit; and that a fruitless tree shall be inevitably cut down, and cast into the fire. Let it be also remarked that God does not here impute to his own children the good works which Jesus Christ did for them. No! Christ's feeding the multitudes in Judea will not be imputed to them, while persons in their own neighbourhood are perishing through want, and they have wherewithal to relieve them. He gives them a power that they may glorify his name by it and have, in their own souls, the continued satisfaction which arises from succouring the distressed. Let it be farther remarked, that Christ does not say here that they have purchased the eternal life by these good deeds. No! for the power to work, and the means of working, came both from God. They first had redemption through his blood, and then his Spirit worked in them to will and to do.

They were therefore only workers together with him, and could not be said, in any sense of the word, to purchase God's glory, with his own property. But though God works in them, and by them, he does not obey for them. The works of piety and mercy they perform, under the influence and by the aid of his grace. Thus God preserves the freedom of the human soul, and secures his own glory at the same time. Let it be remarked, farther, that the punishment inflicted on the foolish virgins, the slothful servant, and the cursed who are separated from God, was not because of their personal crimes; but because they were not good, and were not useful in the world. Their lives do not appear to have been stained with crimes,—but they were not adorned with virtues. They are sent to hell because they did no good. They were not renewed in the image of God; and hence did not bring forth fruit to his glory. If these harmless people are sent to perdition, what must the end be of the wicked and profligate!

CHAPTER XXVI.

Christ predicts his being betrayed and crucified, 1, 2. The chief priests, scribes, and elders consult about his death, 3–5. A woman anoints his head at Bethany, at which the disciples are offended, but Christ vindicates her conduct, 6–13. Judas, for thirty pieces of silver, engages with the chief priests to betray him, 14–16. He eats a passover with his disciples, and assures them of his approaching death, and that one of them would betray him, 17–21. On each asking, Is it I? Christ asserts that Judas is the traitor, 22–25. Having eaten his last supper, he institutes the eucharist, to be observed in his Church as a memorial of his sacrificial death, 26–29. They sing a hymn, go to the mount of Olives, and he again announces his approaching death and resurrection, 30–32. Peter asserts his resolution to be faithful to his Master, and Christ foretells his denial and apostasy, 33–35. He goes to Gethsemane; the transactions there, 36–46. Judas comes with the high priest's mob and betrays him with a kiss, 47–50. Peter cuts off the ear of the high priest's servant; Christ discourses with the multitude, 51–55. The disciples flee, and he is led to Caiaphas, 56, 57. Peter follows at a distance, 58. They seek false witnesses, and question our Lord, who declares himself to be the Christ, 59–61. They accuse him of blasphemy, and abuse him, 65–68. Peter's denial and repentance, 69–75.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

AND it came to pass, when Jesus had finished all these sayings, he said unto his disciples,

2 ^a Ye know that after two days is the feast of the passover, and the Son of man is betrayed to be crucified.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

^a Mark xiv. 1; Luke xxii. 1;

John xiii. 1.

NOTES ON CHAP. XXVI.

Verse 1. When Jesus had finished all these sayings] He began these sayings on Mount Olivet, chap. xxiv. 1, and continued them till he entered into Bethany, whither he was going.

Verse 2. The passover] A feast instituted in Egypt, to commemorate the destroying angel's passing over the houses of the Israelites, when he slew the first-born of the Egyptians. See the whole of this business largely explained in the Notes on Exod. xii. 1–27. This feast began on the fourteenth day of the first moon, in the first month, Nisan, and it lasted only one day; but it was immediately followed by the days of unleavened bread, which were seven, so that the whole lasted eight days, and all the eight days are sometimes called the feast of the passover, and sometimes the feast or days of unleavened bread. See Luke xxii. 1–7. The three most signal benefits vouchsafed to the Israelites were, 1. The deliverance from the slavery of Egypt; to commemorate which they kept the feast of unleavened bread, and the passover. 2. The giving of the law; to commemorate which, they kept the feast of weeks. 3. Their sojourning in the wilderness, and entrance into the promised land; to commemorate which, they kept the feast of tabernacles. See these largely explained, Exod. xxiii. 14; Lev. xxiii. 2–40.

The Son of man is betrayed, (rather delivered up,) to be crucified.] With what amazing calmness and precision does our blessed Lord speak of this awful event! What a proof does he here give of his presence in so correctly predicting it; and of his love in so cheerfully undergoing it! Having instructed his disciples and the Jews by his discourses, edified them by his example, convinced them by his miracles, he now prepares to redeem them by his blood! These two verses have

A. M. 4033. 3 ¶^b Then assembled together
A. D. 29. the chief priests, and the scribes,
An. Olymp. and the elders of the people, unto CCII. 1. the palace of the high priest, who was called Caiaphas,

4 And consulted that they might take Jesus by subtilty, and kill him.

5 But they said, Not on the feast day, lest there be an uproar among the people.

6 ¶^c Now when Jesus was in ^d Bethany, in the house of Simon the leper,

7 There came unto him a woman having an

^a Psal. ii. 2; John xi. 47; Acts iv. 25, &c.—^c Mark xiv. 3; John xi. 1, 2; xii. 3.

no proper connection with this chapter, and should be joined to the preceding.

Verse 3. Then assembled together the chief priests] That is, during the two days that preceded the passover.

The high priest, who was called Caiaphas] Caiaphas succeeded Simon, son of Camith, about A. D. 16, or, as Calmet thinks, 25. He married the daughter of Annas, who was joined with him in the priesthood. About two years after our Lord's crucifixion, Caiaphas and Pilate were both deposed by VITELLIVS, then governor of Syria, and afterwards emperor. Caiaphas, unable to bear this disgrace, and the stings of his conscience for the murder of Christ, killed himself about A. D. 35. See Joseph. Ant. b. xviii. c. 2—4.

Verse 4. And consulted that they might take Jesus by subtilty] The providence of God frustrated their artful machinations; and that event which they wished to conduct with the greatest privacy and silence was transacted with all possible celebrity, amidst the thousands who resorted to Jerusalem, at this season, for the keeping of the passover. It was, doubtless, of the very first importance that the crucifixion of Christ, which was preparatory to the most essential achievement of Christianity, viz. his resurrection from the grave, should be exhibited before many witnesses, and in the most open manner, that infidelity might not attempt, in future, to invalidate the evidences of the Christian religion, by alleging that these things were done in a corner. See WAKEFIELD in loco.

Verse 5. Not on the feast day, lest there be an uproar] It was usual for the Jews to punish criminals at the public festivals; but in this case they were afraid of an insurrection, as our Lord had become very popular. The providence of God directed it thus, for the reason given in the preceding note.

He who observes a festival on motives purely human violates it in his heart, and is a hypocrite before God. It is likely they feared the Galileans, as being the countrymen of our Lord, more than they feared the people of Jerusalem.

Verse 6. In Bethany] For a solution of the difficulties in this verse, about the time of the anointing, see the observations at the end of this chapter.

Simon the LEPER] This was probably no more than a surname, as Simon the CANAANITE, chap. x. 4, and Barsabas JUSTUS, Acts i. 23, and several others. Yet

A. M. 4033. alabaster box of very precious oint-
A. D. 29. ment, and poured it on his head as An. Olymp. he sat at meat.
CCII. 1.

8 ° But when his disciples saw it, they had indignation, saying, To what purpose is this waste?

9 For this ointment might have been sold for much, and given to the poor.

10 When Jesus understood it, he said unto them, Why trouble ye the woman? for she hath wrought a good work upon me.

11 † For ye have the poor always with it might have been some person that Christ had healed of this disease. See chap. xi. 5.

^d Chap. xxi. 17.—^e John xii. 4.—^f Deut. xv. 11; John xii. 8.

Verse 7. There came unto him a woman] There is much contention among commentators about the transaction mentioned here, and in John xii. 14; some supposing them to be different, others to be the same. Bishop Newcome's view of the subject I have placed at the end of the chapter.

Some think that the woman mentioned here was Mary, the sister of Lazarus; others Mary Magdalene; but against the former opinion it is argued that it is not likely, had this been Mary the sister of Lazarus, that Matthew and Mark would have suppressed her name. Besides, say they, we should not confound the repast which is mentioned here, with that mentioned by John, chap. xii. 3. This one was made only two days before the passover, and that one six days before: the one was made at the house of Simon the leper, the other at the house of Lazarus, John xii. 1, 2. At this, the woman poured the oil on the head of Christ; at the other, Mary anointed Christ's feet with it. See on Mark xiv. 3, and see the notes at the end of this chapter.

Verse 8. His disciples] One of them, viz. Judas. This mode of speaking was common among the Hebrews. So, chap. xxvii. 44, the thieves also, i. e. one of them. So, chap. xxviii. 17, some doubted, i. e. one, Thomas. See also Gen. viii. 4; Judg. xii. 7; Neh. vi. 7, &c. By a figure called among rhetoricians enallagè, the plural is put for the singular; it is, however, possible that Judas, who made the objection, was followed in the sentiment by the rest of the disciples.

Verse 9. And given to the poor.] How often does charity serve as a cloak for covetousness! God is sometimes robbed of his right under the pretence of devoting what is withheld to some charitable purpose, to which there was no intention ever to give it.

Verse 10. Why trouble ye the woman?] Or, Why do ye put the woman to pain? See this sense of πονοῦν παρῆεν, established by Kypke in loco. A generous mind is ever pained when it is denied the opportunity of doing good, or when its proffered kindness is refused.

Verse 11. Ye have the poor always with you] And, consequently, have the opportunity of doing them good

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1. you; but ^ε me ye have not always.

12 For in that she hath poured this ointment on my body, she did it for my burial.

13 Verily I say unto you, Wheresoever this Gospel shall be preached in the whole world, there shall also this, that this woman hath done, be told for a memorial of her.

14 ¶ ^h Then one of the twelve, called ⁱ Judas Iscariot, went unto the chief priests, ^ε See ch. xviii. 20; xxviii. 20; John xiii. 33; xiv. 19; xvi. 5, 28; xvii. 11.—^h Mark xiv. 10; Luke xxii. 3; John xiii. 2, 30.

at any time; but me ye have not always; my bodily presence is about to be removed from you for ever. The woman, under a presentiment of my death is preparing me for my burial.

Verse 12. She did it for my burial.] Or, She hath done it to embalm me—εταφιασαι με. The Septuagint use εταφιασας for the person whose office it was to embalm, Gen. l. 2, and εταφιαζω for the Hebrew בטח which signifies to prepare with spices, or aromatics, ver. 3. Our Lord took this opportunity to tell them, once more, that he was shortly to die.

Verse 13. Wheresoever this Gospel shall be preached] Another remarkable proof of the prescience of Christ. Such a matter as this, humanly speaking, depended on mere fortuitous circumstances, yet so has God disposed matters, that the thing has continued, hitherto, as firm and regular as the ordinances of heaven.

For a memorial of her.] As embalming preserves the body from corruption, and she has done this good work to embalm and preserve this body, so will I order every thing concerning this transaction to be carefully recorded, to preserve her memory to the latest ages. The actions which the world blames, through the spirit of envy, covetousness, or malice, God takes delight to distinguish and record.

Verse 14. Then—Judas] After this supper at Bethany, Judas returned to Jerusalem, and made his contract with the chief priests.

Verse 15. Thirty pieces of silver.] Τριακοντα αργυρια, thirty silverlings; but στατρες, staters, is the reading of the Codex Bezae, three copies of the Itala, Eusebius, and Origen sometimes; and αταρπας αργυριου, silver staters, is the reading of the famous Basil MS. No. 1, in Griesbach, and one copy of the Itala.

A stater was the same as the shekel, and worth about 3s. English money, according to Dean Prideaux; a goodly price for the Saviour of the world! Thirty staters, about 4l. 10s. the common price for the meanest slave! See Exod. xxi. 32. The rabbins say, thirty כליץ selain of pure silver was the standard price for a slave, whether good or bad, male or female. See tract Erachin, fol. 11, and Shekalim, cap. 1. Each selai weighed 384 barley-corns; the same number was contained in a shekel; and therefore the shekel and the selai were the same. See the notes on Gen. xx 16, and Exod. xxxviii. 24.

Verse 16. He sought opportunity] Ευκαιριαν, a 15 And said unto them, ^k What will ye give me, and I will deliver him unto you? And they covenanted with him for thirty pieces of silver.

16 And from that time he sought opportunity to betray him.

17 ¶ ^l Now the first day of the feast of unleavened bread, the disciples came to Jesus, saying unto him, Where wilt thou that we prepare for thee to eat the passover?

^l Chap. x. 4—^k Zech. xi. 12; chap. xxvii. 3.—^l Exod. xii. 6, 18; Mark xiv. 12; Luke xxii. 7.

convenient or fit opportunity. Men seldom leave a crime imperfect: when once sin is conceived, it meets, in general, with few obstacles, till it brings forth death. How deceitful, how deeply damning, is the love of money! Well might a heathen exclaim, while contemplating the grave of a person who was murdered for the sake of his wealth—

Quid non mortalia pectora cogis
AURI SACRA FAMES? VIRG. Æn. iii. 56

“O! cursed lust of gold! what wilt thou not compel the human heart to perpetrate?” Judas is deservedly considered as one of the most infamous of men, his conduct base beyond description, and his motives vile. But how many, since his time, have walked in the same way! How many, for the sake of worldly wealth, have renounced the religion of their Lord and Master, and sold Jesus, and their interest in heaven, for a short-lived portion of secular good! From John xii. 6, we learn that Judas, who was treasurer to our Lord and his disciples, (for he carried the bag,) was a thief, and frequently purloined a portion of what was given for the support of this holy family. Being disappointed of the prey he hoped to have from the sale of the precious ointment, ver. 9, he sold his Master to make up the sum. A thorough Jew!

Verse 17. Now the first day of the feast of unleavened bread] As the feast of unleavened bread did not begin till the day after the passover, the fifteenth day of the month, Lev. xviii. 5, 6; Num. xxviii. 16, 17, this could not have been, properly, the first day of that feast; but as the Jews began to eat unleavened bread on the fourteenth, Exod. xii. 18, this day was often termed the first of unleavened bread. The evangelists use it in this sense, and call even the paschal day by this name. See Mark xiv. 12; Luke xxii. 7.

Where wilt thou that we prepare] How astonishing is this, that HE who created all things, whether visible or invisible, and by whom all things were upheld, should so empty himself as not to be proprietor of a single house in his whole creation, to eat the last passover with his disciples! This is certainly a mystery, and so, less or more is every thing that God does. But how inveterate and destructive must the nature of sin be, when such emptying and humiliation were necessary to its destruction! It is worthy of note what the Talmudists say, that the inhabitants of Jerusalem

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCH. 1. 18 And he said, ^m Go into the city to such a man, and say unto him, The Master saith, My time is at hand; I will keep the passover at thy house with my disciples.

19 And the disciples did as Jesus had appointed them; and they made ready the passover.

20 ⁿ Now when the even was come, he sat down with the twelve.

^m Luke xxii. 10-12; Job xiv. 14; Heb. xi. 28; 1 Cor. xi. 23.

did not let out their houses to those who came to the annual feasts; but afforded all accommodations of this kind gratis. A man might therefore go and request the use of any room, on such an occasion, which was as yet unoccupied. The earthen jug, and the skin of the sacrifice, were left with the host. See Lightfoot, vol. ii. p. 21.

Verse 18. Go—to such a man] Tov δεῖνα. It is probable that this means some person with whom Christ was well acquainted, and who was known to the disciples. Grotius observes that the Greeks use this form when they mean some particular person who is so well known that there is no need to specify him by name. The circumstances are more particularly marked in Luke xxii. 8, &c.

My time is at hand] That is, the time of my crucifixion. Kypke has largely shown that καιρος is often used among the Greeks for affliction and calamity. It might be rendered here, the time of my crucifixion is at hand.

Verse 19. And the disciples did] The disciples that were sent on this errand were Peter and John. See Luke xxii. 9.

They made ready the passover] That is, they provided the lamb, &c., which were appointed by the law for this solemnity. Mr. Wakefield justly observes, "that the Jews considered the passover as a sacrificial rite; Josephus calls it θυσίαν, a sacrifice; and Trypho, in Justin Martyr, speaks of προβάτον του πασχα θειν, SACRIFICING the paschal lamb. But what comes nearer to the point is this, that Maimonides: one of the most eminent of the Jewish rabbins, has a particular treatise on the paschal sacrifice; and throughout that piece, speaks of the lamb as a victim, and of the solemnity itself as a sacrifice. And R. Bechai, in his commentary on Lev. ii. 11, says that the paschal sacrifice was of a piacular nature, in order to expiate the guilt contracted by the idolatrous practices of the Israelites in Egypt." It was highly necessary that this should be considered as an expiatory sacrifice, as it typified that Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world. For much more on this important subject than can, with propriety, be introduced into these notes, see a Discourse on the Eucharist, lately published by the author of this work.

Verse 20. Now when the even was come, he sat down with the twelve.] It is a common opinion that our Lord ate the passover some hours before the Jews ate it; for the Jews, according to custom, ate theirs at the end of the fourteenth day, but Christ ate his the

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCH. 1. 21 And as they did eat, he said, Verily I say unto you, that one of you shall betray me.

22 And they were exceeding sorrowful, and began every one of them to say unto him, Lord, is it I?

23 And he answered and said, ^o He that dippeth his hand with me in the dish, the same shall betray me.

^m Mark xiv. 17-21; Luke xxii. 14; John xiii. 21.—^o Psa. xli. 9; Luke xxii. 21; John xiii. 18.

preceding even, which was the beginning of the same sixth day, or Friday; the Jews begin their day at sun-setting, we at midnight. Thus Christ ate the passover on the same day with the Jews, but not on the same hour. Christ kept this passover the beginning of the fourteenth day, the precise day and hour in which the Jews had eaten their first passover in Egypt. See Exod. xii. 6-12. And in the same part of the same day in which the Jews had sacrificed their first paschal lamb, viz. between the two evenings, about the ninth hour, or 3 o'clock, Jesus Christ our passover was sacrificed for us: for it was at this hour that he yielded up his last breath; and then it was that, the sacrifice being completed, Jesus said, IT IS FINISHED. See Exod. xii. 6, &c., and Deut. xvi. 6, &c. See on John xviii. 28, and the Treatise on the Eucharist, referred to on ver. 19; and see the notes on the 26th and following verses.

Verse 21. One of you shall betray me.] Or, will deliver me up. Judas had already betrayed him, ver. 15, and he was now about to deliver him into the hands of the chief priests, according to the agreement he had made with them.

Verse 22. They were exceeding sorrowful] That is, the eleven who were innocent; and the hypocritical traitor, Judas, endeavoured to put on the appearance of sorrow. Strange! Did he not know that Christ knew the secrets of his soul? Or had his love of money so far blinded him, as to render him incapable of discerning even this, with which he had been before so well acquainted?

Verse 23. He that dippeth his hand] As the Jews ate the passover a whole family together, it was not convenient for them all to dip their bread in the same dish; they therefore had several little dishes or plates, in which was the juice of the bitter herbs, mentioned Exod. xii. 8, on different parts of the table: and those who were nigh one of these, dipped their bread in it. As Judas is represented as dipping in the same dish with Christ, it shows that he was either near or opposite to him. If this man's heart had not been hardened, and his conscience seared beyond all precedent, by the deceitfulness of his sin, would he have showed his face in this sacred assembly, or have thus put the seal to his own perdition, by eating of this sacrificial lamb? Is it possible that he could feel no compunction? Alas! having delivered himself up into the hands of the devil, he was capable of delivering up his Master into the hands of the chief priests; and thus, when men are completely hardened by the deceitful-

A. M. 4033.

A. D. 29.

An. Olymp.

CCII. 1.

24 The Son of man goeth, ^{as it} is written of him: but ^{two} unto that man by whom the Son of man is betrayed! it had been good for that man if he had not been born.

25 Then Judas, which betrayed him, an [¶] Psa. xxii.; Isa. liii.; Dan. ix. 26; Mark ix. 12; Luke xxiv. 25, 26, 46; Acts xvii. 2, 3; xxvi. 22, 23; 1 Cor. xv. 3.—[¶] John xvii. 12.

ness of sin, they can outwardly perform the most solemn acts of devotion, without feeling any sort of inward concern about the matter.

Verse 24. The Son of man goeth] That is, is about to die. Going, going away, departing, &c., are frequently used in the best Greek and Latin writers, for death, or dying. The same words are often used in the Scriptures in the same sense.

It had been good for that man] Can this be said of any sinner, in the common sense in which it is understood, if there be any redemption from hell's torments? If a sinner should suffer millions of millions of years in them, and get out at last to the enjoyment of heaven, then it was well for him that he had been born, for still he has an eternity of blessedness before him. Can the doctrine of the non-eternity of hell's torments stand in the presence of this saying! Or can the doctrine of the annihilation of the wicked consist with this declaration! It would have been well for that man if he had never been born! Then he must be in some state of conscious existence, as non-existence is said to be better than that state in which he is now found. It was common for the Jews to say of any flagrant transgressor, It would have been better for him had he never been born. See several examples in Schoettgen. See the case of Judas argued at the end of Acts i.

Verse 25. Judas—said, Master, is it I?] What excessive impudence! He knew, in his conscience, that he had already betrayed his Master, and was waiting now for the servants of the chief priests, that he might deliver him into their hands; and yet he says, (hoping that he had transacted his business so privately that it had not yet transpired,) Master, is it I?

swered and said, Master, is it I? A. M. 4033

He said unto him, Thou hast said. A. D. 29.

An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

26 ¶ And as they were eating, Jesus took bread, and ^{he} blessed it, and brake it, and gave it to the disciples, and said, Take, eat; ^{this} is my body.

[¶] Mark xiv. 22; Luke xxii. 19.—[¶] 1 Cor. xi. 23, 24, 25. [¶] Many Greek copies [upward of 100] have, gave thanks; see Mark vi. 41.—[¶] 1 Cor. x. 16.

It is worthy of remark, that each of the other disciples said κύριε, ὁ κύριός ἐστις, Lord, is it I? But Judas dares not, or will not, use this august title, but simply says πατριε, ὁ πατὴρ ἐστις, Teacher, is it I?

Thou hast said.] עַל עֵינֶיךָ, אוֹ אֲמַרְתָּנוּן amaritun, "Ye have said," was a common term of expression for Yes. It is so. "When the Zipporenses inquired whether Rabbi Judas was dead? the son of Kaphra answered, Ye have said," i. e. He is dead. See Schoettgen. Hor. Heb. p. 225.

Verse 26. Jesus took bread] This is the first institution of what is termed the LORD'S SUPPER. To every part of this ceremony, as here mentioned, the utmost attention should be paid.

To do this, in the most effectual manner, I think it necessary to set down the text of the three evangelists who have transmitted the whole account, collated with that part of St. Paul's First Epistle to the Corinthians which speaks of the same subject, and which he assures us, he received by Divine revelation. It may seem strange that, although John (chap. xiii. 1-38) mentions all the circumstances preceding the holy supper, and, from chap. xiv. 1-36, the circumstances which succeeded the breaking of the bread, and in chapters xv., xvi., and xvii., the discourse which followed the administration of the cup; yet he takes no notice of the Divine institution at all. This is generally accounted for on his knowledge of what the other three evangelists had written; and on his conviction that their relation was true, and needed no additional confirmation, as the matter was amply established by the conjoint testimony of three such respectable witnesses.

| MATT. xxvi. | MARK xiv. | LUKE xxii. | 1 COR. xi. |
|--|---|--|--|
| V. 26. And as they were eating, Jesus took bread and blessed it (εὐλογησας and blessed God) and brake it, and gave it to the disciples, and said, Take, eat, this is my body. | V. 22. And as they did eat, Jesus took bread and blessed (εὐλογησας , blessed God) and brake it, and gave unto them, and said, Take, eat, this is my body. | V. 19. And he took bread and gave thanks, (ευχαρισησας , i. e. to God), and brake it, and gave unto them, saying: This is my body, which is given for you: This do in remembrance of me. | V. 23. The Lord Jesus the same night in which he was betrayed, took bread; V. 24. And when he had given thanks (καὶ ευχαρισησας , i. e. to God) he brake it, and said, Take, eat, this is my body, which is broken for you: this do in remembrance of me. |

After giving the bread, the discourse related, John xiv. 1-31, inclusive, is supposed by Bishop Newcome to have been delivered by our Lord, for the comfort and support of his disciples under their present and approaching trials.

| MATT. xxvi. | MARK xiv. | LUKE xvii. | 1 COR. xi. |
|---|--|---|--|
| V. 27. And he took the cup, and gave thanks, (ευχαριστας), and gave it to them, saying: Drink ye all of it. | V. 23. And he took the cup; and when he had given thanks, (ευχαριστας) he gave it to them; and they all drank of it. | V. 20. Likewise also the cup, after supper, saying: | V. 25. After the same manner also, he took the cup, when he had supped, saying: |
| V. 28. For this is my blood of the New Testament, which is shed for many or the remission of sins. | V. 24. And he said unto them, This is my blood of the New Testament, which is shed for many. | This cup is the New Testament in my blood, which is shed for you. | This cup is the New Testament in my blood: this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me |
| V. 29. But I say unto you, I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom. | V. 25. Verily I say unto you, I will drink no more of the fruit of the vine, until that day that I drink it new in the kingdom of God. | | |

After this, our Lord resumes that discourse which is found in the 15th, 16th, and 17th chapters of John, beginning with the last verse of chap. xiv., Arise, let us go hence. Then succeed the following words, which conclude the whole ceremony.

| | | | JOHN xiv. |
|---|---|--|--|
| V. 30. And when they had sung a hymn, they went out into the Mount of Olives. | V. 26. And when they had sung a hymn, they went out into the Mount of Olives. | V. 39. And he came out, and went as he was wont to the Mount of Olives. And his disciples also followed him. | V. 1. When Jesus had spoken these words, he went forth with his disciples over the brook Kedron. |

From the preceding harmonized view of this important transaction, as described by three EVANGELISTS and one APOSTLE, we see the first institution, nature, and design of what has been since called THE LORD'S SUPPER. To every circumstance, as set down here, and the mode of expression by which such circumstances are described, we should pay the deepest attention.

Verse 26. As they were eating] Either an ordinary supper, or the paschal lamb, as some think. See the observations at the end of this chapter.

Jesus took bread] Of what kind? Unleavened bread, certainly, because there was no other kind to be had in all Judea at this time; for this was the first day of unleavened bread, (ver. 17,) i. e. the 14th of the month Nisan, when the Jews, according to the command of God, (Exod. xii. 15-20; xxiii. 15; and xxxiv. 25,) were to purge away all leaven from their houses; for he who sacrificed the passover, having leaven in his dwelling, was considered to be such a transgressor of the Divine law as could no longer be tolerated among the people of God; and therefore was to be cut off from the congregation of Israel. Leo of Moœna, who has written a very sensible treatise on the customs of the Jews, observes, "That so strictly do some of the Jews observe the precept concerning the removal of all leaven from their houses, during the celebration of the paschal solemnity, that they either provide vessels entirely new for baking, or else have a set for the purpose, which are dedicated solely to the service of the passover, and never brought out on any other occasion."

To this divinely instituted custom of removing all leaven previously to the paschal solemnity, St. Paul evidently alludes, 1 Cor. v. 6, 7, 8. Know ye not that a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump? Purge out therefore the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump, as ye are unleavened. For even Christ, our passover, is sacrificed for us; therefore let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the UNLEAVENED bread of sincerity and truth.

Now, if any respect should be paid to the primitive institution, in the celebration of this Divine ordinance, then, unleavened, unyeasted bread should be used. In every sign, or type, the thing signifying or pointing out that which is beyond itself should either have certain properties, or be accompanied with certain circumstances, as expressive as possible of the thing signified. Bread, simply considered in itself, may be an emblem apt enough of the body of our Lord Jesus, which was given for us; but the design of God was evidently that it should not only point out this, but also the disposition required in those who should celebrate both the antetype and the type; and this the apostle explains to be sincerity and truth, the reverse of malice and wickedness. The very taste of the bread was instructive: it pointed out to every communicant, that he who came to the table of God with malice or ill-will against any soul of man, or with wickedness, a profligate or sinful life, might expect to eat and drink judgment to himself, as not discerning that the Lord's body was sacrificed for this very purpose, that all sin might be destroyed; and that sincerity, ειλικρινεια, such purity as the clearest light can discern no stain in, might be diffused through the whole soul; and that truth, the law of righteousness and true holiness, might regulate and guide all the actions of life. Had the bread used on these occasions been of the common kind, it would have been perfectly unfit, or improper, to have communicated these uncommon significations; and, as it was seldom used, its rare occurrence would make the emblematical representation more deeply impressive; and the sign, and the thing signified, have their due correspondence and influence.

These circumstances considered, will it not appear that the use of common bread in the sacrament of the Lord's Supper is highly improper! He who can say, "This is a matter of no importance," may say with equal propriety, the bread itself is of no importance; and another may say, the wine is of no importance; and a third may say, "neither the bread nor wine is any thing, but as they lead to spiritual references; and, the spiritual reference being once understood, the signs are useless." Thus we may, through affected spirituality, refine away the whole ordinance of God; and, with the letter and form of religion, abolish religion itself. Many have already acted in this way, not only to their loss, but to their ruin, by showing how profoundly wise they are above what is written. Let those, therefore, who consider that man shall live by every word which proceeds from the mouth of God, and who are conscientiously solicitous that each Divine institution be not only preserved, but observed in all its original integrity, attend to this circumstance. The Lutheran Church makes use of unleavened bread to the present day.

And blessed it] Both St. Matthew and St. Mark use the word εὐλογησας, blessed, instead of εὐχαριστῆσας, gave thanks, which is the word used by St. Luke and St. Paul. But instead of εὐλογησας, blessed, εὐχαριστῆσας, gave thanks, is the reading of ten MSS. in uncial characters, of the Dublin Codex rescriptus, published by Dr. Barrett, and of more than one hundred others, of the greatest respectability. This is the reading also of the Syriac and Arabic, and is confirmed by several of the primitive fathers. The terms, in this case, are nearly of the same import, as both blessing and giving thanks were used on these occasions. But what was it that our Lord blessed? Not the bread, though many think the contrary, being deceived by the word it, which is improperly supplied in our version. In all the four places referred to above, whether the word blessed or gave thanks is used, it refers not to the bread, but to God, the dispenser of every good. Our Lord here conforms himself to that constant Jewish custom, viz. of acknowledging God as the author of every good and perfect gift, by giving thanks on taking the bread and taking the cup at their ordinary meals. For every Jew was forbidden to eat, drink, or use any of God's creatures without rendering him thanks; and he who acted contrary to this command was considered as a person who was guilty of sacrilege. From this custom we have derived the decent and laudable one of saying grace (gratas thanks) before and after meat. The Jewish form of blessing, probably that which our Lord used on this occasion, none of my readers will be displeased to find here, though it has been mentioned once before. On taking the bread they say:—ברוך אתה אלהינו מלך העולם הכינא לחם כן הארץ Baruch atta Elohinoo, Melech, ha'alam, ha motse Lechem min haarets.

Blessed be thou, our God, King of the universe, who bringest forth bread out of the earth!

Likewise, on taking the cup, they say:—

ברוך אתה מלך העולם בורא פרי הגפן: Baruch Elohinoo, Melech, ha'alam, Boré perey haggephen.

Blessed be our God, the King of the universe, the Creator of the fruit of the vine!

The Mohammedans copy their example, constantly saying before and after meat:—

بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم

Bismillahi arahmani arrahemnu.

In the name of God, the most merciful, the most compassionate.

No blessing, therefore, of the elements is here intended; they were already blessed, in being sent as a gift of mercy from the bountiful Lord; but God the sender is blessed, because of the liberal provision he has made for his worthless creatures. Blessing and touching the bread are merely Popish ceremonies, unauthorized either by Scripture or the practice of the pure Church of God; necessary of course to those who pretend to transmute, by a kind of spiritual incantation, the bread and wine into the real body and blood of Jesus Christ; a measure the grossest in folly, and most stupid in nonsense, to which God in judgment ever abandoned the fallen spirit of man.

And brake it] We often read in the Scriptures of breaking bread, but never of cutting it. The Jewish people had nothing similar to our high-raised loaf: their bread was made broad and thin, and was consequently very brittle, and, to divide it, there was no need of a knife.

The breaking of the bread I consider essential to the proper performance of this solemn and significant ceremony: because this act was designed by our Lord to shadow forth the wounding, piercing, and breaking of his body upon the cross; and, as all this was essentially necessary to the making a full atonement for the sin of the world, so it is of vast importance that this apparently little circumstance, the breaking of the bread, should be carefully attended to, that the godly communicant may have every necessary assistance to enable him to discern the Lord's body, while engaged in this most important and Divine of all God's ordinances. But who does not see that one small cube of fermented, i. e. leavened bread, previously divided from the mass with a knife, and separated by the fingers of the minister, can never answer the end of the institution, either as to the matter of the bread, or the mode of dividing it? Man is naturally a dull and heedless creature, especially in spiritual things, and has need of the utmost assistance of his senses, in union with those expressive rites and ceremonies which the Holy Scripture, not tradition, has sanctioned, in order to enable him to arrive at spiritual things, through the medium of earthly similitudes.

And gave it to the disciples] Not only the breaking, but also the distribution, of the bread are necessary parts of this rite. In the Romish Church, the bread is not broken nor delivered to the people, that they may take and eat; but the consecrated wafer is put upon their tongue by the priest; and it is generally understood by the communicants, that they should not masticate, but swallow it whole.

"That the breaking of this bread to be distributed," says Dr. Whitby, "is a necessary part of this rite is evident, first, by the continual mention of it by St. Paul and all the evangelists, when they speak of the institution of this sacrament, which shows it to be a necessary part of it. 2dly, Christ says, Take, eat, this is my body, broken for you, 1 Cor. xi. 24. But when the elements are not broken, it can be no more said, This is my body broken for you, than where the elements are not given. 3dly, Our Lord said, Do this in remembrance of me: i. e. 'Eat this bread, broken in remembrance of my body broken on the cross:' now, where no body broken is distributed, there, nothing can be eaten in memorial of his broken body. Lastly, The apostle, by saying, The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ? sufficiently informs us that the eating of his broken body is necessary to that end, 1 Cor. x. 10. Hence it was that this rite, of distributing bread broken, continued for a thousand years, and was, as Humbertus testifies, observed in the Roman Church in the eleventh century." WHITBY in loco. At present, the opposite is as boldly practised as if the real Scriptural rite had never been observed in the Church of Christ.

This is my body.] Here it must be observed that Christ had nothing in his hands, at this time, but part of that unleavened bread which he and his disciples had been eating at supper, and therefore he could mean no more than this, viz. that the bread which he was now breaking represented his body, which, in the course of a few hours, was to be crucified for them. Common sense, unsophisticated with superstition and erroneous creeds,—and reason, unawed by the secular sword of sovereign authority, could not possibly take any other meaning than this plain, consistent, and rational one, out of these words. "But," says a false and absurd creed, "Jesus meant, when he said, Hoc est corpus meum, This is my body, and Hic est calix sanguinis mei, This is the chalice of my blood, that the bread and wine were substantially changed into his body, including flesh, blood, bones, yea, the whole Christ, in his immaculate humanity and adorable divinity!" And, for denying this, what rivers of righteous blood have been shed by state persecutions and by religious wars! Well it may be asked, "Can any man of sense believe, that, when Christ took up that bread and broke it, it was his own body which he held in his own hands, and which himself broke to pieces, and which he and his disciples ate?" He who can believe such a congeries of absurdities, cannot be said to be a volunteer in faith; for it is evident, the man can neither have faith nor reason, as to this subject.

Let it be observed, if any thing farther is necessary on this point, that the paschal lamb, is called the pass-over, because it represented the destroying angel's passing over the children of Israel, while he slew the first-born of the Egyptians; and our Lord and his disciples call this lamb the passover, several times in this chapter; by which it is demonstrably evident, that they could mean no more than that the lamb sacrificed on this occasion was a memorial of, and REPRESENTED, the means used for the preservation of the Israelite, from the blast of the destroying angel.

Besides, our Lord did not say, hoc est corpus meum. (this is my body), as he did not speak in the Latin tongue; though as much stress has been laid upon this quotation from the Vulgate as if the original of the three evangelists had been written in the Latin language. Had he spoken in Latin, following the idiom of the Vulgate, he would have said, Panis hic corpus meum significat, or, Symbolum est corporis mei:—hoc poculum sanguinem meum representat, or, symbolum est sanguinis mei:—this bread signifies my body; this cup represents my blood. But let it be observed that, in the Hebrew, Chaldee, and Chaldeo-Syriac languages, as used in the Bible, there is no term which expresses to mean, signify, denote, though both the Greek and Latin abound with them: hence the Hebrews use a figure, and say, it is, for, it signifies. So Gen. xli. 26, 27. The seven kine ARE (i. e. represent) seven years. This is (represents) the bread of affliction which our fathers ate in the land of Egypt. Dan. vii. 24. The ten horns ARE (i. e. signify) ten kings. They drank of the spiritual Rock which followed them, and the Rock was (represented) Christ. 1 Cor. x. 4. And following this Hebrew idiom, though the work is written in Greek, we find in Rev. i. 20, The seven stars ARE (represent) the angels of the seven Churches: and the seven candlesticks ARE (represent) the seven Churches. The same form of speech is used in a variety of places in the New Testament, where this sense must necessarily be given to the word. Matt. xiii. 38, 39. The field is (represents) the world: the good seed ARE (represent or signify) the children of the kingdom: the tares ARE (signify) the children of the wicked one. The enemy is (signifies) the devil: the harvest is (represents) the end of the world: the reapers ARE (i. e. signify) the angels. Luke viii. 9. What might this parable BE? Τις ΕΙΗ η παραβολη αυτη:—What does this parable SIGNIFY? John vii. 36. Τις ΕΣΤΙΝ ουτος ο λογος: What is the SIGNIFICATION of this saying? John x. 6. They understood not what things they WERE, τινα ΗΝ, what was the SIGNIFICATION of the things he had spoken to them. Acts x. 17. Τι αυ ΕΙΗ το οραμα, what this vision MIGHT BE; properly rendered by our translators, what this vision should MEAN. Gal. iv. 24. For these ARE the two covenants, αυται γαρ ΕΙΣΙΝ αι δυο διαθηκαι, these SIGNIFY the two covenants. Luke xv. 26. He asked, τι ΕΙΗ ταυτα, what these things MEANT. See also chap. xviii. 36. After such unequivocal testimony from the Sacred writings, can any person doubt that, This bread is my body, has any other meaning than, This bread REPRESENTS my body?

The Latins use the verb, sum, in all its forms, with a similar latitude of meaning. So, esse oneri ferendo, he is ABLE to bear the burthen: bene esse, to LIVE sumptuously: male esse, to LIVE miserably: recte esse, to ENJOY good health: est mihi fistula, I POSSESS a flute: est hodie in rebus, he now ENJOYS a plentiful fortune: est mihi namque domi pater, I HAVE a father at home, &c.: esse solvendo, to be ABLE to pay: fuimus Troes, fuit Ilium; the Trojans are EXTINCT, Troy is NO MORE.

In Greek also, and Hebrew, it often signifies to live to die, to be killed. ΟΥΚ ΕΙΜΙ, I am DEAD, or a dead man. Matt. ii. 18: Rachel weeping for her children, οτι ουκ ειςι, because they were murdered. Gen. xlii. 36: Joseph is not, Ιωσήφ ενεννη, Ioseph einennu, Ιωσήφ ουκ εστιν, Sept., Joseph is devoured by a wild beast. Rom. iv. 17: Calling the things that are not, as if they were alive. So Plutarch in Laconicis: "This shield thy father always preserved; preserve thou it, or may thou not be," Η μὴ ΕΣΟ, may thou perish. ΟΥΚ ΟΝΤΕΣ νόμοι, abrogated laws. ΕΙΜΙ εν μοι, I possess a sound understanding. Εις πατέρα υμων ΕΣΟΜΑΙ, I will perform the part of a father to you. ΕΙΜΙ της πολως της δε, I am an inhabitant of that city. 1 Tim. i. 7: Desiring to be teachers of the law, θελωτες ΕΙΝΑΙ νομοδιδασκαλοι, desiring to be reputed teachers of the law, i. e. able divines. Τα ΟΝΤΑ, the things that are, i. e. noble and honourable men: τα μη ΟΝΤΑ, the things that are not, viz. the vulgar, or those of ignoble birth.

Tertullian seems to have had a correct notion of those words of our Lord, Acceptum panem et distributum discipulis, corpus illius suum fecit, hoc est corpus meum dicendo, id est, figura corporis mei. Advers. Marc. l. v. c. 40. "Having taken the bread, and distributed that body to his disciples, he made it his body by saying, This is my body, i. e. a figure of my body."

That our Lord neither spoke in Greek nor Latin, on this occasion, needs no proof. It was, most probably, in what was formerly called the Chaldaic, now the Syriac, that our Lord conversed with his disciples. Through the providence of God, we have complete versions of the Gospels in this language, and in them it is likely we have the precise words spoken by our Lord on this occasion. In Matt. xxvi. 26, 27, the words in the Syriac version are, hanau pagree, This is my body. hanau demee, This is my blood, of which forms of speech the Greek is a verbal translation; nor would any man, even in the present day, speaking in the same language, use, among the people to whom it was vernacular, other terms than the above to express, This represents my body, and this represents my blood.

As to the ancient Syrian Church on the Malabar coast, it is a fact that it never held the doctrine of transubstantiation, nor does it appear that it was ever heard of in that Church till the year 1599, when Don Alexis Menezes, Archbishop of Goa, and the Jesuit Fransic Rez, invaded that Church, and by tricks, impostures, and the assistance of the heathen governors of Cochin, and other places, whom they gained over by bribes and presents, overthrew the whole of this ancient Church, and gave the oppressed people the rites, creeds, &c., of the papal Catholic Church in its place. Vid. La Croz. Hist. du Ch. des Indes.

This was done at the Synod of Diamper, which began its sessions at Agomale, June 20, 1599. The tricks of this unprincipled prelate, the tool of Pope Clement VIII., and Philip II., King of Portugal, are amply detailed by Mr. La Croze, in the work already quoted.

But this form of speech is common, even in our own language, though we have terms enow to fill up the ellipsis. Suppose a man entering into a museum, enriched with the remains of ancient Greek sculpture: his eyes are attracted by a number of curious busts; and, on inquiring what they are, he learns, this is Socrates, that Plato, a third Homer; others Hesiod, Horace, Virgil, Demosthenes, Cicero, Herodotus, Livy, Caesar, Nero, Vespasian, &c. Is he deceived by this information? Not at all: he knows well that the busts he sees are not the identical persons of those ancient philosophers, poets, orators, historians, and emperors, but only representations of their persons in sculpture, between which and the originals there is as essential a difference as between a human body, instinct with all the principles of rational vitality, and a block of marble. When, therefore, Christ took up a piece of bread, brake it, and said, This is my body, who, but the most stupid of mortals, could imagine that he was, at the same time, handling and breaking his own body! Would not any person, of plain common sense, see as great a difference between the man Christ Jesus, and the piece of bread, as between the block of marble and the philosopher it represented, in the case referred to above? The truth is, there is scarcely a more common form of speech in any language than, This is, for, This represents or signifies. And as our Lord refers, in the whole of this transaction, to the ordinance of the passover, we may consider him as saying: "This bread is now my body, in that sense in which the paschal lamb has been my body hitherto; and this cup is my blood of the New Testament, in the same sense as the blood of bulls and goats has been my blood under the Old: Exod. xxiv.; Heb. ix. That is, the paschal lamb and the sprinkling of blood represented my sacrifice to the present time: this bread and this wine shall represent my body and blood through all future ages; therefore, Do this in remembrance of me."

St. Luke and St. Paul add a circumstance here which is not noticed either by St. Matthew or St. Mark. After, this is my body, the former adds, which is given for you; the latter, which is broken for you; the sense of which is: "As God has in his bountiful providence given you bread for the sustenance of your lives, so in his infinite grace he has given you my body to save your souls unto life eternal. But as this bread must be broken and masticated, in order to its becoming proper nourishment, so my body must be broken, i. e. crucified, for you, before it can be the bread of life to your souls. As, therefore, your life depends on the bread which God's bounty has provided for your bodies, so your eternal life depends on the sacrifice of my body on the cross for your souls." Besides, there is here an allusion to the offering of sacrifices—an innocent creature was brought to the altar of God, and its blood (the life of the beast) was poured out for, or in behalf of, the person who brought it. Thus Christ says, alluding to the sacrifice of the paschal lamb, This is my body, το υπερ υμων διδμενον, which is given in your stead, or in your behalf; a free gift, from God's endless mercy, for the salvation of your souls. This is my body, το υπερ υμων κλωμενον, (1 Cor. xi. 24,) which is broken—sacrificed in your stead; as without the breaking (piercing) of the body, and spilling of the blood, there was no remission.

A. M. 4033. 27 And he took the cup, and
A. D. 29. gave thanks, and gave it to them,
An. Olymp. saying, ^v Drink ye all of it ;
CCII. 1.

^v Mark xiv. 23.—^w See Exod. xxiv. 8 ; Lev. xvii. 11.

In this solemn transaction we must weigh every word, as there is none without its appropriate and deeply emphatic meaning. So it is written, Ephes. v. 2. Christ hath loved us, and given himself, υπερ ημων, on our account, or in our stead, an offering and a sacrifice (θυσια) to God for a sweet-smelling savour; that, as in the sacrifice offered by Noah, Gen. viii. 21, (to which the apostle evidently alludes,) from which it is said, The Lord smelled a sweet savour, ריח הניחח, riach hanichoach, a savour of rest, so that he became appeased towards the earth, and determined that there should no more be a flood to destroy it; in like manner, in the offering and sacrifice of Christ for us, God is appeased towards the human race, and has in consequence decreed that whosoever believeth in him shall not perish, but have everlasting life.

Verse 27. And he took the cup] Mera to deitnhsai, after having supped, Luke xxii. 20, and 1 Cor. xi. 25. Whether the supper was on the paschal lamb, or whether it was a common or ordinary meal, I shall not wait here to inquire: see at the end of this chapter. In the parallel place, in Luke xxii., we find our Lord taking the cup, ver. 17, and again ver. 19; by the former of which was probably meant the cup of blessing, כוס הברכה kos haberahkah, which the master of a family took, and, after blessing God, gave to each of his guests by way of welcome: but this second taking the cup is to be understood as belonging to the very important rite which he was now instituting, and on which he lays a very remarkable stress. With respect to the bread, he had before simply said, Take, eat, this is my body; but concerning the cup he says, Drink ye all of this: for as this pointed out the very essence of the institution, viz. the blood of atonement, it was necessary that each should have a particular application of it: therefore he says, Drink ye ALL of this. By this we are taught that the cup is essential to the sacrament of the Lord's Supper; so that they who deny the cup to the people sin against God's institution; and they who receive not the cup are not partakers of the body and blood of Christ. If either could without mortal prejudice be omitted, it might be the bread; but the cup, as pointing out the blood poured out, i. e. the life, by which alone the great sacrificial act is performed, and remission of sins procured, is absolutely indispensable. On this ground it is demonstrable, that there is not a priest under heaven, who denies the cup to the people, that can be said to celebrate the Lord's Supper at all; nor is there one of their votaries that ever received the holy sacrament. All pretension to this is an absolute farce, so long as the cup, the emblem of the atoning blood, is denied. How strange is it, that the very men who plead so much for the bare literal meaning of this is my body, in the preceding verse, should deny all meaning to drink ye ALL of this cup, in this verse! And though Christ has in the most positive manner enjoined it, they will not permit one of the laity to taste it! O, what a thing is 28 For ^w this is my blood ^x of A. M. 4033.

the New Testament, which is shed A. D. 29.
^y for many, for the remission of sins. An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

^x Jer. xxxi. 31.—^y Chap. xx. 28; Rom. v. 15; Heb. ix. 22.

man!—a constant contradiction to reason and to himself.

I have just said that our blessed Lord lays remarkable stress on the administration of the cup, and on that which himself assures us is represented by it.—As it is peculiarly emphatic, I beg leave to set down the original text, which the critical reader will do well minutely to examine: Τουτο γαρ εστι το αιμα μου το της καινης διαθηκης, το περι πολλων εκχυνομειον εις αφεσιν αμαρτιων. The following literal translation and paraphrase do not exceed its meaning:—

For THIS is THAT blood of mine which was pointed out by all the sacrifices under the Jewish law, and particularly by the shedding and sprinkling of the blood of the paschal lamb. THAT blood of the sacrifice slain for the ratification of the new covenant. THE blood ready to be poured out for the multitudes, the whole Gentile world as well as the Jews, for the taking away of sins; sin, whether original or actual, in all its power and guilt, in all its internal energy and pollution.

And gave thanks] See the form used on this occasion, on ver. 26; and see the MISHNA, TRACT ברכות Beracoth.

Verse 28. For this is my blood of the New Testament] This is the reading both here and in St. Mark; but St. Luke and St. Paul say, This cup is the New Testament in my blood. This passage has been strangely mistaken: by New Testament, many understand nothing more than the book commonly known by this name, containing the four Gospels, Acts of the Apostles, apostolical Epistles, and book of the Revelation; and they think that the cup of the New Testament means no more than merely that cup which the book called the New Testament enjoins in the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. As this is the case, it is highly necessary that this term should be explained. The original, Η Καινη Διαθηκη, which we translate, The New Testament, and which is the general title of all the contents of the book already described, simply means, the new COVENANT. Covenant, from con, together, and venio, I come, signifies an agreement, contract, or compact, between two parties, by which both are mutually bound to do certain things, on certain conditions and penalties. It answers to the Hebrew berith, which often signifies, not only the covenant or agreement, but also the sacrifice which was slain on the occasion, by the blood of which the covenant was ratified; and the contracting parties professed to subject themselves to such a death as that of the victim, in case of violating their engagements. An oath of this kind, on slaying the covenant sacrifice, was usual in ancient times: so in Homer, when a covenant was made between the Greeks and the Trojans, and the throats of lambs were cut, and their blood poured out, the following form of adjuration was used by the contracting parties:—

Ζει κνδισε, μεγισε, και αθαν ι θεοι αλλοι,
Οπποτεροι προτεροι υπερ ορκια ημνηναι,

Ὡς σφ' ἐγκεφαλὸς χαμάδις ρεοί, ὡς ὁδε οἶνος,
 Λυτῶν, καὶ τεκεῶν· ἀλοχοὶ δ' ἀλλοιοῖσι μίγειεν.

All glorious Jove, and ye, the powers of heaven!
 Whoso shall violate this contract first,
 So be their blood, their children's and their own,
 Poured out, as this libation, on the ground:
 And let their wives bring forth to other men!

ILIAD I. iii. v. 298-301.

Our blessed Saviour is evidently called the Διαθήκη, berith, or covenant sacrifice, Isa. xlii. 6; xlix. 8; Zech. ix. 11. And to those Scriptures he appears to allude, as in them the Lord promises to give him for a covenant (sacrifice) to the Gentiles, and to send forth, by the blood of this covenant (victim) the prisoners out of the pit. The passages in the sacred writings which allude to this grand sacrificial and atoning act are almost innumerable. See the Preface to Matthew.

In this place, our Lord terms his blood the blood of the new covenant; by which he means that grand plan of agreement, or reconciliation, which God was now establishing between himself and mankind, by the passion and death of his Son, through whom alone men could draw nigh to God: and this new covenant is mentioned in contradistinction from the old covenant, ἡ παλαια διαθήκη, 2 Cor. iii. 11, by which appellation all the books of the Old Testament were distinguished, because they pointed out the way of reconciliation to God by the blood of the various victims slain under the law: but now, as the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world, was about to be offered up, a new and living way was thereby constituted, so that no one henceforth could come unto the Father but by him. Hence all the books of the New Testament, which bear unanimous testimony to the doctrine of salvation by faith through the blood of Jesus, are termed, ἡ καινὴ διαθήκη, The new covenant. See the Preface.

Dr. Lightfoot's Observations on this are worthy of serious notice. "This is my blood of the New Testament. Not only the seal of the covenant, but the sanction of the new covenant. The end of the Mosaic economy, and the confirming of a new one. The confirmation of the old covenant was by the blood of bulls and goats, Exod. xxiv., Heb. ix., because blood was still to be shed: the confirmation of the new was by a cup of wine, because under the new covenant there is no farther shedding of blood. As it is here said of the cup, This cup is the New Testament in my blood; so it might be said of the cup of blood, Exod. xxiv., That cup was the Old Testament in the blood of Christ: there, all the articles of that covenant being read over, Moses sprinkled all the people with blood, and said, This is the blood of the covenant which God hath made with you: and thus the old covenant or testimony was confirmed. In like manner, Christ, having published all the articles of the new covenant, he takes the cup of wine, and gives them to drink, and saith, This is the New Testament in my blood; and thus the new covenant was established."—Works, vol. ii. p. 260.

Which is shed (ἐκχυνόμενον, poured out) for many] Ἐκχέω and ἐκχύνω, to pour out, are often used in a sacrificial sense in the Septuagint, and signify to pour out or sprinkle the blood of the sacrifices before the altar of the Lord, by way of atonement. See 2 Kings xvi. 15; Lev. viii. 15; ix. 9; Exod. xxix. 12; Lev. iv. 7, 14, 17, 30, 34; and in various other places. Our Lord, by this very remarkable mode of expression, teaches us that, as his body was to be broken or crucified, ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν, in our stead, so here the blood was to be poured out to make an atonement, as the words, remission of sins, sufficiently prove; for without shedding of blood there was no remission, Heb. ix. 22, nor any remission by shedding of blood, but in a sacrificial way. See the passages above, and on ver. 26.

The whole of this passage will receive additional light when collated with Isa. liii. 11, 12. By his knowledge shall my righteous servant justify many, for he shall bear their iniquities—because he hath poured out his soul unto death, and he bare the sin of many. The pouring out of the soul unto death, in the prophet, answers to, this is the blood of the new covenant which is poured out for you, in the evangelists; and the רבים rabbim, multitudes, in Isaiah, corresponds to the many, πολλῶν, of Matthew and Mark. The passage will soon appear plain, when we consider that two distinct classes of persons are mentioned by the prophet. 1. The Jews.—ver. 4. Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows.—Ver. 5. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities, the chastisement of our peace was upon him.—Ver. 6. All we like sheep have gone astray, and the Lord hath laid upon him the iniquity of us all. 2. The GENTILES.—Ver. 11. By his knowledge, בְּדַעַתוֹ beda'ato, i. e. by his being made known, published as Christ crucified among the Gentiles, he shall justify רבים rabbim, the multitudes, (the GENTILES,) for he shall (also) bear their offences, as well as ours, the Jews, ver. 4, &c. It is well known that the Jewish dispensation, termed by the apostle as above, ἡ παλαια διαθήκη, the old covenant, was partial and exclusive. None were particularly interested in it save the descendants of the twelve sons of Jacob: whereas the Christian dispensation, ἡ καινὴ διαθήκη, the new covenant, referred to by our Lord in this place, was universal; for as Jesus Christ by the grace of God tasted death for every man, Heb. xi. 9, and is that Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world, John i. 29; who would have ALL MEN to be saved, and come to the knowledge of the truth, 1 Tim. ii. 4, even that knowledge of Christ crucified, by which they are to be justified, Isa. liii. 11, therefore he has commanded his disciples to go into all the world, and preach the Gospel to EVERY CREATURE, Mark xvi. 15. The reprobate race, those who were no people, and not beloved, were to be called in; for the Gospel was to be preached to all the world, though it was to begin at Jerusalem, Luke xxiv. 47. For this purpose was the blood of the new covenant sacrifice poured out for the multitudes, that there might be but one fold, as there is but one Shepherd; and that God might be ALL and in ALL.

For the remission of sins.] Εἰς ἀφεσιν ἁμαρτιῶν, for (or, in reference to) the taking away of sins. For, although the blood is shed, and the atonement made, no man's sins are taken away until, as a true penitent he returns to God, and, feeling his utter incapacity to

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 1.
29 But ^z I say unto you, I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, ^a until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom.

30 ¶ ^b And when they had sung a ^c hymn, they went out into the mount of Olives.

31 'Then saith Jesus unto them, ^d All ye shall ^e be offended because of me this night :

^z Mark xiv. 25; Luke xxii. 18. — ^a Acts x. 41. — ^b Mark xiv. 26. — ^c Or, psalm.

save himself, believes in Christ Jesus, who is the justifier of the ungodly.

The phrase, ἀφεσις τῶν ἀμαρτιῶν, remission of sins, (frequently used by the Septuagint,) being thus explained by our Lord, is often used by the evangelists and the apostles; and does not mean merely the pardon of sins, as it is generally understood, but the removal or taking away of sins; not only the guilt, but also the very nature of sin, and the pollution of the soul through it; and comprehends all that is generally understood by the terms justification and sanctification. For the use and meaning of the phrase ἀφαισις ἁμαρτιῶν, see Mark i. 4; Luke i. 77; iii. 3; xxiv. 47; Acts ii. 38; v. 31; x. 43; xiii. 38; xxvi. 18; Col. i. 14; Heb. x. 18.

Both St. Luke and St. Paul add, that, after giving the bread, our Lord said, Do this in remembrance of me. And after giving the cup, St. Paul alone adds, This do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me. The account, as given by St. Paul, should be carefully followed, being fuller, and received, according to his own declaration, by especial revelation from God.—Sec 1 Cor. xi. 23, For I have received of the Lord that which also I delivered unto you, &c. See the harmonized view above.

Verse 29. I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine] These words seem to intimate no more than this: We shall not have another opportunity of eating this bread and drinking this wine together; as in a few hours my crucifixion shall take place.

Until that day when I drink it new with you] That is, I shall no more drink of the produce of the vine with you; but shall drink new wine—wine of a widely different nature from this—a wine which the kingdom of God alone can afford. The term new in Scripture is often taken in this sense. So the new heaven, the new earth, the new covenant, the new man—mean a heaven, earth, covenant, man, of a very different nature from the former. It was our Lord's invariable custom to illustrate heavenly things by those of earth, and to make that which had last been the subject of conversation the means of doing it. Thus he uses wine here, of which they had lately drunk, and on which he had held the preceding discourse, to point out the supreme blessedness of the kingdom of God. But however pleasing and useful wine may be to the body, and how helpful soever, as an ordinance of God, it may be to the soul in the holy sacrament; yet the wine of the kingdom, the spiritual enjoyments at the right hand of God, will be infinitely more precious and useful. From what our Lord says here, we learn that the sacrament for it is written, ^f I will smite the shepherd, and the sheep of the flock shall be scattered abroad.

32 But after I am risen again, ^g I will go before you into Galilee.

33 Peter answered and said unto him, Though all men shall be offended because of thee, yet will I never be offended.

^d Mark xiv. 27; John xvi. 32. — ^e Chap. xi. 6. — ^f Zech. xiii. 7. — ^g Chap. xxviii. 7, 10, 16; Mark xiv. 28; xvi. 7.

of his supper is a type and a pledge, to genuine Christians, of the felicity they shall enjoy with Christ in the kingdom of glory.

Verse 30. And when they had sung a hymn] ὑμναῖστας means, probably, no more than a kind of recitative reading or chanting. As to the hymn itself we know, from the universal consent of Jewish antiquity, that it was composed of Psalms 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, and 118, termed by the Jews הלל halel, from הלל-יה halelu-yah, the first word in Psalm 113. These six Psalms were always sung at every paschal solemnity. They sung this great hillel on account of the five great benefits referred to in it; viz. 1. The Exodus from Egypt, Psa. cxiv. 1. When Israel went out of Egypt, &c. 2. The miraculous division of the Red Sea, ver. 3. The sea saw it and fled. 3. The promulgation of the law, ver. 4. The mountains skipped like lambs. 4. The resurrection of the dead, Psa. cxvi. 9. I will walk before the Lord in the land of the living. 5. The passion of the Messiah, Psa. cxv. 1. Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, &c. See Schoettgen, Hor. Hebr. p. 231, and my Discourse on the nature and design of the Eucharist, 8vo. Lond. 1808.

Verse 31. All ye shall be offended] Or rather, Ye will all be stumbled—παντες υμεις σκανδαλισθησεσθε—ye will all forsake me, and lose in a great measure your confidence in me.

This night] The time of trial is just at hand.

I will smite the shepherd] It will happen to you as to a flock of sheep, whose shepherd has been slain—the leader and guardian being removed, the whole flock shall be scattered, and be on the point of becoming a prey to ravenous beasts.

Verse 32. But after I am risen again] Don't lose your confidence; for though I shall appear for a time to be wholly left to wicked men, and be brought under the power of death, yet I will rise again, and triumph over all your enemies and mine.

I will go before you] Still alluding to the case of the shepherd and his sheep. Though the shepherd have been smitten and the sheep scattered, the shepherd shall revive again, collect the scattered flock, and go before them, and lead them to peace, security, and happiness.

Verse 33. Peter—said unto him, Though all men shall be offended—yet will I never] The presumptuous person imagines he can do every thing, and can do nothing: thinks he can excel all, and excels in nothing: promises every thing, and performs nothing. The humble man acts a quite contrary part. There is nothing we know so little of as ourselves—nothing we

A. M. 4033.

A. D. 29.

An. Olymp.

CCH. I.

34 Jesus said unto him, ^h Verily I say unto thee, That this night, before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice.

35 Peter said unto him, Though I should die with thee, yet will I not deny thee. Likewise also said all the disciples.

36 ¶ Then cometh Jesus with them unto

^h Mark xiv. 30; Luke xxii. 31, John xiii. 38.—Mark xiv. 32-35;

see less of than our own weakness and poverty. The strength of pride is only for a moment. Peter, though vainly confident, was certainly sincere—he had never been put to a sore trial, and did not know his own strength. Had this resolution of his been formed in the strength of God, he would have been enabled to maintain it against earth and hell. This most awful denial of Christ, and his abandoning him in the time of trial, was sufficient to have disqualified him for ever from being, in any sense, head of the Church, had such a supremacy been ever designed him. Such a supremacy was never given him by Christ: but the fable of it is in the Church of Rome, and the mock Peter, not Peter the apostle, is there and there only to be found.

Verse 34. Jesus said] Our Lord's answer to Peter is very emphatic and impressive. Verily—I speak a solemn weighty truth, thou wilt not only be stumbled, fall off and forsake thy Master, but thou wilt even deny that thou hast, or ever had, any knowledge of or connection with me; and this thou wilt do, not by little and little, through a long process of time, till the apostasy, daily gathering strength, shall be complete; but thou wilt do it this very night, and that not once only, but thrice; and this thou wilt do also in the earlier part of the night, before even a cock shall crow. Was not this warning enough to him not to trust in his own strength, but to depend on God!

Verse 35. Though I should die with thee, yet will I not deny thee.] He does not take the warning which his Lord gave him—he trusts in the warm, sincere attachment to Christ which he now feels, not considering that this must speedily fail, unless supported by the power of God.

Verse 36. A place called Gethsemane] A garden at the foot of the mount of Olives. The name seems to be formed from גַּת gath, a press, and שֶׁמֶן shemen, oil; probably the place where the produce of the mount of Olives was prepared for use. The garden of the oil-press, or olive-press.

Sit ye here] Or, stay in this place, while I go and pray yonder: and employ ye the time as I shall employ it—in watching unto prayer.

Verse 37. And he took with him Peter and the two sons of Zebedee] That is, James and John; the same persons who had beheld his transfiguration on the mount—that they might contemplate this agony in the light of that glory which they had there seen; and so be kept from being stumbled by a view of his present humiliation.

Began to be sorrowful] Ἀναισθησι. from λυω, to dissolve—exquisite sorrow, such as dissolves the natural vigour, and threatens to separate soul and body.

Vol. I.

(17)

a place called Gethsemane, and saith unto the disciples, Sit ye here, while I go and pray yonder.

37 And he took with him Peter and ^k the two sons of Zebedee, and began to be sorrowful and very heavy.

38 Then saith he unto them, ^l My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death:

Luke xxii. 39, John xviii. 1.—Chap. iv. 21.—John xii. 27

And very heavy.] Overwhelmed with anguish—ἀναισθησι. This word is used by the Greeks to denote the most extreme anguish which the soul can feel—excruciating anxiety and torture of spirit.

Verse 38. Then saith he] Then saith—Jesus:—I have added the word Jesus, ὁ ἰησοῦς, on the authority of a multitude of eminent MSS. See them in Griesbach.

My soul is exceeding sorrowful, (or, is surrounded with exceeding sorrow,) even unto death.] This latter word explains the two former: My soul is so dissolved in sorrow, my spirit is filled with such agony and anguish, that, if speedy succour be not given to my body, death must be the speedy consequence.

Now, the grand expiatory sacrifice begins to be offered: in this garden Jesus enters fully into the sacerdotal office; and now, on the altar of his immaculate divinity, begins to offer his own body—his own life—a lamb without spot, for the sin of the world. St. Luke observes, chap. xxii. 43, 44, that there appeared unto him an angel from heaven strengthening him; and that, being in an agony, his sweat was like great drops of blood falling to the ground. How exquisite must this anguish have been, when it forced the very blood through the coats of the veins, and enlarged the pores in such a preternatural manner as to cause them to empty it out in large successive drops! In my opinion, the principal part of the redemption price was paid in this unprecedented and indescribable agony.

Bloody sweats are mentioned by many authors; but none was ever such as this—where a person in perfect health, (having never had any predisposing sickness to induce a debility of the system,) and in the full vigour of life, about thirty-three years of age, suddenly, through mental pressure, without any fear of death, sweat great drops of blood; and these continued, during his wrestling with God to fall to the ground.

To say that all this was occasioned by the fear he had of the ignominious death which he was about to die confutes itself—for this would not only rob him of his divinity, for which purpose it is brought, but it deprives him of all excellency, and even of manhood itself. The prospect of death could not cause him to suffer thus, when he knew that in less than three days he was to be restored to life, and be brought into an eternity of blessedness. His agony and distress can receive no consistent explication but on this ground—He SUFFERED, the JUST for the UNJUST, that he might BRING us to God. O glorious truth! O infinitely meritorious suffering! And O! above all, the eternal love, that caused him to undergo such sufferings for the sake of SINNERS!

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

tarry ye here, and watch with me.
39 And he went a little farther, and fell on his face, and ^mprayed, saying, ⁿO my Father, if it be possible, ^olet this cup pass from me! nevertheless ^pnot as I will, but as thou wilt.

40 And he cometh unto the disciples, and findeth them asleep, and saith unto Peter, What, could ye not watch with me one hour?

41 ^aWatch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation: the spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak.

^m Mark xiv. 36; Luke xxii. 42; Heb. v. 7.—ⁿ John xii. 27.
^o Chap. xx. 22.

Verse 39. Fell on his face] See the note on Luke xxii. 44. This was the ordinary posture of the suppliant when the favour was great which was asked, and deep humiliation required. The head was put between the knees, and the forehead brought to touch the earth—this was not only a humiliating, but a very painful posture also.

This cup] The word cup is frequently used in the Sacred Writings to point out sorrow, anguish, terror, death. It seems to be an allusion to a very ancient method of punishing criminals. A cup of poison was put into their hands, and they were obliged to drink it. Socrates was killed thus, being obliged by the magistrates of Athens to drink a cup of the juice of hemlock. To death, by the poisoned cup, there seems an allusion in Heb. ii. 9, Jesus Christ, by the grace of God, TASTED death for every man. The whole world are here represented as standing guilty and condemned before the tribunal of God; into every man's hand the deadly cup is put, and he is required to drink off the poison—Jesus enters, takes every man's cup out of his hand, and drinks off the poison, and thus tastes or suffers the death which every man otherwise must have undergone.

Pass from me] Perhaps there is an allusion here to several criminals standing in a row, who are all to drink of the same cup; but, the judge extending favour to a certain one, the cup passes by him to the next.

Instead of προελθων μικρον, going a little forward, many eminent MSS. have προσελθων, coming a little forward—but the variation is of little moment. At the close of this verse several MSS. add the clause in Luke xxii. 43, There appeared an angel, &c.

Verse 40. He—saith unto Peter] He addressed himself more particularly to this apostle, because of the profession he had made, ver. 33; as if he had said: 'Is this the way you testify your affectionate attachment to me? Ye all said you were ready to die with me; what, then, cannot you watch ONE hour?'

Instead of οὐκ ιχνησατε, could ye not, the Codex Alexandrinus, the later Syriac in the margin, three of the Itala, and Juvenius, read οὐκ ιχνησας, couldst thou not—referring the reproach immediately to Peter, who had made the promises mentioned before.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

42 He went away again the second time, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if this cup may not pass away from me, except I drink it, thy will be done.

43 And he came and found them asleep again: for their eyes were heavy.

44 And he left them, and went away again, and prayed the third time, saying the same words.

45 Then cometh he to his disciples, and saith unto them, Sleep on now, and take your rest: behold, the hour is at hand, and the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners.

^p John v. 30; vi. 39; Phil. ii. 8.—^q Mark xiii. 33; xiv. 38; Luke xxii. 40, 46; Eph. vi. 18.

Verse 41. That ye enter not into temptation] If ye cannot endure a little fatigue when there is no suffering, how will ye do when the temptation, the great trial of your fidelity and courage, cometh? Watch—that ye be not taken unawares; and pray—that when it comes ye may be enabled to bear it.

The spirit—is willing, but the flesh is weak] Your inclinations are good—ye are truly sincere; but your good purposes will be overpowered by your timidity. Ye wish to continue steadfast in your adherence to your Master; but your fears will lead you to desert him.

Verse 42. O my Father, if this cup may not pass away from me] If it be not possible—to redeem fallen man, unless I drink this cup, unless I suffer death for them; thy will be done—I am content to suffer whatever may be requisite to accomplish the great design. In this address the humanity of Christ most evidently appears; for it was his humanity alone that could suffer; and if it did not appear that he had felt these sufferings, it would have been a presumption that he had not suffered, and consequently made no atonement. And had he not appeared to have been perfectly resigned in these sufferings, his sacrifice could not have been a free-will but a constrained offering, and therefore of no use to the salvation of mankind.

Verse 43. Their eyes were heavy.] That is, they could not keep them open. Was there nothing preternatural in this? Was there no influence here from the powers of darkness?

Verse 44. Prayed the third time] So St. Paul—I besought the Lord THREE that it might depart from me, 2 Cor. xii. 8. This thrice repeating the same petition argues deep earnestness of soul.

Verse 45. Sleep on now, and take your rest] Perhaps it might be better to read these words interrogatively, and paraphrase, them thus: Do ye sleep on still? Will no warnings avail? Will no danger excite you to watchfulness and prayer? My hour—in which I am to be delivered up, is at hand; therefore now think of your own personal safety.

The Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners.] Απαρωλων, viz. the Gentiles or heathens, who were generally distinguished by this appellation from the Jews. Here it probably means the Roman cohort

A. M. 4033.

A. D. 29.

An. Olymp.

CCH. 1.

16 Rise, let us be going: behold, he is at hand that doth betray me.

47 ¶ And while he yet spake, lo, Judas, one of the twelve, came, and with him a great multitude with swords and staves, from the chief priests and elders of the people.

48 Now he that betrayed him gave them a sign, saying, Whomsoever I shall kiss, that same is he: hold him fast.

49 And forthwith he came to Jesus, and

* Mark xiv. 43; Luke xxii. 7; John xviii. 3; Acts i. 61.
*2 Sam. xx. 9.

that was stationed on festivals for the defence of the temple. By the Romans he was adjudged to death; for the Jews acknowledged that they had no power in capital cases. See the note on chap. ix. 10.

Verse 46. Rise, let us be going] That is, to meet them, giving thereby the fullest proof that I know all their designs, and might have, by flight or otherwise, provided for my own safety; but I go willingly to meet that death which their malice designs me, and, through it, provide for the life of the world.

Verse 27. Judas, one of the twelve] More deeply to mark his base ingratitude and desperate wickedness—HE WAS ONE OF THE TWELVE—and he is a TRAITOR, and one of the vilest too that ever disgraced human nature.

A great multitude with swords and staves] They did not come as officers of justice, but as a desperate mob. Justice had nothing to do in this business. He who a little before had been one of the leaders of the flock of Christ is now become the leader of ruffians and murderers! What a terrible fall!

Verse 48. Gave them a sign] How coolly deliberate is this dire apostate! The man whom I shall kiss—how deeply hypocritical! That is he, hold him fast, seize him—how diabolically malicious!

Hail, Master] A usual compliment among the Jews. Judas pretends to wish our Lord continued health while he is meditating his destruction! How many compliments of this kind are there in the world! Judas had a pattern in Joab, who, while he pretends to inquire tenderly for the health of Amasa, thrust him through with his sword; but the disciple here vastly outdoes his master, and through a motive, if possible, still more base. Let all those who use unmeaning or insidious compliments rank for ever with Joab and Judas.

And kissed him.] And tenderly kissed him—this is the proper meaning of the original word κατεφιλησεν, he kissed him again and again—still pretending the most affectionate attachment to him, though our Lord had before unmasked him.

Verse 50. Jesus said—Friend] Rather, companion, εταπε, (not FRIEND), wherefore, rather, against whom (εφ' ὃ, the reading of all the best MSS.) art thou come? How must these words have cut his very soul, if he had any sensibility left! Surely, thou, who hast so long been my companion, art not come against me, thy Lord, Teacher, and Friend! What is the human said, Hail, Master, *and kissed him.

A. M. 4033.

A. D. 29.

An. Olymp.

CCH. 1.

50 And Jesus said unto him, * Friend, wherefore art thou come? Then came they, and laid hands on Jesus, and took him.

51 ¶ And, behold, * one of them which were with Jesus, stretched out his hand, and drew his sword, and struck a servant of the high priest's, and smote off his ear.

52 Then said Jesus unto him, Put up again thy sword into his place: * for all they that heart not capable of, when abandoned by God, and influenced by Satan and the love of money!

* Psal. xli. 9; lv. 13.—* John xviii. 10.—* Gen. ix. 6; Rev. xiii. 10.

Laid hands on Jesus] But not before they had felt that proof of his sovereign power by which they had all been struck down to the earth, John xviii. 6. It is strange that, after this, they should dare to approach him; but the Scriptures must be fulfilled.

Verse 51. One of them which were with Jesus] This was Peter—struck a servant of the high priest's, the servant's name was Malchus, John xviii. 10, and smote off his ear. In Luke xxii. 51, it is said, Jesus touched and healed it. Here was another miracle, and striking proof of the Divinity of Christ. Peter did not cut the ear, merely, he cut it off, ἀφείλεν. Now to heal it, Jesus must either take up the ear and put it on again, or else create a new one—either of these was a miracle, which nothing less than unlimited power could produce. See the note on John xviii. 10.

Verse 52. Put up again thy sword into his place] Neither Christ nor his religion is to be defended by the secular arm. God is sufficiently able to support his ark: Uzzah need not stretch out his hand on the occasion. Even the shadow of public justice is not to be resisted by a private person, when coming from those in public authority. The cause of a Christian is the cause of God: sufferings belong to one, and vengeance to the other. Let the cause, therefore, rest in his hands, who will do it ample justice.

Shall perish with the sword] Instead of ἀποθύνονται, shall perish, many excellent MSS., versions, and fathers, have ἀποθάνονται, shall die. The general meaning of this verse is, they who contend in battle are likely, on both sides, to become the sacrifices of their mutual animosities. But it is probably a prophetic declaration of the Jewish and Roman states. The Jews put our Lord to death under the sanction of the Romans—both took the sword against Christ, and both perished by it. The Jews by the sword of the Romans, and the Romans by that of the Goths, Vandals, &c. The event has verified the prediction—the Jewish government has been destroyed upwards of 1700 years, and the Roman upwards of 1000. Confer with this passage, Psal. ii. 4, 9, and ex. 1, 5, 6. But how came Peter to have a sword? Judea was at this time so infested with robbers and cut-throats that it was not deemed safe for any person to go unarmed. He probably carried one for his mere personal safety.

A. M. 4033. take the sword, shall perish with
A. D. 29. the sword.
An. Olymp. CCII. 1.

53 Thinkest thou that I cannot now pray to my Father, and he shall presently give me ^w more than twelve legions of angels?

54 But how then shall the scriptures be fulfilled, ^x that thus it must be?

55 In that same hour said Jesus to the multitudes, Are ye come out as against a thief with swords and staves for to take me? I sat daily with you teaching in the temple, and ye laid no hold on me.

56 But all this was done, that the ^y scriptures of the prophets might be fulfilled. Then

^w 2 Kings vi. 17; Dan. vii. 10.—^x Isa. liii. 7, &c.; ver. 24; Luke xxiv. 25, 44, 46.—^y Lam. iv. 20; ver. 54.—^z See John

Verse 53. More than twelve legions of angels? As if he had said, Instead of you twelve, one of whom is a traitor, my Father can give me more than twelve legions of angels to defend me. A legion, at different times, contained different numbers; 4,200, 5,000, and frequently 6,000 men; and from this saying, taking the latter number, which is the common rate, may we not safely believe that the angels of God amount to more than 72,000?

Verse 54. But how then? Had I such a defence—shall the Scriptures be fulfilled, which say, that thus it must be? That is, that I am to suffer and die for the sin of the world. Probably the Scriptures to which our Lord principally refers are Psal. xxii. lxix., and especially Isa. liii. and Dan. ix. 24–27. Christ shows that they had no power against him but what he permitted; and that he willingly gave up himself into their hands.

Verse 55. Are ye come out as against a thief? At this time Judea was much infested by robbers, so that armed men were obliged to be employed against them—to this our Lord seems to allude. See on ver. 52.

I sat daily with you? Why come in this hostile manner? Every day, for four days past, ye might have met with me in the temple, whither I went to teach you the way of salvation. See on chap. xxi. 17.

Verse 56. But all this was done? This is probably the observation of the evangelist. See on chap. ii. 23.

Then all the disciples forsook him and fled. O what is man! How little is even his utmost sincerity to be depended on! Jesus is abandoned by all!—even zealous Peter and loving John are among the fugitives! Was ever master so served by his scholars? Was ever parent so treated by his children? Is there not as much zeal and love among them all as might make one martyr for God and truth? Alas! no. He had but twelve who professed inviolable attachment to him; one of these betrayed him, another denied him with oaths, and the rest run away and utterly abandon him to his implacable enemies! Are there not found among his disciples still, 1st. Persons who betray him and his cause? 2dly. Persons who deny him and his people? 3dly. Persons who abandon him, his people, his ^z all the disciples forsook him, and fled.

57 ¶ ^a And they that had laid hold on Jesus led him away to Caiaphas the high priest, where the scribes and the elders were assembled.

58 But Peter followed him, afar off, unto the high priest's palace, and went in, and sat with the servants, to see the end.

59 Now the chief priests, and elders, and all the council, sought false witness against Jesus, to put him to death;

60 But found none: yea, though ^b many false witnesses came, yet found they none.

xviii. 15.—^a Mark xiv. 53; Luke xxii. 54; John xviii. 12, 13, 24. ^b Psal. xxvii. 12; xxxv. 11; Mark xiv. 55; so Acts vi. 13.

cause, and his truth? Reader! dost thou belong to any of these classes?

Verse 57. They—led him away to Caiaphas] John says, chap. xviii. 13, that they led him first to Annas, but this appears to have been done merely to do him honour as the father-in-law of Caiaphas, and his colleague in the high priesthood. But as the Sanhedrin was assembled at the house of Caiaphas, it was there he must be brought to undergo his mock trial: but see on John xviii. 13.

Verse 58. Peter followed him afar off] Poor Peter! this is the beginning of his dreadful fall. His fear kept him from joining the company, and publicly acknowledging his Lord; and his affection obliged him to follow at a distance that he might see the end.

And sat with the servants, to see the end.] When a man is weak in faith, and can as yet only follow Christ at a distance, he should avoid all dangerous places, and the company of those who are most likely to prove a snare to him. Had not Peter got to the high priest's palace, and sat down with the servants, he would not thus have denied his Lord and Master.

Servants—officers, υπηρετων. Such as we term sergeants, constables, &c.

Verse 59. All the council sought false witness What a prostitution of justice!—they first resolve to ruin him, and then seek the proper means of effecting it: they declare him criminal, and after that do all they can to fix some crime upon him, that they may appear to have some shadow of justice on their side when they put him to death. It seems to have been a common custom of this vile court to employ false witness, on any occasion, to answer their own ends. See this exemplified in the case of Stephen, Acts vi. 11–13.

Verse 60. Though many false witnesses came] There is an unaccountable confusion in the MSS. in this verse: without stating the variations, which may be seen in Griesbach, I shall give that which I believe to be the genuine sense of the evangelist. Then the chief priests and elders, and all the council, sought false witness against Jesus, to put him to death; but they found it not, though many false witnesses came up. At last two false witnesses came up, saying

A. M. 4033. At the last ^c came two false wit-
 A. D. 29. nesses,
 An. Olymp. CCH. 1.

61 And said, This fellow said, ^d I am able to destroy the temple of God, and to build it in three days.

62 ^e And the high priest arose, and said unto him, Answerest thou nothing? what is it which these witness against thee?

63 But ^f Jesus held his peace. And the high priest answered and said unto him, ^g I adjure thee by the living God, that thou tell us whether thou be the Christ, the Son of God.

^c Deut. xix. 15.—^d Chap. xxvii. 40; John ii. 19.—^e Mark xiv. 60.
^f Isa. lii. 7; ch. xxvii. 12, 14.—^g Lev. v. 1; 1 Sam. xiv. 24, 26.
^h Dan. vii. 13; chap. xvi. 27; xxiv. 30; Luke xxi. 27; xxv. 31;

This man said, &c. It is the property of falsity to be ever inconsistent, and to contradict itself; therefore they could not find two consistent testimonies, without which the Jewish law did not permit any person to be put to death. However, the hand of God was in this business: for the credit of Jesus, and the honour of the Christian religion, he would not permit him to be condemned on a false accusation; and, therefore, at last they were obliged to change their ground, and, to the eternal confusion of the unrighteous council, he is condemned on the very evidence of his own innocence, purity, and truth!

Verse 61. I am able to destroy the temple of God] 1st. These words were not fairly quoted. Jesus had said, John ii. 19, Destroy this temple, and I will build it again in three days. 2dly. The inuendo which they produce, applying these words to a pretended design to destroy the temple at Jerusalem, was utterly unfair; for these words he spoke of the temple of his body. It is very easy, by means of a few small alterations, to render the most holy things and innocent persons odious to the world, and even to take away the life of the innocent.

Verse 62. Answerest thou nothing?] The accusation was so completely frivolous that it merited no notice: besides, Jesus knew that they were determined to put him to death, and that his hour was come; and that therefore remonstrance or defence would be of no use: he had often before borne sufficient testimony to the truth.

Verse 63. I adjure thee by the living God] I put thee to thy oath. To this solemn adjuration Christ immediately replies, because he is now called on, in the name of God, to bear another testimony to the truth. The authority of God in the most worthless magistrate should be properly respected. However necessary our Lord saw it to be silent, when the accusations were frivolous, and the evidence contradictory, he felt no disposition to continue this silence, when questioned concerning a truth, for which he came into the world to shed his blood.

Verse 64. Thou hast said] That is, I am the Christ, the promised Messiah, (see on ver. 25;) and you and this whole nation shall shortly have the fullest proof 64 Jesus saith unto him, Thou hast said: nevertheless I say unto you, ^h Hereafter shall ye see the Son of man ⁱ sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven.

65 Then ^k the high priest rent his clothes, saying, He hath spoken blasphemy; what farther need have we of witnesses: behold, now ye have heard his blasphemy.

66 What think ye? They answered and said, ^l He is guilty of death.

67 ^m Then did they spit in his face, and buf-

John i. 51; Rom. xiv. 10; 1 Thess. iv. 16; Rev. i. 7.—ⁱ Psa. cx. 1; Acts vii. 55.—^k 2 Kings xviii. 37; xix. 1.—^l Lev. xxiv. 16; John xix. 7.—^m Isa. i. 6; lii. 3; chap. xxvii. 30.

of it: for hereafter, in a few years, ye shall see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, fully invested with absolute dominion, and coming in the clouds of heaven, to execute judgment upon this wicked race. See chap. xxiv. 30. Our Lord appears to refer to Dan. vii. 13: One like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, &c. This may also refer to the final judgment.

Verse 65. The high priest rent his clothes] This rending of the high priest's garments was expressly contrary to the law, Lev. x. 6, and xxi. 10. But it was a common method of expressing violent grief, Gen. xxxvii. 29, 34; Job i. 20, and horror at what was deemed blasphemous or impious. 2 Kings xviii. 37; xix. 1; Acts xiv. 14. All that heard a blasphemous speech were obliged to rend their clothes, and never to sew them up again. See Lightfoot.

He hath spoken blasphemy] Quesnel's note on this is worthy of notice. "See here a false zeal, a mask of religion, and a passionate and seditious way of proceeding, tending only to incense and stir up others, all which are common to those who would oppress truth by cabal, and without proof. By crying out, 'heresy, blasphemy, and faction,' though contrary to all appearance, men fail not to stir up those in power, to gain the simple, to give some shadow of authority to the ill-disposed, to cast devout but ignorant people into scruples, and thereby to advance the mystery of iniquity, which is the mystery of all ages." This was the very plan his Catholic brethren adopted in this country, in the reign of Queen Mary, called the bloody queen, because of the many murders of righteous men which she sanctioned at the mouth of her Catholic priesthood.

Verse 66. He is guilty of death.] Ενοχος θανάτου εστι, he is liable to death. All the forms of justice are here violated. The judge becomes a party and accuser, and proceeds to the verdict without examining whether all the prophecies concerning the Messiah, and the innumerable miracles which he wrought, did not justify him. Examination and proof are the ruin of all calumnies, and of the authors of them, and therefore they take care to keep off from these two things. See Quesnel.

Verse 67. Then did they spit in his face] This was

A. M. 4033. feted him; and ⁿ others smote him
A. D. 29. with ^o the palms of their hands,
An. Olymp. CCH. 1. 68 Saying, ^p Prophecy unto us, thou Christ, Who is he that smote thee?

69 ¶ ^a Now Peter sat without in the palace:
and a damsel came unto him, saying, Thou also wast with Jesus of Galilee.

70 But he denied before them all, saying, I know not what thou sayest.

71 And when he was gone out into the porch, another maid saw him, and said unto them that were there, This fellow was also with Jesus of Nazareth.

^a Luke xxii. 63; John xix. 3.—^o Or, rods.—^p Mark xiv. 65;
Luke xxii. 64.—^a Mark xiv. 66; Luke xxii. 55; John xviii. 16, done as a mark of the most profound contempt. See Job xvi. 10, and xxx. 10; Isa. l. 6; Micah v. 1. The judges now delivered him into the hands of the mob.

And buffeted him] Smote him with their fists, εκολαφισαν. This is the translation of Theophylact.
Κολαφίζειν, says he, means, "to beat with the hand, the fingers being clenched. Συγκατομενων των δακτυλων, or, to speak more briefly, to buffet with the fist."

Smote him with the palms of their hands] Επρᾶπισαν.
Ραπιζω, says Suidas, means "παταξαι την γναθον απλη τη χειρι, to smite the cheek with the open hand." Thus they offered him indignity in all its various and vexa-tious forms. Insults of this kind are never forgiven by the world: Jesus not only takes no revenge, (though it he completely in his power,) but bears all with meekness, without even one word of reply.

Verse 68. Prophecy unto us, thou Christ] Their conduct toward him now was expressly prophesied of,
by a man whose Divine mission they did not pretend to deny; see Isa. l. 6. It appears that, before they buffeted him, they bound up his eyes, see Mark xiv. 65.

Verse 69. A damsel came unto him] A maid servant, παιδισκη. See this translation vindicated by Kypke.

Thou also wast with Jesus] What a noble opportunity had Peter now to show his zeal for the insulted cause of truth, and his attachment to his Master. But, alas! he is shorn of his strength. Constables and maid servants are no company for an apostle, except when he is delivering to them the message of salvation.
Evil communications corrupt good manners. Had Peter been in better company, he would not have had so foul a fall.

Verse 70. But he denied before them all] So the evil principle gains ground. Before, he followed at a distance, now he denies; this is the second gradation in his fall.

Verse 71. Unto them that were there] Instead of λεγει τοις εκει και, more than one hundred MSS., many of which are of the first authority and antiquity, have λεγει αυτοις εκει και, she saith unto them, this man was THERE also. I rather think this is the genuine reading. Τοις might have been easily mistaken for αυτοις, if the first syllable av were but a little faded in a MS. from which others were copied: and then the placing of the point after εκει instead of after 72 And again he denied with an ^{A. M. 4033.} oath, I do not know the man. ^{A. D. 29.}

73 And after a while came unto ^{An. Olymp.}
him they that stood by, and said to Peter, ^{CCII. 1.} Surely thou also art one of them; for thy speech bewrayeth thee.

74 Then ^a began he to curse and to swear, saying, I know not the man. And immediately the cock crew.

75 And Peter remembered the word of Jesus, which said unto him, ^b Before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice. And he went out and wept bitterly.

17, 25.—^a Luke xxii. 59.—^b Mark xiv. 71.—^c Ver. 34; Mark
xiv. 30; Luke xxii. 61, 62; John xiii. 38.

αυτοις would naturally follow, as placed after τοις; it would make no sense. Griesbach approves of this reading.

Verse 72. And again he denied with an oath] This is a third gradation of his iniquity. He has told a lie, and he swears to support it. A liar has always some suspicion that his testimony is not credited, for he is conscious to his own falsity, and is therefore naturally led to support his assertions by oaths.

Verse 73. Thy speech] Thy manner of speech, η λαλια σου, that dialect of thine—his accent being different from that of Jerusalem. From various examples given by Lightfoot and Schoettgen, we find that the Galileans had a very corrupt pronunciation, frequently interchanging α, η, π, and γ, and so blending or dividing words as to render them unintelligible, or cause them to convey a contrary sense.

Bewrayeth thee.] Δηλον σε ποιει, maketh thee manifest, from the Anglo-saxon beþnezan, to accuse, betray;
a word long since lost from our language.

Verse 74. Then began he to curse and to swear]
Rather, Then he began positively to affirm—καταθεματιζειν, from kata intensive, and τιθημι I lay down, place, affirm. But the common reading is καταθεματιζειν, which signifies to wish curses on himself. The former reading is supported by almost every MS. of value, and is, beyond dispute, the true reading, and has been received by Griesbach into the text. The business is bad enough, but the common reading makes it worse.
In ver. 72, Peter is said to deny with an oath; here, he positively affirms and swears, probably by the name of God, for this is the import of the word ομνεν.
This makes the fourth and final gradation in the eli-max of Peter's fall. From these awful beginnings it is not unfair to conclude that Peter might have gone almost as far as Judas himself, had not the traitorous business been effected before. Yet all this evil sprung simply from the fear of man. How many denials of Christ and his truth have sprung since, from the same cause!

The cock crew] This animal becomes, in the hand of God, the instrument of awaking the fallen apostle, at last, to a sense of his fall, danger, and duty. When abandoned of God, the smallest thing may become the occasion of a fall; and, when in the hand of God, the smallest matter may become the instrument of our restoration. Let us never think lightly of what are termed little sins; the smallest one has the seed of eternal ruin in it. Let us never think contemptibly of the feeblest means of grace: each may have the seed of eternal salvation in it. Let us ever remember that the great Apostle Peter fell through fear of a servant maid, and rose through the crowing of a cock.

Verse 75. Peter remembered the word of Jesus] St. Luke says, chap. xxii. 61, The Lord turned and looked upon Peter. So it appears he was nigh to our Lord, either at the time when the cock crew, or shortly after. The delicacy of this reproof was great—he must be reproved and alarmed, otherwise he will proceed yet farther in his iniquity; Christ is in bonds, and cannot go and speak to him; if he call aloud, the disciple is discovered, and falls a victim to Jewish malice and Roman jealousy; he therefore does the whole by a look. In the hand of Omnipotence every thing is easy, and he can save by a few, as well as by many.

He went out] He left the place where he had sinned, and the company which had been the occasion of his transgression.

And wept bitterly.] Felt bitter anguish of soul, which evidenced itself by the tears of contrition which flowed plentifully from his eyes. Let him that standeth take heed lest he fall! Where the mighty have been slain, what shall support the feeble? Only the grace of the ALMIGHTY God.

This transaction is recorded by the inspired penmen, 1st. That all may watch unto prayer, and shun the occasions of sin. 2dly. That if a man be unhappily overtaken in a fault, he may not despair, but cast himself immediately with a contrite heart on the infinite tenderness and compassion of God. See the notes on John xviii. 27.

I have touched on the subject of our Lord's anointing but slightly in the preceding notes, because the controversy upon this point is not yet settled: and, except to harmonists, it is a matter of comparatively little importance. Bishop Newcome has written largely on this fact, and I insert an extract from his notes.

BISHOP NEWCOME'S ACCOUNT OF THE ANOINTING OF OUR LORD.

"The histories of Jesus' unction, in Matthew, Mark, and John, are accounts of the same fact. Hoc fixum maneat, eandem ab omnibus historiam referri. Calv. Harm. p. 375.

"The following objections to this position occur in Lightfoot, Whiston, Whitby, and Macknight.

1st. "The unction recorded by St. John happens six days before the passover; but the other unction is fixed to the second day before that feast.

"Ans. The day of the entertainment related John xii. 2, is not restrained to the sixth day before the passover. Quo die factum illi fuerit convivium, in quo a Maria unctus est, Johannes non exprimit. Calv. Harm. Johann. p. 144. Ver. 12, 13, much people are said to meet Jesus on the day after his arrival at Bethany, not on the day after his unction. See ver. 9. St. John has recorded events on the sixth and on the fifth day before the passover; and then, chap. xiii. 1, he proceeds to the evening on which the passover was eaten.

On this account he anticipates the history of Jesus's unction; and he naturally anticipates it on mentioning the place where it happened.

2dly. "The scene in St. John is the house of Martha, or of Lazarus; in the other evangelists, that of Simon the leper.

"Ans. St. John lays the scene in general at Bethany.

"It seems probable that Lazarus would not have been called αὐτὸν ἀνακτινῶν, if he had been the host.

"Martha, the sister of Lazarus, might show Jesus honour by ministering to him in any house as well as her own. 'She was Simon's neighbour, and perhaps his relation,' Dr. Priestley, Harm. p. 102. Our Lord's affection for Lazarus and his sister, and the recent miracle wrought on Lazarus, were very sufficient reasons for Simon's invitation of such neighbouring guests.

3dly. "St. John mentions the feet of Jesus as anointed by Mary, and wiped with her hair; the other evangelists say that the ointment was poured on Jesus's head.

"Ans. It is no where asserted that the unction was of Jesus's head only, or of his feet only: both actions are consistent; and St. John, in his supplemental history, may very well have added the respectful conduct of Mary, that, after having anointed Jesus's head, she proceeded to anoint his feet, and even to wipe them with her hair.

4thly. "In St. John, Judas alone murmurs: in St. Matthew, the disciples have indignation; or, as St. Mark expresses it, some have indignation among themselves.

"Ans. Dr. Lardner says, Serm. vol. ii. p. 316: 'It is well known to be very common with all writers to use the plural number when one person only is intended; nor is it impossible that others might have some uneasiness about it, though they were far from being so disgusted at it as Judas was. And their concern for the poor was sincere: his was self-interested and mere pretence.'

"Grotius's words are: Reprehensa est hoc nomine mulier ab uno discipulorum; nam ita pluralis accipi solet.

5thly. "The vindications of the woman by our Lord differ so much as to show that the occasions were different.

"Ans. St. John's words are indeed thus misinterpreted by Baronius: Let her alone, that she may keep it against the day of my burial, alluding to Mark xvi. 1. See Lightfoot, Harm. p. 27. See also Lightfoot, ib. 1. 251. 'She hath kept it yet, and not spent all; that she may bestow it on a charitable use, the anointing of my body to its burial.'

"Whiston also, Harm. 129, gives a wrong sense to the words. She hath spent but little of it now: she hath reserved the main part of it for a fitter time, the day before my delivery to the Jews; making this a prediction of what passed, Matt. xxvi. 6-13; Mark xiv. 3-9. It must be observed that John xii. 7, there is a remarkable various reading: ἵνα εἰς τὴν ἡμέραν τῆς ἐνταφιάσεως μὴ τρεῖς ἄνθρωποι. See Welstein, and add Codd. Vercell. and Veron. in Blanchini. Of this reading we have a sound interpretation in Mill, proleg. xlv. Sine eam ut opportune usa hoc unguento, velut ad sepulturam meam, jamjam occidendi, illud servasse ostendatur. And likewise in Bengelius ad loc. who observes that the common reading is, Facilioris sensus causâ; and adds, Verbum τηρίση servaret, pendet ex præterito, cujus vis latet in ἀφες αὐτήν, i. e. Noli reprehendere hanc, quæ unguentum ideo nec vendidit, nec pauperibus dedit, ut, &c. And the common reading is thus rightly explained by Lightfoot, 2, 588. 'If Baronius's exposition do not take, then add this clause:—Let her alone; for this may be an argument and sign that she hath not done this vainly, luxuriously, or upon any delicacy spent so costly an ointment upon me; because she hath reserved it for this time, wherein I am so near my grave and funeral, and poured it not on me before.' Lardner's comment, ubi supra, p. 312, is applicable to the three evangelists. If this ointment were laid out upon a dead body, you would not think it too much. You may consider this anointing as an embalming of me. The words are a prediction of Christ's death, which was to happen on the third day after; and they are a prediction beautifully taken from the occasion. She has done this to embalm me, Matt. She has anticipated the embalming of me, Mark. She has not sold this ointment, and given it to the poor, that she might reserve it to this day, which is, as it were, the day of my embalming, so soon is my burial to follow, John.

"Dr. Scott, on Matthew, quotes the following passage from Theophylact: ἐθας ἦν τοῖς ἑβραίοις μετὰ μύρων ἐνταφιάζειν τὰ σώματα, ὡς καὶ αἱ Αἰγύπτιοι ἐποίουν, διὰ τὸ ὑσηπτα τηρεῖσθαι, καὶ ἄνευ θυρωδίας. It was a custom among the Jews, as well as among the Egyptians, to embalm the bodies of the dead, as well to keep them from putrefaction, as to prevent offensive smells.

"The expressions therefore of the three evangelists agree in sense and substance. I have explained the more difficult in St. John; leaving every one to his own judgment whether it be the true one or not; though I incline to think that the unusual phrase ought generally to be admitted into the text.

"6thly. In St. John, Mary anoints Jesus; in Matthew and Mark, a woman not named.

"Ans. Lardner says, ubi supra, p. 315. 'St. John having before given the history of the resurrection of Lazarus, it was very natural for him, when he came to relate this anointing of our Lord, to say by whom it was done. But the two former evangelists having never mentioned Lazarus or his sisters in their Gospels, when they came to relate this action forbear to mention any name, and speak only of a certain woman. Luke, x. 38–42, has an account of our Lord's being entertained at the house of Martha. But he says nothing of this anointing. If he had related it, I make no question that he, like St. John, would have said by whom it was done.' Upon the whole, there is no solid objection to the hypothesis, that we have three accounts of the same transaction. But it is incredible that there should be two unctions of Jesus, in Bethany, within four days, not plainly distinguished from each other; that the kind and price of the ointment should be the same; that the two actions should be censured in the same manner; and that words to the same effect should be used in defence of the woman who anointed Jesus, within so short a time, in the same place, and among the same persons. See Doddridge on John xii. 1. As to the precise time of this transaction, it is natural to conclude from the accounts of Matthew and Mark, that it happened two days before the passover. I had much pleasure in observing that Mr. Jebb, in his Harmony, assigns it the same order as I do. I likewise find in Ward's Dissertations, p. 112, the following remark. 'John only mentions the day when Jesus came to Bethany, without specifying the time when he was entertained there by Simon the leper; whereas the other two evangelists acquaint us with the day when that was done, and what followed upon it, with relation to Judas.' And again, Wall says, Critical Notes, v. 3. p. 52: 'Wednesday he seems to have stayed at Bethany, and supped there. At which supper, Mary, sister of Lazarus, poured that ointment on his body which he interpreted to be for his burial.' And on John xii. 2: 'This seems to be the same supper which Matthew and Mark do say was at the house of Simon the leper; for there it was that Mary anointed him. But then we must not take it to be the same night that he came to Bethany, but two days before the passover.'

"That Judas went to the high priests on the evening or night of our Wednesday, may be collected from Matt. xxvi. 14–17, and the parallel places in this harmony; and he seems to have acted partly in disgust at what had passed. This is a good argument for fixing the unction for Wednesday. As it will appear that the other apostles did not suspect his treachery, we may suppose that Judas withdrew himself clandestinely, probably after our Lord had retired to privacy and devotion. Our Lord's words, Matt. xxvi. 2, may have led Mary to show this respect to Jesus, lest no future opportunity should offer. See Lardner, ubi supra, p. 327. Dr. Priestley thinks that 'if the verses that contain this story in Matt. xxvi. 6–13, be considered, they will be found to stand very awkwardly in their present situation, where they interrupt an account of a consultation among the Jews about putting Jesus to death.' Harm. p. 100. But it seems to me that the story has a remarkably apt connection with the preceding and subsequent history. The Jewish rulers consult how they may take Jesus by craft, and without raising a tumult among the people. An accident happens which offends one of Jesus's familiar attendants: who immediately repairs to Jesus's enemies, and receives from them a bribe to betray him in the absence of the multitude." Newcome's Harmony, Notes p. 39, &c.

I have added the above, not from a conviction that the point is so elucidated as to settle the controversy, but merely to place before the reader both sides of the question. Still, sub judice lis est; and any man may doubt, consistently with the most genuine piety, whether the relations given by the evangelists, concerning the anointing of our Lord, should be understood of two different unctions, at two different times, in two different places, by two different persons; or whether they are not different accounts, with some varying circumstances, of one and the same transaction. I incline, at present, to the former opinion, but it would be rash to decide where so many eminently learned and wise men have disagreed.

The question considered, whether our Lord ate the passover with his disciples before he suffered Every candid person must allow that there are great difficulties relative to the time in which our Lord ate the last passover with his disciples. In the Introduction to my Discourse on the nature and design of the Holy Eucharist, I have examined this subject at large, and considered the four following opinions, viz. I. Our Lord did not eat the passover on the last year of his ministry. II. Our Lord did eat it that year; and at the same time with the Jews. III. He did eat it that year, but not at the same time with the Jews. IV. He did eat a passover of his own instituting, but widely differing from that eaten by the Jews. The two first opinions do not appear to be solidly supported. The two last are of the most importance, are the most likely, and may be harmonized. I shall introduce a few observations on each in this place. And I. On the opinion that "our Lord did eat the passover this year, but not at the same time with the Jews."

Dr. Cudworth, who of all others has handled this subject best, has proved from the Talmud, Mishna, and some of the most reputable of the Jewish rabbins, that the ancient Jews, about our Saviour's time, often solemnized as well the passovers as the other feasts, upon the ferias next before and after the Sabbaths. And, that as the Jews in ancient times reckoned the new moons, not according to astronomical exactness, but according to the phasis, or moon's appearance: and, as this appearance might happen a day later than the real time, consequently there might be a whole day of difference in the time of celebrating one of these feasts, which depended on a particular day of the month; the days of the month being counted from the phasis, or appearance of the new moon. As he describes the whole manner of doing this, both from the Babylonish Talmud, and from Maimonides, I shall give an extract from this part of his work, that my readers may have the whole argument before them.

"In the great or outer court there was a house called Beth Yazeck, where the senate sat all the 30th day of every month, to receive the witnesses of the moon's appearance, and to examine them. If there came approved witnesses on the 30th day, who could state they had seen the new moon, the chief man of the senate stood up, and cried מקדש מקדש mekuddash, it is sanctified; and the people standing by caught the word from him, and cried, Mekuddash! mekuddash! But if, when the consistory had sat all the day, and there came no approved witnesses of the phasis, or appearance of the new moon, then they made an intercalation of one day in the former month, and decreed the following one and thirtieth day to be the calends. But if, after the fourth or fifth day, or even before the end of the month, respectable witnesses came from far, and testified they had seen the new moon in its due time, the senate were bound to alter the beginning of the month, and reckon it a day sooner, viz. from the thirtieth day.

"As the senate were very unwilling to be at the trouble of a second consecration, when they had even fixed on a wrong day, and therefore received very reluctantly the testimony of such witnesses as those last mentioned, they afterwards made a statute to this effect—That whatsoever time the senate should conclude on for the calends of the month, though it were certain they were in the wrong, yet all were bound to order their feasts according to it." This, Dr. Cudworth supposes, actually took place in the time of our Lord; and "as it is not likely that our Lord would submit to this perversion of the original custom, and that following the true phasis, or appearance of the new moon, confirmed by sufficient witnesses, he and his disciples ate the passover on that day; but the Jews, following the pertinacious decree of the Sanhedrin, did not eat it till the day following." Dr. C. farther shows from Epiphanius, that there was a contention, ὁμοῦ ἑσ, a tumult, among the Jews about the passover, that very year. Hence it is likely that what was the real paschal day to our Lord, his disciples, and many other pious Jews who adopted the true phasis phasis, was only the preparation or antecedent evening to others, who acted on the decree of the senate. Besides, it is worthy of note, that not only the Karaites, who do not acknowledge the authority of the Sanhedrin, but also the rabbins themselves grant that, where the case is doubtful, the passover should be celebrated with the same ceremonies, two days together; and it was always doubtful, when the appearance of the new moon could not be fully ascertained.

Bishop Pearce supposes that it was lawful for the Jews to eat the paschal lamb at any time between the evening of Thursday and that of Friday; and that this permission was necessary, because of the immense number of lambs which were to be killed for that purpose: as, in one year, there were not fewer than 256,500 lambs offered. See Josephus, War, b. vii. c. 9. sect. 3. In Matt. xxvi. ver. 17, it is said, Now the first day of the feast of unleavened bread, (τῇ δὲ πρώτῃ τῶν ἀζύμων.) the disciples came to Jesus, saying unto him, Where wilt thou that we prepare for thee to eat the passover? As the feast of unleavened bread did not begin till the day after the passover, the fifteenth day of the month, Lev. xxiii. 5, 6; Num. xxviii. 16, 17, this could not have been properly the first day of that feast; but, as the Jews began to eat unleavened bread on the fourteenth day, Exod. xii. 18, this day was often termed the first of unleavened bread. Now it appears that the evangelists use it in this sense, and call even the paschal day by this name, see Mark xiv 12; Luke xxii. 7.

At first view, this third opinion, which states that Christ did eat the passover with his disciples that year, but not in the same hour with the Jews; and that he expired on the cross the same hour in which the paschal lamb was killed, seems the most probable. For it appears, from what has already been remarked, that our Lord and his disciples ate the passover some hours before the Jews ate theirs; for they, according to custom, ate theirs at the end of the fourteenth day, but Christ appears to have eaten his the preceding evening, which was the beginning of the same sixth day of the week, or Friday, for the Jews began their day at sunset; we at midnight. Thus Christ ate the passover the same day with the Jews, but not on the same hour. Christ, therefore, kept this passover the beginning of the fourteenth day, the precise day in which the Jews had eaten their first passover in Egypt: see Exod. xii. 6-12. And in the same part of the same day in which they had sacrificed their first paschal lamb, viz. between the two evenings, i. e. between the sun's declining west and his setting, Jesus, our passover was sacrificed for us. For it was the third hour, in the course of between 9 and 12, Mark xv. 25, that Christ was nailed to the cross: and in the course of the ninth hour, between 12 and 3 in the afternoon, Matt. xxvii. 46; Mark xv. 34, Jesus, knowing that the antetype had accomplished every thing shadowed forth by the type, said, "It is FINISHED," τετέλεσται, completed, perfected, and, having thus said, he bowed his head, and dismissed his spirit. See on John xix. 14, 30.

Probably there is but one objection of any force that lies against the opinion, that our Lord ate his passover some hours before the Jews in general ate theirs; which is that, if our Lord did eat the passover the evening before the Jews in general ate theirs, it could not have been sacrificed according to the law; nor is it at all likely that the blood was sprinkled at the foot of the altar. If, therefore, the blood was not thus sprinkled by one of the priests, that which constituted the very essence of the rite, as ordained by God, was lacking in that celebrated by our Lord.

To this it is answered:—First, we have already seen that, in consequence of the immense number of sacrifices to be offered on the paschal solemnity, it is highly probable the Jews were obliged to employ two days for this work. It is not at all likely that the blood of 256,500 lambs could be shed and sprinkled at one altar, in the course of one day, by all the priests in Jerusalem, or indeed in the Holy Land; since they had but that one altar where they could legally sprinkle the blood of the victims.

Secondly, we have also seen that, in cases of doubt relative to the time of the appearance of the new moon, the Jews were permitted to hold the passover both days: and that it is probable such a dubious case existed at the time in question. In any of these cases the lamb might have been killed and its blood sprinkled according to the rules and ceremonies of the Jewish Church.

Thirdly, as our Lord was the true paschal lamb, who was, in a few hours after this time, to bear away the sin of the world, he might dispense with this part of the ceremony, and act as Lord of his own institution in this, as he had done before in the case of the Sabbath. At any rate, as it seems probable that he ate the passover at this time, and that he died about the time the Jews offered theirs, it may be fully presumed that he left nothing undone towards a due performance of the rite which the present necessity required, or the law of God could demand.

The objection that our Lord and his disciples appear to have sat or reclined at table all the time they ate what is supposed above to have been the passover, contrary to the paschal institution, which required them to eat it standing, with their staves in their hands, their loins girded, and their shoes on, cannot be considered as having any great weight in it; for, though the terms ἤκειτο, Matt. xxvi. 20, and ἤκειτο, Luke xxii. 14, are used in reference to their eating that evening, and these words signify reclining at table, or on a couch, as is the custom of the orientals, it does not follow that they must necessarily be restrained to that meaning; nor does it appear that this part of the ceremony was much attended to, perhaps not at all, in the latter days of the Jewish Church.

The second opinion which we have to examine is this: Our Lord did eat a passover of his own instituting but widely different from that eaten by the Jews.

Mr. Toinard, in his Greek Harmony of the Gospels, strongly contends that our Lord did not eat what is commonly called the passover this year, but another, of a mystical kind. His chief arguments are the following:—

It is indubitably evident, from the text of St. John, that the night on the beginning of which our Lord supped with his disciples, and instituted the holy sacrament, was not that on which the Jews celebrated the passover; but the preceding evening, on which the passover could not be legally offered. The conclusion is evident from the following passages: John xiii. 1. Now before the feast of the passover, Jesus knowing, &c. Ver. 2. And supper, (not the paschal, but an ordinary supper,) being ended, &c. Ver. 27. That thou doest, do quickly. Ver. 28. Now no one at the table knew for what intent he spake this. Ver. 29. For some thought, because Judas had the bag, that Jesus had said unto him, Buy what we have need of against the feast, &c. Chap. xviii. 28. Then led they Jesus from Caiophas to the hall of judgment, and it was early; and they themselves went not into the judgment hall, lest they should be defiled, but that they might eat the passover. Chap. xix. 14. And it was the preparation of the passover, and about the sixth hour. Now as it appears that at this time the disciples thought our Lord had ordered Judas to go and bring what was necessary for the passover, and they were then supping together, it is evident that it was not the paschal lamb on which they were supping; and it is as evident, from the unwillingness of the Jews to go into the hall of judgment, that they had not as yet eaten the passover. These words are plain, and can be taken in no other sense, without offering them the greatest violence.

Mr. Toinard, having found that our Lord was crucified the sixth day of the week, (Friday,) during the paschal solemnity, in the thirty-third year of the vulgar era, and that the paschal moon of that year was not in conjunction with the sun till the afternoon of Thursday the 19th of March, and that the new moon could not be seen in Judea until the following day, (Friday,) concluded that the intelligence of the oasis, or appearance of the new moon, could not be made by the witnesses to the high court, or senate, sooner than Saturday morning, the 21st of March. That the first day of the first Jewish month, Nisan, could not commence that thirty-third year sooner than the setting of the sun on Friday, March 20th; and, consequently, that Friday, April 3d, on which Christ died, was the 14th of Nisan, (not the 15th,) the day appointed by the law for the celebration of the passover. All these points he took care to have ascertained by the nicest astronomical calculations, in which he was assisted by a very eminent astronomer and mathematician, Bullialdus. (Mr. Bouilleau.)

These two last opinions, apparently contradictory, and which alone, of all those offered on the subject, deserve consideration, may be brought to harmonize. That Jesus ate the passover with his disciples the evening before the Jews ate theirs, seems pretty clearly proved from the text of St. Luke, and the arguments founded on that text.

All that is assumed there, to make the whole consistent, is, that the Jews that year held the passover both on the 13th and 14th of Nisan, because of the reasons already assigned; and that therefore Peter and John, who were employed on this business, might have got the blood legally sprinkled by the hands of a priest, which was all that was necessary to the legality of the rite.

But, secondly, should it appear improbable that such double celebration took place at this time, and that our Lord could not have eaten the passover that year with his disciples, as he died on the very hour on which the paschal lamb was slain, and consequently before he could legally eat the passover, how then can the text of St. Luke be reconciled with this fact? I answer, with the utmost ease; by substituting a passover for the passover, and simply assuming that our Lord at this time instituted the holy EUCCHARIST, in place of the PASCHAL LAMB: and thus it will appear he ate a passover with his disciples the evening before his death, viz. the mystical passover, or sacrament of his body and blood; and that this was the passover which he so ardently longed to eat with his disciples before he suffered. This is the opinion of Mr. Toinard, and, if granted, solves every difficulty. Thus the whole controversy is brought into a very narrow compass: Our Lord did eat a passover with his disciples some short time before he died:—the question is, What passover did he eat—the regular legal passover, or a mystical one? That he ate a passover is, I think, demonstrated: but whether the literal or mystical one, is a matter of doubt. On this point, good and learned men may innocently hesitate and differ: but on either hypothesis, the text of the evangelists is unimpeachable, and all shadow of contradiction done away: for the question then rests on the peculiar meaning of names and words. On this hypothesis, the preparation of the passover must be considered as implying no more than—1. Providing a convenient room. 2. Bringing water for the baking on the following day, because on that day the bringing of the water would have been unlawful. 3. Making inquisition for the leaven, that every thing of this kind might be removed from the house where the passover was to be eaten, according to the very strict and awful command of God, Exod. xii. 15–20; xxiii. 15; xxxiv. 25. These, it is probable, were the acts of preparation which the disciples were commanded to perform, Matt. xxvi. 11; Mark xiv. 13, 14; Luke xxii. 8–11, and which, on their arrival at the city, they punctually executed. See Matt. xxvi. 19; Mark xiv. 16; Luke xxii. 13. Thus every thing was prepared, and the holy sacrament instituted, which should, in the Christian Church, take place of the Jewish passover, and continue to be a memorial of the sacrifice which Christ was about to make by his death on the cross: for as the paschal lamb had showed forth his death till he came, this death fulfilled the design of the rite, and sealed up the vision and prophecy.

All preparations for the true paschal sacrifice being now made, Jesus was immediately betrayed, shortly after apprehended, and in a few hours expired upon the cross. It is therefore very likely that he did not literally eat the passover this year; and may I not add, that it is more than probable that the passover was not eaten in the whole land of Judea on this occasion? The rending of the vail of the temple, Matt. xxvii. 51; Mark xv. 38; Luke xxiii. 45, the terrible earthquake, Matt. xxvii. 51–54, the dismal and unnatural darkness, which was over the whole land of Judea, from the sixth hour, (twelve o'clock,) to the ninth hour (i. e. three o'clock in the afternoon,) with all the other prodigies which took place on this awful occasion, we may naturally conclude, were more than sufficient to terrify and appal this guilty nation, and totally to prevent the celebration of the paschal ceremonies. Indeed, the time in which killing the sacrifices, and sprinkling the blood of the lambs, should have been performed, was wholly occupied with these most dreadful portents; and it would be absurd to suppose that, under such terrible evidences of the Divine indignation, any religious ordinances or festive preparations could possibly have taken place.

My readers will probably be surprised to see the preceding opinions so dissentient among themselves, and the plausible reasons by which they are respectively supported, where each seems by turns to prevail. When I took up the question, I had no suspicion that it was encumbered with so many difficulties. These I now feel and acknowledge; nevertheless, I think the plan of reconciling the texts of the evangelists, particularly St. Luke and St. John, which I have adopted above, is natural, and, I am in hopes, will not appear altogether unsatisfactory to my readers. On the subject, circumstanced as it is, hypothesis alone can prevail; for indubitable evidence and certainty cannot be obtained. The morning of the resurrection is probably the nearest period in which accurate information on this point can be expected. Je suis trompé, says Bouilleau, si cete question peut être jamais bien éclaircie. “If I be not mistaken, this question will never be thoroughly understood.” It would be presumptuous to say, Christ did eat the passover this last year of his ministry: it would be as hazardous to say he did not eat it. The middle way is the safest; and it is that which is adopted above. One thing is sufficiently evident, that Christ, our paschal lamb, has been sacrificed for us; and that he has instituted the holy eucharist, to be a perpetual memorial of that his precious death until his coming again: and they who, with a sincere heart, and true faith in his passion and death, partake of it, shall be made partakers of his most blessed body and blood. Reader, praise God for the atonement, and rest not without an application of it to thy own soul.

CHAPTER XXVII.

In the morning, Christ is bound and delivered to Pontius Pilate, 1, 2. Judas, seeing his Master condemned, repents, acknowledges his transgression to the chief priests, attests Christ's innocence, throws down the money, and goes and hangs himself, 3-5. They buy the potter's field with the money, 6-10. Christ, questioned by Pilate, refuses to answer, 11-14. Pilate, while inquiring of the Jews whether they would have Jesus or Barabbas released, receives a message from his wife to have nothing to do in this wicked business, 15-19. The multitude, influenced by the chief priests and elders, desire Barabbas to be released, and Jesus to be crucified, 20-23. Pilate attests his innocence, and the people make themselves and their posterity responsible for his blood, 24, 25. Barabbas is released, and Christ is scourged, 26. The soldiers strip him, clothe him with a scarlet robe, crown him with thorns, mock, and variously insult him, 27-31. Simon compelled to bear his cross, 32. They bring him to Galgatha, give him vinegar mingled with gall to drink, crucify him, and cast lots for his raiment, 33-36. His accusation, 37. Two thieves are crucified with him, 38. He is mocked and insulted while hanging on the cross, 39-44. The awful darkness, 45. Jesus calls upon God, is offered vinegar to drink, expires, 46-50. Prodiges that accompanied and followed his death, 51-53. He is acknowledged by the centurion, 54. Several women behold the crucifixion, 55, 56. Joseph of Arimathea begs the body of Pilate, and deposits it in his own new tomb, 57-60. The women watch the sepulchre, 61. The Jews consult with Pilate how they may prevent the resurrection of Christ, 62-64. He grants them a guard for the sepulchre, and they seal the stone that stopped the mouth of the tomb where he was laid, 65, 66.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 1.

WHEN the morning was come,
all the chief priests and elders of the people took counsel against Jesus to put him to death :

2 And when they had bound him, they led

^a Psa. ii. 2; Mark xv. 1; Luke xxii. 66; xxiii. 1; John xviii. 28.

NOTES ON CHAP. XXVII.

Verse 1. When the morning was come] As soon as it was light—took counsel against Jesus. They had begun this counsel the preceding evening, see chap. xxvi. 59. But as it was contrary to all forms of law to proceed against a person's life by night, they seem to have separated for a few hours, and then, at the break of day, came together again, pretending to conduct the business according to the forms of law.

To put him to death] They had already determined his death, and pronounced the sentence of death on him; chap. xxvi. 66. And now they assemble under the pretence of reconsidering the evidence, and deliberating on it, to give the greater appearance of justice to their conduct. They wished to make it appear that "they had taken ample time to consider of it, and, from the fullest conviction, by the most satisfactory and conclusive evidence, they had now delivered him into the hands of the Romans, to meet that death to which they had adjudged him."

Verse 2. They—delivered him to Pontius Pilate] The Sanhedrin had the power of life and death in their own hands in every thing that concerned religion; but as they had not evidence to put Christ to death because of false doctrine, they wished to give countenance to their conduct by bringing in the civil power, and therefore they delivered him up to Pilate as one who aspired to regal dignities, and whom he must put to death, if he professed to be Cæsar's friend. Pontius Pilate governed Judea ten years under the Emperor Tiberius; but, having exercised great cruelties against the Samaritans, they complained of him to the emperor, in consequence of which he was deposed, and sent in exile him away, and ^b delivered him to Pontius Pilate the governor.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 1.

3 ¶ ^c Then Judas, which had betrayed him, when he saw that he was condemned, repented himself, and brought again to Vienna, in Dauphny, where he killed himself two years after.

^b Chap. xx. 19; Acts iii. 13.—^c Chap. xxv. 14, 15.

Verse 3. Judas—when he saw that he was condemned, repented] There is much of the wisdom and goodness of God to be seen in this part of Judas's conduct. Had our Lord been condemned to death on the evidence of one of his own disciples, it would have furnished infidels with a strong argument against Christ and the Christian religion. "One of his own disciples, knowing the whole imposture, declared it to the Jewish rulers, in consequence of which he was put to death as an impostor and deceiver." But the traitor, being stung with remorse, came and acknowledged his crime, and solemnly declared the innocence of his Master, threw back the money which they gave him to induce him to do this villainous act; and, to establish the evidence which he now gave against them and himself, in behalf of the innocence of Christ, hanged himself, or died through excessive grief and contrition. Thus the character of Christ was rescued from all reproach; infidelity deprived of the power to cry "imposture!" and the Jewish rulers overwhelmed with eternal infamy. If it should ever be said, "One who knew him best delivered him up as an impostor,"—to this it may be immediately answered, "The same person, struck with remorse, came and declared his own guilt, and Christ's innocence; accused and convicted the Jewish rulers, in the open council, of having hired him to do this iniquitous action, threw them back the bribe they had given him, and then hanged himself through distress and despair, concluding his iniquity in this business was too great to be forgiven." Let him who chooses, after this plenary evidence to the innocence

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests and elders,

4 Saying, I have sinned in that I have betrayed the innocent blood. And they said, What is that to us? see thou to that.

5 And he cast down the pieces of silver in the temple, ^d and departed, and went and hanged himself.

6 And the chief priests took the silver pieces, of Christ, continue the objection, and cry out imposture! take heed that he go not and do LIKEWISE. Caiaphas, Pilate, and Judas have done so already, and I have known several, who have called Christ an impostor, who have cut their own throats, shot, drowned, or hanged themselves. God is a jealous God, and highly resents every thing that is done and said against that eternal truth that came to man through Jesus Christ, by the Holy Spirit. Indeed, there is one class of Deists, viz. those who are vicious in their lives, and virulent in their opposition to Christianity, who generally bring themselves to an untimely end.

^{d2} Sam. xvii. 23, Acts i. 18.

Verse 4. Innocent blood.] Αἷμα ἀθώον, a Hebraism, for an innocent man. But instead of αθώον, innocent, two ancient MSS., Syriac, Vulgate, Sahidic, Armenian, and all the Itala; Origen, Cyprian, Lucifer, Ambrose, Leo, read δικαίον, righteous, or just.

What is that to us?] What is it?—A great deal. You should immediately go and reverse the sentence you have pronounced, and liberate the innocent person. But this would have been justice, and that would have been a stranger at their tribunal.

Verse 5. In the temple] Ναός signifies, properly, the temple itself, into which none but the priests were permitted to enter: therefore ἐν τῷ ναῷ must signify, near the temple, by the temple door, where the boxes stood to receive the free-will offerings of the people, for the support and repairs of the sacred edifice. See this amply proved by Kypke.

Hanged himself] Or was strangled—ἀπηνέχαστο. Some eminent critics believe that he was only suffocated by excessive grief, and thus they think the account here given will agree with that in Acts i. 18. Mr. Wakefield supports this meaning of the word with great learning and ingenuity. I have my doubts—the old method of reconciling the two accounts appears to me quite plausible—he went and strangled himself, and the rope breaking, he fell down, and by the violence of the fall his body was bursted, and his bowels gushed out. I have thought proper, on a matter of such difficulty, to use the word strangled, as possessing a middle meaning between choking or suffocation by excessive grief, and hanging, as an act of suicide. See the note on chap. x. ver. 4. Dr. Lightfoot is of opinion that the devil caught him up into the air, strangled him, and threw him down on the ground with violence, so that his body was burst, and his guts shed out! This was an ancient tradition.

Verse 6. The treasury] Κορβαν—the place whither the people brought their free-will offerings for the service of the temple, so called from the Hebrew and said, It is not lawful for to put them into the treasury, because it is the price of blood.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

7 And they took counsel, and bought with them the potter's field to bury strangers in.

8 Wherefore that field was called 'The field of blood unto this day.

9 Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremy the prophet, saying, 'And they ^e Acts i. 19.—^f Zech. xi. 12, 13.

קרבן korban, AN OFFERING, from קרב karab, he drew nigh, because the person who brought the gift came nigh to that place where God manifested his glory between the cherubin, over the mercy-seat in the most holy place. It is from this idea that the phrase to draw nigh to God is taken, which is so frequently used in the sacred writings.

Because it is the price of blood.] "What hypocrites, as one justly exclaims, to adjudge an innocent man to death, and break the eternal laws of justice and mercy without scruple, and to be, at the same time, so very nice in their attention to a ceremonial direction of the law of Moses! Thus it is that the devil often deludes many, even among the priests, by a false and superstitious tenderness of conscience in things indifferent, while calumny, envy, oppression of the innocent, and a conformity to the world, give them no manner of trouble or disturbance." See Quesnel.

Verse 7. To bury strangers in.] Τοῖς ξένοις, the strangers, probably meaning, as some learned men conjecture, the Jewish strangers who might have come to Jerusalem, either to worship, or on some other business, and died there during their stay. See here, the very money for which the blessed Jesus was sold becomes subservient to the purpose of mercy and kindness! The bodies of strangers have a place of rest in the field purchased by the price at which his life was valued, and the souls of strangers and foreigners have a place of rest and refuge in his blood which was shed as a ransom price for the salvation of the whole world.

Verse 8. The field of blood] In vain do the wicked attempt to conceal themselves; God makes them instrumental in discovering their own wickedness. Judas, by returning the money, and the priests, by laying it out, raise to themselves an eternal monument—the one of his treachery, the others of their perfidiousness, and both of the innocence of Jesus Christ. As long as the Jewish polity continued, it might be said, "This is the field that was bought from the potter with the money which Judas got from the high priests for betraying his Master; which he, in deep compunction of spirit, brought back to them, and they bought this ground for a burial-place for strangers: for as it was the price of the blood of an innocent man, they did not think proper to let it rest in the treasury of the temple where the traitor had thrown it, who afterwards, in despair, went and hanged himself." What a standing proof must this have been of the innocence of Christ, and of their perfidy!

Verse 9. Jeremy the prophet] The words quoted

A. M. 4033. took the thirty pieces of silver, the
A. D. 29. price of him that was valued,
An. Olymp. whom they of the children of CCII. 1. Israel did value;

10 And gave them for the potter's field, as the Lord appointed me.

11 ¶ And Jesus stood before the governor: ^b and the governor asked him, saying, Art thou the King of the Jews? And Jesus said unto him, ⁱ Thou sayest.

12 And when he was accused of the chief priests and elders, ^k he answered nothing.

13 Then said Pilate unto him, ^l Hearest

^g Or, whom they bought of the children of Israel. — ^h Mark xv. 2; Luke xxiii. 3; John xviii. 33. — ⁱ John xviii. 37; 1 Tim.

here are not found in the Prophet Jeremiah, but in Zech. xi. 13. But St. Jerome says that a Hebrew of the sect of the Nazarenes showed him this prophecy in a Hebrew apocryphal copy of Jeremiah; but probably they were inserted there only to countenance the quotation here.

One of Colbert's, a MS. of the eleventh century, has Ζαχαριου, Zachariah; so has the later Syriac in the margin, and a copy of the Arabic quoted by Bengel. In a very elegant and correct MS. of the Vulgate, in my possession, written in the fourteenth century, Zachariam is in the margin, and Jeremiam in the text, but the former is written by a later hand. Jeremiah is wanting in two MSS., the Syriac, later Persic, two of the Itala, and in some other Latin copies. It is very likely that the original reading was δια του προφητου, and the name of no prophet mentioned. This is the more likely, as Matthew often omits the name of the prophet in his quotations. See chap. i. 22; ii. 5, 15; xiii. 35; xxi. 4. Bengel approves of the omission.

It was an ancient custom among the Jews, says Dr. Lightfoot, to divide the Old Testament into three parts: the first beginning with the law was called THE LAW; the second beginning with the Psalms was called THE PSALMS; the third beginning with the prophet in question was called JEREMIAH: thus, then, the writings of Zechariah and the other prophets being included in that division that began with Jeremiah, all quotations from it would go under the name of this prophet. If this be admitted, it solves the difficulty at once. Dr. Lightfoot quotes Baba Bathra, and Rabbi David Kimchi's preface to the prophet Jeremiah, as his authorities; and insists that the word Jeremiah is perfectly correct as standing at the head of that division from which the evangelist quoted, and which gave its denomination to all the rest. But Jeremiah is the reading in several MSS. of the Coptic. It is in one of the Coptic Dictionaries in the British Museum, and in a Coptic MS. of Jeremiah, in the library of St. German. So I am informed by the Rev. Henry Tattam, Rector of St. Cuthbert's, Bedford.

Verse 11. Before the governor] My old MS. English Bible translates ηγεμων hēgēmōn chief justise, President.

A. M. 4033. thou not how many things they
A. D. 29. witness against thee?

14 And he answered him to never a word; insomuch that the governor marvelled greatly.

15 ¶ Now at that feast the governor was wont to release unto the people a prisoner, whom they would.

16 And they had then a notable prisoner, called Barabbas.

17 Therefore when they were gathered together, Pilate said unto them, Whom will ye that I release unto you? Barabbas, or Jesus which is called Christ?

vi. 13. — ^k Chap. xxvi. 63; John xix. 9. — ^l Chap. xxvi. 62; John xix. 10. — ^m Mark xv. 6; Luke xxiii. 17; John xviii. 39.

Art thou the King of the Jews?] The Jews had undoubtedly delivered him to Pilate as one who was rising up against the imperial authority, and assuming the regal office. See on ver. 2.

Verse 12. He answered nothing.] An answer to such accusations was not necessary: they sufficiently confuted themselves.

Verse 14. Marvelled greatly.] Silence under calumny manifests the utmost magnanimity. The chief priests did not admire this because it confounded them; but Pilate, who had no interest to serve by it, was deeply affected. This very silence was predicted. Isa. liii. 7.

Verse 15. The governor was wont to release] Whence this custom originated among the Jews is not known,—probably it was introduced by the Romans themselves, or by Pilate, merely to oblige the Jews, by showing them this public token of respect; but if it originated with him, he must have had the authority of Augustus; for the Roman laws never gave such discretionary power to any governor.

Verse 16. A notable prisoner—Barabbas.] This person had, a short time before, raised an insurrection in Jerusalem, in which it appears, from Mark xv. 7, some lives were lost. In some MSS., and in the Armenian and Syriac Hieros., this man has the surname of Jesus. Professor Birch has discovered this reading in a Vatican MS., written in 949, and numbered 354, in which is a marginal note which has been attributed to Anastasius, bishop of Antioch, and to Chrysostom, which asserts that in the most ancient MSS. the passage was as follows:—Τίνα θελετε απο των διω αποστολων υμων, ἢ τον βαρabbas, η ἢ τον λεγομεν τον ΧΝ; Which of the two do ye wish me to release unto you, Jesus Barabbas, or Jesus who is called Christ? As Jesus, or Joshua, was a very common name among the Jews, and as the name of the father was often joined to that of the son, as Simon Barjonah, Simon, son of Jonah; so it is probable it was the case here, Jesus Barabba, Jesus, son of Abba, or Abbiah. If this name were originally written as above, which I am inclined to believe, the general omission of JESUS in the MSS. may be accounted for from the over zealous scrupulosity of Christian copyists, who were

A. M. 4033.

A. D. 29.

An. Olymp.

CCH. I.

18 For he knew that for envy they had delivered him.

(19 ¶ When he was set down on the judgment seat, his wife sent unto him, saying, Have thou nothing to do with that just man: for I have suffered many things this day in a dream because of him.)

20 ¶ But the chief priests and elders persuaded the multitude that they should ask Barabbas, and destroy Jesus.

21 The governor answered and said unto them, Whether of the twain will ye that I release unto you? They said, Barabbas.

22 Pilate saith unto them, What shall I do

^a Mark xv. 11; Luke xxiii. 18; John xviii. 10; Acts iii. 14.

^a Deut. xxi. 6.

unwilling that a murderer should, in the same verse, be honoured with the name of the Redeemer of the world. See Birch in New Test.

Verse 18. For envy] Δια φθονος, through malice. Then it was his business, as an upright judge, to have dispersed this mob, and immediately released Jesus.

Seeing malice is capable of putting even Christ himself to death, how careful should we be not to let the least spark of it harbour in our breast. Let it be remembered that malice as often originates from envy as it does from anger.

Verse 19. I have suffered many things—in a dream] There is no doubt that God had appeared unto this woman, testifying the innocence of Christ, and showing the evils which should pursue Pilate if this innocent blood should be shed by his authority. See verse 2.

Verse 20. Ask Barabbas] Who had raised an insurrection, and committed murder—and to destroy Jesus, whose voice was never heard in their streets, and who had, during the space of three years and a half, gone about unweariedly, from village to village, instructing the ignorant, healing the diseased, and raising the dead.

Verse 21. They said, Barabbas.] What a fickle crowd! A little before they all hailed him as the Son of David, and acknowledged him as a gift from God; now they prefer a murderer to him! But this it appears they did at the instigation of the chief priests. We see here how dangerous wicked priests are in the Church of Christ; when pastors are corrupt, they are capable of inducing their flock to prefer Barabbas to Jesus, the world to God, and the pleasures of sense to the salvation of their souls. The invidious epithet which a certain statesman gave to the people at large was, in its utmost latitude, applicable to these Jews,—they were a SWINISH MULTITUDE.

Verse 22. What shall I do then with Jesus?] Showing, hereby, that it was his wish to release him.

Verse 23. What evil hath he done?] Pilate plainly saw that there was nothing laid to his charge for which, consistently with the Roman laws, he could condemn him.

But they cried out the more] What strange fury then with Jesus, which is called Christ? They all say unto him, Let him be crucified.

A. M. 4035.

A. D. 29.

An. Olymp.

CCH. I.

23 And the governor said, Why, what evil hath he done? But they cried out the more, saying, Let him be crucified.

24 When Pilate saw that he could prevail nothing, but that rather a tumult was made, he took water, and washed his hands before the multitude, saying, I am innocent of the blood of this just person: see ye to it.

25 Then answered all the people, and said, His blood be on us, and on our children.

26 Then released he Barabbas unto them:

^a Deut. xix. 10; Josh. ii. 19; 1 Kings ii. 32; 2 Sam. i. 16; Acts v. 28.

and injustice! They could not answer Pilate's question, What evil hath he done? He had done none, and they knew he had done none; but they are determined on his death.

Verse 24. Pilate—took water, and washed his hands] Thus signifying his innocence. It was a custom among the Hebrews, Greeks, and Latins, to wash the hands in token of innocence, and to show that they were pure from any imputed guilt. In case of an undiscovered murder, the elders of that city which was nearest to the place where the dead body was found, were required by the law, Deut. xxi. 1–10, to wash their hands over the victim which was offered to expiate the crime, and thus make public protestation of their own innocence. David says, I will wash my hands in innocence, so shall I compass thine altar, Psa. xxvi. 6. As Pilate knew Christ was innocent, he should have prevented his death: he had the armed force at his command, and should have dispersed this infamous mob. Had he been charged with countenancing a seditious person, he could have easily cleared himself. Had the matter been brought before the emperor. He, therefore, was inexcusable.

Verse 25. His blood be on us and on our children.] If this man be innocent, and we put him to death as a guilty person, may the punishment due to such a crime be visited upon us, and upon our children after us!—What a dreadful imprecation! and how literally fulfilled! The notes on chap. xxiv. will show how they fell victims to their own imprecation, being visited with a series of calamities unexampled in the history of the world. They were visited with the same kind of punishment; for the Romans crucified them in such numbers when Jerusalem was taken, that there was found a deficiency of crosses for the condemned, and of places for the crosses. Their children or descendants have had the same curse entailed upon them, and continue to this day a proof of the innocence of Christ, the truth of his religion, and of the justice of God.

Verse 26. Scourged Jesus] This is allowed to have been a very severe punishment of itself among the Romans, the flesh being generally cut by the whips used for this purpose; so the poet—

A. M. 4033. and when ^a he had scourged Je-
A. D. 29. sus, he delivered him to be cru-
An. Olymp. cified.
CCII. 1.

27 ¶ Then the soldiers of the governor took Jesus into the ^s common hall, and gathered unto him the whole band of soldiers.

28 And they stripped him, and ^t put on him a scarlet robe.

^a Isa. liii. 5; Mark xv. 15; Luke xxiii. 16, 24, 25; John xix. 1, 16.—^t Mark xv. 16; John xix. 2.

————— Horribili SECTERE flagello.

"To be cut by the horrible whip."—HOR. Sat. I. 3. 119. And sometimes, it seems, they were whipped to death. See the same poet, Sat. I. 2. 41.

————— Ille FLAGELLIS

AD MORTEM cæsus.——

See also HORAT. Epod. od. iv. v. 11.

It has been thought that Pilate might have spared this additional cruelty of whipping; but it appears that it was a common custom to scourge those criminals which were to be crucified, (see Josephus De Bello, lib. ii. c. 25.) and lenity in Christ's case is not to be allowed; he must take all the misery in full tale.

Delivered him to be crucified.] Tacitus, the Roman historian, mentions the death of Christ in very remarkable terms:—

Nero—quasitissimis pœnis affecit, quos—vulgus CHRISTIANOS appellabat. Auctor nominis ejus CHRISTUS, qui Tiberio imperitante, per Procuratorem Pontium Pilatum supplicio affectus erat.—"Nero put those who commonly went by the name of Christians to the most exquisite tortures. The author of this name was CHRIST, who was capitally punished in the reign of TIBERIUS, by PONTIUS PILATE the PROCURATOR."

Verse 27. The common hall] Or, prætorium.—Called so from the prætor, a principal magistrate among the Romans, whose business it was to administer justice in the absence of the consul. This place might be termed in English the court house, or common hall.

Verse 28. Stripped him] Took off his mantle, or upper garment.

A scarlet robe] Or, according to Mark and John, a purple robe, such as emperors and kings wore.

Verse 29. A crown of thorns] Στέφανον ἐξ ἀκανθῶν. It does not appear that this crown was intended to be an instrument of punishment or torture to his head, but rather to render him ridiculous; for which cause also they put a reed in his hand, by way of sceptre, and bowed their knees, pretending to do him homage. The crown was not probably of thorns, in our sense of the word: there are eminently learned men who think that the crown was formed of the herb acanthus; and Bishop Pearce and Michaelis are of this opinion. Mark, chap. xv. 17, and John, chap. xix. 5, term it, στέφανον ἀκανθῶν, which may very well be translated an acanthine crown or wreath, formed out of the branches of the herb acanthus, or bear's foot. This, however, is a prickly plant, though nothing like thorns, in the common meaning of that word. Many Christians have gone astray in magnifying the sufferings of Christ from this circumstance; and painters, the worst 29 "And when they had platted ^{A. M. 4033.} a crown of thorns, they put ^{A. D. 29.} it upon ^{An. Olymp.} his head, and a reed in his right ^{CCII. 1.} hand: and they bowed the knee before him, and mocked him, saying, Hail, king of the Jews!

30 And ^v they spit upon him, and took the reed, and smote him on the head.

^a Or, governor's house.——^t Luke xxiii. 11.——^u Isa. lxi. 19; Isa. liii. 3.——^v Isa. l. 6; chap. xxvi. 67.

of all commentators, frequently represent Christ with a crown of long thorns, which one standing by is striking into his head with a stick. These representations engender ideas both false and absurd.

There is a passage produced from Philo by Dr. Lardner, which casts much light on these indignities offered to our blessed Lord.

"Caligula, the successor of Tiberius, gave Agrippa the tetrarchy of his uncle Philip, with the right of wearing a diadem or crown. When he came to Alexandria, on his way to his tetrarchate, the inhabitants of that place, filled with envy at the thoughts of a Jew having the title of king, showed their indignation in the following way. They brought one Carabas (a sort of an idiot) into the theatre; and, having placed him on a lofty seat, that he might be seen by all, they put a diadem upon his head, made of the herb byblos, (the ancient papyrus, or paper flag;) his body they covered with a mat or carpet, instead of a royal cloak. One seeing a piece of reed, παρυπον (the stem, probably, of the aforesaid herb) lying on the ground, picked it up, and put it in his hand in place of a sceptre. Having thus given him a mock royal dress, several young fellows, with poles on their shoulders, came and stood on each side of him as his guards. Then there came people, some to pay their homage to him, some to ask justice, and some to consult him on affairs of state; and the crowd that stood round about made a confused noise, crying, Mario, that being, as they say, the Syriac word for LORD; thereby showing that they intended to ridicule Agrippa, who was a Syrian." See PHILO, Flacc. p. 970, and Dr. Lardner, Works, vol. i. p. 159.

There is the most remarkable coincidence between this account and that given by the evangelists; and the conjecture concerning the acanthus will probably find no inconsiderable support from the byblos and papyrus of Philo. This plant, Pliny says, grows to ten cubits long in the stem; and the flowers were used ad deos coronandos, for CROWNING THE GODS. See Hist. Nat. lib. xiii. c. 11.

The reflections of pious Quesnel on these insults offered to our blessed Lord merit serious attention. "Let the crown of thorns make those Christians blush who throw away so much time, pains, and money, in beautifying and adorning a sinful head. Let the world do what it will to render the royalty and mysteries of Christ contemptible, it is my glory to serve a King thus debased; my salvation, to adore that which the world dispises; and my redemption, to go unto God through the merits of him who was crowned with thorns."

Verse 30. And they spit upon him] "Let us pay

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. I. 31 And after that they had mocked him, they took the robe off from him, and put his own raiment on him, * and led him away to crucify him.

32 * And as they came out, † they found a man of Cyrene, Simon by name: him they compelled to bear his cross.

* Isa. liii. 7.—† Num. xv. 35; 1 Kings xxi. 13; Acts vii. 58; Heb. xiii. 12.—‡ Mark xv. 21; Luke xxiii. 26.

our adoration," says the same pious writer, "and humble ourselves in silence at the sight of a spectacle which faith alone renders credible, and which our senses would hardly endure. Jesus Christ, in this condition, preaches to the kings of the earth this truth—that their sceptres are but reeds, with which themselves shall be smitten, bruised, and crushed at his tribunal, if they do not use them here to the advancement of his kingdom."

Verse 32. A man of Cyrene—him they compelled to bear his cross.] In John, chap. xix. 16, 17, we are told Christ himself bore the cross, and this, it is likely, he did for a part of the way; but, being exhausted with the scourging and other cruel usage which he had received, he was found incapable of bearing it alone; therefore they obliged Simon, not, I think, to bear it entirely, but to assist Christ, by bearing a part of it. It was a constant practice among the Romans, to oblige criminals to bear their cross to the place of execution: insomuch that Plutarch makes use of it as an illustration of the misery of vice. "Every kind of wickedness produces its own particular torment, just as every malefactor, when he is brought forth to execution, carries his own cross." See Lardner's Credib. vol. i. p. 160.

Verse 33. A place called Golgotha] From the Hebrew גולגתה or גלגלה, golgoth, a skull, probably so called from the many skulls of those who had suffered crucifixion and other capital punishments scattered up and down in the place. It is the same as Calvary, Calvaria, i. e. calvi capitis arca, the place of bare skulls. Some think the place was thus called, because it was in the form of a human skull. It is likely that it was the place of public execution, similar to the Gemonie Scala at Rome.

Verse 34. They gave him vinegar—mingled with gall] Perhaps χολη, commonly translated gall, signifies no more than bitters of any kind. It was a common custom to administer a stupefying potion compounded of sour wine, which is the same as vinegar, from the French vinaigre, frankincense, and myrrh, to condemned persons, to help to alleviate their sufferings, or so disturb their intellect that they might not be sensible of them. The rabbins say that they put a grain of frankincense into a cup of strong wine; and they ground this on Prov. xxxi. 6: Give strong drink unto him that is ready to perish, i. e. who is condemned to death. Some person, out of kindness, appears to have administered this to our blessed Lord; but he, as in all other cases, determining to endure the fulness of pain, refused to take what was thus offered to him, choosing to tread the winepress alone. Instead of οξος, vinegar, several excellent MSS. and versions have οινος, wine; but as sour wine is said to have been a general drink of the common people and Roman soldiers, it being the same as vinegar, it is of little consequence which reading is here adopted. This custom of giving stupefying potions to condemned malefactors is alluded to in Prov. xxxi. 6: Give strong drink, שכר shekar, inebriating drink, to him who is ready to perish, and wine to him who is BITTER of soul—because he is just going to suffer the punishment of death. And thus the rabbins, as we have seen above understand it. See Lightfoot and Schoettgen.

33 ¶ 2 And when they were come unto a place called Golgotha, that is to say, a place of a skull, 34 * They gave him vinegar to drink mingled with gall: and when he had tasted thereof he would not drink.

* Mark xv. 22; Luke xxiii. 33; John xix. 17.—† Psa. lxxix. 21: see ver. 48.

Michaelis offers an ingenious exposition of this place: "Immediately after Christ was fastened to the cross, they gave him, according to Matt. xxviii. 34, vinegar mingled with gall; but, according to Mark, they offered him wine mingled with myrrh. That St. Mark's account is the right one is probable from this circumstance, that Christ refused to drink what was offered him, as appears from both evangelists. Wine mixed with myrrh was given to malefactors at the place of execution, to intoxicate them, and make them less sensible to pain. Christ, therefore, with great propriety, refused the aid of such remedies. But if vinegar was offered him, which was taken merely to assuage thirst, there could be no reason for his rejecting it. Besides, he tasted it before he rejected it; and therefore he must have found it different from that which, if offered to him, he was ready to receive. To solve this difficulty, we must suppose that the words used in the Hebrew Gospel of St. Matthew were such as agreed with the account given by St. Mark, and at the same time were capable of the construction which was put on them by St. Matthew's Greek translator. Suppose St. Matthew wrote חליא בכרירא (chaleea bemireera) which signifies, sweet wine with bitters, or sweet wine and myrrh, as we find it in Mark; and Matthew's translator overlooked the yod in חליא (chaleea) he took it for חלא (chala) which signifies vinegar; and bitter, he translated by χολη, as it is often used in the Septuagint. Nay, St. Matthew may have written חלא and have still meant to express sweet wine; if so, the difference only consisted in the points; for the same word which, when pronounced chalé, signifies sweet, denotes vinegar, as soon as it is pronounced chala."

With this conjecture Dr. Marsh (Michaelis's translator) is not satisfied; and therefore finds a Chaldee word for οινος wine, which may easily be mistaken for one that denotes οξος vinegar; and likewise a Chaldee word, which signifies σμυρνα, (myrrh), which may be easily mistaken for one that denotes χολη, (gall.) "Now," says he, "חמר (chamar) or חמרא (chomera)

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

35 ^b And they crucified him, and parted his garments, casting lots : that it might be fulfilled which was really denotes οινος (wine,) and חמץ (chamets) or חמץא (chametsa) really denotes οξος (vinegar.) Again, כורא (nura) really signifies σμύρνα (myrrh), and כררא (mura) really signifies χολη (gall.) If, then, we suppose that the original Chaldee text was חמץא הליט בכורא (chamera heleet bemura) wine mingled with myrrh, which is not at all improbable, as it is the reading of the Syriac version, at Mark xv. 23, it might easily have been mistaken for כררא הליט בכורא (chametsa haleet bemurera) vinegar mingled with gall." This is a more ingenious conjecture than that of Michaelis. See Marsh's notes to Michaelis, vol. iii., part 2d. p. 127-28. But as that kind of sour wine, which was used by the Roman soldiers and common people, appears to have been termed οινος, and vin aigre is sour wine, it is not difficult to reconcile the two accounts, in what is most material to the facts here recorded.

^b Mark xv. 24; Luke xxiii. 34; John xix. 24.

Verse 35. And they crucified him] Crucifixion properly means the act of nailing or tying to a cross. The cross was made of two beams, either crossing at the top at right angles, like a T, or in the middle of their length, like an X. There was, besides, a piece on the centre of the transverse beam, to which the accusation or statement of the crime of the culprit was attached, and a piece of wood which projected from the middle, on which the person sat, as on a sort of saddle; and by which the whole body was supported. Tertullian mentions this particularly: Nobis, says he, tota crux imputatur, cum antenna scilicet sua, et cum illo sedilis excessu. Advers. Nationes, lib. ii. Justin Martyr, in his dialogue with Trypho the Jew, gives precisely the same description of the cross; and it is worthy of observation that both he and Tertullian flourished before the punishment of the cross had been abolished. The cross on which our Lord suffered was of the former kind; being thus represented in all old monuments, coins, and crosses. St. Jerome compares it to a bird flying, a man swimming, or praying with his arms extended. The punishment of the cross was inflicted among the ancient Hindoos from time immemorial for various species of theft; see Halhead's Code of Gentoo Laws, p. 248, and was common among the Syrians, Egyptians, Persians, Africans, Greeks, and Romans: it is also still in use among the Chinese, who do not nail, but tie the criminal to it. It was probably the Romans who introduced it among the Jews. Before they became subject to the Romans, they used hanging or gibbeting, but not the cross. This punishment was the most dreadful of all others, both for the shame and pain of it: and so scandalous, that it was inflicted as the last mark of detestation upon the vilest of people. It was the punishment of robbers and murderers, provided they were slaves; but if they were free, it was thought too infamous a punishment for such, let their crimes be what they might.

The body of the criminal was fastened to the upright beam, by nailing or tying the feet to it, and on the transverse piece by nailing, and sometimes tying the spoken by the prophet, ^c They parted my garments among them, and upon my vesture did they cast lots.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

^c Psal. xxii. 18.

hands to it. As the hands and feet are the grand instruments of motion, they are provided with a greater quantity of nerves; and the nerves in those places, especially the hands, are peculiarly sensible. Now, as the nerves are the instruments of all sensation or feeling, wounds in the parts where they abound must be peculiarly painful; especially when inflicted with such rude instruments as large nails, forced through the places by the violence of a hammer; thus tearing asunder the nervous fibrillæ, delicate tendons, and small bones of those parts. This punishment will appear dreadful enough, when it is considered that the person was permitted to hang (the whole weight of his body being borne up by his nailed hands and the projecting piece which passed between the thighs) till he perished through agony and lack of food. Some, we are informed, have lived three whole days in this state. It is true that, in some cases, there was a kind of mercy shown to the sufferer, which will appear sufficiently horrid, when it is known that it consisted in breaking the bones of their legs and thighs to pieces with a large hammer, in order to put them the sooner out of pain! Such a coup de grace as this could only spring from those tender mercies of the wicked which God represents as cruelty itself. Some were permitted to hang on the cross till eaten up by birds of prey, which often began to tear them before life was extinct. Horace alludes to this punishment, and from what he says, it seems to have been inflicted on slaves, &c., not on trifling occasions, but for the most horrible crimes

Si quis cum servum, patinam qui tollere jussus

Semeros pisces tepidumque ligurrierit jus,

In cruce suffigat. HOR. Satyr. l. i. s. 3. v. 80.

If a poor slave who takes away your plate,

Lick the warm sauce, or half cold fragments eat,

Yet should you crucify the wretch?—FRANCIS

Non hominem occidi: non pasces in cruce corvos.

"I have not committed murder: Then thou shalt not be nailed to the cross, to feed the ravens." HOR. Epist. l. i. e. 16. v. 48.

The anguish occasioned by crucifixion was so intense, that crucio, (a cruce,) among the Romans, was the common word by which they expressed suffering and torment in general.

And parted his garments, casting lots] These were the Roman soldiers, who had crucified him: and it appears from this circumstance, that in those ancient times the spoils of the criminal were claimed by the executioners, as they are to the present day. It appears that they divided a part, and cast lots for the rest: viz. for his seamless coat, John xix. 23, 24.

That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, saying, They parted my garments among them, and upon my vesture did they cast lots.] The whole of this quotation should be omitted, as making no part originally of the genuine text of this evangelist. It is omitted by almost every MS. of worth and im-

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCH. 1.

36 ^d And sitting down they watched him there;

37 And ^e set up over his head his accusation written, THIS IS JESUS THE KING OF THE JEWS.

38 ^f Then were there two thieves crucified with him, one on the right hand, and another on the left.

39 ¶ And ^g they that passed by reviled him, wagging their heads,

^d Ver. 51.—^e Mark xv. 26; Luke xxiii. 38; John xix. 19.—^f Isa. liii. 12; Mark xv. 27; Luke xxiii. 32, 33; John xix. 19.

portance, by almost all the versions, and the most reputable of the primitive fathers, who have written or commented on the place. The words are plainly an interpolation, borrowed from John xix. 21, in which place they will be properly noticed.

Verse 36. They watched him] To prevent his disciples or relatives from taking away the body or affording any relief to the sufferer.

Verse 37. His accusation] It was a common custom to affix a label to the cross, giving a statement of the crime for which the person suffered. This is still the case in China, when a person is crucified. Sometimes a person was employed to carry this before the criminal, while going to the place of punishment.

It is with much propriety that Matthew calls this αἰτία, accusation; for it was false that ever Christ pretended to be KING OF THE JEWS, in the sense the inscription held forth: he was accused of this, but there was no proof of the accusation; however it was affixed to the cross. From John xix. 21, we find that the Jews wished this to be a little altered: Write, said they, that he said, I am king of the Jews; thus endeavouring, by the addition of a vile lie, to countenance their own conduct in putting him to death. But this Pilate refused to do. Both Luke, chap. xxiii. 38, and John, chap. xix. 20, say that this accusation was written in Greek, Latin, and Hebrew. In those three languages, we may conceive the label to stand thus, according to the account given by St. John; the Hebrew being the mixed dialect then spoken.

In Hebrew—עֲשָׂרָה יְהוּדִים

שׁוֹנֵן נָצְרָא כְּלָא דִּיהוּדִי

In Greek—ΕΛΛΗΝΙΣΤΙ

ΙΗΣΟΥΣ Ο ΝΑΖΩΡΗΘΙΟΣ Ο ΒΑΣΙΛΕΥΣ
ΤΩΝ ΙΟΥΔΑΙΩΝ

In Latin—Pomazti

IESUS NAZARENUS REX IUDAEORUM

It is only necessary to observe, that all the letters, both of the Greek and Roman alphabets, were those now called square or uncial, similar to those above.

Verse 38. Two thieves] Ἀγῆται, robbers, or cut-throats: men who had committed robbery and murder; for it does not appear that persons were crucified for robbery only. Thus was our Lord numbered (his name enrolled, placed as it were in the death warrant) with transgressors, according to the prophetic declara-

40 And saying, ^h Thou that destroyest the temple, and buildest it in three days, save thyself. ⁱ If thou be the Son of God, come down from the cross.

41 Likewise also the chief priests mocking him, with the scribes and elders, said,

42 He saved others; himself he cannot save. If he be the King of Israel, let him now come down from the cross, and we will believe him

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

^g Psa. xxii. 7; cix. 25; Mark xv. 29; Luke xxiii. 35.—^h Chap. xxvi. 61; John ii. 19.—ⁱ Chap. xxvi. 63.

tion, Isa. liii. 12; and the Jews placed him between these two, perhaps to intimate that he was the worst felon of the three.

Verse 39. Wagging their heads] In token of contempt.

Verse 40. Thou that destroyest] Who didst pretend that thou couldst have destroyed the temple, and built it up again in three days. This malicious torturing of our Lord's words has been noticed before. Cruelty is obliged to take refuge in lies, in order to vindicate its infamous proceedings.

If thou be the Son of God] Or rather, Υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ, a son of God, i. e. a peculiar favourite of the Most High; not Ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ, THE Son of God. "It is not to be conceived," says a learned man, "that every passenger who was going to the city had a competent knowledge of Christ's supernatural conception by the Holy Spirit, or an adequate comprehension of his character as the Messiah, and (κατ' ἐξοχήν) THE SON OF GOD. There is not a single passage where Jesus is designed to be pointed out as the MESSIAH, THE SON OF GOD, where the article is omitted; nor, on the other hand, is this designation ever specified without the article, thus, Ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ. See chap. xvi. 16; xxvi. 63; xxviii. 19."

Verse 41. Chief priests—scribes and elders] To these, several ancient MSS. and versions add, καὶ φαρισαίων, and Pharisees. But though the authority for this reading is respectable, yet it does not appear that the Pharisees joined in with the others in the condemnation of our Lord. Probably his discourses and parables, related in some of the preceding chapters, which were spoken directly to them, had so far convinced them that they would at least have no hand in putting him to death. All the infamy of this seems to fall upon the PRIESTS, scribes, and elders.

Verse 42. He saved others; himself he cannot save.] Or, Cannot he save himself? Several MSS. read this with the mark of interrogation as above; and this makes the sarcasm still more keen.

A high priest who designs to destroy the temple of God: a Saviour who saves not himself; and the Son of God crucified: these are the contradictions which give offence to Jews and libertines. But a high priest who dispels the types and shadows, only that he may disclose the substance of religion, and become the minister of a heavenly sanctuary; a Saviour who dies only to be the victim of salvation; and the Son of God who confines his power within the bounds of the cross

A. M. 4033. 43 ^k He trusted in God; let him
A. D. 29. deliver him now, if he will have An. Olymp. him: for he said, I am the Son
CCH. 1. of God.

44 ^l The thieves also, which were crucified with him, cast the same in his teeth.

45 ¶ ^m Now from the sixth hour, there was to establish the righteousness of faith: this is what a Christian adores; this is the foundation of his hope, and the fountain of his present comfort and final blessedness. See Quesnel.

^k Psa. xxii. 8; Wisd. ii. 16, 17, 18.—^l Mark xv. 32; Luke xxiii. 39.

[We will believe him.] Instead of αὐτῷ, him, many excellent MSS. have ἐν αὐτῷ, in him: this is a reading which Griesbach and other eminent critics have adopted.

Verse 43. [If he will have him] Or, if he delight in him—εἰ θελεῖ αὐτὸν. The verbs θέλω and ἐθέλω, are used by the Septuagint in more than forty places for the Hebrew חָפֵץ chaphets, which signifies, earnestly to desire, or delight in. Now as this is a quotation from Psa. xxii. 9, He trusted in the Lord, that he would deliver him; let him deliver him, (כִּי חָפֵץ בִּי ki chaphets bo,) for he hath delighted in him:—ὅτι θελεῖ αὐτὸν, Sept. This will sufficiently vindicate the above translation; as the evangelist quotes the words from that version, with the simple change of εἰ, if, for ὅτι, because.

Verse 44. The thieves also—cast the same in his teeth.] That is, one of the robbers; for one, we find, was a penitent, Luke xxiii. 39, 40. See this form of expression accounted for, on chap. xxvi. 8.

Verse 45. There was darkness over all the land] I am of opinion that πασαν τὴν γῆν does not mean all the world, but only the land of Judea. So the word is used chap. xxiv. 30; Luke iv. 25, and in other places. Several eminent critics are of this opinion: Beza defends this meaning of the word, and translates the Greek, super universam regionem over the whole country. Besides, it is evident that the evangelists speak of things that happened in Judea, the place of their residence. It is plain enough there was a darkness in Jerusalem, and over all Judea; and probably over all the people among whom Christ had for more than three years preached the everlasting Gospel; and that this darkness was supernatural is evident from this, that it happened during the passover, which was celebrated only at the full moon, a time in which it was impossible for the sun to be eclipsed. But many suppose the darkness was over the whole world, and think there is sufficient evidence of this in ancient authors. Phlegon and Thallus, who flourished in the beginning of the second century, are supposed to speak of this. The former says: "In the fourth year of the 202nd Olympiad, there was an extraordinary eclipse of the sun: at the sixth hour, the day was turned into dark night, so that the stars in heaven were seen; and there was an earthquake in Bithynia, which overthrew many houses in the city of Nice." This is the substance of what Phlegon is reputed to have said on this subject:—but 1. All the authors who quote him differ, and darkness over all the land, unto the ninth hour.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCH. 1.

46 And about the ninth hour, ⁿ Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying, Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani? that is to say, ^o My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?

^m Amos viii. 9; Mark xv. 33; Luke xxiii. 44.—ⁿ Heb. v. 7.
^o Psa. xxii. 1.

often very materially, in what they say was found in him. 2. Phlegon says nothing of Judea: what he says is, that in such an Olympiad, (some say the 102nd, others the 202nd,) there was an eclipse in Bithynia, and an earthquake at Nice. 3. Phlegon does not say that the earthquake happened at the time of the eclipse. 4. Phlegon does not intimate that this darkness was extraordinary, or that the eclipse happened at the full of the moon, or that it lasted three hours. These circumstances could not have been omitted by him, if he had known them. 5. Phlegon speaks merely of an ordinary, though perhaps total, eclipse of the sun, and cannot mean the darkness mentioned by the evangelists. 6. Phlegon speaks of an eclipse that happened in some year of the 102nd, or 202nd Olympiad; and therefore little stress can be laid on what he says as applying to this event.

The quotation from Thallus, made by Africanus, found in the Chronicle of SynceLLus, of the eighth century, is allowed by eminent critics to be of little importance. This speaks "of a darkness over all the world, and an earthquake which threw down many houses in Judea and in other parts of the earth." It may be necessary to observe, that Thallus is quoted by several of the ancient ecclesiastical writers for other matters, but never for this; and that the time in which he lived is so very uncertain, that Dr. Lardner supposes there is room to think he lived rather before than after Christ.

Dionysius the Areopagite is supposed to have mentioned this event in the most decided manner: for being at Helopolis in Egypt, with his friend Apollophanes, when our Saviour suffered, they there saw a wonderful eclipse of the sun, whereupon Dionysius said to his friend, "Either God himself suffers, or sympathizes with the sufferer." It is enough to say of this man, that all the writings attributed to him are known to be spurious, and are proved to be forgeries of the fifth or sixth century. Whoever desires to see more on this subject, may consult Dr. Lardner, (vol. vii. p. 371, ed. 1788,) a man whose name should never be mentioned but with respect, notwithstanding the peculiarities of his religious creed; who has done more in the service of Divine revelation than most divines in Christendom; and who has raised a monument to the perpetuity of the Christian religion, which all the infidels in creation shall never be able to pull down or deface.

This miraculous darkness should have caused the enemies of Christ to understand that he was the light of the world, and that because they did not walk in it it was now taken away from them.

Verse 46. My God! My God! why hast thou for-

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 1.

47 Some of them that stood there, when they heard that, said, This man calleth for Elias.

Psa. lxi. 21; Mark xv. 36;

saken me?] These words are quoted by our Lord from Psa. xxii. 1; they are of very great importance, and should be carefully considered.

Some suppose "that the divinity had now departed from Christ, and that his human nature was left unsupported to bear the punishment due to men for their sins." But this is by no means to be admitted, as it would deprive his sacrifice of its infinite merit, and consequently leave the sin of the world without an atonement. Take deity away from any redeeming act of Christ, and redemption is ruined. Others imagine that our Lord spoke these words to the Jews only, to prove to them that he was the Messiah. "The Jews," say they, "believed this psalm to speak of the Messiah: they quoted the eighth verse of it against Christ—He trusted in God that he would deliver him; let him deliver him, seeing he delighted in him. (See this chap. ver. 43.) To which our Lord immediately answers, My God! my God! &c, thus showing that he was the person of whom the psalmist prophesied." I have doubts concerning the propriety of this interpretation.

It has been asked, What language is it that our Lord spoke? Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani. Some say it is Hebrew—others Syriac. I say, as the evangelists quote it, it is neither. St. Matthew comes nearest the Hebrew, אלי למה שבתני Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani, in the words, Ηλι, Ηλι, λαμα σαβαχθανι, Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani.

And St. Mark comes nearest the Syriac, chap. xv. 34,

ܐܠܗܝ ܐܠܗܝ ܠܡܐ ܣܒܚܬܢܝ

Alohi, Alohi, l'mono shebachtheni, in the words Ελωι, Ελωι, λαμα σαβαχθανι, Eloi, Eloi, Imma sabachthani. It is worthy of note, that a Hebrew MS. of the twelfth century, instead of 'עֲזַבְתָּנִי azabthani, forsaken me, reads שכחתי shechachthani, FORGOTTEN me. This word makes a very good sense, and comes nearer to the sabachthani of the evangelists. It may be observed also, that the words, Why hast thou FORGOTTEN me? are often used by David and others, in times of oppression and distress. See Psa. xlii. 9.

Some have taken occasion from these words to depreciate the character of our blessed Lord. "They are unworthy," say they, "of a man who suffers, conscious of his innocence, and argue imbecility, impatience, and despair." This is by no means fairly deducible from the passage. However, some think that the words, as they stand in the Hebrew and Syriac, are capable of a translation which destroys all objections, and obviates every difficulty. The particle למה l'mah, may be translated, to what—to whom—to what kind or sort—to what purpose or profit: Gen. xxv. 32; xxxii. 29; xxxiii. 15; Job ix. 29; Jer. vi. 20; xx. 18; Amos v. 18; and the verb עֲזַב azab signifies to leave—to deposit—to commit to the care of. See Gen. xxxix. 6; Job xxxix. 11; Psa. x. 14, and Jer. xlix. 11. The words, taken in this

48 And straightway one of them ran and took a sponge, ^p and filled it with vinegar, and put

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 1.

Luke xxiii. 36; John xix. 29.

way, might be thus translated: My God! my God! to what sort of persons hast thou left me? The words thus understood are rather to be referred to the wicked Jews than to our Lord, and are an exclamation indicative of the obstinate wickedness of his crucifiers, who steeled their hearts against every operation of the Spirit and power of God. See Ling. Brit. Reform. by B. Martin, p. 36.

Through the whole of the Sacred Writings, God is represented as doing those things which, in the course of his providence, he only permits to be done; therefore, the words, to whom hast thou left or given me up, are only a form of expression for, "How astonishing is the wickedness of those persons into whose hands I am fallen!" If this interpretation be admitted, it will free this celebrated passage from much embarrassment, and make it speak a sense consistent with itself, and with the dignity of the Son of God.

The words of St. Mark, chap. xv. 34, agree pretty nearly with this translation of the Hebrew: Εἰς τι με εγκατέλεπες; To what [sort of persons, understood] hast thou left me? A literal translation of the passage in the Syriac Testament gives a similar sense: Ad quid dereliquisti me? "To what hast thou abandoned me?" And an ancient copy of the old Itala version, a Latin translation before the time of St. Jerome, renders the words thus: Quare me in opprobrium dedisti? "Why hast thou abandoned me to reproach?"

It may be objected, that this can never agree with the ἵνατι, why, of Matthew. To this it is answered, that ἵνατι must have here the same meaning as εἰς τι—as the translation of למה l'mah; and that, if the meaning be at all different, we must follow that evangelist who expresses most literally the meaning of the original: and let it be observed, that the Septuagint often translate למה by ἵνατι instead of εἰς τι, which evidently proves that it often had the same meaning. Of this criticism I say, Valeat quod valet, Let it pass for no more than it is worth: the subject is difficult. But whatever may be thought of the above mode of interpretation, one thing is certain, viz. That the words could not be used by our Lord in the sense in which they are generally understood. This is sufficiently evident; for he well knew why he was come unto that hour; nor could he be forsaken of God, in whom dwell all the fulness of the Godhead bodily. The Deity, however, might restrain so much of its consolatory support as to leave the human nature fully sensible of all its sufferings, so that the consolations might not take off any part of the keen edge of his passion; and this was necessary to make his sufferings meritorious. And it is probable that this is all that is intended by our Lord's quotation from the twenty-second Psalm. Taken in this view, the words convey an unexceptionable sense, even in the common translation.

Verse 47. This man calleth for Elias.] Probably

A. M. 4033. it on a reed, and gave him to
A. D. 29. drink.
An. Olymp. CCL. 1.

49 The rest said, Let be, let us see whether Elias will come to save him.

50 ^a Jesus, when he had cried again with a loud voice, yielded up the ghost.

51 ¶ And behold, ^r the veil of the temple

^a Mark xv. 37; Luke xxiii. 46.—^r Exod. xxvi. 31; 2 Chron. iii.

these were Hellenistic Jews, who did not fully understand the meaning of our Lord's words. Elijah was daily expected to appear as the forerunner of the Messiah, whose arrival, under the character of a mighty prince, was generally supposed to be at hand throughout the east. See Mal. iii. 23; Matt. ii. 2-4; xvii. 10-12.

Verse 48. Took a sponge] This being the most convenient way to reach a liquid to his mouth; tied it on a reed, that they might be able to reach his lips with it. This reed, as we learn from St. John, was a stalk of hyssop, which, in that country, must have grown to a considerable magnitude. This appears also to have been done in mercy, to alleviate his sufferings. See ver. 34.

Verse 49. After this verse, BCL and five others add, Another, taking a spear, pierced his side, and there came out blood and water. Several of the fathers add the same words here: they appear, however, to be an interpolation from John xix. 34.

Verse 50. Yielded up the ghost.] Ἀφῆκε το πνεῦμα, He dismissed the spirit. He himself willingly gave up that life which it was impossible for man to take away. It is not said that he hung on the cross till he died through pain and agony; nor is it said that his bones were broken, the sooner to put him out of pain, and to hasten his death; but that himself dismissed the soul, that he might thus become, not a forced sacrifice, but a free-will offering for sin.

Now, as our English word ghost, from the Anglo-Saxon gast gast, an inmate, inhabitant, guest, (a casual visitant,) also a spirit, is now restricted among us to the latter meaning, always signifying the immortal spirit or soul of man, the guest of the body; and as giving up the spirit, ghost, or soul, is an act not proper to man, though commending it to God, in our last moments, is both an act of faith and piety; and as giving up the ghost, i. e. dismissing his spirit from his body, is attributed to Jesus Christ, to whom alone it is proper, I therefore object against its use in every other case.

Every man, since the fall, has not only been liable to death, but has deserved it; as all have forfeited their lives because of sin. Jesus Christ, as born immaculate, and having never sinned, had not forfeited his life, and therefore may be considered as naturally and properly immortal. No man, says he, taketh it, my life, from me, but I lay it down of myself: I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again; therefore doth the Father love me, because I lay down my life that I might take it again, John x. 17. 18. Hence we rightly translate Matt. xxvii. 50. ἀφῆκε το was rent in twain from the top to the bottom; and the earth did quake, and the rocks rent;

52 And the graves were opened; and many bodies of the saints which slept arose, 53 And ^e came out of the graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many.

14; Mark xv. 38; Luke xxiii. 45.—^e Chap. xxvi. 53; Acts x. 41.

πνεῦμα, he gave up the ghost; i. e. he dismissed his spirit, that he might die for the sin of the world. The Evangelist St. John (xix. 30) makes use of an expression to the same import, which we translate in the same way: παρέδωκε το πνεῦμα, he delivered up his spirit. We translate Mark xv. 37, and Luke xxiii. 46, he gave up the ghost, but not correctly, because the word in both these places is very different—ἐξέπνευσε, he breathed his last, or expired; though in the latter place, Luke xxiii. 46, there is an equivalent expression—Ο Father, into thy hands, παρατίθεμαι το πνεῦμα μου, I commit my spirit; i. e. I place my soul in thy hand: proving that the act was his own; that no man could take his life away from him; that he did not die by the perfidy of his disciple, or the malice of the Jews, but by his own free act. Thus HE LAID DOWN his life for the sheep. Of Ananias and Sapphira, Acts v. 5, 10, and of Herod, Acts xii. 23, our translation says, they gave up the ghost; but the word in both places is ἐξέφνυε, which simply means to breathe out, to expire, or die: but in no case, either by the Septuagint in the Old, or any of the sacred writers in the New Testament, is ἀφῆκε το πνεῦμα, or παρέδωκε το πνεῦμα, he dismissed his spirit, or delivered up his spirit, spoken of any person but Christ. Abraham, Isaac, Ishmael, Jacob, &c., breathed their last; Ananias, Sapphira, and Herod, expired; but none, Jesus Christ excepted, gave up the ghost, dismissed, or delivered up his own spirit, and was, consequently, free among the dead. Of the patriarchs, &c., the Septuagint use the word ἐκλείπων, failing; or κατεπαύσεν, he ceased, or rested.

Verse 51. The veil of the temple was rent] That is, the veil which separated the holy place, where the priests ministered, from the holy of holies, into which the high priest only entered, and that once a year, to make a general expiation for the sins of the people. This rending of the veil was emblematical, and pointed out that the separation between Jews and Gentiles was now abolished, and that the privilege of the high priest was now communicated to all mankind: ALL might henceforth have access to the throne of grace through the one great atonement and mediator, the Lord Jesus. See this, beautifully illustrated in Heb. x. 19, 20, 21, 22.

Verse 52. And the graves were opened] By the earthquake; and many bodies of saints which slept, i. e. were dead, sleep being a common expression for death in the Scriptures.

Verse 53. And came out of the graves after his resurrection] Not BEFORE, as some have thought, for Christ was himself the FIRST FRUITS of them who

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

54 * Now when the centurion, and they that were with him, watching Jesus, saw the earthquake, and those things that were done, they feared greatly, saying, 'Truly this was the Son of God.

55 And many women were there beholding afar off, ^a which followed Jesus from Galilee, ministering unto him :

56 * Among which was Mary Magdalene,

* Ver. 36; Mark xv. 39; Luke xxiii. 47. — ^a Luke viii. 2, 3.

slept, 1 Cor. xv. 20. The graves were opened at his death, by the earthquake, and the bodies came out at his resurrection.

And appeared unto many.] Thus establishing the truth of our Lord's resurrection in particular, and of the resurrection of the body in general, by many witnesses. Quesnel's reflections on these passages may be very useful. "1. The veil being rent shows that his death is to put an end to the figurative worship, and to establish the true religion. 2. The earthquake, that this dispensation of the Gospel is to make known through the earth the judgments of God against sin and sinners. 3. The rocks being rent declare that the sacrifice of Christ is to make way for the grace of repentance. 4. The graves being opened, that it is to destroy the death of sin, and confer the life of grace on sinners. 5. The rising of the bodies of the saints shows that this death of Christ is to merit, and his Gospel publish, the eternal happiness of body and soul for all that believe in his name."

It is difficult to account for the transaction mentioned in verses 52 and 53. Some have thought that these two verses have been introduced into the text of Matthew from the gospel of the Nazarenes; others think that the simple meaning is this:—by the earthquake several bodies that had been buried were thrown up and exposed to view, and continued above ground till after Christ's resurrection, and were seen by many persons in the city. Why the graves should be opened on Friday, and the bodies not be raised to life till the following Sunday, is difficult to be conceived. The place is extremely obscure.

Verse 54. The centurion] The Roman officer who superintended the execution, called centuria, from centum, a hundred, because he had the command of one hundred men.

Truly this was the Son of God.] An innocent, holy, and Divine person; and God thus shows his disapprobation of this bloody tragedy. It is not likely that this centurion had any knowledge of the expectation of the Jews relative to the Messiah, and did not use the words in this sense. A son of God, as the Romans used the term, would signify no more than a very eminent or Divine person; a hero.

Verse 55. Many women] To their everlasting honour, these women evidenced more courage, and affectionate attachment to their Lord and Master, than the disciples did, who had promised to die with him rather than forsake him.

Beholding afar off] At a distance—απο μακροθεν.

and Mary the mother of James and Joses, and the mother of Zebedee's children.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

57 ¶ * When the even was come, there came a rich man of Arimathea, named Joseph, who also himself was Jesus' disciple :

58 He went to Pilate, and begged the body of Jesus. Then Pilate commanded the body to be delivered.

* Mark xv. 40. — ^a Mark xv. 42; Luke xxiii. 50; John xix. 39.

Though this expression may be understood to refer, rather to the distance from which they came, (viz. from Galilee,) than the distance they stood from the cross; yet, as all malefactors were crucified naked, perhaps this may account for the distance at which these modest women stood.

Verse 56. Mary Magdalene] She probably had her name from Magdala, a village or district in Lower Galilee. See chap. xv. 39. Some think she was called Magdalene from מגדל magdala, which signifies a plaiter of hair. See Lightfoot.

Mary the mother of James] She was mother of him called James the lesser, or junior, who was son of Alphaeus or Cleopas—see chap. x. 3; Mark xv. 40; John xix. 25; and she was sister to the holy virgin. Thus it appears that there were four remarkable Marys mentioned in the Gospels. 1. MARY the Virgin, wife of JOSEPH. 2. MARY SALOME, her sister, wife of Cleopas, John xix. 25. 3. MARY MAGDALENE, or MARY of Magdala; and 4. MARY, the sister of Martha and Lazarus, John xi. 1. Though Baronius asserts, and Lightfoot is of the same opinion, that Mary Magdalene, and Mary, the sister of Martha and Lazarus, was one and the same person. It is difficult to ascertain and distinguish these women where their names occur in the Gospels, so many being called by the name of Mary.

Joses] Several MSS. and versions read Joseph.

Verse 57. When the even] This must have been about three o'clock, or a little after; for our Lord having expired about three o'clock, ver. 46, and the Jewish passover beginning about four, it was necessary that Joseph, who would not fail to eat the passover at the usual time, should have obtained and buried the body of Christ some time before four o'clock. But such was the general consternation, occasioned by the prodigies that took place on this most awful occasion, that we may safely conjecture that nothing was done in order, and perhaps the passover itself was not eaten at the usual hour, if at all, that day. See at the end of the preceding chapter.

A rich man] He was a counsellor of the great Sanhedrin, Luke xxiii. 50; and, from the accounts given of him by the evangelists, we learn that he was a man of the greatest respectability. He now acted a more honourable part than all the disciples of our Lord. He was of Arimathea, or Rama, in the tribe of Benjamin. Matt. ii. 17, but lived ordinarily in Jerusalem, as being a member of the great council.

Verse 58. Begged the body] That he might bury

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

59 And when Joseph had taken the body, he wrapped it in a clean linen cloth, 60 And ²laid it in his own new tomb, which he had hewn out in the rock : and he rolled a great stone to the door of the sepulchre, and departed.

61 And there was Mary Magdalene, and ²Isa. liii. 9.—²Chap. xvi. 21; xvii. 23; xx. 19; xxvi. 61;

it honourably ; otherwise, by the Jewish customs, he would have either been burned, or buried in the common place appointed for executed criminals.

Verse 59. Wrapped it in a clean linen cloth] The Jews, as well as the Egyptians, added spices to keep the body from putrefaction, and the linen was wrapped about every part to keep the aromatics in contact with the flesh. From John xix. 39, 40, we learn that a mixture of myrrh and aloes of one hundred pounds' weight had been applied to the body of Jesus when he was buried. And that a second embalment was intended, we learn from Luke xxiii. 56, and xxiv. 1, as the hurry to get the body interred before the Sabbath did not permit them to complete the embalming in the first instance. See an account of the mode of embalming among the Egyptians, in the note on Gen. i. 2, and 26.

Verse 60. Laid it in his own new tomb] To all human appearance the body of Christ must have had the same burial-place with those of the two robbers, as he was numbered with the transgressors, and suffered with them ; for then he was a sacrifice, bearing the sin of the world in his own body on the tree ; but now the sacrifice is offered, the atonement made and accepted, he is no longer to be enrolled with the transgressors, and, according to a prophecy delivered nearly seven hundred years before that time, he is to have the burying-place of a rich man. See Isa. liii. 9, 10. Had our Lord been buried in the common burial-ground of the malefactors, his resurrection could not have been so distinctly remarked, as the chief priests would never have thought of sealing the stone there, or setting a watch ; but now that the body is got into the hands of a friend, they judge it necessary to make use of these precautions, in order, as they said, to prevent imposture ; and from this very circumstance the resurrection of Christ had its fullest evidence, and was put beyond the power of successful contradiction. What a number of objections would not human prudence have made to Joseph's conduct, had he consulted it on this occasion ! It would have represented to him that, "this was to expose himself, to bring himself into trouble, to render himself suspected, to put himself out of all capacity of doing good, to ruin himself irrecoverably ; and now it could do no good to his teacher—he is now dead. and needs no longer any office of kindness from men." There is, sometimes in our whole life, but one opportunity in which God designs signally to employ us ; and, through our general backwardness to every good work, we are for reserving ourselves to other opportunities, in which God neither requires nor will accept our services.

the other Mary, sitting over against the sepulchre.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

62 ¶ Now the next day that followed the day of the preparation, the chief priests and Pharisees came together unto Pilate, 63 Saying, Sir, we remember that that deceiver said, while he was yet alive, ²After three days I will rise again.

Mark viii. 31 ; x. 34 ; Luke ix. 22 ; xviii. 33 : xxiv. 6, 7 ; John ii. 19.

Rolled a great stone to the door] Some are of opinion that this tomb was cut down into the rock, perpendicularly from the surface ; and that the great stone spoken of here covered over the entrance to it. The stone, no doubt, was intended to secure the place as much as possible.

Verse 61. Mary Magdalene, and the other Mary] The mother of James and Joses, ver. 56. The mother of our Lord had probably, by this time, been taken home to the house of John. See John xix. 26, 27.

Sitting over against the sepulchre.] These holy women, filled with that love to their Lord which death cannot destroy, cleaved to him in life, and in death were not divided. They came to the grave to see the end, and overwhelmed with sorrow and anguish, sat down to mourn.

Verse 62. The next day] This was the seventh, or Saturday, and might be what we should term the evening of the sixth, or Friday, because the Jews always ended their day when the sun set, and then began the next.

That followed the day of the preparation] That is, of the Sabbath. The victuals, &c., which were to be used on the Sabbath by the Jews, were always prepared the preceding evening before the sun set. It is of this preparation that the evangelist speaks here ; and it is the same which is mentioned by Mark, chap. xv. 42 ; by Luke, chap. xxiii. 54 ; and by John, chap. xix. 31. But there was another preparation which happened in the same day : viz. The preparation of the passover ; this began about twelve o'clock, and continued till four, the time in which they ate the paschal lamb. See John xix. 14.

Verse 63. Sir, we remember, &c.] While these wicked men are fulfilling their own vicious counsels, they are subserving the great cause of Christianity. Every thing depended on the resurrection of Christ ; if it did not appear that he rose from the dead, then the whole system was false, and no atonement was made. It was necessary therefore that the chief priests, &c., should make use of every precaution to prevent an imposture, that the resurrection of Christ might have the fullest evidence to support it. See on ver. 60.

The word Κύριε is here very properly translated sir, which, in many other places, is as improperly translated Lord. When a Roman is the speaker, or the person addressed, Κύριε should always be translated sir ; when strangers address our Lord, the word is a title of civil respect, and should, in general, be translated in the same way.

After three days I will rise again.] This they probably took from his saying, Destroy this temple, and

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.
64 Command therefore that the sepulchre be made sure until the third day, lest his disciples come by night, and steal him away, and say unto the people, ² He is risen from the dead; so the last error shall be worse than the first.

² John xi. 49, &c.; xii. 32; 2 Thess. ii. 11.

in three days I will build it up. If so, they destroyed, by their own words, the false accusation they brought against him to put him to death; then they perverted the meaning, now they declare it. Thus the wise are taken in their own craftiness. Neither the devil nor his servants ever speak truth, but when they expect to accomplish some had purpose by it.

Verse 64. Lest his disciples come by night] Νυκτος, by night, is wanting in ten of the unequal MSS., and in several others, and in most of the versions. Erasmus, Aldus, Bengel, and Boghard, with Griesbach, leave it out of the text.

Verse 65. Ye have a watch] The Jews had a corps of Roman troops, consisting of several companies, as a guard for the temple, Acts iv. 1. These companies mounted guard by turns, see Luke xxii. 4. Some of these companies, which were not then on duty, Pilate gave them leave to employ to watch the tomb.

Verse 66. Made the sepulchre sure, sealing the stone, and setting a watch.] Or rather, made the tomb secure by the guard, and by sealing the stone. I follow Kypke, in construing μετὰ τῆς κοινοῦδιας, with ἡσθαλι-ααυτο. The guard was to take care that the disciples should not steal him away; and the seal, which was probably the seal of the governor, was to prevent the guards from being corrupted so as to permit the theft. So every thing was done which human policy and prudence could, to prevent a resurrection, which these very precautions had the most direct tendency to authenticate and establish. How wonderful are the wisdom and goodness of God!—and how true is it, that there is neither might nor counsel against him!

1. The death of Christ was ordered, so as to be witnessed by thousands; and if his resurrection take place,

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.
65 Pilate said unto them, Ye have a watch: go your way, make it as sure as ye can.

66 So they went and made the sepulchre sure, ^a sealing the stone, and setting a watch.

^a Dan. vi. 17.

it must be demonstrated; and it cannot take place without being incontestable, such are the precautions used here to prevent all imposture.

2. The more the circumstances of the death of Christ are examined, the more astonishing the whole will appear. The death is uncommon—the person uncommon—and the object uncommon; and the whole is grand, majestic, and awful. Nature itself is thrown into unusual action, and by means and causes wholly supernatural. In every part, the finger of God most evidently appears.

3. How glorious does Christ appear in his death! Were it not for his thirst, his exclamation on the cross, and the piercing of his side, we should have found it difficult to believe that such a person could ever have entered the empire of death; but the divinity and the manhood equally appear, and thus the certainty of the atonement is indubitably established.

4. But who can reflect on the state of the poor disciples, during the whole of the time in which our blessed Lord lay under the empire of death, without sharing their sorrows! When he expired on the cross their expectation was cut off; and when his body was laid in the grave their hopes were buried; and nothing but the resurrection of Christ from the dead could have given a resurrection to their hopes. It is true they had heard him say that he would rise again the third day; but in this it is evident their faith was very imperfect; and the uncertainty, perplexity, anxiety, and distress which they in consequence must have suffered, can neither be described nor imagined. Though we know the glorious result, yet who can help sympathizing with the pious father, the virgin mother, and the disconsolate disciples!

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The resurrection of Christ declared by an angel to the two Marys at the sepulchre, 1–6. They are commissioned to announce this to the disciples, 7. They go, and are met by Christ himself, who promises to meet the disciples in Galilee, 8–10. The watch go into the city, and report to the chief priests what had taken place, 11. They give them money, to say that his disciples had stolen the body by night, while they slept, 12–15. Christ meets the eleven disciples in a mountain of Galilee, 16, 17. He gives them a commission to preach the Gospel throughout the earth; to baptize in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; and promises to be with them to the end of the world, 18–20.

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.
IN the ^a end of the sabbath, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Mag

^a Mark xvi. 1; Luke xxiv. 1; John xx. 1.

NOTES ON CHAP. XXVIII.

Verse 1. In the end of the Sabbath] Οψε δε σαβ-βατων. After the end of the week: this is the trans-

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.
dalene, ^b and the other Mary, to see the sepulchre.

2 And, behold, there ^c was a great

^b Chap. xxvii. 56.—^c Or, had been.

lation given by several eminent critics; and in this way the word οψε is used by the most eminent Greek writers. Thucydides lib. iv. chap. 93, τῆς ἡμερᾶς οψε

A. M. 4033. earthquake : for ^d the angel of the
A. D. 29. Lord descended from heaven, and
An. Olymp. came and rolled back the stone from CCII. 1 the door, and sat upon it.

3 ^e His countenance was like lightning, and his raiment white as snow :

4 And for fear of him the keepers did shake, and became as dead men.

5 And the angel answered and said unto the ^d See Mark xvi. 5; Luke xxiv. 4; John xx. 12.—^e Dan. x. 6.

ην—the day was ended. Plutarch, οψε των βασιλευς χρονων—after the times of the king. Philostratus, οψε των Τροικων—after the Trojan war. See Rosenmüller. In general the Jews divided their natural day, which consisted of twenty-four hours, into day and night. Their artificial day began at the rising and ended at the setting of the sun; all the rest of the time, from the setting to the rising of the sun, they termed night: hence the same word, in Hebrew, signifies both evening and night. Gen. i. 5; Mark vi. 47. Matthew has employed the word in this extensive sense here, pointing out the latter part of the Jewish night, that which immediately preceded the rising of the sun, and not that first part which we call the evening. The transaction mentioned here evidently took place early on the morning of the third day after our Lord's crucifixion; what is called our Sunday morning, or first day of the next week.

Came—to see the sepulchre.] That is, they set out at this time in order to visit the tomb of our Lord, and also to weep there, John xi. 31, and to embalm the body of our Lord, Luke xxiv. 1. St. Matthew omits Mary Salome, mentioned by Mark; and Joanna, the wife of Chuza, Herod's steward, mentioned by Luke. The other Mary was the wife of Cleopas, and mother of James and Joses, mentioned before. chap. xxvii. 56. Were not Mary and Salome two distinct persons?

Verse 2. A great earthquake] Σεισμος, a shaking or commotion of any kind: probably the word means no more than the confusion caused among the guards by the angel's appearance. All this had taken place before the women reached the sepulchre.

The angel of the Lord descended from heaven] Matthew is very particular in this, to show that the word angel is not to be taken in the sense of an ordinary messenger, who might have come from Joseph of Arimathea, or from any other; but in the sense of an extraordinary messenger, who descended from God, out of heaven, for this very purpose. It is likely that the angel had descended, rolled away the stone, and was sitting on it, before the women reached the tomb.

Verse 3. His countenance] His appearance, ἡ ἰδέα αὐτοῦ; or, his face, for so the word is used in some of the best Greek writers. It seems, from Mark xvi. 5, that this angel had assumed the appearance of a young man.

Like lightning] Coruscations of glory continually flaming from his face. This might produce the confusion mentioned verse 2.

His raiment white as snow] He was clothed in gar-women, Fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified. A. M. 4033. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CCII. 1 6 He is not here: for he is risen, ^f as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay.

7 And go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead; and, behold, ^g he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him: lo, I have told you.

^f Chap. xii. 40; xvi. 21; xvii. 23; xx. 19.—^g Chap. xxvi. 32; Mark xvi. 7.

ments emblematical of the glad tidings which he came to announce. It would have been inconsistent with the message he brought, had the angel appeared in black robes, such as those preposterously wear who call themselves his successors in the ministry of a once suffering, but now risen and highly exalted, Saviour. But the world is as full of nonsense as of sin; and who can correct and bring it to reason and piety?

Verse 4. The keepers—became as dead men.] God can, by one and the same means, comfort his servants, and terrify his enemies. The resurrection of Christ is a subject of terror to the servants of sin, and a subject of consolation to the sons of God; because it is a proof of the resurrection of both, the one to shame and everlasting contempt—the other to eternal glory and joy.

Verse 5. I know that ye seek Jesus] Speaking after the manner of men, these women deserved to be the first witnesses of the resurrection of Christ: during life they ministered to him, and in death they were not divided. They attended him to the cross, notwithstanding their attachment to him exposed them to the most imminent danger; and now they come to watch and weep at his tomb. The common opinion is, that women are more fickle and less courageous than men. The reverse of this I believe to be the truth, in those who are thoroughly converted to God; and who, previously to conversion, whether man or woman, can be trusted in any case?

Verse 6. Come, see the place] The tomb in which our Lord was laid was no doubt like the rest of the Jewish burying places, a receptacle for the several dead of a whole family, divided into separate niches, where each had his place. Come and see the place—was tantamount to, Come and see the niche in which he was laid—it is now empty; nor was there any other body in the place, for the tomb was a new one, in which no man had ever been laid, John xix. 41; so there could be no deception in the case.

Verse 7. Go quickly and tell his disciples] Thus these faithful women proclaim the Gospel to those who were afterwards to be the teachers of the whole human race! Behold what honour God puts upon those who persevere in his truth, and continue to acknowledge him before men!

That he is risen from the dead] There is a remarkable saying of R. Judah Hakkodesh, which some critics quote on this subject: "After THREE DAYS the SOUL of the Messiah shall RETURN to its body, and he shall go OUT of that STONE in which he shall be BURIED."

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCL. I.

8 And they departed quickly from the sepulchre with fear and great joy; and did run to bring his disciples word.

9 ¶ And as they went to tell his disciples, behold, ^h Jesus met them, saying, All hail. And they came and held him by the feet, and worshipped him.

10 Then said Jesus unto them, Be not afraid: go, tell ⁱ my brethren that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me.

(11 ¶ Now when they were going, behold,

^h See Mark xvi. 9; John xx. 14.

[Goeth before you into Galilee] As himself promised, chap. xvi. 32.

Verse 8. They departed quickly from the sepulchre] At the desire of the angel they went into the tomb, to have the fullest certainty of the resurrection.

Fear and great joy] Fear, produced by the appearance of this glorious messenger of God; and great joy occasioned by the glad tidings of the resurrection of their Lord and Master. At the mention of unexpected good news, fear and joy are generally intermingled.

—Vir sum apud me, ita animus commotus est metu, Spe, gaudio, mirando hoc tanto, tam repentino bono.

TERENT. Andr. v. 945.

“I am almost beside myself, my mind is so agitated with fear, hope, and joy, at this unexpected good news.”

Verse 9. And as they went to tell his disciples] This clause is wanting in the Codex Vatican, and Codex Beza, and in twenty others, and in most of the versions. The omission is approved by Mill, Bengel, and Schmid. Griesbach leaves it in the text with a note of doubtfulness. It appears to be superfluous. To connect this with the next clause, the particle kat, and, is obliged to be suppressed in all the translations. I think the verse should begin with, And behold he goeth, &c., and the former clause be suppressed. Probabiliter delenda, says Professor White, in his Criseos Griesbachiana, speaking of the preceding words.

Jesus met them] Christ bestows his graces and consolations by degrees, first by his angels, and then by himself. He does not reveal himself to incredulous and disobedient souls; he appears not even to those women till he has tried their faith and obedience by his ministering angels.

All hail.] Anglo-Saxon, hale vere ge, Health be to you! Χαίρετε, Be ye safe, rejoice.

And they held him by the feet, and worshipped him.] This kind of reverence is in daily use among the *Hindoo*s: when a disciple meets his religious guide in the public streets, he prostrates himself before him, and, taking the dust from his teacher's feet, rubs it on his forehead, breast, &c. See WARD'S CUSTOMS.

Verse 10. Be not afraid] They were seized with fear at the sight of the angel; and this was now renewed by this unexpected appearance of Christ. See the note on ver. 8.

Go, tell my brethren] This is the first time our

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCL. I.

some of the watch came into the city, and showed unto the chief priests all the things that were done.

12 And when they were assembled with the elders, and had taken counsel, they gave large money unto the soldiers, 13 Saying, say ye, His disciples came by night, and stole him away while we slept.

14 And if this come to the governor's ears, we will persuade him, and secure you.

15 So they took the money, and did as they were taught: and this saying is commonly re-ⁱ See John xx. 17; Rom. viii. 29; Heb. ii. 11.

Lord called his disciples by this endearing name: they no doubt thought that their Lord would reproach them with their past cowardice and infidelity; but, in speaking thus, he gives them a full assurance, in the most tender terms, that all that was passed was as buried for ever.

Verse 11. Some of the watch] Or guards. Probably the rest still remained at the tomb, waiting for orders to depart, and had sent these to intimate to their employers the things that had taken place.

Verse 12. With the elders] That is, the senators of the great Sanhedrin or Jewish council of state, elsewhere called the elders of the people; they could now meet, as the Sabbath was over.

Verse 13. His disciples came by night] This was as absurd as it was false. On one hand, the terror of the disciples, the smallness of their number (only eleven;) and their almost total want of faith; on the other, the great danger of such a bold enterprise, the number of armed men who guarded the tomb, the authority of Pilate and of the Sanhedrin, must render such an imposture as this utterly devoid of credit.

Stole him away while we slept.] Here is a whole heap of absurdities. 1st. Is it likely that so many men would all fall asleep, in the open air, at once? 2dly. Is it at all probable that a Roman guard should be found off their watch, much less asleep, when it was instant death, according to the Roman military laws, to be found in this state? 3dly. Could they be so sound asleep as not to awake with all the noise which must be necessarily made by removing the great stone, and taking away the body? 4thly. Is it at all likely that these disciples could have had time sufficient to do all this, and to come and return, without being perceived by any person? And 5thly. If they were asleep, how could they possibly know that it was the disciples that stole him, or indeed that any person or persons stole him!—for, being asleep, they could see no person. From their own testimony, therefore, the resurrection may be as fully proved as the theft.

Verse 14. If this come to the governor's ears] Pilate—we will persuade him that it is for his own interest and honour to join in the deception; and we will render you secure—we will take care that you shall not suffer that punishment for this pretended breach of duty which otherwise you might expect.

Verse 15. Until this day.] That is to say, the time

A. M. 4033.
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCII. 1.

ported among the Jews until this day.)

16 ¶ Then the eleven disciples went away into Galilee, into a mountain^k where Jesus had appointed them.

17 And when they saw him, they worshipped him: but some doubted.

^k Chap. xxvi. 32; ver. 7.—^l Dan. vii. 13, 14; chap. xi. 27; xvi. 28; Luke i. 32; x. 22; John iii. 35; v. 22; xiii. 3; xvii. 2; Acts ii. 36; Rom. xiv. 9; 1 Cor. xv. 27; Eph. i. 10, 21; Phil. ii. 9, 10;

in which Matthew wrote his Gospel; which is supposed by some to have been eight, by others eighteen, and by others thirty years after our Lord's resurrection.

Verse 16. Then the eleven disciples went] When the women went and told them that they had seen the Lord, and that he had promised to meet them in Galilee. From the eleventh to the fifteenth verse inclusive, should be read in a parenthesis, as the sixteenth verse is the continuation of the subject mentioned in the tenth.

Verse 17. But some doubted.] That is, Thomas only at first doubted. The expression simply intimates, that they did not all believe at that time. See the same form noticed on chap. xxvi. 8, and chap. xxvii. 44.

Verse 18. And Jesus came and spake unto them] It is supposed by some that the reason why any doubted was, that when they saw Jesus at first, he was at a distance; but when he came up, drew near to them, they were fully persuaded of the identity of his person.

All power is given unto me] Or, All authority in heaven and upon earth is given unto me. One fruit of the sufferings and resurrection of Christ is represented to be, his having authority or right in heaven to send down the Holy Spirit—to raise up his followers thither—and to crown them in the kingdom of an endless glory: in earth, to convert sinners; to sanctify, protect, and perfect his Church; to subdue all nations to himself; and, finally, to judge all mankind. If Jesus Christ were not equal with the Father, could he have claimed this equality of power, without being guilty of impiety and blasphemy? Surely not; and does he not, in the fullest manner, assert his Godhead, and his equality with the Father, by claiming and possessing all the authority in heaven and earth?—i. e. all the power and authority by which both empires are governed?

Verse 19. Go ye therefore] Because I have the authority aforesaid, and can send whomsoever I will to do whatsoever I please:—teach, μαθητευατε, make disciples of all nations, bring them to an acquaintance with God who bought them, and then baptize them in the name of the Father. It is natural to suppose that adults were the first subjects of baptism; for as the Gospel was, in a peculiar manner, sent to the Gentiles, they must hear and receive it, before they could be expected to renounce their old prejudices and idolatries, and come into the bonds of the Christian covenant. But, certainly, no argument can be drawn from this concession against the baptism of children. When the Gentiles and Jews had received the faith and blessings of the Gospel, it is natural enough to suppose they should wish to get their children incorporated with the visible Church of Christ; especially if, as many pious and learned men have believed, baptism succeeded to circumcision, which I think has never yet been disproved. The apostles knew well that the Jews not only circumcised the children of proselytes, but also baptized them; and as they now received a commission to teach and proselyte all the nations, and baptize them in the name of the holy Trinity, they must necessarily understand that infants were included: nor could they, the custom of their country being considered, have understood our Lord differently, unless he had, in the most express terms, said that they were not to baptize children, which neither he nor his apostles ever did. And as to the objection, that the baptized were obliged to profess their faith, and that, therefore, only adults should be baptized, there is no weight at all in it; because what is spoken of such refers to those who, only at that period of life, heard the Gospel, and were not born of parents who had been Christians; therefore they could not have been baptized into the Christian faith, forasmuch as no such faith was at their infancy preached in the world. That the children and even infants, of proselytes, were baptized among the Jews, and reputed, in consequence, clean, and partakers of the blessings of the covenant, see proved at large by Wetstein, in his note on Matt. iii. 16.—See the note on chap. iii. 6, and particularly on Mark xvi. 16.

18 ¶ And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, ¹ All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth.

19 ^m Go ye therefore, and ⁿ teach ^o all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost:

Heb. i. 2; ii. 8; 1 Pet. iii. 22; Rev. xvii. 14.—^m Mark xvi. 15. ⁿ Isa. lii. 10; Luke xxiv. 47; Acts ii. 38, 39; Rom. x. 18; Col. i. 23.—^o Or, make disciples, or, Christians of all nations.

In the name of the Father, &c.] Baptism, properly speaking, whether administered by dipping or sprinkling, signifies a full and eternal consecration of the person to the service and honour of that Being in whose name it is administered; but this consecration can never be made to a creature; therefore the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Spirit, are not creatures. Again, baptism is not made in the name of a quality or attribute of the Divine nature; therefore the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Spirit, are not qualities or attributes of the Divine nature. The orthodox, as they are termed, have generally considered this text as a decisive proof of the doctrine of the holy Trinity; and what else can they draw from it? Is it possible for words to convey a plainer sense than these do? And do they not direct every reader to consider the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, as three distinct persons? "But this I can never believe." I cannot help that—you shall not be persecuted by me for differing from my opinion. I cannot go over to you; I must abide by what I believe to be the meaning of the Scriptures. Dr. Lightfoot has some good thoughts on this commission given to the apostles:—

A. M. 4033. 20 ^p Teaching them to observe
A. D. 29. all things whatsoever I have
An. Olymp. all things whatsoever I have
CCH. I. commanded you : ^a and, lo,

^p John xiv. 14-18 ; Acts ii. 42 ; 1 Tim. vi. 11.

" I. Christ commands them to go and baptize the nations : but how much time was past before such a journey was taken ! And when the time was now come that this work should be begun, Peter doth not enter upon it without a previous admonition given him from heaven. And this was occasioned hereby, that, according to the command of Christ, the Gospel was first to be preached to Judea, Samaria, and Galilee.

" II. He commands them to baptize in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost ; but among the Jews, they baptized only in the name of Jesus. See Acts ii. 38, and viii. 16, and xix. 5. For this reason, that thus the baptizers might assert, and the baptized confess, Jesus to be the true Messias ; which was chiefly controverted by the Jews. Of the same nature is that apostolic blessing, Grace and peace from God the Father, and from our Lord Jesus Christ. Where then is the Holy Ghost ? He is not excluded, however he be not named. The Jews did more easily consent to the Spirit of the Messias, which they very much celebrate, than to the person of the Messias. Above all others they deny and abjure Jesus of Nazareth. It belonged to the apostles, therefore, the more earnestly to assert Jesus (to be the Messias) by how much the more vehemently they opposed him : which being once cleared, the acknowledging of the Spirit of Christ would be introduced without delay or scruple. Moses, (in Exod. vi. 14,) going about to reckon up all the tribes of Israel, goes no farther than the tribe of Levi ; and takes up with that to which his business and story at that present related. In like manner, the apostles, for the present, baptize in the name of Jesus, and bless in the name of the Father and of Jesus, that thereby they might more firmly establish the doctrine of Jesus, which met with such sharp and virulent opposition ; which doctrine being established among them, they would soon agree about the Holy Ghost.

" III. Among the Jews, the controversy was about the true Messias ; among the Gentiles, about the true God. It was therefore proper among the Jews to baptize in the name of Jesus, that he might be vindicated to be the true Messias. Among the Gentiles, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, that they might be hereby instructed in the doctrine of the true God.—Let this be particularly noted.

" IV. The Jews baptized proselytes into the name of the Father, that is, into the profession of God, whom they called by the name of Father. The apostles baptize the Jews into the name of Jesus the Son, and the Gentiles, into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.

" V. The Father hath revealed himself in the old covenant ; the Son in the new ; in human flesh by his miracles, doctrine, resurrection and ascension ; the Holy Ghost in his gifts and miracles. Thus the doctrine of the ever blessed Trinity grew by degrees to

I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen.

A. M. 4033
A. D. 29.
An. Olymp.
CCH. I.

^a Chap. xiii. 39-49 ; xxiv. 3 ; 2 Tim. ii. 2.—^r 1 Cor. xiv. 16.

full maturity. For the arriving to the acknowledgment of which, it was incumbent upon all who professed the true God to be three in one to be baptized into his name." LIGHTFOOT'S Works, vol. ii. p. 274.

Verse 20. Teaching them to observe all things] Men are ignorant of Divine things, and must be taught. Only those can be considered as proper teachers of the ignorant who are thoroughly instructed in whatsoever Christ has commanded. Persons who are entrusted with the public ministry of the word should take care that they teach not human creeds and confessions of faith, in place of the Sacred Writings ; but those things, and those only, which Jesus has commanded.

And, lo, I am with you alway] καὶ ὅσον ἑγὼ μεθ' ὑμῶν εἰμι πάσας τὰς ἡμέρας—literally, Behold, I am with you every day. A minister of Christ should consider, that while his soul simply and uniformly follows Jesus, he shall be made a constant instrument of bringing many sons and daughters to glory. The dark, it is true, must be enlightened, the ignorant instructed, the profligate reclaimed, the guilty justified, and the unholy sanctified ; and who is sufficient for this work ? He with whom the Son of God is EVERY DAY, and none other.

Unto the end of the world.] Some translate, ἕως τῆς συντελείας τοῦ αἰῶνος, to the end of this age ; meaning the apostolic age, or Jewish dispensation ; and then they refer the promise of Christ's presence to the working of miracles, and explain this by Mark xvi. 17-19. By my name they shall cast out demons, &c., &c. But though the words are used in this sense in several places, see chap. xiii. 39, 40, 49, and xxiv. 3, yet it is certain they were repeatedly used among the primitive ecclesiastical writers to denote the consummation of all things ; and it is likely that this is the sense in which they are used here, which the Anglo-Saxon has happily expressed : And ic beo mid eow ealle dagas oð þouulde ge-endunge—And I, be with you all days, until world ending ; and this is indispensably necessary, because the presence and influence of Jesus Christ are essentially requisite in every age of the world, to enlighten, instruct, and save the lost. The promise takes in not only the primitive apostles, but also all their successors in the Christian ministry, as long as the earth shall endure.

Amen.] This word is omitted by some of the oldest and most authentic MSS., and by some versions and fathers. When it is considered that the word amen simply means so be it ! we may at once perceive that it could not be added by our Lord. For our Lord could not pray that his own will might be done, or his own promise fulfilled. The word is, therefore, utterly impertinent as a part of the sacred text, and could neither have been added by our Lord, nor by the evangelist. The amens at the end of the sacred books have no other authority than what they derive from the transcribers of copies ; and, at best, are only to be considered as the pious wish of the writer, or of the Church, that the promises contained in the sacred volume may be accomplished. Indeed, it seems often to have no other meaning than our finis at the end of our books.

In the MSS. and versions there are various subscriptions, or epigraphs, to this Gospel: the following are the principal:—

“The Gospel according to Matthew—written by him in Jerusalem—in Palestine—in the east—in the Hebrew dialect—in Hebrew—eight years after the ascension of Christ—interpreted by John—by James the brother of the Lord.”

The subscription in some copies of the Arabic version is very full: “The end of the copy of the Gospel of Matthew the Apostle. He wrote it in the land of Palestine, by inspiration of the Holy Spirit, in the Hebrew tongue, eight years after the bodily ascension of Jesus the Messiah into heaven, in the first year of the reign of Claudius Cæsar, king of Rome.”

These are sufficient to show how little credit should be attached to the subscriptions found at the end of the sacred books, either in the MSS., or in the versions.

1. In concluding my notes on this evangelist, I cannot express myself better than in the words of the late Mr. Wakefield, to whom this commentary has been in many instances indebted. “I have now finished my observations on the Gospel of Matthew: a piece of history, it must be acknowledged, the most singular in its composition, the most wonderful in its contents, and the most important in its object, that was ever exhibited to the notice of mankind. For simplicity of narrative, and an artless relation of facts, without any applause or censure, or digressive remarks, on the part of the historian, upon the characters introduced in it; without any intermixture of his own opinion, upon any subject whatsoever: and for a multiplicity of internal marks of credibility, this Gospel certainly has no parallel among human productions.”

2. One thing the pious and intelligent reader has, no doubt, already noticed: there is not one truth, or doctrine, in the whole oracles of God, which is not taught in this evangelist. The outlines of the whole spiritual system are here correctly laid down; even Paul himself has added nothing; he has amplified and illustrated the truths contained in this Gospel; but, even under the direct inspiration of the Holy Ghost, neither he nor any other of the apostles have brought to light any one truth, the prototype of which has not been found in the words or acts of our blessed Lord, as related by Matthew, in the work which has already passed under review. The Gospel by St. Matthew is the grand text-book of Christianity; the other Gospels are collateral evidences of its truth, and the apostolic epistles are comments on the text. In the commencement of this work, I stated my wish, “to assist my fellow labourers in the vineyard to lead men to HIM who is the fountain of all excellence, goodness, truth, and happiness;—to magnify his LAW, and make it honourable;—to show the wonderful provision made in his GOSPEL for the recovery and salvation of a sinful world;—to prove that God’s great design is to make his creatures HAPPY; and that such a salvation as it becomes God to give, and such as man needs to receive, is within the grasp of every human soul.”—General Preface, before Genesis. And having thus far done what I could, in reference to these great and important purposes, here I register my thanks to the ever-blessed God, Father, Word, and Holy Spirit, that he has permitted me to cast my mite into this sacred treasury, to add my feeble testimony to his Eternal Truth; and has spared me, in the midst of many infirmities and oppressive labours, to see the conclusion of this Gospel, a consummation which I had long devoutly wished, but which I had scarcely hoped ever to see realized.

May the Divine Author of this sacred book give the reader a heart-felt experience of all the truths it contains; make and keep him wise unto salvation; build him up in this most holy faith; and give him an inheritance among the blessed, through Christ Jesus, the Friend of mankind, and the Saviour of sinners, who is the object and end of this glorious system of truth! And to Him, with the Father and Eternal Spirit, be glory and dominion, thanksgiving and obedience, for ever and ever. Amen and amen!

PREFACE TO THE GOSPEL

ACCORDING TO

ST. MARK.

WITH A SHORT ACCOUNT OF HIS LIFE

FOR an explication of the word GOSPEL, and the title SAINT, see the Preface to Matt. p. 30. MARK. This person, the second in the commonly received order of the four evangelists, was named JOHN MARK, and was the son of a pious woman called Mary, who dwelt at Jerusalem: she was an early believer, and the disciples used to meet at her house. Peter, having been delivered out of prison by an angel, came to the house of Mary, mother of John, whose surname was Mark, where many were gathered together praying, Acts xii. 12. This very first mention of John Mark assures us of Peter's intimacy in that family: it is almost universally allowed that Mark, mentioned by Peter, 1 Epist. chap. v. 13, is this evangelist, and that he is the same with him who is called sister's son to Barnabas, Col. iv. 10, and is supposed to have been converted by Peter to the Christian faith. Mr. W. Whiston supposes him to have been Peter's own son. See his Primitive New Test. Notes at the end. He travelled from Jerusalem to Antioch with Paul and Barnabas, Acts xii. 25, and some short time after he accompanied them to other countries as their minister, Acts xiii. 5. When they returned to the continent, and came on shore at Perga in Pamphylia, he departed from them and returned to Jerusalem, ver. 13. Afterwards he would have gone with Paul and Barnabas, but the former refused to take him, because of his having left them at Pamphylia; Paul and Barnabas then separated, and Mark accompanied his uncle Barnabas to Cyprus, Acts xv. 36-41. Afterwards Paul and he were fully reconciled, as evidently appears from 2 Tim. iv. 11: Take Mark, and bring him with thee; for he is profitable to me for the ministry. This appears also from Philemon, ver. 24, where Mark is styled Paul's fellow-labourer; and from Col. iv. 10, where we find the apostle recommending him in a particular manner to the Church of God at that place. He is generally supposed to have been particularly intimate with St. Peter, to have written his Gospel at ROME, A. D. 64, and to have died at Alexandria in Egypt, in the eighth year of the reign of Nero. Dr. LARDNER has fully proved that Mark the evangelist, and John Mark nephew to Barnabas, were one and the same person. See his Works, vol. vi. p. 77, &c.

How Mark composed his Gospel, is a question not yet decided among learned men. Many of the primitive fathers, such as Papias, Clemens Alexandrinus, Irenaus, Tertullian, Origen, Eusebius, &c., believed that he was only the amanuensis of St. Peter; that this apostle, through modesty, would not put his name to the work, but dictated the whole account, and Mark wrote it down from his mouth. St. Augustine appears to have been the first who maintained that Mark abridged St. Matthew's Gospel; and that it is not to be considered as an original work:—on this opinion several remarks will be made in the course of these notes. Others suppose that Mark compiled it, partly out of Matthew's Gospel, and partly out of the Gospel of Luke. But most of these are conjectures which appear to have very little foundation. Critics are also divided concerning the language in which it was written, and the people to whom it was sent. Some have contended for a Latin original, because of several Latin words found in it, such as στρατὴς τοῦ ἑνὸς ἑκατονταρχοῦ, chap. vi. 27, one of the guard; καταρχὴ, xv. 39, 44, 45, a centurion, a captain of one hundred men; σινσημα, xiv. 44, a signal, a sign agreed on. But such words are better accounted for by supposing that his Gospel was written for the use of the Roman people; and that it is on this account that he wholly passes by the genealogy of our Lord, as being a point of no consequence to Gentile converts, though very necessary for the Jews, and especially the Jews of Palestine. That it was originally written in Greek, is a point now acknowledged by almost all learned men.

It may be necessary to state the things omitted by Mark in the beginning of his Gospel which are mentioned by Matthew and Luke.

PREFACE TO THE GOSPEL OF ST. MARK.

1. The PREFACE, found in Luke and John, chap. i.
2. The CONCEPTION of Elizabeth, Luke i. 5-25.
3. The SALUTATION of Mary, Luke i. 26-38.
4. Mary's VISIT to Elizabeth, Luke i. 39-56.
5. John Baptist's BIRTH, Luke i. 57-79.
6. The Angel's APPEARANCE to Joseph, Matt. i. 18-25.
7. The BIRTH of CHRIST, Matt. i. 25 ; Luke ii. 1-7.
8. The GENEALOGY of CHRIST, Matt. i. 1-17 ; Luke iii. 1-76.
9. The Appearance of the Angel to the SHEPHERDS, Luke ii. 9-20.
10. The CIRCUMCISION of CHRIST, Matt. i. 25 ; Luke ii. 21.
11. The PRESENTATION of Christ in the Temple, Luke ii. 22-38.
12. The Coming of the MAGI, Matt. ii. 1-12.
13. The FLIGHT into Egypt, Matt. ii. 13-15.
14. Herod's MURDER of the INNOCENTS, Matt. ii. 16-18.
15. The RETURN of the Holy Family from Egypt, Matt. ii. 19-23 ; Luke ii. 39.
16. Christ's JOURNEY to Jerusalem when twelve years of age, Luke ii. 40-48.

From the particulars enumerated here, it appears that the things omitted by Mark are also omitted by John except the Preface ; and that St. Luke is the most circumstantial.

For other particulars relative to this Gospel, see at the end of the last chapter.

THE GOSPEL

ACCORDING TO

S T. M A R K.

Æsærian year of the World, 4030.—Alexandrian year of the World, 5528.—Antiochian year of the World, 5518.—Constantinopolitan Æra of the World, 5534.—Rabbinical year of the World, 3786.—Year of the Julian Period, 4740.—Æra of the Seleucidæ, 338.—Year of the Christian Æra, 26.—Year of the CCI. Olympiad, 2.—Year of the building of Rome, 769.—Year of the Julian Æra, 71.—Year of the Cæsarean Æra of Antioch, 74.—Year of the Spanish Æra, 64.—Year of the Paschal Cycle or Dionysian Period, 27.—Year of the Christian Lunar Cycle, or Golden Number, 8.—Year of the Rabbinical Lunar Cycle, 5.—Year of the Solar Cycle, 7.—Dominical Letter, F.—Epaet, 17.—Year of the Emperor Tiberius, 14.—Consuls, C. Calvisius Sabinus, and Cn. Corn. Lentulus Gætulicus, from January 1 to July 1; and Q. Marcius Barba and T. Rustius Nummus Gallus, for the remainder of the year. The reason why two sets of Consuls appear in this Chronology is this: the Consuls were changed every year in July; therefore, taking in the whole year, four Consuls necessarily appear: two for the first six months, and two for the latter half of the year.

CHAPTER I.

The mission, preaching, and success of John Baptist, 1-5. His manner of life, 6. Proclaims Christ, and baptizes him in Jordan, 7-11. The temptation of Christ, 12, 13. John being put in prison, Christ begins to preach, 14, 15. He calls Andrew and Simon, 16-18. James and John, 19, 20. Teaches in Capernaum, 21, 22. Casts out a demon, 23-25. Goes into the house of Simon, and heals his mother-in-law, 29-31. Heals many diseased persons, 32-34. Goes to the desert, and is followed by his disciples, 35-37. Preaches in different towns and synagogues of Galilee, and casts out devils, 38, 39. Cleanses a leper, who publishes abroad his miraculous cure, 40-45.

A. M. 4030.
A. D. 26.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 2.

THE beginning of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, ^a the Son of God;

2 As it is written in the prophets, ^b Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.

^a Matt. xiv. 33; Luke i. 35; John i. 34.—^b Mal. iii. 1; Matt. xi. 10; Luke vii. 27.

NOTES ON CHAP. I.

Verse 1. The beginning of the Gospel] It is with the utmost propriety that Mark begins the Gospel dispensation by the preaching of John the Baptist, he being the forerunner of Jesus Christ, and the first proclaimer of the incarnated Messiah. Gospel—for the meaning of the word see the preface to Matthew.

Son of God] To point out his Divine origin; and thus glancing at his miraculous conception. This was an essential character of the Messiah. See Matt. xvi. 13; xxvi. 63; Luke xxii. 67, &c.

Verse 2. As it is written in the prophets] Rather, As it is written by Isaiah the prophet. I think this reading should be adopted, instead of that in the common text. It is the reading of the Codex Bezae, Vatican, and several other MSS. of great repute. It is found also in the Syriac, Persic, Coptic, Armenian,

3 ^c The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.

4 ^d John did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism of repentance ^e for the remission of sins.

^c Isa. xl. 3; Matt. iii. 3; Luke iii. 4; John i. 15, 23.
^d Matt. iii. 1; Luke iii. 3; John iii. 23.—^e Or, unto.

Gothic, Vulgate, and Itala versions, and in several of the fathers. As this prophecy is found both in Isaiah and Malachi, probably the reading was changed to τοῖς προφῆταις, the prophets, that it might comprehend both. In one of Asseman's Syriac copies, both Isaiah and Malachi are mentioned. See all the authorities in Griesbach, 2d edit.; and see the parallel place in Matthew, chap. iii. 3, where the Prophet Isaiah is mentioned, which seems fully to establish the authority of this reading.

Verse 3. The voice of one crying] See on Matt. iii. 1-3.

Verse 4. John] The original name is nearly lost in the Greek Ιωάννης, and in the Latin Johannes, and almost totally so in the English John. The original name is יהוחנן Yehochanan, compounded of יהוה Yehovah chanan, the grace or mercy of Yehovah: a

A. M. 4030.
A. D. 26.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 2.

5 ^f And there went out unto him all the land of Judea, and they of Jerusalem, and were all baptized of him in the river Jordan, confessing their sins.

6 And John was ^g clothed with camel's hair, and with a girdle of a skin about his loins; and he did eat ^h locusts and wild honey;

7 And preached, saying, ⁱ There cometh one mightier than I after me, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose.

8 ^k I indeed have baptized you with water: but he shall baptize you ^l with the Holy Ghost.

9 ¶ ^m And it came to pass in those days, that Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan.

10 ⁿ And straightway coming up out of the water, he saw the heavens ^o opened, and the Spirit like a dove descending upon him:

^f Matt. iii. 5.—^g Matt. iii. 4.—^h Lev. xi. 22.—ⁱ Matt. iii. 11; John i. 27; Acts xiii. 25.—^k Acts i. 5; xi. 16; xix. 4.—^l Isa. xlv. 3; Joel ii. 28; Acts ii. 4; x. 45; xi. 15, 16; 1 Cor. xii. 13.—^m Matt. iii. 13; Luke iii. 21.—ⁿ Matt. iii. 16; John i. 32.

most proper and significant name for the forerunner of the God of ALL GRACE. It was John's business to proclaim the Gospel of the grace of God, and to point out that Lamb or sacrifice of God which takes away the sin of the world.

For the remission of sins.] Or, toward the remission —eis ápoew. They were to repent, and be baptized in reference to the remission of sins. REPENTANCE prepared the soul for it, and BAPTISM was the type or pledge of it. See on Matt. iii. 2.

Verse 5. All the land] See on Matt. iii. 4-6.

Confessing their sins.] It was an invariable custom among the Jews to admit no proselyte to baptism, till he had, in the most solemn manner, declared that he for ever had renounced all idolatrous worship, all heathenish superstitions, and promised an entire and unreserved submission to the law of Moses. This was necessary for a proselyte adult—a child dedicated to God by baptism must be brought up in this faith.

Verse 6. John was clothed, &c.] See the note on Matt. iii. 4.

Verse 7. The latchet of whose shoes] The shoe of the ancients was properly only a sole tied round the foot and ancle with strings or thongs. See on Matt. iii. 11.

Verse 8. I indeed have baptized you with water] As if he had said: This baptism is not to be rested in; it is only an emblem of that which you must receive from him who is mightier than I. It is he only who can communicate the Holy Spirit; and water baptism is nothing, but as it points out, and leads to, the baptism of the Holy Ghost. The subject of these two verses is not found in Matthew nor John; but is mentioned with some varying circumstances by Luke, chap. iii. 16.

Verses 9-11. See the subject of these verses which contain the account of our Lord's baptism, explained, Matt. iii. 13-17.

11 And there came a voice from heaven, saying, ^p Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

12 ¶ ^q And immediately the Spirit driveth him into the wilderness.

13 And he was there in the wilderness forty days, tempted of Satan; and was with the wild beasts; ^r and the angels ministered unto him.

14 ¶ ^s Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, ^t preaching the Gospel of the kingdom of God, 15 And saying, ^u The time is fulfilled, and ^v the kingdom of God is at hand: repent ye, and believe the Gospel.

✓ 16 ¶ ^w Now as he walked by the sea of Galilee, he saw Simon and Andrew his brother, ^o Or, cloven, or, rent.—^p Psal. ii. 7; Matt. iii. 17; chap. ix. 7.—^q Matt. iv. 1; Luke iv. 1.—^r Matt. iv. 11.—^s Matt. iv. 12.—^t Matt. iv. 23.—^u Dan. ix. 25; Gal. iv. 4; Eph. i. 10.—^v Matt. iii. 2; iv. 17.—^w Matt. iv. 18; Luke v. 4.

Verse 12. The Spirit driveth him] Εκβαλεῖ, putteth him forth. St. Matthew says, chap. iv. 1, ἀνῆλθεν. was brought up. See this important subject of our Lord's temptation explained at large, Matt. iv. 1-11.

Verse 13. With the wild beasts] This is a curious circumstance, which is mentioned by none of the other evangelists; and seems to intimate that he was in the most remote, unfrequented, and savage part of the desert; which, together with the diabolic influence, tended to render the whole scene the more horrid. Perhaps this very circumstance is mentioned, as emblematical of that savage and brutal cruelty with which he was persecuted to death by the Jews and Gentiles, instigated thereto by the malice of Satan.

Verse 14. Preaching the Gospel of the kingdom] See the notes on Matt. iii. 2; and on the office of the preacher, or herald, at the end of that chapter.

Verse 15. The time is fulfilled] That is, the time appointed for sending the Messiah; and particularly the time specified by Daniel, chap. ix. 24-27. Here are four points worthy of deep attention, in the preaching of the Son of God.

1. Every thing that is done is according to a plan laid by the Divine wisdom, and never performed till the time appointed was filled up.

2. That the kingdom and reign of sin are to be destroyed, and the kingdom of grace and heaven established in their place.

3. That the kingdom of God, and his reign by grace, begins with repentance for past sins.

4. That this reign of grace is at hand; and that nothing but an obstinate perseverance in sin and impenitence can keep any soul out of it; and that now is the accepted time to enter in.

Verse 16. As he walked by the sea, &c.] See on Matt. iv. 18-22.

Andrew his brother] Instead of the common read-

A. M. 4031.

A. D. 27.

An. Olymp.

CCI.

casting a net into the sea : for they were fishers.

17 And Jesus said unto them, Come ye after me, and I will make you to become fishers of men.

18 And straightway ^x they forsook their nets, and followed him.

19 ^y And when he had gone a little farther thence, he saw James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother, who also were in the ship, mending their nets.

20 And straightway he called them; and they left their father Zebedee in the ship with the hired servants, and went after him.

21 ^z And they went into Capernaum; and straightway on the sabbath day he entered into the synagogue, and taught.

^x Matt. xix. 27; Luke v. 11. — ^y Matt. iv. 21. — ^z Matt. iv. 13; Luke iv. 31.

ing, ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ, his brother, the best MSS. and versions have ἀδελφὸν τοῦ Σίμωνος, the brother of Simon, which should be received into the text. The most eminent critics approve of this reading.

Verse 21. Capernaum] See Matt. iv. 13.

He entered into the synagogue] Their synagogues—ἐν ταῖς συναγωγαῖς αὐτῶν, according to the Syriac, which has the word in the plural.

Verse 22. As one that had authority] From God, to do what he was doing; and to teach a pure and beneficent system of truth.

And not as the scribes.] Who had no such authority, and whose teaching was not accompanied by the power of God to the souls of the people: 1. because the matter of the teaching did not come from God; and 2. because the teachers themselves were not commissioned by the Most High. See the note on Matt. vii. 28.

Verse 23. A man with an unclean spirit] This demoniac is only mentioned by Mark and Luke, chap. iv. 31. It seems the man had lucid intervals; else he could not have been admitted into the synagogue. Unclean or impure spirit—a common epithet for those fallen spirits: but here it may mean, one who filled the heart of him he possessed with LASCIVIOUS thoughts, images, desires, and propensities. By giving way to the first attacks of such a spirit, he may soon get in, and take full possession of the whole soul.

Verse 24. What have we to do with thee] Or, What is it to us and to thee? or, What business hast thou with us? That this is the meaning of the original, ἡμεῖς καὶ σοὶ, Kypke has sufficiently shown. There is a phrase exactly like it in 2 Sam. xvi. 10. What have I to do with you, ye sons of Zeruiah? וְלָכֶם בְּנֵי צְרוּיָהּ ma li u'lacem bency Tseruiah, What business have ye with me, or, Why do ye trouble me, ye sons of Tseruiah? The Septuagint translate the Hebrew just as the evangelist does here, ἡμεῖς καὶ ἑμῶν; it is the same idiom in both places, as there can be no doubt that the demoniac spoke in 22 ^a And they were astonished at his doctrine: for he taught them as one that had authority, and not as the scribes.

A. M. 4031.

A. D. 27.

An. Olymp.

CCI. 3.

23 ^b And there was in their synagogue a man with an unclean spirit; and he cried out,

24 Saying, Let us alone; ^c what have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art, the Holy One of God.

25 And Jesus ^d rebuked him, saying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him.

26 And when the unclean spirit ^e had torn him, and cried with a loud voice, he came out of him.

27 And they were all amazed, insomuch that they questioned among themselves, saying,

^a Matt. vii. 28. — ^b Luke iv. 33. — ^c Matt. viii. 29. — ^d Ver. 31. — ^e Chap. ix. 20.

Hebrew, or in the Chaldeo-Syriac dialect of that language, which was then common in Judea. See on Matt. viii. 29.

Art thou come to destroy us?] We may suppose this spirit to have felt and spoken thus. "Is this the time of which it hath been predicted, that in it the Messiah should destroy all that power which we have usurped and exercised over the bodies and souls of men? Alas! it is so: I now plainly see who thou art—the Holy One of God, who art come to destroy unholiness, in which we have our residence, and through which we have our reign in the souls of men." An unholy spirit is the only place where Satan can have his full operation, and show forth the plenitude of his destroying power.

Verse 25. And Jesus rebuked him] A spirit of this cast will only yield to the sovereign power of the Son of God. All watchings, fastings, and mortifications, considered in themselves, will do little or no good. Uncleaness, of every description, will only yield to the rebuke of God.

Verse 26. And when the unclean spirit had torn him] And had thrown him down in the midst, Luke iv. 35, καὶ ἐπαραΐαν, and convulsed him. Never was there a person possessed by an unclean spirit who did not suffer a convulsion, perhaps a total ruin of nature by it. Sins of uncleaness, as the apostle intimates, are against the body; they sap the foundation of life, so that there are very few of this class, whether male or female, that live out half their days: they generally die martyrs to their lusts. When the propensities of the flesh are most violent in a person who is determined to serve God, it is often a proof that these are the last efforts of the impure spirit, who has great rage, because he knows his time is but short.

Verse 27. What thing is this?] Words of surprise and astonishment.

And what new doctrine] I have added the particle and, from the Syriac, as it helps the better to distinguish the members of the sentence; but there

A. M. 4031. What thing is this? what new doc-
A. D. 27. trine is this? for with authority
An. Olymp. commandeth he even the unclean
CCI. 3. spirits, and they do obey him.

28 And immediately his fame spread abroad throughout all the region round about Galilee.

29 ¶ And forthwith, when they were come out of the synagogue, they entered into the house of Simon and Andrew, with James and John.

30 But Simon's wife's mother lay sick of a fever, and anon they tell him of her.

31 And he came and took her by the hand, and lifted her up; and immediately the fever left her, and she ministered unto them.

32 ¶ And at even, when the sun did set, they brought unto him all that were diseased, and them that were possessed with devils.

^f Matt. viii. 14; Luke iv. 39.—^s Matt. viii. 16; Luke iv. 40.
^a Chap. iii. 12; Luke iv. 41; See Acts xvi. 17, 18.—ⁱ Or, to say is a vast diversity in the MSS. on this verse. See Griesbach.

[For with authority] They had never heard such a gracious doctrine, and never saw any teaching supported by miracles before. How much must this person be superior to men!—they are brought into subjection by unclean spirits; this person subjects unclean spirits to himself.

Verse 28. And immediately his fame spread abroad] The miracle which he had performed was—1. great; 2. evidenced much benevolence in the worker of it; and 3. was very public, being wrought in the synagogue. The many who saw it published it wherever they went; and thus the fame of Christ, as an incomparable teacher, and unparalleled worker of miracles, became soon spread abroad through the land.

The word, εὐθὺς, immediately, occurs more frequently in this evangelist than in any other writer of the new covenant: it is very often superfluous, and may often be omitted in the translation, without any prejudice to the sense of the passage in which it is found. It seems to be used by St. Mark, as our ancient writers used forsooth, and such like words.

Verse 29. See this account of the healing of Peter's mother-in-law explained at large, Matt. viii. 14–17.

Verse 32. When the sun did set] See on Matt. viii. 14.

Verse 31. Because they knew him] To be the Christ, is added here by several ancient and respectable MSS. and versions; but it appears to be only a gloss.

Verse 35. In the morning—a great while before day] By πρωί, the morning, is to be understood the whole space of three hours, which finished the fourth watch of the night.

And there prayed.] Not that he needed anything, for in him dwelt all the fulness of the Godhead bodily; but that he might be a pattern to us. Every thing that our blessed Lord did he performed either as our pattern, or as our sacrifice.

33 And all the city was gathered together at the door.

34 And he healed many that were sick of divers diseases, and cast out many devils; and ^b suffered not the devils ⁱ to speak, because they knew him.

35 ¶ And ^k in the morning, rising up a great while before day, he went out, and departed into a solitary place, and there prayed

36 And Simon and they that were with him followed after him.

37 And when they had found him, they said unto him, All men seek for thee.

38 And he said unto them, ^l Let us go into the next towns, that I may preach there also: for ^m therefore came I forth.

39 ⁿ And he preached in their synagogues throughout all Galilee, and cast out devils.

that they knew him.—^k Luke iv. 42.—^l Luke iv. 43.—^m Isa. lxi. 1; John xvi. 28; xvii. 4.—ⁿ Matt. iv. 23; Luke iv. 44.

Verse 36. And Simon—followed after him.] Κατεδίωκεν, followed him eagerly. They had now begun to taste the good word of God, and thought they could never hear too much of it. Many possess this spirit when first converted to God. O! what a pity that they should ever lose it! The soul that relishes God's word is ever growing in grace by it.

Verse 37. All men seek for thee.] Some to hear; some to be healed; some to be saved; and some, perhaps, through no good motive. There are all sorts of followers in the train of Christ; but how few walk steadily, and persevere unto the end!

Verse 38. The next towns] Κομποποιεις properly signifies such towns as resembled cities for magnitude and number of inhabitants, but which were not walled as were cities. The Codex Bezae, most of the versions, and all the Itala, read, Let us go into the neighbouring villages, AND INTO THE CITIES.

For therefore came I forth.] Εἰς τοῦτο, for this purpose am I come forth—to preach the Gospel to every creature, that all might hear, and fear, and return unto the Lord. The towns and the villages will not come to the preacher—the preacher must go to them, if he desires their salvation. In this, also, Jesus has left his ministering servants an example, that they should follow his steps. Let no minister of God think he has delivered his own soul, till he has made an offer of salvation to every city and village within his reach.

Verse 39. And he preached] He continued preaching—Ἦν ἀνεσθων: this is the proper meaning of the words: he never slackened his pace—he continued proclaiming the glad tidings of salvation to all—there was no time to be lost—immortal souls were perishing for lack of knowledge; and the grand adversary was prowling about, seeking whom he might devour. This zealous, affectionate, and persevering diligence of Christ should be copied by all his servants in the ministry; it is not less necessary now than it was then. Thousands,

A. M. 4031. 40 ¶ And there came a leper
A. D. 27. to him, beseeching him, and kneel-
An. Olymp. ing down to him, and saying unto
CCI. 3. him, If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.

41 And Jesus, moved with compassion, put forth his hand, and touched him, and saith unto him, I will; be thou clean.

42 And as soon as he had spoken, immediately the leprosy departed from him, and he was cleansed.

43 And he straitly charged him, and forthwith sent him away;

• Matt. viii. 2; Luke v. 12.—¶ Lev. xiv. 3, 4, 10; Luke v. 14.

thousands of Christians, so called, are perishing for lack of knowledge. O God, send forth more and more faithful labourers into thy vineyard!

Verse 40. There came a leper] See the notes on Matt. viii. 2, &c. Should any be inclined to preach on this cleansing of the leper, Mark is the best evangelist to take the account from, because he is more circumstantial than either Matthew or Luke.

I. Consider this leper.

1. He heard of Jesus and his miracles.
2. He came to him for a cure, conscious of his disease.
3. He earnestly besought him to grant the mercy he needed.
4. He fell down on his knees, (with his face to the earth, Luke v. 12,) thus showing his humbled state, and the distress of his soul.
5. He appealed to his love—if thou wilt; with a full conviction of his ability—thou canst; in order to get healed.

II. Consider Jesus.

1. He is moved with tender compassion towards him: this is the alone source of all human salvation.
2. He stretches forth his hand, showing thus his readiness to relieve him.
3. He touches him; though this was prohibited by the law, and rendered him who did it in any common case legally unclean.
4. He proves at once his infinite love and unlimited power, by his word and by his act; I will—be thou cleansed; and immediately his leprosy was removed. But see on Matt. viii. 2.

Verse 43. Straitly charged] See the reason for 44 And saith unto him, See thou say nothing to any man: but go thy way, show thyself to the priest, and offer for thy cleansing those things which Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them.

45 ¶ But he went out, and began to publish it much, and to blaze abroad the matter, insomuch that Jesus could no more openly enter into the city, but was without in desert places; and they came to him from every quarter.

¶ Luke v. 15.—¶ Chap. ii. 13.

this, Matt. viii. 4. This verse is wanting in two copies of the Itala.

Verse 45. Began to publish it much] Began to publish πολλά, many things; probably all that he had heard about our Lord's miraculous works.

And to blaze abroad the matter] That is, his own healing; thinking he could never speak too much, nor too well, of him who had thus mercifully and miraculously cleansed him.

Jesus could no more openly enter into the city] A city of Galilee, probably Chorazin or Bethsaida, in which he did not appear, for fear of exciting the jealousy of the secular government, or the envy and malice of the Jewish rulers.

And they came to him from every quarter.] So generally had the poor man, who was cleansed of his leprosy, spread abroad his fame. And can we suppose that, of all these people who came to him from all parts, and to whom he preached the glad tidings of the kingdom, by the power and authority of God, few or none were saved? This is a common opinion; but every person who seriously considers it must see that it is unfounded. Without doubt, Christ had thousands that were brought to God by his ministry; though, in general, only those are mentioned who were constant attendants on his person. It would be strange, if, while God manifested in the flesh was preacher, there should be few brought to the knowledge of themselves, and of the truth! In this respect he does not permit his faithful ministers to labour in vain. The Son of man sowed the seed of the kingdom; and it afterwards produced a plentiful harvest. Multitudes of Jews were converted by the preaching of the Gospel; and the first Christian Church was founded at Jerusalem.

CHAPTER II.

Christ preaches in Capernaum, 1, 2. A paralytic person is brought to him, whose sins are pronounced forgiven, 3–5. The scribes accuse him of blasphemy, 6, 7. He vindicates himself, and proves his power to forgive sins, by healing the man's disease, 8–11. The people are astonished and edified, 12. He calls Levi from the receipt of custom, 13, 14. Eats in his house with publicans and sinners, at which the Pharisees murmur, 15, 16. He vindicates his conduct, 17. Vindicates his disciples, who are accused of not fasting, 18–22; and for plucking the ears of corn on the Sabbath day, 23–26; and teaches the right use of the Sabbath, 27, 28.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

AND again ^a he entered into Capernaum after some days; and it was noised that he was in the house.

2 And straightway ^b many were gathered together, insomuch that there was no room to receive them; no, not so much as about the door: and he preached the word unto them.

3 ¶ And they come unto him, bringing one sick of the palsy, which was borne of four.

4 And when they could not come nigh unto him for the press, they uncovered the roof where he was; and when they had broken it up, they let down the bed wherein the sick of the palsy lay.

5 When Jesus saw their faith, he said unto the sick of the palsy, Son, thy sins be forgiven thee.

6 But there were certain of the scribes sitting there, and reasoning in their hearts:

7 Why doth this man thus speak blasphemies? ^c who can forgive sins but God only?

8 And immediately ^d when Jesus perceived in his spirit that they so reasoned within themselves, he said unto them, Why reason ye these things in your hearts?

9 ^e Whether is it easier to say to the sick of the palsy, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise, and take up thy bed, and walk? A. M. 4031.

A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

10 But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins, he saith to the sick of the palsy, 11 I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy bed, and go thy way into thine house.

12 And immediately he arose, took up the bed, and went forth before them all; insomuch that they were all amazed, and glorified God, saying, We never saw it on this fashion.

13 ¶ ^f And he went forth again by the sea side; and all the multitude resorted unto him, and he taught them.

14 ^g And as he passed by, he saw Levi the son of Alphaeus sitting ^h at the receipt of custom, and said unto him, Follow me. And he arose and followed him.

15 ¶ ⁱ And it came to pass, that, as Jesus sat at meat in his house, many publicans and sinners sat also together with Jesus and his disciples: for there were many, and they followed him.

16 And when the scribes and Pharisees saw him eat with publicans and sinners, they said unto his disciples, How is it that he eateth and drinketh with publicans and sinners?

^a Matt. ix. 1; Luke v. 18.—^b Prov. viii. 34; Matt. xiii. 20; Luke v. 17; xl. 28; Acts xvii. 11.—^c Job xiv. 4; Isa. xliii. 25.
^d Matt. ix. 4.

^e Matt. ix. 5.—^f Matt. ix. 9.—^g Matt. ix. 9; Luke v. 27.—^h Or, at the place where the custom was received.—ⁱ Matt. ix. 10.

NOTES ON CHAP. II.

Verse 1. In the house.] The house of Peter, with whom Christ lodged when at Capernaum. See the notes on Matt. iv. 13; viii. 13.

Verse 2. So much as about the door.] Meaning the yard or court before the house.

Preached the word.] Τοῦ λόγου. The doctrine of the kingdom of God; for so ὁ λόγος is repeatedly used.

Verse 3. One sick of the palsy.] A paralytic person. See on Matt. ix. 1, &c.

Borne of four.] Four men, one at each corner of the sofa or couch on which he lay: this sick man appears to have been too feeble to come himself, and too weak to be carried in any other way.

Verse 4. They uncovered the roof.] The houses in the east are generally made flat-roofed, that the inhabitants may have the benefit of taking the air on them; they are also furnished with battlements round about, Deut. xxii. 8; Judg. xvi. 27; and 2 Sam. xi. 2, to prevent persons from falling off; and have a trap door by which they descend into the house. This door, it appears, was too narrow to let down the sick man and his couch; so they uncovered the roof, removed a part of the tiles, and having broken it up, taken away the laths or timber, to which the tiles had been attached, they then had room to let down the afflicted man. See Luke v. 19, and on Matt. x. 27; xxiv. 17.

Verse 7. Why doth this man thus speak blasphemies?] See this explained Matt. ix. 3, &c.

Verse 12. He—took up the bed.] The words of PROSPER. on this place, are worthy of notice:—

“What is sin but a deplorable fall, a grovelling on the earth, a repose in the creature, often followed by a universal palsy of the soul; namely, an utter inability to help itself, to break off its evil habits, to walk in the ways of God, to rise or to take one good step towards him? Grace can repair all in a moment: because it is nothing but the almighty will of God, who commands and does whatever he commands.”

Verse 14. Levi.] The same as Mattheus; he appears to have been a Jew, though employed in the odious office of a tax-gatherer. For an account of his call, see his Gospel, chap. ix. 9, &c.

Verse 16. Sinners.] By ἁμαρτωλοί, the Gentiles or heathens are generally to be understood in the Gospels, for this was a term the Jews never applied to any of themselves. See the note on Matt. ix. 10.

How is it that he eateth.] Some very good MSS. several versions, with Chrysostom and Augustin, read Why doth YOUR MASTER eat?

A. M. 4031. 17 When Jesus heard it, he saith
A. D. 27. unto them, ^k 'They that are whole An. Olymp. CCL. 3. have no need of the physician, but they that are sick: I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.

18 ¶ ¹ And the disciples of John, and of the Pharisees, used to fast: and they come and say unto him, Why do the disciples of John and of the Pharisees fast, but thy disciples fast not?

19 And Jesus said unto them, Can the children of the bride-chamber fast, while the bridegroom is with them? as long as they have the bridegroom with them, they cannot fast.

20 But the days will come, when the bridegroom shall be taken away from them, and then shall they fast in those days.

21 No man also seweth a piece of ^m new cloth on an old garment: else the new piece

^k Matt. ix. 12, 13; xviii. 11; Luke v. 31, 32; xix. 10; 1 Tim. i.
15.—^l Matt. ix. 14; Luke v. 33.

Verse 17. To repentance.] This is omitted by ABDKL, twenty-seven others; both the Syriac, Persian, Coptic, Æthiopic, Armenian, Gothic, Vulgate; six copies of the Itala; Euthymius and Augustin.—
Griesbach has left it out of the text; Grotius, Mill, and Bengel approve of the omission. See on Matt.
ix. 13. I leave it as in the parallel place above quoted. Properly speaking, the righteous cannot be called to repentance. They have already forsaken sin, mourned for it, and turned to God. In the other parallel place, Luke v. 32, all the MSS. and versions retain μετανοειν, repentance.

Verse 18. Why do the disciples of John and of the Pharisees fast?] See this largely explained on Matt.
ix. 11, &c. The following vices are very common to Pharisees.

1. They are more busied in censuring the conduct of others than in rectifying their own.

2. They desire that every one should regulate his piety by theirs; and embrace their particular customs and forms of devotion.

3. They speak of and compare themselves with other people, only that they may have an opportunity of distinguishing and exalting themselves.

On the nature, times, and duration of fasting, see
Matt. vi. 16, and ix. 15.

Verse 19. Can the children of the bride-chamber fast while the bridegroom is with them?] Among the Hindoos, large parties of friends, belonging both to the bride and bridegroom, attend on both during the wedding day; on the following day, when the bridegroom leaves the house of his father-in-law, the attendants are filled with sorrow, especially the near relations.—WARD'S Customs.

Verse 20. In those days.] But instead of ev exekleistais ημεραις, many of the best MSS. and versions read, ev exewy ty ημερη, in that day; viz. the day in which that filled it up taketh away from ^{A. M. 4031}

the old, and the rent is made worse. ^{A. D. 27.}
^{An. Olymp. CCL. 3.}

22 And no man putteth new wine into old bottles, else the new wine doth burst the bottles, and the wine is spilled; and the bottles will be marred: but new wine must be put into new bottles.

23 ¶ ⁿ And it came to pass, that he went through the corn fields on the sabbath day; and his disciples began, as they went, ^o to pluck the ears of corn.

24 And the Pharisees said unto him, Behold, why do they on the sabbath day, that which is not lawful?

25 And he said unto them, Have ye never read ^p what David did when he had need, and was an hungered, he, and they that were with him?

^m Or, raw, or, unwrought.—ⁿ Matt. xii. 1; Luke vi. 1.—^o Deut.
xxiii. 25.—^p 1 Sam. xxi. 6.

Jesus Christ should be delivered up to the Jews and Gentiles. Mill and Bengel approve of this reading, and Griesbach adopts it. The former part of the verse seems to vindicate the common reading.

Verse 21. No man—seweth] See Matt. ix. 16.
No man seweth a piece of unscoured cloth upon an old garment. In the common editions this verse begins with καί, and, but this is omitted by almost every MS. and version of note. The construction of the whole verse is various in the MSS. The translation given here, and in Matt. ix. 16, is intelligible, and speaks for itself.

Verse 23. Went through the corn fields] See on Matt. xii. 1.

Verse 26. The days of Abiathar the high priest] It appears from 1 Sam. xxi. 1, which is the place referred to here, that Ahimelech was then high priest at Nob: and from 1 Sam. xxii. 20; xxiii. 6, and 1 Chron.
xviii. 16, it appears that Abiathar was the son of Ahimelech. The Persic reads Abimelech instead of Abiathar. Theophylact supposes that Abiathar was the priest, and Ahimelech or Abimelech the high priest, and thus endeavours to reconcile both the sacred historians. Others reconcile the accounts thus: Ahimelech was called Ahimelech Abiathar, 28 ab, father, understood; and Abiathar was called Abiathar Ahimelech, 22 ben, son, understood. Probably they both officiated in the high priesthood; and the name of the office was indifferently applied to either.

Shew-bread] See Matt. xii. 4.

Verse 27. The Sabbath was made for man] That he might have the seventh part of his whole time to devote to the purposes of bodily rest and spiritual exercises. And in these respects it is of infinite use to mankind. Where no Sabbath is observed, there disease, poverty, and profligacy, generally prevail. Had we no Sabbath, we should soon have no religion.—

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL.3.
26 How he went into the house of God, in the days of Abiathar the high priest, and did eat the shew-bread, ^a which is not lawful to eat but for the priests, and gave also to them which were with him.

^a Exod. xxix. 32, 33; Lev. xxiv. 9.—^r Exod. xxiii. 12; Deut.

This whole verse is wanting in the Codex Beza, and in five of the Itala.

Verse 28. The Son of man is Lord] See on Matt. xii. 7, 8. Some have understood this as applying to men in general, and not to Christ. The Son of man, any man is Lord of the Sabbath; i. e. it was made for him, for his ease, comfort, and use, and to these purposes he is to apply it. But this is a very harsh, and at the same time a very lax, mode of interpretation; for it seems to say that a man may make what use he pleases of the Sabbath; and, were this true, the moral obligation of the Sabbath would soon be annihilated.

God ordained the Sabbath not only to be a type of that rest which remains for the people of God, but to

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL.3.
27 And he said unto them, ^r The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath:

28 Therefore ^s the Son of man is Lord also of the sabbath.

v. 14; 1 Cor. iii. 21, 22.—^r Matt. xi. 27; xii. 8; Luke vi. 5.

be also a mean of promoting the welfare of men in general.

The ordinances of religion should be regulated according to their end, which is the honour of God, and the salvation of men. It is the property of the true religion to contain nothing in it but what is beneficial to man. Hereby God plainly shows that it is neither out of indigence or interest that he requires men to worship and obey him; but only out of goodness, and to make them happy. God prohibited work on the Sabbath day, lest servants should be oppressed by their masters, that the labouring beasts might have necessary rest, and that men might have a proper opportunity to attend upon his ordinances, and get their souls saved. To the Sabbath, under God, we owe much of what is requisite and necessary as well for the body as the soul.

CHAPTER III.

The man with the withered hand healed. 1–5. The Pharisees plot our Lord's destruction, 6. Christ withdraws, and is followed by a great multitude, 7–9. He heals many, and goes to a mountain to pray, 10–13. He ordains twelve disciples, and gives them power to preach and work miracles, 14, 15. Their names, 16–19. The multitudes throng him, and the scribes attribute his miracles to Beelzebub, 20–22. He vindicates himself by a parable, 23–27. Of the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, 28–30. His mother and brethren send for him, 31, 32. And he takes occasion from this to show, that they who do the will of God are to him as his brother, sister, and mother, 33–35.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL.3.
AND ^a he entered again into the synagogue; and there was a man there which had a withered hand.

2 And they watched him, whether he would heal him on the sabbath day; that they might accuse him.

3 And he saith unto the man which had the withered hand, ^b Stand forth:

4 And he saith unto them, Is it lawful to do

^a Matt. xii. 9; Luke vi. 6.

NOTES ON CHAP. III.

Verse 1. A man there which had a withered hand.] See this explained on Matt. xii. 10, &c., and on Luke vi. 6, 10.

Verse 2. They watched him] Πατερησεν αυτον, they maliciously watched him. See on Luke xiv. 1.

Verse 4. To do good—or—evil? to save life, or to kill?] It was a maxim with the Jews, as it should be with all men, that he who neglected to preserve life when it was in his power, was to be reputed a murderer. Every principle of sound justice requires that he should be considered in this light. But, if this be the case, how many murderers are there against whom there is no law but the law of God!

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCL.3.
good on the sabbath days, or to do evil? to save life, or to kill? But they held their peace.

5 And when he had looked round about on them with anger, being grieved for the ^c hardness of their hearts, he saith unto the man, Stretch forth thine hand. And he stretched it out: and his hand was restored whole as the other.

^b Gr. Arise, stand forth in the midst.—^c Or, blindness.

To kill—but instead of ἀποκτείνειν, several MSS. and versions have ἀπολεσαι to destroy. Wetstein and Griesbach quote Theophylact for this reading; but it is not in my copy. Paris edit. 1635.

Verse 5. With anger, being grieved for the hardness of their hearts] These words are not found in any of the other evangelists. For παρωσι hardness, or rather callousness, the Codex Beza, and four of the Itala, read νεκρωσι, deadness; the Vulgate and some of the Itala, cæcitate, blindness. Join all these together, and they will scarcely express the fulness of this people's wretchedness. By a long resistance to the grace and Spirit of God, their hearts had become callous; they were past feeling. By a long opposition

A. M. 4031. 6 ¶^d And the Pharisees went
A. D. 27. forth, and straightway took counsel
An. Olymp. CCl. 3. with ^e the Herodians against him, how they might destroy him.

7 But Jesus withdrew himself with his disciples to the sea: and a great multitude from Galilee followed him, ^f and from Judea,

8 And from Jerusalem, and from Idumæa, and from beyond Jordan; and they about Tyre and Sidon, a great multitude, when they had heard what great things he did, came unto him.

9 And he spake to his disciples, that a small ship should wait on him, because of the multitude, lest they should throng him.

10 For he had healed many; insomuch that they ^g pressed upon him for to touch him, as many as had plagues.

11 ^h And unclean spirits, when they saw him, to the light of God, they became dark in their understanding, were blinded by the deceitfulness of sin, and thus were past seeing. By a long continuance in the practice of every evil work, they were cut off from all union with God, the fountain of spiritual life; and, becoming dead in trespasses and sins, they were incapable of any resurrection but through a miraculous power of God.

^d Matt. xii. 14.—^e Matt. xxii. 16.—^f Luke vi. 17.—^g Or, rushed.—^h Chap. i. 23, 24; Luke iv. 41.

With anger. What was the anger which our Lord felt? That which proceeded from excessive grief, which was occasioned by their obstinate stupidity and blindness: therefore it was no uneasy passion, but an excess of generous grief.

Whole as the other.] This is omitted by the best MSS. and versions. Grotius, Mill, and Bengel approve of the omission, and Griesbach leaves it out of the text.

Verse 6. Herodians] For an account of these, see the note on Matt. xvi. 1; xxii. 16.

Verse 7. Galilee] See Matt. iv. 13, 15.

Verse 8. Tyre—Sidon, &c.] See Matt. xi. 21.

When they had heard what great things he did, came unto him.] So, if Christ be persecuted and abandoned by the wicked, there are a multitude of pious souls who earnestly seek and follow him. He who labours for God will always find more than he loses, in the midst of all his contradictions and persecutions.

Verse 9. A small ship] Πλοιαριον. The tyff boat, Old English MS. It was doubtless something of the boat kind, which probably belonged to some of the disciples. Our Lord was at this time teaching by the sea of Galilee. The word ship is utterly improper in many places of our translation, and tends to mislead the people.

Verse 10. They pressed upon him] Rushed upon him, επιπιπτεν—through eagerness to have their spiritual and bodily maladies immediately removed.

Plagues.] Rather disorders, μαστιγας; properly such

A. M. 4031. fell down before him, and cried, A. D. 27. saying, ⁱ Thou art the Son of An. Olymp. CCl. 3. God.

12 And ^k he straitly charged them, that they should not make him known.

13 ¶^l And he goeth up into a mountain, and calleth unto him whom he would: and they came unto him.

14 And he ordained twelve, that they should be with him, and that he might send them forth to preach,

15 And to have power to heal sicknesses, and to cast out devils:

16 And Simon ^m he surnamed Peter,

17 And James the son of Zebedee, and John the brother of James; and he surnamed them Boanerges, which is, The sons of thunder:

18 And Andrew, and Philip, and Bartholo-ⁱ Matt. xiv. 33; chap. i. 1.—^k Chap. i. 23, 31; Matt. xii. 16.

^l Matt. x. 1; Luke vi. 12; ix. 1.—^m John i. 42.

disorders as were inflicted by the Lord. The word plague also tends to mislead.

Verse 11. Thou art the Son of God.] Two MSS., and the later Syriac, have, Thou art the Christ, the Son of God. One of Stephens's MSS. has, Thou art the Holy One of God. A MS. in the library of Leicester has, συ ει ο Θεος, υιος, Thou art God, the Son. This is an uncommon reading, which is not confirmed by any MS. yet discovered.

Verse 14. He ordained twelve] Εποίησε, he made twelve. Here is nothing of what we call ordaining. Christ simply appointed them to be with him; and that he might send them occasionally to preach, &c.

To preach] The Codex Beza, Saxon, and all the Itala, except one, add το ευαγγλιον, the Gospel.

Verse 15. To have power to heal—and to cast out devils] The business of a minister of Christ is, 1st. To preach the Gospel. 2dly. To be the physician of souls. And, 3dly. To wage war with the devil, and destroy his kingdom.

Verse 16. Simon, &c.] See on Matt. x. 2, &c.

Verse 17. Sons of thunder] A Hebraism for thunderers; probably so named because of their zeal and power in preaching the Gospel.

The term Boanerges is neither Hebrew nor Syriac. Calmet and others think that there is reason to believe that the Greek transcribers have not copied it exactly. בְּנֵי רָעַם beney ráam, which the ancient Greeks would pronounce Beneregem, and which means sons of thunder, was probably the appellative used by our Lord: or בְּנֵי רֵגֶט beni reges, sons of tempest, which comes nearest to the Boanerges of the evangelist. St. Jerome, on Dan. i., gives בְּנֵי רָעַם (which he writes Benereem, softening the sound of the רָ ain) as the more likely reading; and Luther, supposing our Lord spoke in Hebrew, gives the proper Hebrew term above mentioned, which he writes Bnehargem. Some think that the reason why our Lord gave this appellative to

A. M. 4031. new, and Matthew, and Thomas,
A. D. 27. and James the son of Alphaeus, and
An. Olymp. Thaddeus, and Simon the Canaanite,
CCL. 3.

19 And Judas Iscariot, which also betrayed him: and they went ^ainto a house.

20 ¶ And the multitude cometh together again, ^oso that they could not so much as eat bread.

21 And when his ^pfriends heard of it, they went out to lay hold on him: ^qfor they said, He is beside himself.

22 ¶ And the scribes which came down from Jerusalem said, ^rHe hath Beelzebub, and by the prince of the devils casteth he out devils.

23 ^sAnd he called them unto him, and said unto them in parables, How can Satan cast out Satan?

24 And if a kingdom be divided against itself, that kingdom cannot stand.

25 And if a house be divided against itself, that house cannot stand.

^aOr, home.—^oCh. vi. 31.—^pOr, kinsmen.—^qJohn vii. 5; x. 20. ^rMatt. ix. 34; x. 25; Luke xi. 15; John vii. 20; viii. 48, 52; x. 20.

the sons of Zebedee was, their desire to bring fire down from heaven, i. e. a storm of thunder and lightning, to overturn and consume a certain Samaritan village, the inhabitants of which would not receive their Master. See the account in Luke ix. 53, 54. It was a very usual thing among the Jews to give surnames, which signified some particular quality or excellence, to their rabbins. See several instances in Schoettgen.

Verse 19. Into a house.] As Christ was now returned to Capernaum, this was probably the house of Peter, mentioned chap. ii. 1.

Verse 20. Eat bread.] Had no time to take any necessary refreshment.

Verse 21. His friends] Or, relations. On this verse several MSS. differ considerably. I have followed the reading of the Syriac, because I think it the best: οι παρ' αυτου signify merely his relatives, his brethren, &c., see ver. 31; and the phrase is used by the best writers to signify relatives, companions, and domestics. See Kypke in loc.

They said, He is beside himself.] It was the enemies of Christ that raised this report; and his relatives, probably thinking that it was true, went to confine him. Let a Christian but neglect the care of his body for a time, in striving to enter in at the strait gate; let a minister of Christ but impair his health by his pastoral labours; presently "he is distracted;" he has "not the least conduct nor discretion." But let a man forget his soul, let him destroy his health by debaucheries, let him expose his life through ambition, and we may, notwithstanding, pass for a very prudent and sensible man!

Schoettgen contends that the multitude, and not Christ, is here intended. Christ was in the house:

A. M. 4031. 26 And if Satan rise up against himself, and be divided, he cannot stand, but hath an end.
A. D. 27. An. Olymp. CCL. 3.

27 ^tNo man can enter into a strong man's house, and spoil his goods, except he will first bind the strong man; and then he will spoil his house.

28 ^uVerily I say unto you, All sins shall be forgiven unto the sons of men, and blasphemies wherewith soever they shall blaspheme:

29 But he that shall blaspheme against the Holy Ghost hath never forgiveness, but is in danger of eternal damnation:

30 Because they said, He hath an unclean spirit.

31 ¶ ^vThere came then his brethren and his mother, and, standing without, sent unto him, calling him.

32 And the multitude sat about him, and they said unto him, Behold, thy mother and thy brethren without seek for thee.

^sMatt. xii. 25.—^tIsa. xlix. 24; Matt. xii. 29.—^uMatt. xii. 31, Luke xii. 10; 1 John v. 16.—^vMatt. xii. 46; Luke viii. 19.

the multitude, οχλος, ver. 20, pressed upon him so that he could not eat bread. His disciples, or friends, went out, κρατῆσαι αυτου (scil. οχλον), to restrain it, viz. the multitude, to prevent them from rushing into the house and disturbing their Master, who was now taking some refreshment. This conjecture should not be lightly regarded.

Verse 22. He hath Beelzebub] See on Matt. xii. 24–26.

Verses 27–30. No man, &c.] For an explanation of these verses, and a definition of the sin against the Holy Ghost, see Matt. xii. 29–33.

Verse 28. Wherewith soever they shall blaspheme] This clause is wanting in six copies of the Itala, and in Cyprian and Ambrosiastes.

Verse 29. Never] εις τον αιωνα. This is wanting in the Codex Bezae, two others, five of the Itala, and in Athanasius and Cyprian.

Eternal damnation] Or, everlasting judgment, αιωνιον κρισεως. But instead of κρισεως, BL and two others read αμαρτηματος, sin. The Codex Bezae, two others, and some of the fathers, read αμαρτιος, a word of the same import. Grotius, Mill, and Bengel, prefer this latter reading; and Griesbach has queried the common reading, and put αμαρτηματος in the margin. Sin or trespass is the reading of the Coptic, Armenian, Gothic, Vulgate, and all the Itala but two. Ebre= lastynge trespas is the translation in my old MSS. English Bible.

Verse 31. His brethren and his mother] Or rather, his mother and his brethren. This is the arrangement of the best and most ancient MSS.; and this clause, και αι αδελφαι σου, and thy sisters, ver. 32, should be added, on the authority of ADEFGMSUV, fifty-five others, some editions, the margin of the later

A. M. 4031. 33 And he answered them, say-
A. D. 27. ing, Who is my mother, or my
An. Olymp. brethren?
CCL. 3.

34 And he looked round about on them which sat about him, and said,

Syriac, Slavonic, Gothic, and all the Itala except our. Griesbach has received this reading into the text.

Calling him.] This clause is wanting in one copy

A. M. 4031. Behold my mother and my bre-
A. D. 27. thren!
An. Olymp.
CCL. 3.

35 For whosoever shall do the will of God, the same is my brother, and my sister, and mother.

of the Itala. The Codex Alexandrinus has ζητουντες αυτον, seeking him.

Verse 33. Who is my mother?] See on Matt
xii. 46-50.

CHAPTER IV.

The parable of the sower, 1-9. Its interpretation, 10-20. The use we should make of the instructions we receive, 21-25. The parable of the progressively growing seed, 26-29. Of the mustard seed, 30-31. Christ and his disciples are overtaken by a storm, 35-38. He rebukes the wind and the sea, and produces fair weather, 39-41.

A. M. 4031. AND ^ahe began again to teach
A. D. 27. by the sea side: and there was An. Olymp. gathered unto him a great multi-
CCL. 3. tude, so that he entered into a ship, and sat in the sea; and the whole multitude was by the sea on the land.

2 And he taught them many things by paables, ^band said unto them in his doctrine,

3 Hearken: Behold, there went out a sower
to sow:

4 And it came to pass, as he sowed, some fell by the way side, and the fowls of the air came and devoured it up.

5 And some fell on stony ground, where it had not much earth; and immediately it sprang up, because it had no depth of earth:

6 But when the sun was up, it was scorched;
and because it had no root it withered away.

A. M. 4031. 7 And some fell among thorns,
A. D. 27. and the thorns grew up, and choked
An. Olymp. it, and it yielded no fruit.
CCL. 3.

8 And other fell on good ground, ^cand did yield fruit that sprang up and increased; and brought forth, some thirty, and some sixty, and some a hundred.

9 And he said unto them, He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

10 ¶ ^dAnd when he was alone, they that were about him, with the twelve, asked of him the parable.

11 And he said unto them, Unto you it is given to know the mystery of the kingdom of God: but unto ^ethem that are without, all these things are done in parables:

12 ^fThat seeing they may see, and not perceive; and hearing they may hear, and not un-

^a Matt. xiii. 1; Luke viii. 4.—^b Ch. xii. 39.—^c John xv. 5; Col. i. 6;
Matt. xiii. 10; Luke viii. 9, &c.—^d 1 Cor. v. 12; Col. iv. 5;

1 Thess. iv. 12; 1 Tim. iii. 7.—^e Isa. vi. 9; Matt. xiii. 11, Luke viii. 10; John xii. 40; Acts xxviii. 26; Rom. xi. 8.

NOTES ON CHAP. IV.

Verse 2. He taught them many things by parables] See every part of this parable of the sower explained in Matt. xiii. 1, &c.

Verse 4. The fowls] Tov ovparov, of the air, is the common reading; but it should be omitted, on the authority of nine uncial MSS., upwards of one hundred others, and almost all the versions. Bengel and Griesbach have left it out of the text. It seems to have been inserted in Mark, from Luke viii. 5.

Verse 9. And he said—He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.] The Codex Beza, later Syriac in the margin, and seven copies of the Itala, add, καὶ ὁ ὠντων συνιεντα, and whoso understandeth, let him understand.

Verse 10. They that were about him] None of the other evangelists intimate that there were any besides the twelve with him: but it appears there were several others present; and though they were not styled disciples, yet they appear to have seriously attended to his public and private instructions.

Verse 11. Unto you it is given to know] Γινωσκειν, to know, is omitted by ABKL, ten others, the Coptic, and one of the Itala. The omission of this word makes a material alteration in the sense; for without it the passage may be read thus:—To you the mystery of the kingdom of God is given; but all these things are transacted in parables to those without.
Griesbach leaves it doubtful. And Professor White says, probabiliter delendum. I should be inclined to omit it, were it not found in the parallel passages in Matthew and Luke, in neither of whom it is omitted by any MS. or version. See the dissertation on para- bolical writing at the end of Matt. chap. xiii.

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3.

derstand; lest at any time they should be converted, and their sins should be forgiven them.

13 And he said unto them, Know ye not this parable? and how then will ye know all parables?

14 ¶ The sower soweth the word.

15 And these are they by the way side, where the word is sown: but when they have heard, Satan cometh immediately, and taketh away the word that was sown in their hearts.

16 And these are they likewise which are sown on stony ground; who, when they have heard the word, immediately receive it with gladness;

17 And have no root in themselves, and so endure but for a time: afterward, when affliction or persecution ariseth for the word's sake, immediately they are offended.

18 And these are they which are sown among thorns;—such as hear the word,

19 And the cares of this world, ^h and the deceitfulness of riches, and the lusts of other things entering in, choke the ^ε Matt. xiii. 19.—^h 1 Tim. vi. 9, 17.—ⁱ Matt. v. 15; Luke viii. 16; xi. 33.—^k The word in the original signifieth a less measure, as Matt. v. 15.

Verse 13. Know ye not this parable?] The scope and design of which is so very obvious.

How then will ye know all parables?] Of which mode of teaching ye should be perfect masters, in order that ye may be able successfully to teach others. This verse is not found in any of the other evangelists.

Verse 15. These are they] Probably our Lord here refers to the people to whom he had just now preached, and who, it is likely, did not profit by the word spoken.

Where the word is sown] Instead of this clause, four copies of the Itala read the place thus—They who are sown by the way side, are they who receive the word negligently. There are thousands of this stamp in the Christian world. Reader, art thou one of them?

Verse 19. The deceitfulness of riches] This is variously expressed in different copies of the Itala: the errors—delights of the world—completely alienated (abalienati) by the pleasures of the world. The lusts of other things—which have not been included in the anxious cares of the world, and the deceitfulness of riches. All, all, choke the word!

Verse 21. Is a candle—put under a bushel?] The design of my preaching is to enlighten men; my parables not being designed to hide the truth, but to make it more manifest.

Verse 22. For there is nothing hid, &c.] Probably our Lord means, that all that had hitherto been secret, relative to the salvation of a lost world, or only ob-word, and it becometh unfruitful. A. M. 4031.

A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3.

20 And these are they which are sown on good ground; such as hear the word, and receive it, and bring forth fruit, some thirty-fold, some sixty, and some a hundred

21 ¶ And he said unto them, Is a candle brought to be put under a ^k bushel, or under a bed? and not to be set on a candlestick?

22 ^l For there is nothing hid, which shall not be manifested; neither was any thing kept secret, but that it should come abroad.

23 ^m If any man have ears to hear, let him hear.

24 And he saith unto them, Take heed what ye hear: ⁿ with what measure ye mete it shall be measured to you: and unto you that hear shall more be given.

25 ^o For he that hath, to him shall be given and he that hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he hath.

26 ¶ And he said, ^p So is the kingdom of God, as if a man should cast seed into the ground; scurely pointed out by types and sacrifices, shall now be uncovered and made plain by the everlasting Gospel See on Matt. v. 15; x. 26.

¹ Matt. x. 26; Luke xii. 2.—^m Matt. xi. 15; ver. 9.—ⁿ Matt. vii. 2; Luke vi. 38.—^o Matt. xiii. 12; xxv. 29; Luke viii. 18 xix. 26.—^p Matt. xiii. 24.

Verse 24. And unto you that hear shall more be given.] This clause is wanting in DG, Coptic, and four copies of the Itala; and in others, where it is extant it is variously written. Griesbach has left it out of the text, and supposes it to be a gloss on, Whosoever hath, to him shall be given.

Verse 25. He that hath] See on Matt. xiii. 12.

Verse 26. So is the kingdom of God] This parable is mentioned only by Mark, a proof that Mark did not abridge Matthew. Whitby supposes it to refer to the good ground spoken of before, and paraphrases it thus:—"What I have said of the seed sown upon good ground, may be illustrated by this parable. The doctrine of the kingdom, received in a good and honest heart, is like seed sown by a man in his ground, properly prepared to receive it; for when he hath sown it, he sleeps and wakes day after day, and, looking on it, he sees it spring and grow up through the virtue of the earth in which it is sown, though he knows not how it doth so; and when he finds it ripe, he reaps it and so receives the benefit of the sown seed. So is it here: the seed sown in the good and honest heart brings forth fruit with patience; and this fruit daily increaseth, though we know not how the Word and Spirit work that increase; and then Christ the husbandman, at the time of the harvest, gathers in this good seed into the kingdom of heaven." I see n

A. M. 4031. 27 And should sleep and rise
A. D. 27. night and day, and the seed should
An. Olymp. spring and grow up, he knoweth
CCL. 3. not how.

28 For the earth bringeth forth fruit of herself; first the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear.

^a Or, ripe. — ^r Rev. xiv. 15. — ^s Matt. xiii. 31; necessity of inquiring how Christ may be said to sleep and rise night and day; Christ being like to this husbandman only in sowing and reaping the seed.

Verse 27. And should sleep and rise night and day] That is, he should sleep by night, and rise by day; for so the words are obviously to be understood.

He knoweth not how.] How a plant grows is a mystery in nature, which the wisest philosopher in the universe cannot fully explain.

Verse 28. Bringeth forth—of herself] Αυτοματη. By its own energy, without either the influence or industry of man. Similar to this is the expression of the poet:—

*Namque aliæ, NULLIS HOMINUM COGENTIBUS, ipsæ
SPONTE SUA veniunt.* VIRG. Geor. l. ii. v. 10.

“Some (trees) grow of their own accord, without the labour of man.” All the endlessly varied herbage of the field is produced in this way.

The full corn] Πληρη σιτου, FULL wheat; the perfect, full-grown, or ripe corn. Lucian uses κερος καρπος, EMPTY fruit, for imperfect, or unripe fruit. See Kypke.

The kingdom of God, which is generated in the soul by the word of life, under the influence of the Holy Spirit, is first very small; there is only a blade, but this is full of promise, for a good blade shows there is a good seed at bottom, and that the soil in which it is sown is good also. Then the ear—the strong stalk grows up, and the ear is formed at the top; the faith and love of the believing soul increase abundantly; it is justified freely through the redemption that is in Christ; it has the ear which is shortly to be filled with the ripe grain, the outlines of the whole image of God. Then the full corn. The soul is purified from all unrighteousness; and, having escaped the corruption that is in the world, it is made a partaker of the Divine nature, and is filled with all the fulness of God.

Verse 29. He putteth in the sickle] Αποξελλει, he sendeth out the sickle, i. e. the reapers; the instrument, by a metonymy, being put for the persons who use it. This is a common figure. It has been supposed that our Lord intimates here that, as soon as a soul is made completely holy, it is taken into the kingdom of God. But certainly the parable does not say so. When the corn is ripe, it is reaped for the benefit of him who sowed it; for it can be of little or no use till it be ripe: so when a soul is saved from all sin, it is capable of being fully employed in the work of the Lord: it is then, and not till then, fully fitted for the Master's use. God saves men to the uttermost, that they may here perfectly love him, and worthily magnify his name. To take them away the moment they 29 But when the fruit is ^a brought forth, immediately ^r he putteth in the sickle, because the harvest is come.

30 ¶ And he said, ^s Whereunto shall we liken the kingdom of God? or with what comparison shall we compare it?

Luke xiii. 18; Acts ii. 41; iv. 1; v. 14; xix. 20.

are capable of doing this, would he, so far, to deprive the world and the Church of the manifestation of the glory of his grace. “But the text says, he immediately sendeth out the sickle; and this means that the person dies, and is taken into glory, as soon as he is fit for it.” No, for there may be millions of cases, where, though to die would be gain, yet to live may be far better for the Church, and for an increase of the life of Christ to the soul. See Phil. i. 21, 24. Besides, if we attempt to make the parable speak here what seems to be implied in the letter, then we may say, with equal propriety, that Christ sleeps and wakes alternately; and that his own grace grows, he knows not how, in the heart in which he has planted it. Verse 27.

On these two parables we may remark:—

1. That a preacher is a person employed by God, and sent out to sow the good seed of his kingdom in the souls of men.

2. That it is a sin against God to stay in the field and not sow.

3. That it is a sin to pretend to sow, when a man is not furnished by the keeper of the granary with any more seed.

4. That it is a high offence against God to change the Master's seed, to mix it, or to sow bad seed in the place of it.

5. That he is not a seeds-man of God who desires to sow by the way side, &c., and not on the proper ground; i. e. he who loves to preach only to genteel congregations, to people of sense and fashion, and feels it a pain and a cross to labour among the poor and the ignorant.

6. That he who sows with a simple, upright heart, the seed of his Master, shall (though some may be unfruitful) see the seed take deep root; and, notwithstanding the unfaithfulness and sloth of many of his hearers, he shall doubtless come with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him. See Quesnel.

Verse 30. Whereunto shall we liken the kingdom of God?] How amiable is this carefulness of Jesus! How instructive to the preachers of his word! He is not solicitous to seek fine turns of eloquence to charm the minds of his auditors, nor to draw such descriptions and comparisons as may surprise them: but studies only to make himself understood; to instruct to advantage: to give true ideas of faith and holiness; and to find out such expressions as may render necessary truths easy and intelligible to the meanest capacities. The very wisdom of God seems to be at a loss to find out expressions low enough for the slow apprehensions of men. How dull and stupid is the creature! How wise and good the Creator! And how foolish the

A. M. 4031.
A. D. 27.
An. Olymp.
CCI. 3.

31 It is like a grain of mustard seed, which, when it is sown in the earth, is less than all the seeds that be in the earth :

32 But when it is sown, it groweth up, and becometh greater than all herbs, and shooteth out great branches ; so that the fowls of the air may lodge under the shadow of it.

33 ^t And with many such parables spake he the word unto them, as they were able to hear it.

34 But without a parable spake he not unto them : and when they were alone, he expounded all things to his disciples.

35 ¶ ^u And the same day, when the even was come, he saith unto them, Let us pass over unto the other side.

36 And when they had sent away the mul-

^t Matt. xiii. 34 ; John xvi. 12.

preacher who uses fine and hard words in his preaching, which, though admired by the shallow, convey no instruction to the multitude.

Verse 31. A grain of mustard seed] See on Matt. xiii. 31, 32.

Verse 33. With many such parables] Πολλὰς, many, is omitted by L, sixteen others ; the Syriac, both the Persic, one Arabic, Coptic, Armenian, Æthiopic, and two of the Itala. Mill approves of the omission, and Griesbach leaves it doubtful. It is probably an interpolation : the text reads better without it.

As th y were able to hear] Ἀκούειν, or to understand, always suiting his teaching to the capacities of his hearers. I have always found that preacher most useful, who could adapt his phrase to that of the people to whom he preached. Studying different dialects, and forms of speech, among the common people, is a more difficult and a more useful work than the study of dead languages. The one a man should do, and the other he need not leave undone.

Verse 34. He expounded all things to his disciples.] That they might be capable of instructing others. Outside hearers, those who do not come into close fellowship with the true disciples of Christ, have seldom more than a superficial knowledge of Divine things.

In the fellowship of the saints, where Jesus the teacher is always to be found, every thing is made plain,—for the secret of the Lord is with them who fear him.

Verse 35. Let us pass over unto the other side.] Our Lord was now by the sea of Galilee.

